ALADI CONCLUDES 5-DAY MEETING IN ACAPULCO

PA280032 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0400 GMT 27 Jul 86

[Text] Acapulco, 26 Jul (EFE) -- Today in Acapulco ALADI agreed to increase the regional preferential tariff to a maximum of 10 percent and rejected the Mexican Government's proposal to reduce import taxes by 60 percent, thereby allowing protectionism to continue dominating regional markets. For 5 days representatives of the governments of the 11 countries that are members of ALADI (Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Colombia, Chile, Ecuador, Mexico, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay, and Venezuela) met in Acapulco to seek new instruments for economic and commercial integration in the area.

The final report, unanimously approved, states that the 10 percent regional preferential tariff, to be implemented on 27 April 1987, includes giving different treatment to the nations with lower relative economic development, especially the Mediterranean [as received] countries. The report also adds that the member-countries agreed to carry out negotiations to eliminate the nontariff restrictions being applied to imports from the region, as well as to establish rules and standards to strengthen the list of open markets that grant exclusive licenses [concesiones] that would favor the growth of their exports.

Supported by Argentina and Brazil, Mexico suggested to the members of ALADI a 60-percent reduction of the regional import taxes in order to achieve a total opening of the Latin American market and the reactivation of trade among the countries of the area. Apparently the countries whose economies are the most depressed opposed this idea and claimed that the absolute release of commercial exchange, especially in basic products, would place their productive and export systems at a disadvantage in regard to the three large countries of the region.

The document approved by the association, a day later than expected, states that the 11 members agreed to promote a regional plan to replace imports, promote the recovery and expansion of regional trade, diminish the exchange imbalance, increase the value of reciprocal trade by 40 percent at the end of a 3-year-period, 1987 to 1989, and maintain its expansion. For its implementation each country will present, no later that 15 October, a list of the products they import from third countries that represent 30 percent of the total value of their foreign purchases from those countries.

Regarding the creation of a unit of account for the region to obtain its liquidity in an autonomous fashion and remove the dollar [desdolarice] from its economy, the report explains that ALADI will draft a plan to create a regional unit of account that will be used basically for financing the balance owed resulting from the multilateral compensation of the agreement for reciprocal payment and loans that the 11 central banks of the member countries maintain.

ALFONSIN WELCOMES BRAZIL'S SARNEY AT AIRPORT

[Text] Buenos Aires, 28 Jul (TELAM) -- Upon the arrival of Brazilian President Jose Sarney at the Buenos Aires metropolitan airport, President Raul Alfonsin said that never before in the history of our two nations have we shared so many common national objectives as we do today. Alfonsin said that these objectives are shown in our will to define an overall policy of economic growth. This is part of the message that Alfonsin read at the metropolitan airport. The following is the text of that message:

"In the name of the Argentine people I hereby express our pleasure in welcoming your excellency. We extend to you our cordial, fraternal and warm greetings.

"All the national sectors have witnessed with pleasure the evolution of Brazilian politics, which has consecrated the full enforcement of freedom and democracy in your great country.

"This political transformation was carried out with your guidance, your excellency. You are a man whom the international community recognizes as a great statesman.

"Your excellency has conducted with extreme prudence, with courage and determination the political life and destiny of Brazil.

"Mr President: In the name of the Argentine people, I want to take this opportunity to thank you for the message you sent to the Argentine people. This message, which was broadcast by the Argentine media, moved all Argentine men and women.

"I would also like to tell you that the Argentine people are awaiting with great expectation the results of our negotiations because they are aware of the historic significance of this visit.

"Through your visit we shall be able to implement, through specific and positive actions, the economic integration and cooperation program between the Republic of Argentine and the Federative Republic of Brazil, a desire that was expressed in the Iguazu Declaration.

"In Iguazu, we were able to see for ourselves that our two countries are fraternally united in their practice of peace, freedom, justice and democracy; as well as in their scrupulous implementation of human rights. All this unites us and allows us to visualize a common future.

"Never before in the history of our two nations have we shared as many common objectives as we do today. This is evidence of our will to define an overall policy for economic growth.

"During the months that preceeded your visit, our governments have worked intensely to define those policies that would allow us to take the first step toward achieving the economic integration of our two nations.

"Our countries agree that economic growth must be based on the social development of our communities and that all our joint efforts within this context must seek to achieve the well-being our two nations. We are experiencing unprecedented times in our bilateral relations. Through permanent consultations we have developed a fluid dialogue, coordinating positions on joint initiatives at the bilateral, regional, and international levels, as is evident from the agreements that we have achieved and in our joint work in various international forums.

"Mr President: We must confront today's problems and future challenges. The present international situation imposes on us limitations such as recession, the unpredictability of the financial system, the burden of the servicing of the foreign debts that loom over our economies, and the deterioration of terms of trade. All this brings us closer together and places us on the path that will allow us to find our own solutions as is shown through the original answers with which Brazil and Argentina are successfully meeting the establishment of our economic systems.

"In the same manner, the crisis affecting our region is showing us the need to deepen those mechanisms that lead to the consolidation of an integration process.

"We share a common destiny in which we are determined to have a protagonistic role.

"I want to reassert my pleasure in welcoming your excellency and the distinguished members of your entourage and to say that I am certain that your visit will allow us to strengthen the ties of friendship that unite our two countries and that together we shall be able to implement the commitment we have made to guide our efforts, to be able to grow together, and thus to be able to confront the challenges of the 21st century together. Welcome to Argentina, Mr President."

Sarney Responds

[Text] Buenos Aires, 28 Jul (TELAM) -- Upon his arrival in Argentina, Brazilian President Jose Sarney today said that an atmosphere of friendship and great expectations surround his visit.

In response to the wlecoming speech speech delivered by Argentine President Alfonsin, Sarney said at the metropolitan airport that these repeated meetings enrich a friendship which he considers a privilege and through which it has been possible to achieve the integration of the two countries.

Sarney described the present meeting as a meeting for the construction of something new, and he said that this makes us all participants in that "fervor of Buenos Aires" that was described by Borges. He added that our nations are rediscovering their deepest identities. We are today united as never before, and today we are sharing opportunities as never before.

ALFONSIN SEES NEED FOR L.A. COMMON MARKET

[Text] General Villegas, 27 Jul (TELAM) -- President Raul Alfonsin has said that Latin America shares not only languages and history, it also shares problems which condemn us to stagnation and backwardness, but it also holds a common future for which we want to find different paths and formulas.

The chief of state made this statement from the city hall balcony in town of General Villegas, northeast Buenos Aires Province, while presiding over the celebration of the district's 100th anniversary. The president addressed a large crowd of people concentrated in the Conrado Villegas square in front of the city hall.

The local mayor, Alberto Ballari, and acting Buenos Aires Province Governor Elva Roulet addressed the public before President Alfonsin.

Alfonsin said that together with Brazil and Uruguay, we have started to carefully and conscienciously plan a common Latin American market, so that we will all know that within our great Latin American nation we can find real possibilities for our development and the consolidation of social justice.

He called for a joint effort to increase production and end speculation, thus avoiding financial chaos. This effort, he said, would start consolidating Argentina's possibility for a democratic and free system.

Alfonsin also said that we must find, as we did 100 years ago, the way to reconcile all Argentines, without distinction, to try to consolidate this democracy and justice, so that everyone will get what he deserves based on his efforts. It must be understood that the poorest sectors, which have made the greatest efforts, should be rewarded by society.

Alfonsin said that Latin American integration is not just a convenience but an absolute necessity which, thank God, has been understood by the people of brother nations, and we are now seeking together the political solutions that will strengthen and guarantee peace, such as the Contadora Group initiative. Sometimes when seeking other types of economic and social solutions the creditor countries choose to regard the foreign debt from a political viewpoint, such as the case of the Cartagena Consensus.

He added that we Latin American presidents will meet to try to convince everyone that it is necessary to have economic elbow room in today's world. He also mentioned that we must visit the socialist countries because Argentina has matured and does not fear talking with anyone.

Alfonsin stated that we must struggle to regain Argentina's place in the world, no longer seeking a new port from where we can ship our raw materials in the search for European markets. We must diversify those markets and our exports. We must work together to regain Argentina's place in the world. He said that we want to achieve this and feel the people's support, first in our search for Argentina's traditional place in Latin America, and also with the United States and Europe, always pointing out the need to find a new international economic order that would bring universal justice, which is the only guarantee for universal peace.

President Alfonsin was speaking at a luncheon attended by 4,500 people at a privately owned cereal plant.

U.S. TROOPS, GENERAL CONSULTATION CAUSE UNREST

[By Eduardo Paz]

[Excerpt] La Paz, 25 Jul (AFP) -- Local experts remarked today that the presence in Bolivia of U.S. troops fighting drug traffic in the northeast and the general consultation aimed at learning the people's opinion about government economic policies has exacerbated social unrest throughout Bolivia. Several Army light tanks on the streets, the stepping up of security measures near Government House, and planes flying at low altitude have awakened concern among the population of the capital.

The labor leaders were the first to react. Juan Lechin Oquendo, top leader of the Bolivian Labor Confederation (COB), said here today that the Bolivian people must state their positin on the need to defend the fatherland and oppose the impositions of imperialists. Lechin Oquendo stressed that the Bolivian workers oppose the presence of U.S. troops in the northeast, the government's decision to pay the foreign debt, and the new tax law.

Lechin Oquendo added that the current government, violating the Constitution, has asked the U.S. imperialists to send their Army to invade us and to set up military bases under the pretext of an antinarcotics campaign, thus allowing the U.S. Army to conduct secret operations on Bolivian territory.

Lechin went on to say that the arrival of 160 U.S. soldiers, several helicopters, and sophisticated equipment imply the collapse of the national state, a genocide against the Bolivian people, and the enslavement of the nation's sovereignty.

As for the general consultation that is taking place throughout the country today, Lechin said that the people have the democratic right to voice their opinion on main issues such as the foreign debt and tax reform. According to Lechin the new tax law is a mechanism to obtain funds from the Bolivian people and send this money to industrial countries in keeping with the slave mentality personified by President Victor Paz Estenssoro. Plague Blamed on U.S. Army

[By Oscar Paz]

[Excerpt] For thousands of years coca leaves have been free from diseases. Today, however, they are being attacked and destroyed by an insect that is locally called sica. Some people have jokingly wondered whether this insect could be to coca what AIDS is to man. The fact is that the sica, a lepidopteran insect, has invaded thousands of hectares of land in the Chapare region (in Central Bolivia) and has destroyed coca leaves, which were regarded as sacred by the Incas. This butterfly-shaped insect is essentially a sucker that weakens the coca stems and destroys its leaves slowly by absorbing its sap.

Peasants have found it strange that the coca tree, which is a very resistant tropical plant, is being attacked and destroyed by such a little-known insect. Some people believe that U.S. Army personnel could have introduced this insect during the joint military exercises held in April-May in order to destroy the nearly 40,000 hectares of coca plantations in the region.

Hugo Zelada, director for vegetal health of the Campesino Affairs Ministry, has denied these rumors and has said that this insect has appeared from time to time and that its population is directly related to the size of the crop. He added that it is just a coincidence that the plague has appeared while U.S. military personnel are in the country. [passage omitted]

Campaign Temporarily Suspended

[Text] Santa Cruz del Sierra, 27 Jul (EFE) -- The antidrug trafficking actions that were being carried out in this eastern Bolivian district, east of La Paz, have been temporarily suspended by order of the Interior Ministry. It was said that this measure was adopted to allow an evaluation of the achievement obtained in so far.

The most import event of this campaign was the arrest of 13 Bolivian citizens, a Chilean, and an Argentine on 17 July. These 15 persons, accused of drug trafficking, are being investigated, and it is thought that the results will be known in a month.

Meanwhile, it was announced in La Paz that Interior Under Secretary Guido Meruvia will arrive in Santa Cruz on 28 July. It was reported that Meruvia will hold meetings with the Santa Cruz antidrug-trafficking police and district authorities.

U.S. Troop Withdrawal Demanded

[Text] A note signed by more than 50 labor leaders, university professors, and deans of various universities was released a few hours ago demanding the immediate withdrawal of U.S. troops from Bolivia. Those who signed the document express their resolve to resort to all constitutional means possible to reestablish national dignity. The signatures, which are headed by that of Juan Lechin, express the agreement of the leftist groups to oppose U.S. intervention in the fight against drug trafficking.

MINING GROUP 'FRUSTRATED' AT U.S. ANTIMONY SALES

[Text] The response of the U.S. diplomatic mission concerning antimony sales by the "General Services Administration" [in English] has frustrated the National Mining Chamber, which had planned to petition the government of Ronald Reagan requesting suspension of the sales. The U.S. response confirms an article published in the May 1986 issue of the publication METALS WEEK, which reported the sale of the mineral reserves.

The National Mining Chamber has insisted that negotiations be conducted with the White House and the U.S. Congress, noting that the General Services Administration is just a decentralization agency with no decision-making power to sell or not to sell its reserves.

Given this situation the National Mining Chamber is insisting on a specific official response both in Bolivia and in the United States.

The private mining group will continue negotiating the suspension of the sale of antimony and tungsten reserves.

SARNEY, ENTOURAGE LEAVE FOR BUENOS AIRES

PY281409 Brasilia Radio Nacional da Amazonia Network in Portuguese 1000 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Text] President Jose Sarney is already traveling to Buenos Aires. He left the Brasilia Air Base at 0655, after having transferred the Presidency to Senator Jose Fragelli, president of the Senate.

[Begin Reporter Glaucio Veloso relay] President Jose Sarney and the delegation that will accompany him during his 3-day visit to Buenos Aires have boarded their plane here at the Brasilia Air Base. Sarney transferred his office a few minutes ago, and Senate President Jose Fragelli is now acting president.

Sarney's trip to Argentina has been organized by the Sarney and Alfonsin administrations with great pomp. The two countries intend to assume internationally the commitments recently made in the Cruzado and Austral Plans. The two nations will also take advantage of their historic transition to democracy to revamp their bilateral relations, which have been very limited over the past 20 years. During their meeting, the two South American presidents will sign agreements on the purchase of wheat by Brazil; the creation of a buffer foodstuff stock to complement supply; the complementation of the machinery industry; the creation of binational enterprises; the financing of reciprocal payments; and cooperation in the energy area, particularly in the areas of gas and oil, as well as the expansion of bilateral trade.

The two governments will basically act as regulators of these agreements because the initiatives will be essentially taken by private groups. For that reason, 100 businessmen chosen by Itamaraty are traveling to Buenos Aires with President Sarney. Although Uruguayan President Julio Sanguinetti will participate in the meetings in Argentina, no agreement involving Uruguay will be signed.

The Brazilian ministers of foreign affairs, justice, finance, agriculture, education, industry and commerce, and the chief of the Armed Forces General Staff are accompanying President Sarney on his visit to Argentina, along with congressmen, representatives of state enterprises, and others. [end relay]

LAND REFORM BILL BENEFITS MORE FAMILIES

[Excerpts] The new land reform package signed by President Sarney yesterday expropriated land in 12 states. The new expropriation will benefit 5,217 families and will mostly affect the states where there are conflicts over land, as in the case of Parana, Rio Grande do Sul, Santa Catarina, Mato Grosso, Mato Grosso do Sul, and the Bico do Papagaio region. This land reform package was signed yesterday by President Sarney after a 4-hour meeting on 26 July with Land Reform Minister Dante de Oliveira.

The greatest number of properties have been expropriated in Para State, where a total of 11 properties will be used to settle 473 families. Minister Dante de Oliveira has commented on how these families will be settled and has guaranteed that there are sufficient funds to implement the land reform. [passage omitted]

With this new package, President Sarney's government has made a total of 250 expropriations involving 250,000 hectares. Eight thousand families are in the process of being settled, while 40,000 other families are waiting their turn.

FUNARO DISCUSSES PAYMENT OF FOREIGN DEBT

[Text] Sao Paulo, 27 Jul (EFE) -- Finance Minister Dilson Funaro has announced that the Brazilian Government will modify the payment conditions of its $103-billion foreign debt. The changes in his foreign economic policy are connected with the payment of $31 billion pending on interests and capital.

Funaro told reporters that the renegotiation of the $31 billion started after Brazil managed to reach an agreement with the committee of creditor banks in New York for the rescheduling of the debt in arrears. Funaro said he considered reaching this agreement a success, because Brazil has thus managed to stop being controlled by the IMF. He pointed out that Brazila obtained from the creditor banks a 1.125-percent spread [tasa de riesgo], the lowest ever obtained by a debtor country, except for Mexico. In conclusion, the finance minister said that "Brazil can no longer continue sending 5 percent of its GDP abroad only to pay debts with the creditor banks."

SOUTH AFRICA'S TUTU MAY VISIT 'IN EARLY 1987'

[Text] Brasilia, 24 Jul (AFP) -- A Foreign Ministry communique published today in Brasilia states that the Brazilian Government has officially invited Archbishop Desmond Tutu, Nobel Peace Prize laureate and the primate of the South African Angelican Church, to visit Brazil. The source reported that Archbishop Tutu has accepted the invitation and might travel to Brazil in early 1987. The communique states that this official invitation is part of the Brazilian Government's policy of condemning the detestable apartheid regime and expressing solidarity with the South African patriots who are struggling to establish a more just society in South Africa without the stigma of racism.

SURVEILLANCE CONTINUES ON BOLIVIAN BORDER

[Text] Porto Velho, 26 Jul (EFE) -- Federal Police Director Romeu Tuma has said that cocaine has become the normal "currency" for stolen car transactions along the Bolivian-Brazilian border. Tuma has observed the main areas along the Bolivian-Brazilian border, where the Army and police have reinforced surveillance to prevent the escape of drug traffickers, who are being pursued by Bolivian-U.S. military forces. Tuma revealed that thieves quote prices on cars stolen in Brazil, in kilograms of cocaine and that Bolivians go to the border to buy the stolen cars. Tuma is convinced that the drug traffickers who operate in Bolivia have not entered Brazilian territory. He added that the Brazilian and U.S. Governments have begun talks to sign a new antidrug agreement, because the existing accord will expire in March. The Brazilian Armed Forces and military police, who are closely following the antidrug operation under way in the Bolivian jungle along the Brazilian border, are trying to prevent Bolivian traffickers from entering Brazilian territory.

FURTHER EYEWITNESS REPORT ON TORCHING CASE

PY251748 Santiago ANALISIS in Spanish 22-28 Jul 86 pp 21, 22, 23

[By Patricia Collyer]

[Excerpt] [Passage omitted] Last week eyewitnesses told Judge Echavarria what they saw on 2 July. ANALISIS interviewed one of them just after he gave his testimony. Frightened, he asked to remain anonymous, "because not even by family knows about the nightmare I have been through," J said.

J is a worker who was walking to his job along 8 de Enero Street, near the corner of General Velazquez Street, on 2 July. "Suddenly, someone told me that it seemed some youngsters had been detained. So I walked quickly to see if I knew them. I went down Velazquez Street, and as I reached Hernan Rungue Street I heard shouts, desperate cries. I though that the detained individuals were probably being beaten there so I stopped behind a lamp post on that corner and watched. It was horrible because there were 2 youths standing, burning, surrounded by some 30 military men. I saw a military truck with a canvass top, and two pickup trucks, also military, one blue and the other cream-colored. The men in the truck wore caps, and those in the pickup trucks wore helmuts. I stood still and could hardly breathe. They did not see me, but I saw them. And I saw what they were doing. It was like a celebration, they seemed to enjoy the show; some laughed while the youths were burning alive. I felt terribly desperate and helpless, and I thought: What can I do alone? At that moment, another girl who lives in the neighborhood appeared, and I told her: 'Look how these bastards are burning those youngsters!' I thought it would have been better to kill them than to make them suffer that way."

He went on: "The girl who had arrived left horrified, and at that moment they saw me. The one who seemed to be the chief, because he gave everyone orders, saw me and shouted: 'Run, you son of a bitch! Or do you want me to kill you too? He was wearing a military cap and over it a black cap with ear flaps like that of the 'Chavo del 8' [Mexican television series character]. I reacted and crossed the street. I continued to observe for a little longer. I was not the only one, because, since there were no buses that day, many people had gathered at the bus stop. The people at the kiosk also saw everything, but no one knew what to do. They were shocked." He added that later the burning youths fell to the ground, and some military men brought a blanket from the truck and wrapped them. "I could see how the truck backed up so that they could lift the woman's body onto it. I did not see where they threw the young man." J said he tried to tell a priest what he had seen but "could not find one. Then I left for work. When I returned that afternoon, I heard that the girl was Carmen Gloria, whom I knew. When Rodrigo died, I decided to overcome my fear and present myself as a witness."

J said that at the court, Judge Echavarria asked him why he was sure that the ones he had seen were military men. "All I could say was that 'it was obvious because of the truck and the weapons.' Besides, I have been in the Army and know the military vehicles and weapons. And how many times have we seen them in the shantytowns during protest days!" But, he concluded, "the judge did not seem to pay much attention to what I said. He would forget what I said and make me repeat the same things over and over again." [passage omitted]

Civic Assembly Statement

[Text] Santiago, 26 Jul (EFE) -- The National Civic Assembly [ANC] today released a statement charging that "the decisions issued by the courts are indredible" and that "the three branches of government are in a deep and irreversible crisis." The statement was read by acting ANC Coordinator Dr Ricardo Vacarezza.

Fourteen members of the board of the ANC, an opposition organization, have been in jail for 3 weeks. The government holds then responsible for the general strike of 2 and 3 July and for the 8 deaths and approximately 100 injuries which occurred during the stoppage.

The ANC statement refers to the latest events, particularly the cases of youths Rodrigo Rojas and Carmen Gloria Quintana who, according to eyewitnesses and relatives, were beaten and burned by an Army patrol. Rojas died, and Quintana remains in serious condition.

The statement also refers to a recent resolution by special Judge Alberto Echavarria, who released 24 of the 25 Armed Forces members who had been placed at his disposal for their alleged responsibility in the cases of the youths. The judge decided to prosecute only the patrol commander on charges of manslaughter (omission or negligence). The judge also passed jurisdiction of the case to the military courts.

"One needs no words to express the feelings of horror in the country, at least of civilians," the ANC statement says. "To burn a human being, no matter how or to what degree, is a crime against humanity that shocks our conscience," the statement concludes.

JAILED CIVIC ASSEMBLY LEADERS RELEASE LETTER

[Text] Santiago, 26 Jul (EFE) -- The 14 National Civic Assembly [ANC] leaders who have been in jail for 3 weeks today released a "letter to Chileans," in which they say that "Chile stands on the tragic threshold of war or peace." In their letter, which is addressed to both civilians and the military, the ANC leaders state that "we must assume our responsibility and give the contribution that our fatherland demands from us in this dramatic hour." They add that "this is the time for each and every one of us to assume his responsibility and take the path leading to freedom in each neighborhood, village, and shantytown."

The members of the ANC, the largest opposition organization created since the coup of 11 September 1973, when General Augusto Pinochet took power, are being held responsible for the general stoppage of 2 and 3 July and for the incidents in which 8 people died and some 100 were wounded. The charges were leveled by the government. In their letter, the ANC leaders state that "this letter was written inside the prison with a feeling that we know you are sharing with us: Our fatherland is being destroyed."

"All of us have been bewildered by unemployment, starvation, misery, the unanswered situation of the missing detainees, the systematic vilation of our dignity, and the horror caused by the barbarous burning of two youths at the hands of Chilean citizens.

"When will our capacity to be astonished become exhausted? What other crimes are necessary for us to assume responsibility for our own future?

"There has been a systematic effort to destroy the spirit of solidarity of our people. Today Chile stands at the tragic threshold of war or peace.

"And this conflict demands our reaction now!

"It is essential that no more crimes occur in our country, that no more imprisonments of innocent people take place without being met by our call which will continue until they are free; that no more Chileans starve to death, or whole families be destroyed without a hand being lifted to held. We must change this unfair situation."

WOMEN MARCHING TO NUNCIATURE ARRESTED, RELEASED

[Text] Santiago, 25 Jul (EFE) -- Nearly 60 people, most of them women, who were arrested in the Chilean capital while marching toward the apostolic nunciature to deliver a "letter addressed to the pope" were set free this morning. Known as the "Women for Life" movement, the group of hundreds of women went yesterday, Thursday, to 11 de Septiembre Avenue. From there they marched toward the apostolic nunciature with lit candles, forming a chain of candles on that important Santiago avenue.

While groups of women attempted to reach the nunciature, others changed the traffic signs, "renaming" the avenue named for the day General Pinochet took power to "4 de Septiembre Avenue," after the day on which, every 6 years, Chileans traditionally went to the polls to choose the president of the republic. The demonstrators were pushed back by Carabineros using water cannons and tear-gas canisters. The group of leaders of the "Women for Life" movement managed to make it to the nunciature and deliver their "letter to the pope," in which they denounced "what is happening in Chile, which has culminated in the torching of two youths, and the harassment and arrest of trade union and student leaders," one of the signatories explained. Nearly 30 people were arrested around the apostolic nunciature building.

SANTIAGO ARCHBISHOPRIC CONDEMNS BOMB ATTACK

[Text] The Santiago Archbishopric has expressed amazement and repugnance at last night's terrorist attack in the downtown Almeda Avenue. The Santiago Archbishopric this morning stated its amazement and deep repugnance at the terrorist attack that occured last night in downtown Santiago. As is known, that cowardly and criminal attack caused injuries to several dozen innocent and peaceful people, who were waiting for buses at the busy corner of Alameda and Teatinos Street.

The Santiago Archbishopric has released a short statement on the event which says: In view of the worrisome situation of violence affecting our country, this Archbishopric repeats its urgent call for an end to such terrorist actions, and for sincere efforts to achieve the social peace all Chileans are hoping for.

Santiago Cardinal Archbishop Juan Francisco Fresno made an appeal to the Supreme Court to use all necessary means to reach a successful conclusion of its investigations, among which is the case of the two youths burned on 2 July during the peaceful protest staged by the self-styled National Civic Assembly.

VEGA URIBE URGES END TO VIOLENCE, TERRORISM

PA280036 Bogota Cadena Radial Super in Spanish 1730 GMT 26 Jul 86

[Text] Defense Minister General Miguel Vega Uribe has said that the country is tired of so much violence and terrorism and has decided to cooperate with the military forces to guarantee security, the institutional order of the country, and the tranquillity of the Colombians.

The high-ranking officer referred to the death of the well-known guerrilla leader of the M-19, Gustavo Arias Londono, alias "Boris," and said that he who sows violence will meet a violent death, as was the case with this subversive element who caused the most deaths within the police and Army.

Vega Uribe said that peace is everyone,s goal the Armed Forces are not the sole preservers of peace. It is actually a commitment of all well-intentioned people who want to see progress and brotherly love in their nation.

The minister of defense visited Cali, where he accompanied President Belisario Betancur to the ceremonies marking the 450th anniversary of the founding of the capital of Valle Del Cauca Department and visited some sectors where the Army has been conducting public works to help the community. Cali has been a target of violence and guerrilla action.

POLICE RECOVER STOLEN DYNAMITE, SUSPECT M-19

[Text] Cali -- Several operations are being conducted by the authorities in various regions of El Valle Department to arrest the people responsible for the theft of 80 boxes of dynamite -- 75 of which were recently recovered by the police.

The dynamite had been stolen from a cement factory, reportedly by M-19 members this situation provoked concern in the Armed Forces, given the use that might be made of the dynamite. The rebel organization recently announced a series of attacks on military installations in various regions of the country.

DEFENSE MINISTER DISCUSSES TALKS WITH GELBARD

PY252010 Asuncion EL DIARIO in Spanish 24 Jul 86 p 13

[Text] The defense minister, Division General Gaspar German Martinez, said at the palace yesterday, in response to a question about the meeting with Department of State envoy Robert Gelbard: "We have not requested military support from the United States."

Gen Martinez had attended a meeting of the National Council of Economic Coordination. At the end of the session the minister said, in reply to a question, that no new proposals have been made to the United States in the field of military cooperation.

"Is there a need for more support?" the minister was asked. He replied:

"No, no. He didn't promise anything, and we did not ask for anything."

"Did Gelbard show any particular concern?" the minister was then asked. He answered:

"No, he just asked about the present condition of the Armed Forces and nothing else."

"What is the extent of U.S. cooperation in military matters?" he was asked. He said:

"From $50,000 to $70,000 annually. It is for English-language instruction and for electronic equipment. Nothing more. That is all the aid," concluded Gen Martinez.

Reactions to Visit

PY280219 [Editorial Report] Asuncion HOY in Spanish on 23 July on page 8 carries a 100-word item on statements by Miguel Abdon Saguier, political secretary for the Authentic Radical Liberal Party [PLRA] on the visit to Paraguay by U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for South America Robert S. Gelbard. Abdon Saguier stated that Gelbard's visit "is probably the most important political event of the month," and that according to what Gelbard told him "he brings a clear message from the U.S. people's and President Reagan's stance regarding democracy and human rights." But Saguier noted that "if we, Paraguayan citizens ourselves, do not carry out our political opening, no foreign stance is of any use to us.

A 600-word HOY editorial entitled "A Fraternal Mission," published in the same edition on page 10, notes that Gelbard's visit allows the two countries to review their relations within a "framework of friendship and good intentions." It then notes that Paraguay's development has been greatly helped by U.S. cooperation and that although the two countries have always shared common points of view on international issues "different points of view regarding some issues mainly related to Paraguayan domestic affairs have started to surface in the past few years." Stating that "by tradition, U.S.-Paraguayan relations have been friendly and fruitful," it is hoped that the latest events "will only contribute to strengthening this tradition."

The editorial ends by saying that "the special envoy's visit should be interpreted within that context. That is, as an initiative to identify those obstacles, if they exist, that prevent relations from being maintained at their best level."

Asuncion EL DIARIO in Spanish on 24 July on page 13 in a 450-word item reports that Ruben Stanley, vice president of the Chamber of Deputies, stated that "Robert Gelbard came to the country to try to sound out the opinion of the people, but he will give his final opinion in his country." The Colorado Party deputy also added that "the meeting held here, at the Chamber of Deputies, could not have been more auspicious. He heard what he wanted to hear from the opposition and the government members." Stanley ended by noting that 1 day is not enough to have a good picture of the situation in our country and that "he, naturally, voiced his concern over the situation in our country and even insinuated the need for a greater political opening, but that, of course, is for us to decide."

The same report notes that Education Minister Carlos Ortiz Ramirez said that Gelbard "showed a good disposition regarding our government's policy" and that he believes that the U.S. visitor came with good intentions."

Asuncion newspaper ULTIMA HORA in Spanish on 24 July on page 10 carries a 350-word item on statements by Senator Manuel Frutos Pane, member of the Colorado Party Executive Board, who said that "Mr Gelbard took the wrong end of the stick, failing to refer to the main issue, that is to the pluralist democratic process and the Paraguayan citizens' right to vote freely." He goes on to state that Gelbard did not take into account the sociopolitical changes, as well as the economic growth which the country is experiencing, and referred only to isolated events which have been distorted by the opposition, which seeks support from abroad. Frutos ends by stating that this gentleman seems to have come to inform himself through those who are opposing the government through an internal and international campaign. However, "some of Mr Gelbard's statements reveal that his general impression of Paraguay is good, with some exceptions."

Asuncion LA TARDE in Spanish on 24 July on page 8 carries a 450-word editorial entitled "Gelbard Mission: Expected Results," praising the U.S. government's initiative to appoint such a distinguished person to visit Paraguay to jointly review the two countries' relations. The editorial then states that on this occasion Gelbard had the opportunity to meet with all sectors and voices its hope that "with these objective elements, the relations between the two nations will be able to move toward a better coexistence, under common principles and interests on regional and international issues." The editorial points out that the surfacing of disagreements is only natural in such a long relationship, where "one cannot always expect common criteria and objectives," noting that the important thing is the will to overcome disagreements through frank dialogue. The editorial hopes that this frank dialogue "between national authorities and U.S. representatives took place during Gelbard's visit to Paraguay" and that they will "result in the improvement of the fraternal understanding that has existed for many years between the two countries." It ends by stating that the results will not be spectacular, but that it is "certain that clear and firm grounds have been established to give the mutual friendship and cooperation a new and lasting impulse, which is fundamental for a relationship destined to project itself toward the future."

Asuncion ULTIMA HORA in Spanish on 24 July on page 14 carries an approximately 600-word editorial entitled "The Visit Paid to Our Country by a High-Ranking U.S. Official." The editorial refers to the statement by Gelbard at the end of his visit, pointing out that "it cannot be regarded as exclusively personal, because it also allegedly reveals the U.S. Government's opinion on the Paraguayan political situation." The article then goes on to note that from what the U.S. representative has stated, one gets the "idea that the U.S. Government is concerned about our immediate future." After quoting some of Gelbard's statement it is noted that "an intention lies behind these statements, because in diplomacy and politics statements always carry an implicit intention, in our case that development capable of giving signs of a greater democratic opening take place." The editorial then mentions human rights, freedom of expression, and freedom of assembly as the expected developments. The commentary notes the justified U.S. interest in a democratic opening in our country. It also notes that our country is not plagued by extremism, as are other countries, but that there is a fear that the obstacles "which democracy is facing in our country may create the political, social, and economic conditions to generate violence."

The editorial ends by stating that although "there is nothing more undesirable than to have someone from abroad come and tell us what to do, we must agree that we live in an era of complete interdependency and that it is a patriotic duty to create conditions so that no one may come and criticize us or give us advice. It is undoubtedly up to us to see that no one in the future will tell us what to do to live in democracy."

Asuncion EL DIARIO in Spanish on 25 July on page 12 in a 250-word item reports that PLRA leader Juan Carlos Zaldivar stated that "in my opinion, Gelbard's visit to our country was very positive," noting that they were very frank with him as they had said they would be and that Gelbard "has a very good picture of Paraguayan reality and of what should be done to enable the peaceful democratic transition that we all desire to take place."

On the same page, EL DIARIO carries a 150-word item on statements by Joaquin Atilio Burgos, leader of the Liberal Party, who hopes that during his visit Gelbard learned about the Paraguayan situation and that he will inform his superiors so that the "current state of the Paraguayan Government be made known and those people issue a report and voice their opinion on the Paraguayan democracy." Burgos termed the visit highly positive for our country because it is quite likely that through it "we will obtain the opening of the process which is currently closed to the opposition." He ended by noting that the United States is perfectly aware of our reality because it has people working especially to keep them informed.

Asuncion PATRIA in Spanish on 25 July 1986 on page 7 carries a 1,200-word editorial entitled "Neither Serious Not Offensive Results." The editorial points out the fortune of those countries where the criticisms of observers are based only on "small sins" compared to the "confusing and bloody incidents that shatter the lives of other nations," noting that Paraguay has never been shaken by terrorist groups, which have appeared in other countries of the hemisphere, or experienced their "bloodcurdling incidents, which have caused serious crises and have forced those countries to pull out of truly recessionary processes and respond to violence with more violence in order to curb it."

It then goes on to point out that Paraguay did stage coup attempts after the 1947 war, but the people have always supported the government, and this "is proof of the democratic consensus backing the government," adding that there is no de facto situation in Paraguay.

The commentary then goes on to quote Robert Gelbard's statement that a "true democracy is the best defense against any type of extremism and that "we believe that the best way to settle political differences is through the ballot box," but that "the participation of all democratic contenders is necessary for this" and if "all the democratic elements are not represented in the elections, it is up to the government to establish the necessary conditions to attract the participation of all the sectors." The editorial then states that the true problem lies in the fact that the mentioned "sectors" are constantly splitting and that the norms cannot adjust to their capricious behavior, noting that all the parties have vowed to respect the Constitution and "what has been promised by a 'whole' cannot be destroyed by the factions" because this would mean going against democracy and plotting against its greatness.

The editoral ends by stating that "this is what the majority of the civilian population of the nation regards as the most serious violations of human rights, from which the remaining offenses of those rights stem as secondary effects, no matter where they originate."

MILITANTS WIN MOST PRECINCTS IN COLORADO VOTE

PY282140 Asuncion HOY in Spanish 28 Jul 86 p 9

[Text] In a climate of general fervor that in some cases led to confused episodes of physical aggression, pushing and jostling, while in other places all was perfectly normal, elections were held yesterday to renew the leadership commissions of the 25 Colorado Party precincts of the capital, including the Lambare suburb.

The "militant" line, which is not publicly recognized by most of the party leaders, won in 16 precincts, and the remaining 9 went to the "traditionalist" line -- also not openly declared -- in which old caudillos were mostly reelected.

Out of the 178,566 Asuncion citizens who are members of the Colorado Party and who have registered to vote, 90,915 went to the ballot boxes yesterday, which means that 51 percent voted and 49 percent abstained. Only three precincts had single candidates, while in most of them there were two or three candidates, and in a few cases even four candidates for president of the party grassroots organizations.

Although the candidates and the voters did not speak directly of fraud, there were complaints in several party precincts about the totally contrary attitudes of the delegations from the Party Executive Board toward the grassroots members party, as occurred at Precincts 22, 21, and others. In both cases, and despite the recommendations of Colorado Party President Juan Ramon Chaves that all the disqualified members should vote, the delegations ignored these recommendations, calling forth angry protests from leaders identified with the traditionalist line.

The oldest pricinct president in the capital lost his position yesterday; Domingo Rojas lost the election in Precinct 11 to Florencio Miguel Ortiz Pierpaoli by 954 votes.

Mario Pastor Almada, one of the precinct presidents who has received attention lately for his violent statements and for being accused several times of not having clear financial operations and of taking categorical stances, was reelected to his post by a large majority despite an open war of nerves for weeks during the electoral campaign. There were, however, moments of tension during the balloting, and the police had to intervene several times to prevent disorders.

Among the reelected "strongmen" there is Nicasio Ortellado of Precinct 8, whose identification with the "militant" line grew very much stronger after he nominated Mario Abdo Benitez for the vice presidency of the party Executive Board at the convention 2 years ago.

The pleasant weather yesterday helped the elections, which were protected by a very strong police deployment, particularly at the precincts in which elections were the hardest fought, like Precincts 1, 3, 4, 8, 11, 19, 22, 23, and 24.

PEASANT FAMILIES EVICTED BY ALLEGED OWNER

[Text] According to a report made to HOY by the parish priest of Yhu, Caaguazu Department, dozens of peasants have been detained and their houses destroyed in a "new wave of violence against 90 familes who are settled in the locality of Potrero Alvarez. These families have been accused of occupying private property by the alleged owner, Matias Guell, who has never shown any document to prove that he is the owner of the land where these families have been living for a long time." The report states that several women and children have been left homeless after being violently dislodged. According to the report to HOY, part of the land is believed to be government-owned. The peasants have asked the Agrarian Reform Institute to clarify the situation, but so far the institute has not made a decision. The houses were destroyed while several heads of the families were being held by the police. The situation in the Potrero Alvarez region is worrisome.

SENATE, CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES REELECT PRESIDENTS

Armando Villanueva was elected with 36 votes; while Javier Diez Canseco of the United Left received 9 votes, and Felipe Osterling of the PPC [Popular Christian Party] received 5 votes.

The Chamber of Deputies elected Fernando Leon de Vivero with 106 votes against 27 votes obtained by Deputy Cesar Barrera Bazan of the United Left, and 3 votes for Roberto Ramirez del Villar of the PPC. This is the fourth time that Deputy Leon de Vivero has been elected president of the Chamber of the Deputies.

The new Senate leaders are as follows: president, Armando Villanueva del Campo; first vice president, Guillermo Larco Cox; second vice president, Adolfo Guevara Velazco; first secretary, Raul Acosta Resifo; second secretary, Juan A. Castro; alternate secretary; Andres Quintana (?Gurk); treasurer, Rafael Leguren, who was reelected to this post; alternate treasurer, (?Arsenio) Morales; and alternate library secretary, Enrique Chan Cruz.

ANDRES TOWNSEND FACTION TO RETURN TO APRA

PY251314 Lima Television Peruana in Spanish 0100 GMT 25 Jul 86

This was announced today by Senator Andres Townsend Escurra, who said that some reconciliation meetings will be held with APRA leaders after the national holiday to allow for the return of all the movement's followers. Referring to an APRA leader's statements opposing this return, Townsend said he respected this opinion, but he thought it was exaggerated because his movement does not share that APRA leader's feelings.

TERRORIST ACTIVITIES MARK EVE OF NATIONAL DAY

[Text] Lima, 28 Jul (EFE) -- Several bomb attacks in Lima, fires in downtown Lima hotels, and a power outage that affected vast areas of the Peruvian capital last night marked the eve of the Peruvian National Day, 28 July, when President Alan Garcia is due to address the nation. The targets of the attacks were stores located in downtown Lima streets and in the outskirts of the capital. Two bank branches were attacked in the Yerbateros neighborhood.

The 7th and 18th floors of the Crillon and Sheraton Hotels, respectively, suffered fire. The fires were caused by a cigarette and a short-circuit respectively, while another fire began on the 4th floor of the Bolivar Hotel. No injuries were reported and no explanation was given as to the origin of the fire at the Bolivar Hotel. This information was provided by hotel employees.

A spokesman for Electroperu [Peruvian State Electric Power Enterprise] has said that technicians have concluded that last night's power outage could have been caused by a terrorist attack on the Mantaro-Lima transmission line which joins the Mantaro River power plant, to the east of Lima in Junin Department, with the Peruvian capital.

The power outage affected several Lima areas, including Brena, La Victoria, Lince, Monterrico, Jesus Maria, and the downtown area. The outage also affected the northern cities of Chiclayo and Trujillo.

For security reasons, the main square of Lima was cordoned off last night, and the area was closed to vehicles and passersby. Today Allan Garcia is scheduled to preside over ceremonies in the main square and attend a religious service at the Cathedral.

It was reported that a burro-bomb, a donkey loaded with explosives, exploded on the morning of 27 July in the main square in Huanta in the Andean department of Ayacucho. The blast damanged stores but caused no injuries. The house of a ruling APRA [Americann Popular Revolutionary Alliance] member in Trujillo was also bombed. The blast damaged the building's facade.

Today President Alan Garcia will address the nation from the congressional building, in compliance with a constitutional provision that sets forth that the president must deliver a message each 28 July. The president has said that his address will convey a message of "hope and security" to the Peruvian people.

APRA Officials Murdered

PY281437 Buenos Aires DYN in Spanish 2018 GMT 26 Jul 86

[Text] Abancay, 26 Jul (AFP) -- A mayor and the justice of the peace of Pachacona District in Apurimac Department of Peru's southeastern Andean region were murdered in cold blood by a terrorist group that has acted for the first time in that region, a police source reported today in Lima. The two officials were members of the ruling American Popular Revolutionary Alliance [APRA].

On 24 July nearly 50 terrorists attacked Pachacona, a remote township located in Antabamba Province, and subjected Mayor Antonio Jibaja and Justice of the Peace Raul Sanchez to a people's trial. The two officials were later shot dead in the main square on charges of being enemies of the armed struggle, the source said. The source added that a teacher, the municipal secretary, and municipal employees were also brutally beaten. After looting stores and the houses of their victims, the terrorists fled to an unknown direction.

IGLESIAS DISCUSSES TRIP, DEBT, CENTRAL AMERICA

[Interview with Foreign Minister Enrique Iglesias by Gabor Arato, deputy section head at MAGYAR HIRLAP on 23 July in Budapest: "Peace and Dialogue Are Our Mutual Interests"]

[Text] [Arato] Mr Foreign Minister: Before you began your European tour, you said to the paper LA MANANA that your visit to Hungary had two aims: 1. political and 2. economic and commercial. What possibilities do you see for political cooperation between these two small countries with different social systems and located on two different continents? What perspectives do you see for your economic cooperation?

[Iglesias] In my view, in spite of our dissimilar political and economic systems, we have a great many things in common with Hungary. Our mutual aims are peace, the observance of international law, but above all, dialogue. In our present world, the only way to survive is by strengthening international dialogue by all means and safeguarding the principles of multilaterialism. It is very important to let no political and social differences, whatever they might be, hinder our most extensive economic cooperation. My conviction was reconfirmed in the talks I had with the Hungarian foreign minister, the foreign trade minister, and the premier. These talks have strongly promoted our bilateral relations. I think there are a lot of possibilities for expanding trade cooperation. I would like to stress the importance of the first step made by an Uruguayan wool producer and distributor firm and the Hungarian Hungarotex Foreign Trade Company to establish a joint venture, the Hungurex S.A. Hungarian-Uruguayan joint company. Such cooperation can create further mutual economic and commercial ooportunities, not only in each others' countries, but for Hungary in Latin America, and for us in the socialist countries and the whole of Europe.

[Arato] You are a financial expert with an international reputation. In your view, are there realistic chances of solving the debt crisis of Latin America and the Third World?

[Iglesias] As you know, representatives from 11 Latin American countries conferred in the Columbian city of Cartagena to come to a common conclusion regarding the debt crisis. The problem is very complex; it is not easy to find a solution and, what is more, the indebted Latin American countries have different opinions.

The falling prices of crude oil have significantly changed the position of oil-exporting countries. Their situation worsened, while that of oil importers improved. So, however dissimilar the problems of Latin American countries might be, indebtedness is universal, and there is hardly any way to find a solution. Nevertheless, together it is possible to exert efforts for improving the international atmosphere. This depends mainly on the rates of exchange. We must achieve a drop in the rates of exchange to a realistic level.

It could be very important to have more foreign capital for investments that serve to boost production. Lack of growth and depression do not provide solutions for the debt problem. This is basically the message of Cartagena, and the industrially developed creditor countries began to understand that we cannot pay without economic growth. Until very recently the theory was: pay first and then try to grow. Now it says that economic growth must be achieved first before one can pay.

[Arato] As is well known, Uruguay and you personally support a peaceful solution to the Central American crisis and also support the efforts of the Contadora and Lima Groups, as well as the Caraballeda concept. The Central American crisis has intensifed since the U.S. Congress apoproved $100 million in aid to the contras. In your view, what is the main obstacle to a political solution? What is anticipated to happen in Central America?

[Iglesias] The situation in Central America causes anxiety not only in the region, but in all of Latin America. The problem has deep and old roots that are connected to economic underdevelopment and the lack of functioning democracy. We think that in the present situation, the problem must be solved by heeding the following principles: first, respecting the principle of noninterference; second, respecting each country's decision to follow a particular political and economic system; and third, in our view, no support must be given to any irregular forces operating and fighting in the region. These principles can only be enforced in peaceful circumstances, which can be created in the entire region through democracy, political pluralism, and the observance of human rights. All this, however, must be achieved by peaceful and political settlement. A solution can only be achieved in Central America through dialogue and diplomatic efforts. In order to arrive at such a solution, we are also working for this goal in the Lima Group, thus supporting the Contadora Group.

[Iglesias] I do not know if I, as a member of the government, can remain objective enough in analyzing the activities of the Sanguinetti government during the past year. What I have to stress is that we managed to create order throughout the country. All of our democratic institutions carry out their functions normally, civil rights are observed, and an amnesty law was issued according to which all political prisoners were released. Political exiles have returned home. And I repeat, since this is the most important point, the democratic institutions are operating in a perfectly normal manner.

Of course, there are problems, above all of an economic nature. The country's economy has not been in such a difficult and sad situation since the thirties. We have not as yet overcome the difficulties, but there are indications that we are over the hump and heading in a good direction. A lot of things will depend not on us, but on the state of the international economic boom. The most important thing is -- and the entire Uruguayan people agree on this -- that our country is again treading the path of democracy.

LA REPUBLICA ON HELMS CANAL CAMPAIGN

PA262317 Panama City LA REPUBLICA in Spanish 23 Jul 86 p 4

[Editorial: "Helms Has Been Unmasked"]

[Text] In this editorial column we had reported that the campaign by the unfortunate Jesse Helms, backed by Panamanian traitors, had no other purpose than to prevent Panama from taking over the Canal under the Torrijos-Carter Treaties mandate. It is Helms who, with President Reagan, unleashed an unprecedented campaign, inside and outside of the United States, so that the treaties would be rejected and the Canal would never be turned over to Panama.

Since then, that clan has been studying how to resume that infamous campaign, which deeply moved all Panamanians who believe in the fairness of our cause and who are willing to defend our nationality in all fields, to the point of offering our lives so that the Torrijist Mandate is followed. That instruction calls for the last U.S. stake to be pulled on 31 December 1999.

It is that newspaper which serves as a stenographer to Panama's staunchest enemy which discloses with banner headlines that "Helms Admits Attacks on General Noriega Could Be Intended To Prevent the Panama Canal Treaties From Taking Effect."

The aformentioned daily discloses that Helm's senatorial committee served only as a springboard for launching these accusations against Mexico [as published] and Panama.

That strategy belongs to the right-wing Republicans, and it involves several other personalities and media, both inside and outside the Reagan administration, and even outside the United States.

These maneuvers will be rejected in Panama and other countries of the hemisphere because the Latin Americans will not allow open or disguised intervention by that gang that recalls the days of the "Big Stick" [last 2 words in English] when the countries of this continent were unjustly subjugated by a policy that, instead of stimulating the peoples of America, tried to humiliate, crush, and dominate them.

Panama is standing tall, and those of us who feel love for the fatherland which nobody can take, are now in a permanent state of alert.

[Excerpts] San Salvador, 26 Jul (ACAN-EFE) -- The meeting of the foreign ministers of El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, and Costa Rica to analyze the last version of the Contadora peace document ended today in San Salvador amid total silence. [passage omitted]

Before returning to his country, Costa Rican Foreign Minister Rodrigo Madrigal Nieto gave an exclusive interview to ACAN-EFE. Minister Madrigal Nieto said that the meeting was "cordial" and that with this meeting they were not attempting to "create a bloc to oppose Nicaragua." [passage omitted]

"It was a highly positive meeting during which we discussed matters of a broader perspective in an attempt to achieve peace in the area, how to get financing for our countries, and how to advance in the fields of technology and culture," the Costa Rican foreign minister added. However, Madrigal hinted that the foreign ministers had discussed more specific matters like the Central American parliament, Contadora, and the position of the four countries regarding Nicaragua. [passage omitted]

Madrigal said that Nicaragua was absent from the meeting because the four countries that attended the 2-day meeting "are trying to achieve peace through democracy, and Nicaragua, on several occasions, has said that it does not believe in this democracy."

"Nicaragua has described democracy in Central America as decrepit; therefore it was not invited to attend the meeting. This does not mean that we will not sit down and talk with Nicaragua some day, especially the day when the brother people of Nicaragua achieve democracy," Madrigal added calmly.

The first of these meetings was held in Honduras on 17 July. Guatemala was not present at that meeting. Guatemala was present at the San Salvador meeting, and Madrigal said that it is "important that representatives of the Vinicio Cerezo government attend these meetings because we want the democratic countries to be united and work together."

"Guatemala plays an important role, and without Guatemala we would not be able to adopt a more vigorous stance in Central America. Guatemala's participation has been very positive," Foreign Minister Madrigal said. [passage omitted]

[Panama City ACAN in Spanish at 0048 GMT on 28 July 86 transmits a Ricardo Chacon report on statements by Costa Rican Foreign Minister Rodrigo Madrigal Nieto made shortly before leaving El Salvador after attending the Central American foreign ministers' meeting. The report says:

["'We proposed the creation of a democratic alliance a long time ago; apparently it is something that has been adapting to circumstances,' the Costa Rican foreign minister told ACAN-EFE before leaving El Salvador.

["This democratic alliance,' Madrigal noted, 'must be achieved through broad participation, where democracy is viewed as a fundamental value for resolving the problems of Central America.'

["According to the foreign minister, the alliance would seek, among other things, 'to establish greater ties with Europe, especially the EEC, so they can move closer and become familiar with our positions.'"

["Madrigal Nieto added that his country will not participate in the attempts to make the Central American Defense Council (Condeca) reemerge. The Condeca is a regional institution created in the seventies at Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza's initiative to fight against the isthmus' incipient guerrilla movements."

["'Costa Rica cannot participate in the new CONDECA because our country's Constitution bans armies. In any event, we would participate as mere observers,' Madrigal Nieto explained."]

ARIAS SAYS CONTRAS MUST RESPECT NEUTRALITY

PA290245 Panama City ACAN in Spanish 2115 GMT 28 Jul 86

[By Juan Ramon Rojas]

[Excerpts] San Jose, 28 Jul (ACAN-EFE) -- President Oscar Arias Sanchez today threatened to adopt strong measures against the anti-Sandinist leaders if they continue using this country for military purposes, adding that "we will be inflexible" with the anti-Sandinists.

During an impromptu news conference, Arias Sanchez said that "there is no reason why we should change our commitment to the people in the sense that we will do everything possible to preserve our neutrality" in the Nicaraguan military conflict. Arias made this statement after it was learned that the contras had been operating a clandestine hospital in El Coyol de Alajuela, 35 km west of this capital, where 49 Nicaraguans, members of the Nicaraguan Opposition Unity (UNO) were recovering from their wounds. Public security authorities have arrested the Nicaraguans, some of them at the same residence they used as a hospital. [passage omitted]

Asked by ACAN-EFE whether the Costa Rican Government has adopted any measures against UNO's top leaders who can carry out political activities here, Arias Sanchez said that "nothing is done behind their backs" (referring to the contra leaders).

They "owe us a satisfactory explanation, because I am absolutely sure that they know about the existence of those hospitals," Arias stressed, adding that he will meet with the members of the State Security Council tonight to analyze the measures that will be adopted by the government. "We are going to have to issue a warning" to those persons, because "they will not be allowed to stay in our country if they carry out military activities, not only at the border, but also in the rest of the country," Arias Sanchez said.

"If they do not respect the rules of the game established by the government, they will have no political rights in Costa Rica," Arias Sanchez added. He continued that if they violate the rules of asylum "those people are not worthy of sharing the Costa Rican territory and institutions with the rest of our compatriots."

According to contra spokesmen in this capital, the military struggle against the Nicaraguan Government in the southern part of Nicaragua has been intensified during the past few weeks.

EL SALVADOR

DUARTE SATISFIED WITH ECONOMIC POLICY

PA262210 Paris AFP in Spanish 2114 GMT 25 Jul 86

[By Ana Cristina Hasbun]

[Text] San Salvador, 25 Jul (AFP) -- President Jose Napoleon Duarte has said that the economic measures adopted by his government 6 months ago "have yielded the expected results, even though the plan was designed for a 3-year perod and was expected to bring some destabilization at the beginning."

In an exclusive interview with AFP, Duarte said that "the economic stablization and reactivation program," which has been opposed by rightist and leftist sectors, is intended to change the country's "rigid economy" by adapting it to the world situation. On 22 January the government adopted the economic measures, which included a 100-percent devaluation of the currency, tax increases, and import restrictions. President Duarte said that "this economic package" was a response to pressure from foreign financial sectors, which would have continued if the Salvadoran colon (2.50 per dollar) had reached a higher official exchange rate.

The official exchange rate of the colon was set at 5 colones per dollar, and, according to Duarte, "we logically expected it to shoot up in the black market, but in the last 6 months it has not risen above 5.70, in contrast to last year, when it reached 8 and 9 per dollar in the last months." President Duarte denied rumors of a new short-term devaluation, and he attributed them to "leftist and rightist sectors acting out of self-interest who do not want to admit the success of the economic measures." The president said that the second phase of the economic plan involves seeking new levels of production to achieve an overall reactivation of the economy.

According to Duarte, since January El Salvador has had a monthly inflation rate average of 2 percent, and "we believe that by the end of this year the inflation rate will reach a maximum of 30 percent, but this is a part of the adjustment process," he said. By next year, he added, the inflation rate will drop to 15 percent, "which will be a more manageable situation." Duarte said that El Salvador continues to be subject to international credit, since "it is one of the few countries that has continued to pay its foreign debt. Presently, $400 million is being negotiated with the IDB." El Salvador's foreign debt amounted to $260 million in December 1985, according to several government sources.

"We have the guaranteed economic support of friendly countries such as Argentina, Brazil, Italy, the FRG, and the United States, which have given us funds to help us maintain equilibrium," Duarte said. The president denied recent statements from some rightist political leaders who said that El Salvador had lost almost 200 million colones last year by speculating on coffee sales in the world market. According to Duarte, the government's policy is to sell 15,000 quintals of coffee daily with the object of obtaining an average margin of profit in view of the constant highs and lows in the prices of coffee in the world market. This will allow coffee growers to receive $80 per quintal.

The country's foreign trade has been nationalized since March 1980, when a civil-military government junta headed by Duarte enacted the agrarian reform and the nationalization of the banking system.

The FMLN has maintained a campaign on Radio Venceremos against the government's economic measures, saying that "everything increases except the wages of the working class."

He [Duarte] said, "I do not understand why some sectors criticize the economic package. It is intended to seek the stabilization and the reactivation of the national economy, and, most of all, it is yielding satisfactory results."

D'AUBUISSON CRITICIZES DEBATE PROPOSAL

PA261802 San Salvador Canal Doce Television in Spanish 0300 GMT 25 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Major Roberto D'Aubuisson, ARENA [National Republican Alliance] leader, today described as demagogical the proposal of Culture and Communications Deputy Minister Roberto Viera for a debate in Nicaragua between Salvadoran Government representatives and FMLN-FDR leaders. Viera's proposal was presented after the rebels proposed to the government an open debate somewhere in Salvadoran territory, which would be carried by the communications media.

[Begin recording] [D'Aubuisson] My friend Rey Prendes [Julio Adolfo Rey Prendes, culture and communications minister] has been very skillful in compromising Viera with this kind of remark. Although it appears very attractive to hold the debate in Managua, at the LA PRENSA premises, which have been seized, and with Msgr Miguel Obando y Bravo acting directly as moderator, the truth is that this is unwise. A government official has just told me that this intention has already been reported to the Sandinist government. A Salvadoran official cannot tell another government or country that some people want to do as they wish. In other words, all this seems to be a mockery, just like the famous Duarte lies and demagoguery in saying he wants a dialogue for peace, while all the time he is the one who provokes domestic discord. This is just another of those famous shows, the smoke screen that he mentioned at a press conference. It is they who have laid a smoke screen. They are gambling with something very dangerous.

In view of foolishness of this kind, the FMLN people are supposed to ... [changes thought]. This foolishness indicates that officials do not realize what a government is. Viera speaks on behalf of the president. This indicates that a true statesman is not speaking. These things should not happen. What if Shafik Handal of Villalobos now answers them: Okay, we will wait for you here? In other words, I feel this is stupid. As I said earlier, it is very interesting that my friend Rey Prendes hooked Viera into making those remarks. [Words indistinct] would not risk making those remarks, even if Duarte ordered them. [Words indistinct], this in addition to his personal problems in the party. He could not even win on the Christian Democratic Party's municipal list. But he is the son-in-law. This is to say, all of the newly arrived have been sweeping away the traditionalists. Yet, this is their problem.

[D'Aubuisson] We have already presented a proposal during the forum organized by the Crusade for Peace and Work [Cruzada Pro Paz y Trabajo] last Saturday at the Sheraton Hotel.

The ARENA proposal is a formal proposal, worthy of being taken into consideration.

According to the Constitution, the political parties are the people's representatives. ARENA proposes that all legally registered parties meet and present the problems of the various sectors, of all the sectors; namely, the church, the comadres -- that is, that group of ladies [reference to the Msgr Oscar Arnulfo Romero Committee of Mothers and Relatives of Political Prisoners, Missing, and Murdered people in El Salvador] the unions, etc., so that in this meeting we can work on what the Salvadoran people desire. In other words, it is a national proposal for peace and liberty. [end recording]

FMLN COMMANDER DISCUSSES DUARTE'S PROPOSAL

PA280238 (Clandestine) Radio Venceremos in Spanish to El Salvador 0037 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Interview with Commander Shafik Jorge Handal, member of the FMLN General Command, by unidentified questioner; date and place not given -- live or recorded]

[Text] [Question] We will begin this interview with Companero Commander Shafik Jorge Handal with a question concerning the political proposal made by the FMN-FDR to all social and political sectors of the country to contribute to a dialogue among Salvadorans in an effort to find a solution to the conflict. As is public knowledge, this proposal has been a contribution to the debate that it has initiated through various national sectors concerning the current key issues of national importance, such as peace and social justice, political solution to the debate of ideas, etc.

However, for his part, Napoleon Duarte has been evasive. He has been making demagogic speeches, touching on some subjects, but without going in too deep. Duarte has even referred to Companero Commander Shafik Jorge Handal in a personal manner, and [words indistinct] an episode of our past political life during that speech. Commander Handal, could you tell us what you think about this situation?

[Handal] I think that Duarte's tour through Gotera and other cities in the country and his most recent interviews on radio and television are an effort on his part to fill a vacuum in his specific stand concerning the dialogue and the political solution which he had created in recent weeks. As we all know, during his early June speech on the occasion of his 2d year in power, Duarte proposed a meeting, a third dialogue meeting with the two fronts, the FDR-FMLN. In less than 48 hours, we accepted this proposal. We announced a high-level delegation of our two fronts, thus showing our clear willingness to contribute in a constructive manner to a political solution; that is, a willingness of peace, of political solution, of a dialogue.

Shortly after that, it was observed that there was a change in Duarte's stand, a change even in the enthusiasm with which he presented his proposal. He then entered a period of excuses, of subterfuges. First, he clung to the proposal made by the Bishops Conference of holding prior private meetings: He went as far as to call them secret meetings. In addition, he told us these meetings should be held abroad. His first stand had been clear to the people who listened to him. The whole country understood it: a meeting inside the country.

What had happened? The Army command and the U.S. Embassy in fact put a clamp on that proposal by Duarte. They clearly told him that this was not advisable, that he should just make some sort of a maneuver and then pull out of the dialogue, that continuing with the dialogue was a fact they could not accept, and they imposed restrictions on Duarte. Duarte accepted because he does not have any capabilities for power, for deciding on his own actions by himself. As I was saying, they imposed such restrictions on him that Duarte started to evade the issue, to seek secret talks, so that no one could see how poor and empty the government's stand was and the fact this could not contribute at all to the just peace the Salvadoran people are demanding.

Trying to fill this vacuum, Duarte began to call for me personally, to play with the idea of an alleged division within the FMLN General Command. He started to call for me personally. He remembered all the times when we were allies. I think I cannot evade, under these conditions referring to that past, and thus give the Salvadoran people the opportunity to form their own opinion concerning a period of the country's poltiical life that was very important and that undoubtedly exerted an influence in the development of later events.

In past years I had avoided mentioning them due to a basic principle of politicial ethiscs that told me I should not make any public reference to what we had discussed in private throughout our alliance with the Christian Democratic Party [PDC] and to my personal relationship with Napoleon Duarte himself. However, now it is Napoleon Duarte who is making reference to that period of time and presents it in a false, distorted manner, and this forces me to speak inpublic about that experience.

We, the Communist Party of El Salvador [PCES], and the PDC were allies for nearly 9 years, along with the National Revolutionary Movement, the MNR. At the end of 1971 we formed the UNO [National Union of Oppostion]. That was a clear, honest [words indistinct] that was evident in a program we jointly prepared, that is, the three parties. Everyone in El Salvador heard about the UNO program. It was a program that sought democracy and true independence and proposed mature, urgent, necessary reforms to change the situation of poverty, backwardness, and exploitation in which the Salvadoran people had been submerged for a long time.

Based on that program, we launched into a long-lasting political struggle. It was not an occasional pact, it was a pact for achieving the goals of that program. (?It was a long pact). Throughout that time, we struggled together, the PDC and ourselves. I am only going to refer to the relationship between the PDC and the PCES, because of the statments that have been made concerning me. Throughout that time we exchanged ideas, we prepared ideas and stands; we worked hard to seek the paths for strengthening the forces of the Salvadoran people and thus lead them to a victory of their wishes through political means. We got to know each other well, we shared many important, interesting and influential moments.

I will now mention one such episode. Perhaps later I will have a chance to speak of other moments. I am going to speak of the most recent episode; the last meeting with Duarte, which was the one that practically put an end to our alliance.

In early January 1980, Duarte invited the PCES directorate to a bilateral meeting. The meeting was held in an office that Duarte had near the Seisa Funeral Parlor. Another party companero and I attended the meeting. Jose Napoleon Duarte, Hector Dada Hirezi, and Julio Adolfo Rey Prendes represented th PDC. I do not remember the exact day the meeting was held, but it was on a Teusday or Wednesday in earlyl January 1980. The Sunday before the meeting the PDC national convention had been held and Hector Dada Hirezi had been appointed to join the military junta and, in this manner, the Christian Democratic military government.

Duarte explained the reason for the invitation. He explained how they viewed the situation and ended by proposing that we join the government. The specific proposal consisted of the party selecting some members or supporters, their relations with the party not well known, to include them in the cabinet and other important position. Our answer to this proposal was clear and categorical. I do not understand why it is that today Duarte says that he cannot understand why the Communists joined the armed struggle.

At that meeting we clarified absolutely everything. Our answer was categorical; we rejected his offer and told him that in honor of the alliance whe had had for so long, we felt obliged to tell them how we felt.

We told them that they were making a serious mistake; that the PDC, through the pact they were making with the military leaders, would end up on the opposite side, enemy of the Salvadoran people, on the side of the exploiters and oppressors and killers of the Salvadoran people.

We explained this to them at length. I can still remember that there was a blackboard in Duarte's office. We used the blackboard to illustrate how we saw the power structure that continued unpunished and belonged to the most reactionary forces of the country and how its repressive system was made up. We told them that right after the PDC joined the government the number of killings would increase. We told them that the first government junta had resigned, en masse, in late December -- this junta was formed after the 15 October 1979 coup d'etat. We told them that if the country were in a situation to undertake an effort for democratization such as the one he was suggesting, through an alliance with the military chiefs, that had already been tried between October and December 1979 and that the facts had proven differently. Power was still in bad hands that increased the crimes, repression, and killings on the San Salvador streets. By the way, we must remember that the current defense minister, General Vides Casanova, was the chief of the National Guard back then.

The National Guard carried out many of those killings on the streets of San Salvador, and the first government junta resigned, en masse, after it saw that all the hopes born with the 15 October coup d'etat were all false hopes, that all those ideals had been betrayed, and that to remain in government was to serve as a cover for the former dictatorship that remained unchanged and had become more criminal.

We told them all this and told them that after the first junta resigned, the situation had gotten worse, that the position of the reactionary, antipeople, and antihomeland chiefs had strengthened and that the killings had increased. We told them that this would also be done under their umbrella.

We added that as allies we were obliged to tell them all this and to add a call. We called on them to think, to remain with the same positions they had maintained up to then, to continue with the struggle we had planned. We told them that we believed that all we had told the people during the electoral campaigns was serious and responsible and that we were committed to continue that struggle in other ways since life had already proved to us that the purely political ways made this impossible; that the electoral life had been used up completely, it had been wasted, blocked, and hindered; that we were committed to reaching our objectives by other means; that we had to fight the dictatorship on its terrain; that we could not speak in another language to the killers. We called on them to remain faithful to the struggle we had maintained for 9 years, to the plan that we had presented to the Salvadoran people.

The first one to speak after us was Hector Dada Hirezi. He was very clear in stating more or less the following: He said that he agreed with the way we, the Communists, had analyzed the situation at the meeting; that he felt the same way; and that he had no hopes for things to change. He said that if he had accepted the appointment to represent the PDC in the government junta it had been because of party discipline, but that he was taking advantage of the meeting to make an announcement, a statement, issue a warning. He said he would join the junta for just enough time to find out what was happening; that the situation had not changed; that power remained in the same hands or in worse hands; and that if he proved this he would withdraw from the junta. This was exactly what he did. We can all remember that only a few months later, I do not remember exactly how long, after he became a member of the junta, Dada Hirezi resigned. He did this just in time, because the bloodiest and most abominable times followed.

We must recall that the assassination of Msgr Romero occurred afterward, as well as the endless killings during 1980. That year was a very dramatic year from that standpoint. It was also a year of great heroism and struggle on the part of the Salvadoran people. What happened after Dada Hirezi's withdrawal? It was a good time to stop and think. It was a good time for the party leaders, first of all Duarte, to tell their companeros the truth and to propose a brave withdrawal, maintaining their dignity. However, it did not happen that way. Dada Hirezi was replaced by Napoleon Duarte.

Ever since meeting Napoleon Duarte, I have always the impression that.... [changes thought] It is true that he was away from the country for many years after his expulsion to Venezuela in 1972, but I visited him in Caracas on several occasions, and we talked at length. Based on what I know about him, on what I knew about him, I still feel that he really did not want to join the junta at that time, that he would have preferred other party members to join the junta. He would have preferred for the junta to conduct a purge -- in other words, to eliminate the people's resistance and replace it with the peace of the cemeteries -- so that he could then appear as the caudillo of the elections, assuming the Presidency with a clean democratic banner.

However, perhaps there was no one willing to assume that responsibility among his party's leaders, and Napoleon Duarte, as the popular saying goes, was left holding the bag, a dirty, muddy, and bloodstained bag. It was when Napoleon Duarte was in the junta, of which he became the top leaser, that Msgr Romero was assassinated. It was then that the massacre during the great polular demonstration at the funeral in front of the cathedral in Barrios Plaza took place. What did Duarte do then? Did he show his indignation, did he accuse the assassins and leave the government? No. On the contrary, he accused us. He accused the revolutionaries of that horrible crime. Years later, in a demagogic move based on his own political needs, Duarte proposed investigating Msgr Romero's murder again. As I said, only because of his political needs at the time did he direct the accusation against the one he should have accused from the beginning: D'Aubuisson. We all recall that D'Aubuisson was arrested, together with a group of his fellow squad members at a farm in Santa Tecea. Colonel Majano, who ordered the arrest, was still in the junta. Enough documents were found proving that those who were arrested were the authors of that and many other crimes. However, Duarte defended D'Aubuisson. Duarte supported the high command sector that demanded D'Aubuisson's release. Duarte helped to protect D'Aubuisson by accusing us of those crimes, by accusing us, the revolutionaries.

What we had predicted at that last meeting in his office near the Seisa Funeral Parlor was being confirmed in an exceptionally dramatic way. In fact, during the period when Duarte was in the junta, more than 30,000 Salvadorans were murdered.

I would like to recall some of the most outstanding cases, because among those killed were many PDC members, some of whom were very valuable [words indistinct] such as Mario Zamora, who was killed in his own residence. Duarte had visited Mario Zamora in his home, he left the house, and a few minutes later [words indistinct]. Duarte used all the influence he had within the party during that convention, and the PDC youths also had to withdraw from the party so as not to become accomplices in that horrible slaughter of the Salvadoran people. They created the Social Christian People's Movement [MPSC] headed by Ruben Zamora. Since then, the PDC policy has become more coherent, but also more reactionary. There were no more misunderstandings. At the January meeting -- the last one we had with Duarte -- at the end of the meeting, before we left, we [words indistinct] that we had been allies for 9 years, that alliance had been based on mutual credibility, that it had been a sincere alliance, and that although we [words indistinct] to democratize the country, to put an end to repression, to guarantee respect for human rights [words indistinct] we will give you the benefit of that credibility during the initial period.

We are going to wait and see how you react to the different situations. During the first period we are not going to attack the PDC, nor you, Napoleon, I clearly remember telling him. We are going to wait and see how you will react to the situations that are about to come.

By reviewing the statements and newspapers of those days it can be seen that we in fact kept our word. We have them the benefit of credibility. Dada Hirezi acted with dignity and honored his commitment to the Salvadoran people. The PDC youths who withdrew and created the MPSC also honored that commitment. However, the PDC remained there, precisely because you, Napoleon, exerted your influence to that effect.

It was then that we began to attack the position assumed by the PDC leadership and to attack you personally. We increased our attacks precisely when you, from the government, supported and promoted the decree establishing the state of siege, to attribute an impossible legality to the killings and repression. We intensified our attacks because you gave in more and more. Not only did we attack the old reactionary military power, against which the efforts of patriots and democratic [words indistinct] failed, as well as the efforts of Colonel Majano himself, who was expelled from the junta afterwads. Your surrender was even worse. You surrendered to the U.S. Government. To the worst U.S. Government in many decades: the aggressive, warmongering, ultrarightist government of Ronald Reagan.

I would like to recall other historical facts that shed light on the change undergone by Duarte and his group of PDC leaders. In 1972, while he was UNO's candidate, Duarte won the elections as presidential candidate.

Then came the outrageous fraud, that rotesque imposition through which the dictatorship stole the people's victory. Weeks after that, on 25 March 1972, there was an uprising by democratic, patriotic militarymen who wanted the Armed Forces institution to play a role in the liberation of the Salvadoran people. That uprising was led by Colonel Benjamin Mejia. The UNO leaders met in Napoleon Duarte's home and reported on the situation. He asked us to help by telling the large crowd of people that was gathering near the National Guard headquarters -- that was the center of the resistance that was defending the dictatorship -- to get out of there because he was going to use the 105 mm cannons of the artillery garrison at Zapote. At the time, the artillery garrison was at Zapote. He was going to use those cannons to put an end to that resistance.

He also reported that troops from the 3d Infantry Brigade of San Miguel were moving to support the ousted government of Sanchez Hernandez, and that we should make appeals to halt or delay the advance of the column coming from San Miguel to San Salvador.

We quickly agreed on what had to be done. Duarte went on the radio and made vigorous appeals to the people, to the masses, to support the military uprising. When this uprising was defeated, Duarte went to request asylum at the Venezuelan Embassy. It was there he was beaten with a rifle butt and had his cheekbone broken. He was exiled to Venezuela. As I said before, I visited him on several occasions in Venezuela. Someday we will talk about all this. I am going to refer to some of these aspects during this interview.

I really did not want to refer to that, when I brought up the subject of the uprising led by Col Benjamin Mejia. I just want to recall that after having been in exile for many years, Col Benjamin Mejia thought he could return to the country during the times of the junta led by Duarte, the military-Christian Democratic junta.

Shortly after he returned to the country, Mejia was murdered. Duarte did not open his mouth at all. He was not loyal even to the memory of that struggle, that although it failed was an effort that left a mark on the political education of the Salvadoran people. That struggle was a seal of blood in favor of the Salvadoran people's ideals.

Benjamin Mejia was murdered cowardly and treacherously. The military-Christian Democratic junta, or rather, the PDC leadership of Duarte, covered up that crime. The same thing happened with the murder of Mario Zamora, as the juanta did not protest and break with the assassins who were protecting the other assassins who did the actual killing.

I wish to recall even more of those crimes of 1980. In November, 1980 the Executive Committee of the FDR was murdered. Its president, Enrique Alvarez Cordoba, and five more companeros of the FDR Executive Committee were murdered in a most cruel manner. Again, Duarte did nothing. This was another sign alerting him as to what he had gotten into, but Duarte did not react. He continued defending the assassins. He did nothing to clarify the murders.

I wish to recall another episode of those times. These were all signs of alert that he should have noticed and done something about. Then there was the murder of the U.S. nuns. Vides Casanova was director of the National Guard. He had something to do with this. After there was much pressure from the North Americans, from the U.S. Government that in turn was being pressured by the U.S. people, after many demands by the Yankees to clarify this, they ended up blaming some guardsmen. The covered up the responsibility of the chiefs. At the beginning, they did not begin any investigation, and it was clear that members of the National Guard were involved. However, they made no use of their authority, of their high positions to clarify that murder.

That was another bloody episode in the midst of the sea of murders. Those were the days when 20, even 30 bodies appeared every day in the San Salvador streets and the highways in the country. Bodies would appear beheaded, with their hands cut off. I remember a [word indistinct] case of a couple of sweethearts where the head of her boyfriend was stuffed into the girl's abdomen that had been cut open. The corpse looked like the corpse of a pregnant girl. The corpses were dumped near the Vieitez Theater.

Those incidents belong to those times. But now I am going to refer to another murder, the murder of Viera and of the U.S. advisors of the agrarian reform. This also happened during the time of the military-Christian Democratic junta. They also covered up that crime. From the very moment they did not investigate the crime and let it go unpunished, they were covering it up. After that, they acted out some sort of pantomime, at the demand of the U.S. Government, -- I repeat -- demands that result from the pressure of the U.S. people. They acted out a pantomime that did not move even Duarte or Viera's brother. Roberto Viera, who is the brother of that Viera who was murdered, is today a high-ranking government official [deputy minister of culture and communications]. It was then that he further strengthened his ties with the military, with that redoubt of assassins who had either directly murdered his brother or were covering up his brother's assassins. Roberto Viera has reached such extremes of moral corruption that he is now an instrument of the Armed Forces General Staff. I am saying this with full knowledge of the issue, with perfect knowledge of the issue. Roberto Viera is their instrument within the PDC. The fact that Duarte recently appointed him as his official spokesman is something that has been imposed by the military leadership. Viera is the man who breathes and talks through the noses of the Armed Forces General Staff, and therefore of the U.S. Embassy.

This is the way things are. At that last meeting, the one I mentioned earlier, Fito Rey Prendes was also present with Jose Napoleon Duarte and Hector Dada Hirezi. At that meeting he tried to argue and convince us that they were right and that we should join the government. He used the same type of reasoning he tends to use to justify anything. Fito Rey Prendes has -- the ability and I would not call it a virtue -- to argue in favor of anything; in favor of what is good for them.

Regarding Rey Prendes I wish to recall some things. During much of the time that we were allies -- despite the fact that we were always aware of Fito Rey Prendes' ambitions -- during much of that Fito presented himself to us as procommunist. At one time he began writing an essay on the country's political history, and he would say that he wanted to stress the role of the Communist Party in his essay. He would ask us for documents and interviews.

On 25 March 1972, during the uprising headed by Col Mejia, we were together at the UNO locale, located behind (?Don Rio). We were trying to get UNO members to come to headquarters and help in the struggle against the dictatorship. That same day we had been training in the use of weapons, military weapons. We did this at that place. We felt that it was our duty to join the fighting if this became necessary. We trained in the use of military weapons.

Fito Rey Prendes joined the training sessions that we had organized. That was the type of man he was back then. But today, experienced after years of sheltering the killers of the Salvadoran people, after arguing and arguing to justify something that cannot be justified, Fito Rey Prendes aapires to become president of the Republic. He has already undertaken the task to reorganize the party at departmental and municipal levels. He is placing in key positions men who, before 1980, had been PCN [National Conciliation Party] leaders in those towns. Everyone is aware of this. Today, most of the party leaders at the departmental and municipal levels are former members of the PCN -- the same men who played those roles when the PCN was the ruling party of the military dictatorship. It is quite logical that things should be this way, quite logical, because Rey Prendes, Duarte, Alejandro Duarte -- Jose Napoleon's son -- and Viera, who form what within the PDC is known as the clique, cannot trust the rank and file of the PDC, the traditional rank and file of that pary. That rank and file fought and struggled in the 1970's when we were allies. They were persecuted just as we were. They were sent to prison. Communists and Christian Democrats went to jail together, suffered torture together. Therefore, it is quite natural that they should not trust the party's traditional rank and file. Because we know them -- the party's rank and file -- we know that there must be much shame and guilty consciences among them after seeing the role that Duarte has forced the party to play all these years.

We also cannot be surprised that throughout these years, members of the PDC's rank nd file have been murdered and persecuted. Duarte never did anything to clarify those deaths or to release those who had been arrested during the years that the PDC had been in government. These are men who most probably decided to continue being faithful to their ideas, the objectives of the people's struggle, to what we told the people time and time again. Well then, they do not trust, nor can they trust, the rank and file and have started new directorships with former PCN members -- men who walked out on the PCN after it was no longer the ruling party. I think that the PCN did not lose much by this; they left the PCN and joined the PDC where Fito Rey Prendes and the clique welcomed them and placed them in positions from where they can lead their companeros who struggled at the side of the patriotic forces for so long. Today many of them, even those who have remained fooled by Duarte's and Rey Prendes' words, must still be faithful to their commitments and seek a way to continue the struggle for those ideals that continue to be the ones that move the mind, actions, courage, and heroism of the Salvadoran people, who continue to be a part of those ranks.

Knowing as we know the PDC, its leaders, its middle level people, and its rank and file, I believe that not only the rank and file but also leadership circles must have guilty feelings and concern over the traitorous role that the PDC has been playing.

I don't knowe if this concern will lead to a renewal effort on the part of the PDC, to rescue the PDC. I do not know if this will happen, and if it does happen I do not know whether it will be successful or not. However, I am certain that there is this concern. I am absolutely certain that that party has not failed to be affected after having committed that crime, after having lent itself to such a crime. It has been affected.

I believe that in that party there is an accumulation of disruptive factors that will explode at any moment.

Duarte dragged the PDC into playing that role, and it is still playing that role. However, sometimes it looks like he sporadically gets flashes of that conscience he buried with corruption and with commitments to the enemies of the people. I am referring to his convoking of the meeting in La Palma and to the La Palma meeting conclusions, which he endorsed. Those conclusions were essentially aimed at setting in motion a process of dialogue to secure a political solution that would not be produced overnight, that would represent a lengthy effort, as he himself noted at that time.

A short time ago we thought we saw another of those flashes when Duarte dares make his own decisions: convoking the third meeting or dialogue. However, this time the flash lasted less time than when he called for the La Palma meeting. On that occasion the flash lasted 1 month. Afterward he was trapped, and he allowed himself to be trapped. He made no effort to save that situation. On this occasion it lasted less time, only a few days.

The high command trap, the U.S. Embassy trap opened, and Duarte walked into it. Later, as I said at the beginning, Duarte tried to escape. He tried to fill the vacuum created when his position vanished. In his effort to fill the vacuum he has made appeals, as I have said before. He has made appeals to me, especially. He has tried to present things as if there were differences between Joaquin Villalobos and me, as if there were a division in the FMLN General Command.

If there were a division in the FMLN General Command they would have defeated us already. Duarte's maneuver in this regard is truly ridiculous, a desperate action.

In spite of what we have said and the description we have given of the behavior of Duarte and the PDC leadership since 1980, I want to say that the Communists do not regret the 9-year period of alliance with the PDC. We believe we contributed to the political education of the people, that we created awareness, that we promoted unity among the people, that we contributed to their decision to confront the dictatorship.

We do not regret this at all. But, personally speaking, I do have something to regret: I regret having helped Napoleon Duart prepare his television programs and his speeches at that time. I contributed by telling him th ideas of our party, ideas that represent the feelings and hopes of the people. He used programs I told him about and they gave him prestige, they created his image as a leader on whom the Salvadoran people could pin hopes of political and social liberties.

Before joining UNO, the PDC had no clear position on important issues, like the agrarian reform problem, for example. Evidence of this is that at the agrarian reform congress convoked by the Legislative Assembly following the so-called curulazo [ouster of the president of the Legislative Assembly] in 1970, the PDC was unable to present any serious program on agrarian reform.

I remember that the PDC position on this very complex issue was contained in a 2-page, typewritten, double-spaced document. The position was completely superficial, bland, spiritless, and inconsistent.

When the UNO program was being prepared, the MNR and we were the ones who presented fundamental positions aimed at fundamental changes that the country requires and that the Salvadoran people want. One of these points was the agrarian reform. Napoleon Duarte had no expertise in these subjects, and we had to keep him informed and give him advice.

At that time we fulfilled the obligation we had as a result of the pact and mutual credibility that existed at that time. However, looking back, I do regret what I did. I regret not having had the capability to go deeper in evaluating this person. I believe that somehow -- and to a great extent -- we contributed to enhancing his image in the eyes of the people, to creating hopes about him among the people.

Comparing the 1970's with the 1980's, some things become obvious, and I want to point them out.

As far as we and the MNR -- two of the three members of UNO -- are concerned, we continued to struggle. We have taken on the responsibilities we had to take on. The Communists have taken up arms alongside the revolutionaries in our country. We have done the correct thing.

Duarte dragged his party to the opposite band, to the band of the oppressors and exploiters of the Salvadoran people, to the band of the U.S. empire, to the band of those who drown national independence, to the band of those who shamelessly sell the country for dollars.

It is not that there are opposing paths, as Duarte has begun claiming in his recent speeches.

The clash is on positions, and between the two sides that are fighting. The exploiters, oppressors, and enemies of the people and the country are on one side, and on the other are the Salvadoran people's forces, who continue to struggle steadfastly through other means and who fight the enemy on their own turf. That is the situation. This becomes obvious upon comparing the 1970's with the 1980's.

In his recent speeches and news conferences, Duarte -- in addition to making direct personal comments about me -- asked me to behave in a certain way. However, that was an empty plea, which he made in an attempt to come across as a good, sincere man. Well, there are several things I want to ask of him.

The last time we met in Caracas, in June 1979, Duarte told me some very interesting things. At the time he was president of the Christian Democratic Organization of America -- its acronym is ODCA -- a position he had been holding for several years. The secretary general was [Luis] Herrera Campins, who later became president of Venezuela. Duarte discussed with me various things about his experience as president of ODCA. He told me that as president of ODCA he often participated in meetings with ranking U.S. and FRG Government officials and that those meetings sent chills up his spine, because those people, he told me, talked about our peoples with so much contempt, discussed our countries' futures only in the light of their own interests, and completely disregarded our needs. He said that their cold-hearted, contemptuous remarks showed that all they sought was ways to manipulate our countries' futures. That was what frequently sent chills up his spine during those meetings.

Duarte did not make those remarks to just anyone: I was the secretary general of the Communist Party. I want to appeal to the memory of the struggles we waged during the 1970's, and to the commitments that we, the Christian Democrats and the Communists, made to the Salvadoran people together back then, as I ask Jose Napoleon Duarte the following: Napoleon, listen to me: I am asking you to draw moral strength from that struggle, to adopt a brave, honest stance, and to act patriotically, even if doing so may entail risking your life, being as you are -- because you chose to be -- surrounded by murderers, the same murderers we have been fighting for years, putting our lives on the line. I ask you to stand up to the Reagan administration and the military commanders. Don't follow their designs to prolong the war. Come to the third dialogue meeting as a Salvadoran, willing to come to agreements that will open a continuous, perserving dialogue process, in which we will listen to and take into account the opinions of all sectors of the Salvadoran society that want a political solution, until that solution and the just peace that our people desire are attained.

You insist on tying peace to our disarmament. However, you know very well that we will never lay down our people's weapons, because they guarantee that in the end their struggle will achieve freedom, true democracy, and social justice. Your administration has been a long succession of noncompliance and frustrations. It has proven that the people's wishes cannot be realized any other way in El Salvador. The weapons we carry are the only guarantors of a just peace. Without them, the Salvadoran people would be at the mercy of their age-old oppressors and murderers, whom our invincible weapons have compelled to approach the people a bit more, to speak gently with them and give them things. No one, not even the Yankees, can take our weapons from us. This is what makes the dialogue a feasible means of achieving democracy and peace.

The dialogue would be impossible if we laid down our weapons. No one can disarm us. We will not lay down our weapons voluntarily. You know that perfectly well, Napoleon. On behalf of the 9 years that we worked together for democracy and social justice, I beseech you to put your life on the line, to disobey Reagan's orders and take the true road toward a solution among Salvadorans, toward peace based on national independence, on the exercise of sovereignty and self-determination, on national consensus, true democracy, respect for human rights, and on the economic and social changes that are necessary to guarantee development and social justice. This is the only way of achieving peace in El Salvador. I want to be sincere and open in what I am going to say, as sincere and open as you yourself found us Communists to be when we were allies. I want to tell you, assure you, that if you make that brave, righteous decision, it will weigh very heavily on the evaluations we revolutionaries will make of the role you play, and of the kind of man you are.

[Question] Shafik: The government, high command, the reactionary circles, and the U.S. Government claim that our proposals for a political solution to the conflict are unconstitutional. Shielding themselves behind the Constitution, and as part of their efforts to prevent the dialogue for a political solution to the conflict, they have refused to acknowledge the validity of our proposals. What is the FMLN's view on this?

[Handal] Many things must be taken into consideration regarding that subject. It is a subject of crucial importance in the debate with the government, with the U.S. Embassy, with the Armed Forces command, with the entire right wing in the country. It is, I would say, the resistance's shelter in seeking a political solution of the Salvadoran conflict.

The issue must be considered from various viewpoints. I will try to do this. First of all, I want to say the following: This Constitution was prepared in the midst of the war, after elections carried out during a state of siege, in which only a fraction of the political forces in the country participated. Since that time, prior to the preparation of this Constitution, we have said that we would not recognize the legitimacy of the Constituent Assembly that was established, and that we would not recognize whatever it did. Now this argument persists. It is an argument created by the same people who support the Constitution. They made their Constitution, they held their elections, they formed their Constituent Assembly, they made their Constitution, they modeled it as they wanted it, and now they seek refuge in it. The government has not behaved very seriously. It has failed to recognize the concept itself, its causes, its consequences, its roots. It has turned its back on national reality. The Constitution does not in any way reflect national reality, or the true political scope of what is happening in the country.

As far as social aspects are concerned, the government decreed the Constitution, going against the opinion of the majority of the people, and against the peasants' opinions. The peasants demanded consistency in the application of the agrarian reform, which ended up being buried in a pact made behind the people's backs just as the formation of that provision government that emerged from the constituent elections was a pact made behind the people's backs.

The government was headed by Alvaro Magana, [words indistinct], who was never considered part of the electoral struggle, of that reduced and partial electoral struggle. Alvaro Magana had not even been mentioned, and he ended up as provisional president of the government. All of that was a masquerade. The masquerade was arranged by General Vernon Walters, who was sent by Reagan to El Salvador. It is well known that Walters gathered the leaders of the political parties, and he met with the Armed Forces high command separately. Walters threatened the Armed Forces high command. He is also said to have threatened the party leaders, and this is how the pact of the so-called Government of National Unity emerged. This is how the Constitution was created. What Constitution are we referring to? To a Constitution that really expresses the nation's desires? Absolutely not.

We said then and repeat today that we do not recognize the Constitution's legitimacy. That is the first aspect. The second aspect of this issue is that no other Constitution in the history of our country has ever been respected. The same people who today allege that the Constitution should be respected and because of this do not want to make way for a political solution of the national conflict are the same people, representatives of the same social classes, of the same sectors, who throughout the country's history have trampled upon the Constitution and violated it on countless occasions.

Regarding the peoples's interests, citizens' rights, guarantees, liberties, and human rights, these have been constantly and permanently trampled upon. It is also insincere and even cynical to try to seek refuge in the alleged sanctity and a sancrosanct respect for the Constitution. If there were not so much tragedy and suffering in the midst of it all, this recent boasting about the Constitution and this war against the (?opposition) would be laughable. That is the second aspect. No Constitution, not even this current one, has ever meant anything to the dominant classes, or to the Armed Forces leaders, or to the Americans, that is, the U.S. Government in our country.

The third aspect of this issue is that even within the limits of this Constitution, which these gentlemen claim to respect and demand that others respect, it is perfectly possible to work. I am referring to the limitations of the Constitution. It is perfectly feasible to carry out the political solution that we have proposed. We have spoken, for example, of reorganizing the government. How many times have the so-called constitutional governments in all the countries of the world reorganized without anyone making a scandal about the constitution?

Why is it unconstitutional to do this? Speaking from the juridical standpoint, eliminating the political aspects I already referred to, speaking from the purely juridical point of view, why is it unconstitutional to reorganize a government? That position is really untenable because the Cabinet, all of the key government positions are not subject to elections. The only positions in the executive branch subject to election are the posts of president and vice president.

Subject to election are the posts of deputy, mayor, councilman, but these posts do not constitute the entire government. They are a skeleton of the government. What constitutional decree, from the legal point of view -- I repeat, I am speaking from this point of view -- prohibits the reorganization of the government? There is absolutely none. This argument, is also, false.

Finally, one more aspect. What is most important in my opinion? All of the Salvadoran people yearn for peace, they want peace, they want a political solution of the conflict. That is admitted by all, including those opposed to a political solution.

This feeling and demand are over and above all constitutions. Even if the Constitution were legitimate; even if the Constitution were respected by the gentlemen who are now raising this argument; even if it were so -- which it is not in either case -- even if the Constitution were juridicially opposed to a solution to achieve peace, peace ranks above every constitution. The will of the Salvadoran people -- from which sovereignty supposedly emanates and from which the legitimacy of laws, including the Constituion, emanates -- favors peace and a political solution through dialogue, through the search for a just solution through dialogue.

Therefore, the argument pitting the Constitution against peace and the will of the Salvadoran people is neither acceptable nor valid. These would be my comments. I think the time has come for an assualt on this last redoubt of resistance to dialogue and to a national search for a solution among Salvadorans. The time has come for assaulting that position, for destroying that position with solid arguments and the conviction -- that the constitution is not and cannot be an obstacle and that this is a means or an argument to prevent peace and a political solution from being achieved in our country.

This is what I can state in this regard. I might add something else, though. One ponders: The people, the overwhelming majority are in favor of a political solution, of a dialogue to achieve a political solution. This has been quite obvious in the last few days, or in the last few weeks. Virtually no national sector has stayed out of the debate on this problem. Even the sectors opposed to a political solution have found themselves forced to join the debate, because this issue has been so important up to this point and is so much at the heart of the thinking and aspirations of the majority of our people that it cannot be overlooked. If this is so, if this is in fact the will of the nation -- with the exception of some very small groups -- one asks oneself: Why not promote it?

I think it is also time to think about this problem. There is only one answer, a very clear one. It is in the air and everybody is breathing it. However, not all are conscious of it yet. There is only one answer to this question: The door is not being opened to the process of national dialogue to seek a political solution to have a just peace because in first place, the U.S. Government is opposed to it. The main tool used by the U.S. Government to oppose it is the Army high command, the Armed Forces high command, which is committed up to its neck to the direction, or leadership that the U.S. Government imposes on it.

Furthermore, the high command is not commited out of its own free will, but because of corruption. The war has become a business.

The hundreds of millions of dollars reaching the country to continue waging the war and to promote the country's destruction -- so that the only thing left will be what U.S. imperialism and the (?worst reaction) in the country can control -- the war that is being waged with this dance of hundreds of millions of dollars has also opened the chapter of large-scale corruption among the Army high command and the top echelons of the government. Everyone who has access to the handling of these hundreds of millions of dollars gets his hand in it.

The trend in the U.S. aid is to grow and, therefore, the tendency in this business is to thrive even more. This is the way the alliance, that is, the subservience of the Armed Forces and the leading government officials, to the U.S. Government has been established. This subservience is based on the corruption, based on barefaced bribery with dollars.

That is why we have contended that the main and more decisive task to achieve peace is to stamp out the meddling by the U.S. Government in El Salvador.

GUATEMALA

QUINONEZ ON NEUTRALITY, U.S. 'PRESSURES'

PA261847 Guatemala City Cadena de Emisoras Unidas in Spanish 0050 GMT 26 Jul 86

[Text] Guatemala has reiterated that it will maintain its policy of effective neutrality in the Central American conflict. This was reported by Foreign Minister Mario Quinonez Amezquita, who added that our government will maintain its position of seeking dialogue as a way to solve all problems.

He said that Guatemala rejects the pressures of U.S. diplomatic envoys to form a bloc against Nicaragua. It seems that the idea of a Central American parliament -- cleverly torpedoed by the United States -- is to have all the area government represented in it; if not, no one will be a member in the proposed body.

Fortunately, Guatemala wants a peaceful dialogue instead of military actions. It has been shown that Guatemala is clearly seeking a negotiated and peaceful solution, through a dialogue, for the conflicts in the area, instead of solving our problems through military action.

The Christian Democratic government has been firm in this intention, and despite the efforts of Honduras and El Salvador, it has included Nicaragua in its rounds of negotiations. What we are seeking is to tell the world: We are five Central American countries, not four.

DEFENSE MINISTER COMMENTS ON AMOCO SUSPENSION

PA262305 Guatemala City Radio-Television Guatemala in Spanish 0400 GMT 25 Jul 86

[Excerpts] During an interview that Defense Minister General Jaime Hernandez Mendez granted to this newscast, he commented on the security the Army provided in areas where the guerrillas are operating.

It was recently reported that U.S. Amoco Oil Company had suspended its field activities due to a lack of security. However, it was learned today that this could be an excuse by the oil company to obtain an extension of its lease as the term stipulated by the law is drawing to an end and it has not yet conducted the drilling it is legally bound to do. Defense Minister Hernandez said that Amoco did not accept the Army's protection.

[Begin recording] [Hernandez] I do not think that [word indistinct]. When the company came here, the government offered and even gave them security, but the company felt that the security could make them a bigger target for the subversives. Company officials decided to withdraw the security. So far, they have decided to temporarily leave Guatemala in view of the threats they have received. Yet there has not been any direct action against them. I believe that once the Army gave them protection, they should have been working. Instead, they decided to take this action. However, we offered them effective security. I feel that they should be working.

[Reporter] Can we say that the subversives' actions in this area are out of control?

[Hernandez] No, not at all. We have offered to provide greater protection to the companies working there so that they may continue with their work.

[Reporter] Has the military detachment working there received support so that it can provide greater (?protection)?

[Hernandez] Yes. The detachment has gotten support. It has been specifically ordered to efficiently protect the oil companies so that we can keep them working in the area.

[Reporter] Have the oil companies requested protection?

[Hernandez] Yes, they have asked for it, and we have provided it. [end recording]

Gen Hernandez Mendez said that there are no urban guerrillas, but rather armed common criminals in the city.

[Begin recording] [Hernandez] We could not think that there are subversives in the capital city. There have been isolated incidents. These people have had opportunities to acquire weapons, because of the proliferation of some weapons some from here and others brought from abroad. Civilians are in possession of these weapons. However, at this time we could not speak of an increase or of the transfer of subversive actions to urban areas.

[Reporter] In addition to other criminal actions without political overtones, or rather, common crimes like murders, could there be any other force perpetrating these crimes, which may mean that the guerrillas are moving to the cities?

[Hernandez] No. I feel that chiefly common criminals are operating in Guatemala. If there were room to think that there could be other groups operating in Guatemala and related to the urban subversion, I would rule that possibility out. I would have to say that these are common criminals. [end recording]

[passage omitted]

General Hernandez said that the judge seeking missing people is free to enter the military garrisons.

[Begin recording] [Hernandez] I have given precise orders to the diverse commando units in the country. When the investigating judge comes to their commando units, they are to listen to him and allow him to enter the garrisons so that he may fully learn about the situation. I understand that he has already gone to Quezaltenango and to the garrison in the capital city. The military staff in the capital and Quezaltenango met with him. There is no [words indistinct] of that situation within our military forces. [end recording]

The defense minister said that his institution is adhering to its active neutrality, and he announced that he was going to travel to Panama during the last week of August.

[Begin recording] [Hernandez] As an insitution, as the Army of Guatemala, we adhere to the president's policies of active neutrality, speaking in military terms. However, we could say that in political and diplomatic terms there are some variations. We could consider those variations in view of the problems in Central America regarding the Catholic Church and the news media. In those fields, observations are in order from the Guatemalan Government to the Central American countries that may have these problems. [passage omitted]

I will most likely visit the U.S. Southern Command during the second half of August. That date has been agreed upon. [end recording] [passage omitted]

TAXI DRIVER ARRESTED IN ATTACK ON FDN MEMBERS

PA282306 Tegucigalpa Voz de Honduras Network in Spanish 1130 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Excerpt] Honduran secret police have taxi driver Raul Gomez under arrest as he has been accused of being the driver of one of the vehicles that transported the individuals who on Thursday machine-gunned a house in Colonias Lomas del Guijarro where FDN counterrevolutionaries were meeting. It was also reported that police are searching for another car with the sign Milagritos that transported another group of attackers.

The residents of this capital neighborhood told the media that seven individuals were seen arriving in two vehicles, but could not be sure that they were taxis. However, the police learned that two taxis, and their drivers were hijacked and, after their registration marks were erased, were forced to go to the home of Jose Tefel Pasos, a Nicaraguan-naturalized Honduran.

It was reported that the taxi driven by Raul Gomez, originally from San Francisco de la Paz, Olancho, was confiscated, although this was not confirmed by the police source. The police are looking for one that has a sign on the back that reads Milagritos. [passage omitted]

ASSEMBLY APPROVES TREATY PROTOCOL WITH U.S.

PA260322 Tegucigalpa Voz de Honduras Network in Spanish 1130 GMT 24 Jul 86

[By Andres Torres]

[Excerpt] The bill on Protocol 1 of the U.S.-Honduras Mutual Military Assistance Treaty was approved last night after the third and final debate. This treaty was signed in 1954 and extended by a legislative decree in November of last year.

The discussion of this protocol consumed the most time in the Congress. Protocol 2, which deals with military bases, was not even discussed by the Congress. Some aspects of the national legal system that have been criticized are the diplomatic status accorded to some U.S. military personnel and the jurisdiction of U.S. military courts in case of misdemeanors by personnel under U.S command. However, the Supremeo Court of Justice irresponsibly declined to express an opinion on this protocol, arguing that the agreement was more political than juridical. We sincerely feel that the court shunned its responsibility with a euphemism that can be described as vulgar.

The debate would have been even easier for the Congress if the judicial branch had done its duty. Nevertheless, the general opinon of the deputies was that in view of the danger lurking in front of us, it was mandatory to constitutionally ratify the protocol. Diaz Arrivillaga tried to have the Congress postpone the debate, but his motion was rejected. The (?discussion) centered on speeches by Diaz Arrivillaga, Landaverde, (?Gavillon, Miguel Pabon Aguilares, and Diogenes Cruz. Among other things, they referred to the foreign occupation, the violation of the national sovereignty, and their children's future.

Nevertheless, the Congress' decision was unequivocable. Barely eight deputies voted no. The rest voted yes. In this way, Protocol 1 joins Protocol 2. Constitutionally, the two documents come into force as part of the Honduras-U.S. Mutual Military Assistance Treaty. With this opposition by the liberal faction, we feel that Azcona needs no opposition from the other political parties. He already has opposition in his own party. [passage omitted]

ALANIZ REPORTEDLY APPOINTED AMBASSADOR TO PRC

PA281606 Managua Radio Sandino in Spanish 1300 GMT 27 Jul 86

[Text] Radio Sandino has unofficially learned who is the first Nicaraguan ambassador to the PRC. Alfredo Alaniz will be the head of our diplomatic delegation in that country. Alaniz is director of the Nicaraguan Institute of Fisheries, Inpesca, a post he has occupied for more than 2 years. Companero [Yu] Chengren, the first PRC ambassador to Nicaragua, presented his credentials to the Nicaraguan Government 15 days ago after the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries.

TANA SECRETARY CALLS ORGEGA UN VISIT 'TRIUMPH'

[Text] Today the upcoming visit of President Daniel Ortega to the UN Security Council was described as a new triumph over the U.S. Administration by Freddy Balzan, executive secretary of TANA, Central American Anti-Imperialist Tribunal. Balzan said that the visit of Commander of the Revolution Daniel Ortega to an organization such as the UN Security Council expresses the solidarity of the peoples of the world to the just demand of a people under attack. Let us listen to the statements made by Freddy Balzan:

[Begin recording] In the first place, we think that the visit of President Daniel Ortega, commander of the revolution, to the UN Security Council is highly important, not only for the achievement of peace in Nicaragua and Central America, but also for peace in all Latin America, because in view of the U.S. Administration's violation of, and contempt for international legal order, the fact that the United Nations and the UN Security Council have agreed to receive Daniel Ortega and to listen to his demands is a great honor by that international organization.

President Ortega's visit shows that the U.S. plot to try to neutralize the importance of the United Nations, which was proved by the United States' withdrawal from UNESCO, as well as by its reduction of economic funds for the United Nations, is really secondary in comparison to this organization's importance for world peace.

Now that solidarity with Nicaraguan is growing; now that nations are convinced of the justice of Nicaragua's position; now that numerous nations have reiterated their support for the Contadora and Support Group peace efforts, the positions sustained by several Central American governments including those of El Salvador, Honduras, and Costa Rica are unmasked. These positions are totally directed by the U.S. Administration.

President Daniel Ortega's visit to Washington has aroused great interest because there is a possibility that the United States will resort to its UN Security Council veto to neutralize or flout any resolution made there.

However, without knowing if Nicaragua will present a resolution to the UN Security Council, we think that Daniel Ortega's mere visit to that organization to demand respect for the International Court of Justice ruling from all the UN member-nations is already a great Nicaraguan victory and another defeat for the U.S. interventionist, warmongering policy. [end recording]

EUROPEAN VOLUNTEERS MURDERED BY 'MERCENARIES'

[Text] A few minutes ago Foreign Ministry sources informed Radio Sandino of another brutal action carried out by Somozist mercenaries who are paid by the Yankee government to cause bloodshed in Nicaragua. Mr Reagan's mercenaries today took the lives of three European volunteer workers and brothers. The volunteers -- a Swiss, a West German, and a Frenchman who had adopted Nicaraguan citizenship -- were ambushed and murdered near Wiwili, the Foreign Ministry source said. The source added that in the next few hours an official report will be released on this new crime carried out by the Somozists who are incapable of confronting our troops and who instead take it out on the friends of the Nicaraguan people who are not soldiers.

TWO CONTRAS EXPELLED FROM COSTA RICA

PA250450 Managua Sistema Sandinista Television Network in Spanish 0200 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Text] The Costa Rican Government today expelled two counterrevolutionaries who had been harassing EPS troops from a camp located in Costa Rican territory. The counterrevolutionaries maintained a camp in the Las Chorreras Farm, on the banks of the San Juan River. The presence of mercenaries in Costa Rican territory has been reported by the residents at the border. On previous occasions the Costa Rican authorities had ignored the reports on attacks against Nicaragua from Costa Rica.

CASTRO SPEAKS AT CENTRAL COMMITTEE PLENUM

FL251712 Havana Television Service in Spanish 0030 GMT 25 Jul 86

["Excerpts" of remarks made by President Fidel Castro at second plenum of Cuba's Communist Party Central Committee, held at Havana's Palace of the Revolution on 17, 18, and 19 July -- recorded]

[Text] We must see how we will focus and resolve that calamity, but we have to begin with one concept. The concept is that projects have to be completed.

It is noted with regret that the textile factory in Santiago de Cuba was inaugurated 3 years ago. Now, one reads that there are 150 construction projects. There is some expectation that the brigade may someday finish the textile factory. Now we discover that the entire textile factory is getting wet. It is possible that the entire factory roof may have to be reconstructed.

There are errors in design, many errors in design. There are errors in the way projects are carried out. Roofs here are made to last 5 years. That means that one day the entire country will have to dedicate itself solely to roof constructon. We have to become accustomed to the idea of making a roof last 5 years. The problem of roofs in this country has not been resolved, and we have been speaking about this for 15 years.

I do not know if it is because many people are self-sufficient that they want a particular material. If we scratch the roofs, we will find many atrocities, just in scratching the roofs alone. This was just discovered the other day in a very dramatic way. Upon finishing a Politburo meeting the day following the Havana enterprises meeting, which was attended by comrades from the province and several ministers, Lazo [Estuban Lazo] said to me, Commander, I would like to tell you something: The Santiago textile factory is completely wet.

I do not think this was known previously because it did not rain in Santiago, and a good downpour had fallen by the time he told me the news. I already knew that the factory had problems in operations, beginning production, discipline, and many other things that Lazo reported to me.

I said, Lazo, that problem has to be resolved. It must be resolved. No matter what the cost, it must be resolved. Analyze it. I think it is a problem of materials or something else. It has been said many times that it is a problem of materials.

We have built flat roofs without knowing the reason for building flat roofs. The Santiago de Cuba textile factory has no slope whatsoever. There is no slope anywhere in the entire 140,000 square meter area. What were our technicians doing? What is the reason?

A few days ago I received a report from those who know everything [los eminencias] which I read at night. It was on the topic of roofs in La Cujay. Several problems were stated. For example, they said that the asphalt produced here is not roof asphalt. It did not mention flat roofs, slope problems, or any other problem. The problems discussed were related to execution and quality of materials. However, those who know everything did not mention any other problems.

It is obvious that we have a level of ignorance, a threshold [umbral], a threshold of ignorance which we do not go beyond, at least in some cases. In other cases, we exceed that threshold, but here there is a threshold of awareness. Here we have a flat roof on a rainy day, and there is no one who will pass 1 mm [from that threshold] because we have been this way for many years.

That is why I said at the National Assembly meeting that this could possible be a problem of the self-sufficiency of technicians.

No one here has ever stopped to think or wonder about the kind of roof that has to be built in a country that frenquently receives 1,200, 1,300 [unit not specified] in 24 or 36 hours. Even 400 mm. Not too long ago, in 1979, during the nonaligned [meeting], 500 mm of rain fell in Havana. The airport flooded. Everything flooded.

No one here has ever asked what kind of roof, what roof design is needed for this country. I do not know how many hundreds of technicians we have. I think we now have thousands of technicians, architects, engineers, and we have not learned, we have forgotten how to make roofs in this country. This is a very sad, painful truth. I have not seen a single technician in this country, not one, who has questioned the way we make roofs. We build them to last a few years. Sometimes, we use improper material, and what we use is installed incorrectly.

I think that the time has come to resolve the problem of not finishing construction projects. This has come up in every assembly meeting in every province. For my part, I am trying to make a small contribution to the problem by analyzing Havana City investments.

I would like to make a comment on what Lage [Carlos Lage, first secretary of the Union of Young Communists] said. It seems to me that what Lage said is very good. It is well focused. Above all, the concrete solution he proposes is interesting.

I think there may be reasons other than unemployment. I believe that.

I have made statements on the judicial element, which in my opinion do not have to do with unemployment. They have to do with justice.

It has to do with a boy completing his military service and not having an opportunity to work. This is a basic priority that we should meet when they complete their service, just as is being done in education.

There is an expanded and growing number of schools for all the boys who are middle-level technicians with a degree so that they have the opportunity to study at the university.

I ask myself if unemployment is actually our basic problem. I do not think so. I think there are other problems, the lumpen and delinquency which originate this and other factors. They are absent. The boys do not study or work. They just hang around. No one controls them. They do not want to work. Others are not certified or have some other reason for not entering the service. They neither complete their military service nor work. They do nothing.

He [Lage] proposes good solutions. Returning to work after finishing the Army service is one possibility of joining a contingent of agricultural work. These are good solutions, but in my opinion...[changes thought]. I see these as good solutions because they have to do with the problems we have.

If we do not have enough people in agriculture and production is not met because of lack of people, that is a problem we have.

Now we have heard about unemployment. Where is the unemployment? They tell me that there is unemployment in Santiago de Cuba. A textile factory is being built in Santiago de Cuba that could employ 6,000 people. The people of Santiago are incapable of making the textile factory operational.

It would be unfair to blame the Santiago residents. We are incapable of making the textile factory operational. I told Lazo that we must speak to the people of Santiago to awaken their shame because there is a lack of shame in Santiago. The 25 percent rate of absenteeism is unjustifiable. It is truly scandalous.

How can the unemployment problem be resolved? By building a factory? One then reads what happens with the texile factory, truck transformer factory, and all other factories. If unemployment is solved by building factories, then we have to continue building factories in Santiago that do not function. I think that is much more serious, much more serious than the fact that there are some unemployed people in Santiago, who we cannot bring to Havana to orient them in general in construction work and in what we have now put an end to here.

Nevertheless, it is not the main problem. The more serious problem is building factories that we are not capable of building well. We are not capable of making it productive once it is completed. We are not capable of labor discipline. That is serious.

Lage, I'm telling you sincerely that, in my opinion, that is more serious than the problem of unemployment. You have enumerated many problems that are the serious problems. We are building factories, and I am always pressuring the central planning board [Juceplan] and others: We are going to locate the electronics industry in Santiago, we are going to locate something else in Santiago, we are going to create jobs for Santiago, for Bayamo, for Guantanamo. What is really serious for the revolution is that we make the investments, build the factories -- poorly or well -- semifinished, and then we are incapable of putting them into production. I believe this is the truly serious problem of the revolution, not unemployment! What are we going to offer Santiago? More factories? What for? So they won't be built, so they won't be completed, so we will be unable to put them into production, so there will be no discipline, so there will be no production? I believe this is the most serious problem of the revolution today.

As you have properly said, there is more than enough work in this country. I want to work in construction, for example, wherever there is a need for work here; not for bureaucracy but for real work.

I am telling you that when one hears about the problems that exist...yesterday they were telling me that 10,000 workers are needed in the mountains in Oriente Province. [unidentified person corrects Castro] Ah, in Santiago alone! Santiago alone needs 10,000 more workers in the mountains. Santiago alone! [Castro laughs] If we want coffee or cacao or whatever, we need 10,00 workers. For this reason, I think that some of the ideas you have put forth regarding the Army, regarding finding a formula, Lage, to put the people to work...[leaves thought unfinished] Let them work in coffee, in cacao, in reforestation, in construction, wherever we need them. I think that is the problem that must concern us. Let there be coffee, cacao, agricultural production, construction projects. Today, I confess that this worries me much more than unemployment, and I have always been concerned by the problem of employment. Because I think it is truly horrible that youth who wants to work does not have a job when it is possible to give him one.

I believe it is also a good idea to have a census of all these young men. I believe that no matter how perfect the planning is, the training of medium-level technicians will never coincide with the other. I have never been in favor of closing technological schools and sending the children home at the age of 13 or 14 or 15 for lack of a job or a place in a preuniversity institute.

I prefer them to study. All my life I have supported their studying.

Now, because it is impossible to guarantee a job to those that I trained to keep them from loafing at home or wandering through the streets...[change thought] I can't guarantee them jobs for which I trained them; their training should be adjusted so far as is possible to the needs of the country, but they will never coincide exactly. I support that idea: an inventory of all the youth that are living under those conditions. I would find a way to resolve their economic situation, and I would assign them to study systematically, or I will put them to work.

We have taught a lot of Marxism, dialectic materialism, historical materialism, lots of things. I believe that in this country neither books nor articles nor writings nor lectures on Marxism have been lacking, but we have not taught the people that the first duty of a revolutionary and of socialism, and the first duty of the citizen, is to work hard and produce, with responsibility and discipline.

When one reads about what is happening out there, one much reach the conclusion that the idea of responsibility, of duty, and of work has been lost here. I sincerely believe that this is our greatest problem and the evil against which we must struggle.

I think that the things that Lage has proposed can help us to combat that kind of evil and, secondarily, unemployment. Because the problem of those who do not work...how many are there? There are a lot of them who do not want to work or who do not like the job they are given. I believe that many of the measures that Lage is suggesting are very good, especially in that they help us to resolve other problems that concern us more today. The problem of unemployment is not the country's basic problem now. I wish it were!

First, they must be capable of completing them, of completing the 150 construction projects and saying this is done, after fixing the roofs, which is a hard job that must be done. Then production must begin. I believe we must appeal to the sense of shame of the people of Santiago, of the Province and of the municipality. I was telling Lazo yesterday that it will be necessary to tell the citizens of Santiago to work hard and not ask us for more factories. We cannot make investments in factories where they are not capable of building them or completing them or putting them into production. We are not the only ones to blame, although fundamentally the blame is ours. In rectifying, we must demand a lot from all the cadres and organizations but we also must make demands on the people and on the workers. We must not always use paternalistic demagoguery.

I told Lazo they should not believe that the fourth party congress will be held there because it is not a sure thing that the fourth congress will be held in Santiago de Cuba. If Santiago de Cuba is incapable of deserving to host the fourth congress, you may be sure that the fourth congress will not be held in Santiago de Cuba! I believe we have to tell the people of Santiago, and especially the workers at the factory, and others because as you well know, it is not only the textile factory. There are problems in a good number of places there. We build an enormous factory where unemployment is said to exist, and more than 1,500 workers are absent from work every day, because 25 percent of 7,000 is, I believe, more than 1,500.

Is there even a notion of what discipline is in a factory where 1,500 people miss work every day? Can this be called discipline? I know that absenteeism at the textile plant has been high, and logically -- as Esquivel says -- where so many women are employed [words indistinct] noise. The modern factories such as Desembarco del Granma, the modified Ariguanabo textile plant, the Santiago de Cuba textile plant with air conditioning. The enormous expense at Ariguanabo is precisely because of the air conditioning, gentlemen. With machinery that makes a lot less noise. [sentence as heard] The work is hard, and most of the workers are women.

It is logical, and we should not for this reason decry the presence of women workers, as some people do.

There is a very large number of family doctors who are women in one place, 37 of 41 family doctors are women. This does not sadden me: it makes me happy. They have greater access, they are having greater success.

There are many women in reserve for pregnancy cases. Those women's cases are pregnancy cases. Besides, they are not going to have absenteeism because they will reside upstairs above the consultation office. they will be right there. They will not have to ride the bus. But, these are cases of pregnancies and childbirths. We know that some of the factories will inevitably report absenteeism because of pregnancies, childbirths, sick children, all those types of problems, and because of the role still being played by women at home, which is not being shared by others. Logically, there is going to be absenteeism.

Then an analysis should be made to determine why the party is confused, why so many people are confused. It could also happen because I am the one who speaks out. I believe that is one of my duties. What would be wrong is that not even I would speak out [Castro hits the desk] Associated with all this, I believe there is a little bit of the opinion that everything comes down from the top. It is also true that many things have come down from the top through the Politiburo. Along the way one can find many inventions, and many responsibilities. It is also true that in many instances that we -- we said that in the last meeting... [changes thought] this is not the only thing being done, comrades. In reality, comrades, you may rest assured. This is a document like many others brought here.

We are doing many things. Even when we met on Saturday, the Politburo meeting, this had already been prepared. It was modified, it was adapted to certain views we expressed in that meeting, but this is what was going to be presented. But, this does not deal with a number of recommendations I am submitting, things we should do. No, the party leadership is implementating a number of practical measures. We have even established a commission -- the commission for economic management, the system of economic management and planning. We have even proposed that... [Castro leaves though unfinished] on that day we decided to designate persons in charge for those that did not have them. [not futher explained]

But, in addition, we asked that the ministers should participate in a first meeting, not that they send a vice minister here because we have to go over many things and make decisions, what has to be done with a number of things. I would have liked to bring some of them here to hear different views. Well, thanks to what Penalver [not further identified] proposed, we have been hearing different views, such as this, this topic, where we are, how it is established. We have delved into it. We are satisfied. He says this is peaceful. I am happy.

In the past the Junta prepared the plan. Today the plan is put together with everybody's participation, such as people's governments, everybody working together throughout the year. The comrades in this commission will examine a large number of tasks we gave them, and told them that these measures must be adopted because they should be. The measures we are going to adopt are to carry out what has been established. Because nothing that had been established was being done. Everything that is wrong has to be corrected and, with respect to the rest, all has to be studied carefully. When the results come back, the Politburo will have to discuss them. Now, when the commission comes back with its proposals, we will all be responsible. We will approve it. At least we are responsible for those things we approve, other things that are made up on the way we cannot assume responsibility for them. We could be responsible for not having found out in time, immediately. Because on the way you cannot imagine how many things are invented.

When I hear talk about bonuses... I did not want to get involved in all the discussions. When I heard there were 200 and more regulations on bonuses, I was tempted to ask something I would like to know. How were those bonuses approved? I can assure you all that it was never discussed by the Politburo. I can remember a few things discussed by the Politburo and the executive committee. We used to get together about them. I can remember the first time we discussed the case of workers whose skills could not be used but remained on the payroll. Today many of the problems we have are nothing else but cancerous deformations of things we had adopted at a certain moment. The blue mold plague hit the tobacco plantations hard, and the time came when entire cigar factories stopped production. Then we had to decide what to do with those workers, fire them?

What was agreed upon was to keep on the payroll those workers whose skills were not being used. Now one has to imagine how the idea was metamorphosed and everybody in the country ended up as a worker whose skills were not being used but remained in the payroll but, how something like this can happen is incredible, how can something like this be abruptly discovered, a phenomenon like this. Sometimes we have made the mistake of believing that important decisions such as this are made by geniuses. I believe there are political problems. I believe that it is not easy to explain how many party cadres are involved in this, or have not realized what is going on. Because many times the workers might have questioned this. They trust the party, they trust the party leadership and probably said this came down from the party leadership. This must be good.

I imagine there must have been a lot of people who thought it was an atrocity but must be good because it was approved by the party, it was decided by the party. This is an atrocity, they must have said. I cannot understand this, I do not like it, they said; it must be good if the party approved it.

Referring to exploitation in agriculture, many places report taking advantage of 4 hours, 5 hours, or even 6. Many times I tour construction sites, and I see people doing nothing, sitting down or standing up, and even lying down. They are not at fault, because some of them are sitting down in the warehouse area. You ask: What are you doing here? They respond: We are waiting for someone to come. It is a matter of going over there and making them go to another place to do some other activity.

I can see lots of wasted time. Of course, occasionally I run into something else, such as everybody working. Many factors make that happen some are objective, others subjective. Now that we are talking about workers whose skills are not being used but remain on the payroll, we must be aware there is a more serious problem than the one those workers pose, even though it has to be solved because it is part of the disorder and of unwise solutions, and of intentions which have been deformed, of objectives which have been misplaced.

Of course, we know that the solutions are not going to be found here, what we want is to have an opinion, views, etc. We want to hear here what has been said, what the people propose, what the people want, above all in meetings such as this, party meetings, enterprises' meetings. That is the way to have a better idea when we make decision, that we may come closer to what the best solutions are. But, in the Havana meeting with the enterprises you [unidentified person] or Alfredo [not further identified] proposed to seek various formulas for all sectors. Of course, there cannot be very many categories of solutions. There must be some general principles, such as we asked Benavides. [unidentified speaker responds affirmatively]

If there is no work, and he has to be sent away, and there is no work in the province, and he cannot work as a self-employed person, and he has no other job, I think we have to reduce that guarantee to a minimum and formulate a principle applicable to all sectors.

In that same enterprise, I asked a worker -- no, he was a supervisor there -- I asked him what they do with the workers whose skills are not being used but who remain on the payroll. He said we have such workers in the enterprise becasue there is always something to do. I said fine, but there are so many people in this situation everywhere that it seems to me there is no unified criterion. I aaked him how he exercised authority. He said, what I do is to take off my shirt and work beside them all day. Hurray! I asked him, do you do it conscientiously? He answered, I am [the workers'] conscience. I went back a few days later, his name is Miguel Angel, he is 32 years old, and I asked him what were you trying to tell me when you said you are their conscience? He said, I try to serve as an example here. Then other workers came out and one told me, look, if the boss here goes over into the shade, we get into the shade. But if we come here and see he is out working, all of us stay on the job. Miguel Angel is a wise man who knows a lot; he told me, this way I have authority, moral authority. I asked, isn't it hard for you to direct your workers? He said, no, it isn't hard. I saw the men working very hard there in the month of July at 2:00 in the afternoon, 3:00 in the afternoon, which is 2:00 suntime.

I want to know what it is that makes it possible for things to go well in one place and not in another, why one boss is effective and motivates the workers. If we could respond to these questions, where it is breaking down, where the basic breakdown is... I am concerned by the fact that at the meeting at the cooperative, it was commented that the cooperativists are becoming corrupted, too. Peasants used to work more but mention was made there of cooperativists who work four or five hours doing farm work.

You said something important regarding the sacred nature of work hours. [an undientified speaker responds, yes] I believe the work schedule is constantly violated, for any reason, for any meeting, for any assembly. If we could establish as a principle that the hours of work are sacred and cannot be interfered with for any reason, I believe it would be an important step.

I am inclined to believe that we must give the worker some guarantee. I can visualize a good worker at an important installation affected by a serious complication such as raw materials because of a shortage of foreign exchange, and not even the government is at fault or any member of the administration, of course, sometimes orders are not placed on time, and it is easier to send the workers home with 70 [probably 70 percent of his salary]. I believe there has to be a certain contradiction between this worker ..[changes thought] it seems to me that if we reduce the guarantee to a minimum amount, and if we also say, after having searched for other work for him in the province so he can earn what he is being paid, if we also say, if you work at another job you lose the guarantee. He has a guarantee now. I remember when it was established. He has a guarantee and works, or he becomes self-employed, which is the best thing many of them can do. Many are better off to be on the payroll and not work; this includes construction workers, mechanics, and public service employees. They are on the payroll and do other work. There are a lot of other problems: theft, spare parts, pilferage. If we begin by taking away that guarantee, the privileges they have today, I believe no one will be able to feel very happy. Either he finds another job and earns the wage that corresponds to that other job or he accepts transfer to another activity. This could be too drastic, in my opinion. This is something that we fortunately are clearing up. What shall we do? Not send him home but keep him at his place of employment, where he is in the way? In some cases, another task can be found for him. I am inquiring about practical details. What do we do if it is a matter of 1 day? Do we have to start the hassle then? What do we do if it is for more than 1 day; in a good work center, with good personnel, and he is a good worker? We don't want to send him to social security,do we? There is social security aid for other cases.

I believe that, after all the other possibilities, the last one remaining is to send him home, and if we are interested in that worker, we must give him a minimum guarantee, I think. It seems too drastic not to give him any guarantee at all. I asked about this earlier. What did we use to give? one hundred percent. They used to mobilize them to cut cane, but times have changed. I believe some comrades are still being mobilized.

When the microbrigades were brought back with a plus-work spirit [concept whereby workers work harder to compensate for a reduction in numbers], which will be impossible to achieve in many places because of an excess of personnel.

I have said that with the numbers of personnel who are on the payroll but not working, with them alone thousands of housing units can be built in this country. I do not foresee much difficulty here in Havana next year for certain plans we are drawing up. They can work on the construction of the family doctor projects or on the construction of day nurseries or polyclinics. Or they can give a big push to the housing units that are being built. We should provide more resources to make this more feasible throughout the country.

Now, they should be paid in accordance with the work they do, and we should reduce to a minimum the possibilities that anyone has to give up working. We can test measures of this type to determine the results. I say this because I am sure that the members of the commission are going to make proposals and consult with comrades from the trade unions. Almost all the ministers are working on this, and we must try to do several things. I would say there are several things we have to do away with. There are several, and I expect to hear some protests from the other side because there is a mentality adapted to the existing system. To miss work is absenteeism. We are not going to do anything in a rush; we have to study and analyze. We have problems we have to resolve soon, answers we have to provide relatively soon, and other matters that will take longer. We cannot wait for all the legislation to be revised. I believe the students of law and those who have studied law are going to go crazy, and it cannot be helped, because first they studied one resolution then another, and now they are going to run up against another.

I am inclined to believe -- and because of this I wanted you to express yourself with greater clarity -- I think it may be too drastic to apply the principle this way. I think the guarantee has to be reduced and that it should not be compatible with another job or with self-employment. You correctly say that they have schools and medical care, but I believe the worker needs some income. Sometimes he is not to blame at all and neither is the administrator. This would bring us other problems. What do we do with the administrative personnel? Because I say that if a factory is closed down it must be closed for everyone, for technicians, engineers, administrator, accountant, and everyone. I believe it would produce irritation not to treat everyone the same. The administrator may be partly to blame. I suspect that the administration does what is easiest: sworn statements, doctor's excuses, the works. We are going to keep the doctor's excuse but try to reform the system. The electricity has been cut off? I am not going to call the electric company and scold anyone, he says and goes home. This is what we do today, and I know it. I have seen it. What happened? The power went off. The raw materials did not arrive. The raw materials may be on the docks or in storage at a specific place, and they did not pick them up. There are cases like this that are our fault.

We should try to make our solutions fit the specific conditions. Today I was considering Villa Clara, no, Pinar del Rio, the San Juan 6 Martinez shop. Their raw materials did not arrive; we have to determine why, what part of the blame is the administrator's, what steps he failed to take, or whether there are no such raw materials. Maybe they had to be produced in Santiago de Cuba or maybe they had to be imported and did not arrive.

We have to create a situation in which the administrators will have to take action. If an entire factory stops production... I believe we will have to treat the cadres also. If there are no sanctions, and I am the administrator of the San Juan y Martinez clothing shop , and the materials are in Pinar del Rio or in Havana, I send everyone home with 70 percent and I stay there delighted with my 100 percent. I'm telling you that when the entire plant shuts down, I will apply the measures to everyone but the night watchman, who has to guard it. [applause]

What should we do in these closures? If we treat the workers and the administrators differently, we create ill will and irritation. I think we have to make the administrative personnel work harder. Article 32 and the other article, which we have changed and placed in I-don't-know-what-other article. They used to say, they apply Article 32 to me, they do not apply the corresponding article to the administrative personnel; this was one of the complaints.

I believe that when the factory closed down and everyone is struggling here so it won't close down, we have a contradiction between the factory administration and the organization. Let's see how we can fix it up. We should be very aware of this: We are going to attempt to do this at the moment of greatest difficulty and this forces us to make the effort we are making regarding efficiency and work to make progress where we have to: what is needed to get clean cane, to cultivate it, to plant it well, to cut it well, to achieve greater productivity, better work at the sugar mills, at many construction sites, at Moa and 20 other places in this country. It may be necessary to consume a little more fuel to assure a little more stone, sand, and materials, but we can do many things that do not depend on fuel.

I believe that we can expect great comprehension from the workers toward the ideas the comrades have presented here, great support because of their discipline. But I believe we must assure that each step we take is an intelligent and wise step so they will enjoy total support. We must not use the credit we are earning with this battle to begin to do ridiculous, absurd, or bad things. We have to have good aim with each thing we do.

I believe we are lucky to have what we have today as a party. One can see the total conviction. One feels calm, one feels that he has tremendous power. But we do not only have the party, we have the people, courteous and decent. Look how the country has prospered, how it has advanced! But we have implanted 20 crazy things. What is this business of staying on the payroll when there is no work? Who started this? The sworn documents, premium pay, and all things; who has done them? We did. The socialist state, the revolutionary state has done it.

We have a tremendous people, and I was very pleased to hear what Lazo said regarding the reactions of the people, what everyone has said. We have a tremendous people. Whatever our errors may have been or our lack of awareness, we have the party and the party is very healthy, both in its cadres and its leaders. In general, it is a selection of the best leaders and cadres. It could have been a better or worse selection, but it is a selection. It helps us enormously in the work we are doing here in Havana. It does everything. Anything can be done with and through the party. This is my very optimistic opinion.

We have half a million members. There may be a few members who were corrupted or lost along the way. The party cannot be perfect. But in that one-half million young people, we have a tremendous force, a healthy force. The party is not our problem. The party is our great instrument, and we did not have it before. Lazaro used to say, we have never seen a process like this one we never had a party as strong as we do now, that is what I believe. I think this process is spectacular. When one reads the reports of the provincial assemblies, it is tremendous.

We have felt happy, and it is bitter to criticize. It is hard for us to realize what is going on. The 4 hours of the Havana meeting carried by television and provincial radio reported all these discussions; it is good to be able to wash our dirty linen. As I said in that meeting, the dirty linen should not be hidden, society should not hide, it is much better to wash the dirty linen out in the open, all the linen. It gives us moral strength, it gives us authority, it is good. I believe that later on, after talking about this, the role of the media should be defined. I believe in recent days the media is playing an excellent role--television, radio, newspapers. Just carrying out discussions is good. It is happening, this is horrible, but all these things are happening.

Rosario spoke about mechanisms. What do I say about mechanisms? We must open the doors wider to criticism. If we had learned about it -- I began to learn about it in a meeting with reporters but did not find out everything because they said a number of things I did not understand...I realize what they meant later, and it was that linking [not further explained] had been adopted by the Cuban Institute of Radio and Television in some areas where it could never be done, because it was madness. It marked the end of multiskills and the payroll was increased several times.

If all those things come from smart people, we learn many things. I find out through the reporters what is happening on the buses. A reporter spent 1 month checking out what was going on, who was paying the fare and who was not. When I added all that up, I had 600,000 persons who were not paying. I said to myself: this is serious, this is anarchy, a chaos when 600,000 persons do not pay the fare. I have said that the day will come when we know all about mass transportation means, how to use them, and have a criticial evaluation -- and I believe this is one of the great lessons -- so that all is negative, trashing them in discussions. I believe we have the mechanisms to avoid falling into these things and taking a long time to find out. I believe this is a point that must be trashed. This meeting should be prolonged.

I believe this problem of criticism...[changes thought] we are going to hold a congress of reporters in September, and we must give them guidelines. I feel we should analyze that here and other things. I believe we should examine here the views, what to do with the sworn statements. The public health minister is here. Do you have any new ideas? What to do with the health certificates, what to do with what we are paying too many persons who do not show up for work, what to do with the workers whose skils are not being used and remain on the payroll. It would be good if the province's comrades would voice their views about what the people think in their provinces. There are a number of things, such as the one dealing with newsmen, that must be trashed around and seek solutions. I am convinced it will not weaken us. We have to wash the dirty linen. I am convinced that what is suffocating us, infecting us, choking us is not washing the dirty linen for fear that the enemy in Miami might find out, or the imperialists and use it to attack us. I am convinced that discussing all these problems out in the open within a socialist, revolutionary exchange of criticism, not inspired in all capitalism's trash, gives us tremendous strength. I am convinced of that.

Of course, it is very important to say that this is not the problem in action. We are conducting and we propose...[changes thought] they have received what the state sent them. Meetings have been held in all provinces. That was agreed upon the Saturday we met. I do not believe that. Precisely this has been a systematic struggle, not a campaign. We have to meet next year again. I feel that we should organize -- it is good that all managers, party cadres, union leaders, youth leaders be aware that they must report their actions this year with respect to all these problems that have been discussed.

We could call on all those who talked, ask them to come and make a better meeting. I believe that after a year we must go back to all the provinces and meet with all enterprises to find out what each has done. No one knows the value of persons committed to report their actions. In a year we can find out how many things we have corrected and how we have corrected them.

If the party congress meets every 5 years to report actions -- many persons feel it is too long a period -- it is good that all these sectors and factors be aware that in a year they have to explain what has been done to correct the wrongs and fight against negative trends.

We have magnificent weapons and do not know how to use them. In just a few minutes or hours we cannot explain all this complex problem. I believe that the most important thing is to be aware that we must use the media in this battle, the battle of the revolution, now and in the future. We must be aware of that. This is going to generate greater pressure. I believe we need greater pressure on the cadres, organizations, ministers, political cadres, union cadres, administrative leaders, on everybody we are lacking pressure. If there were more pressure, we would have fewer mistakes.

Supposedly there is pressure, that the union looks after these things, that the party oversees this, that everybody worries, that government looks over the problems, but the problems continue to appear all over. Many times months go by before we find out about some problems that have occurred. All of this is going to generate more pressure, more bitterness, it will even generate injustices. It will generate misunderstandings. It will generate wrong interpretations. I cannot see this any other way, in reality I do not see any way we can use the media in a more efficient manner without originating some of these problems. I believe only experience and time can make this better.

What I say is that whatever we say we are going to do, we have to do it. We do not want to send letters out; criticism is unleashed; and we back out of it because it generates negative effects. The truth it can generate negative effects. The reporters are a detachment of the revolution. That is what they are, and they try to serve the revolution in the manner they feel is the best way possible and under the conditions that their work makes it possible. Our problem is to learn how to use that detachment of the revolution.

That is our problem, how to use that revolution detachment in the most efficient manner because we are not using it efficiently.

Our press cannot be compared at all to the capitalist press. Neither can it have the morbidity it very often has, the sensationalism, the showiness (espectacularidad), all of that. But that does not mean it has to be a quiet, silent press.

The example given by Mendoza [no further expansion provided] seems to be very valuable. He referred to the attitude that we had in the war. We only had one organ then, the radio. It became a tremendous organ. Everyone in Cuba tried to listen to it. All of Latin America listened to it when possible. It became a reliable, serious organ.

During the entire war, we never reported one excess rifle or bullet, or one less casualty, death, or injury. We never had one enemy prisoner, death, or injury in excess. There were never even any exaggerations. There could be interpretations, but they were honest interpretations of the events.

Radio Rebelde was so reliable that all the other comrades in the second front, in Santiago de Cuba, Camaguey, Villa Clara... [changes thought] when reporting on combat activities, all the comrades knew how to make a report that was absolutely precise. When we heard another report from another radio, we knew it was a report that was absolutely precise because our habits did not include lies, exaggeration, or demagogy.

I think Mendoza gave two examples and these were two difficult moments. Camilo's report was critical. It was difficult in some regions. Camaguey was critical. One could say, we will not publish this if that is published. The people of Camaguey... [changes thought] I was sure the people of Camaguey would feel compromised. They would want to vindicate themselves if they had been unenthusiastic, lazy. I was sure this was an appeal to the honor of the people of Camaguey to make a greater effort in that struggle.

There was a combat problem in which troops did not complete the order that was precisely given to them telling them never to use trucks, never. They used trucks and took a route where they were ambushed. We had enough experience to know what happens to an ambushed truck.

It is not the same when it is preceded by a troop, a well-trained vanguard. It is very difficult then to be ambushed. It was difficult to accept that misfortune. We sent a column to Camaguey and it was liquidated. We thought it was better that all the leaders know, that everyone knows the truth so that there can be confidence in what Radio Rebelde said so that those errors would not be repeated. I saw that soldiers... [changes thought] the most incredible things happened to Batista's army. They would fall into the same trap 5, 6, 7 times. They would fall into the same trap because when a soldier here met with disaster, no one told the other leaders and the other troops about that disaster. Other troops came and would fall into the same disaster. This happened and was covered up. I was aware of the damage this did to the government itself when it hid acts, misfortunes, and failures.

I think that the revolution has always been characterized by the great bravery used to confront problems. We do not have any reason to abandon that tradition. It has not been abandoned in a conscious, deliberate method. We have more or less been falling into a series... [changes thought]. We have also been a country under seige, a country that has adopted a certain mentality: blocked, threatened, attacked. It is a country that had to confront the counterrevolution in many things and the threat from the outside. All that has been creating a mentality of secrecy, the mentality that was mentioned here.

I think that now [changes thought] that is why I say that this did not occur all at once. The criticism on the part of the press is actually occurring now. It needs to be studied well. I was interested in bringing up this topic here because the journalism congress will be held in September. A series of ideas on guidelines for journalists will have to be prepared for the journalism congress.

I am convinced that the press should be used in another form and that the press must be made to participate in this battle against all negative tendencies, that the press definitely should participate in the battle to perfect our system and revolution, that the press should participate in a more efficient manner. It is not that they should not participate. I am not going to deny that the press has done many positive things and has had positive moments in many campaigns and in serious work. I think the press should participate in a manner that is much more efficient in the process of constructing socialism in our country and that we should make guidelines for the use of the press in the revolutionary process.

When I speak about using the press, I am not just speaking about criticism but general use of the press. Criticism is criticism and only criticism, and this is only a case of criticism. It is an effort to make the press reveal more information on many different topics and problems so that the population will have a better understanding.

It has to do with giving the press much more information. We need to give the press much more information so that the press can help the revolution form a new conscience and so that the press can give information on things that are right and things that are wrong. This work is actually wrong. This work is delayed. This one has taken 14 years. This happens here and this happens here. There is a quality problem here and there is an unnecessary quality problem since the raw materials and the resources exist. There is a lack of requirements in general. They should point out not just all the good, but also the things that are not going well, above all the things that are not going well because of subjective reasons. When there is a problem because of subjective reasons, they need to explain what is influencing this, what the factor is. I think that organ leaders -- radio or written -- have a great responsibility.

It is more difficult for television but I think, in a certain form. It can be more responsible with programs. They should have a lot of information.

Not all the organs are the same. It is easier to efficiently supervise what is published in a newspaper than to supervise well what is said on radio all day or to efficiently supervise what is said on television. Television has a big impact. One has to be careful with television so that things are not superficial.

In general, it has to analyze talk, ask for opinions. I believe that we could have a more dynamic kind of information and that each one of these branches: magazines have one kind of style, newspaper another, television and radio have other characteristics. I really believe that television needs more polishing. Sometimes only 2 or 3 minutes are available and they edit here and there, they do those things in a rush. Now, I have noticed in the last few days that the population has been satisfied with the wide range of information which has been released. Beginning with the assembly meeting held in Havana, the broad information provided about the workers remarks had a big impact. Journalists have also been present in other assembly meetings and have released quite a bit of information. I would say journalists are doing a good job in this struggle's first phase. They have reported without fears. No enemy will be able to criticize us better than we criticize ourselves. Because we know more about our own problems than our enemies do. They do not know about them. We can even disarm the enemy. We disarm them.

The revolution has not weakened lately with the very strong criticism. It has not weakened. To the contrary, I believe the revolution is strengthened with these kinds of activities, in which mistakes are rectified. It makes it stronger. It is like taking a laxative. You get rid of all kinds of toxins and begin to feel better. So the cleansing process has to be constant just as the body does through the kidneys or the digestive tract. We have to constantly discharge toxins in some way.

We consider journalists as a detachment of the revolution. They should help as much as possible and they do help us by reporting what is happening in such and such factory, by saying such and such is happening at a particular place, millionaires are popping up here, there are rich people over there, there are some people building houses there, peasants are buying Havana. If they begin to report on this, we ourselves can immediately begin to see what are the consequences of some of the ones which have been built, we can understand its negative or positive consequences. Of course, we cannot presuppose what they would be. I believe there should be more than criticism.

First of all, the press should have more information and journalists should have well rounded information, especially those responsible of those organizations. All of us have to give them much more information. Secondly, the press should release much more information on good and bad things. They should report that such and such project is behind schedule according to its director for the following reasons: this is important because such and such, such problems is being experienced. I see they do that in sports. They say, we have failed on this, we have shown a poor performance in football, we are fooling ourselves, such and such...but the same thing is not done in the area of economy. Sometimes they do that in the area of culture but we do it less in the day to day and really important things of the revolution. In sum, the press has to report much more about the good and bad things. If we note something is wrong it is usually taken as criticism, if one says a service is not provided properly, that is not considered criticism, that is information. I would say criticism is a relatively small part of information. Because there are not many people who are capable of criticizing. It is a very difficult thing to do. I believe we should have criticism, rebuttal, critics. So those who are going to criticize should be well documented in order to make assessments. But the press has to inform. Bad things are bad things. An abandoned car in a lot is bad. All kinds of wrong things happen in this country. I believe we can provide a kind of guidance in this first phase by saying that at this time the most improtant battle is this one. When we have said defense is the most important thing, hasthe press not worked in an efficient way by promoting the patriotic sentiment and the creation of a conscience for the defense of the revolution? The television and radio has done this with their reports. Now we have to tell the press we are involved in this battle. We have a list of calamities, we have all these problems. Help us in this battle. Report about this, investigate about that, write about it. So that the press can report talk, analyze it -- I do not like to use the word criticize because it sounds judgmental. They should report true information, true facts, analysis, investigation, studies, problems that come up. Of course, at certain times they should give their opinions on those things. I believe we can begin to learn with that. We would be in a bad position if we did not know or understand that a chapter has opened and that it is something that we have to continue doing. We have to make changes as we go along, but we should not go forward and backward. We cannot go forward and backward. That is something we cannot do anymore. We have to gradually go forward, strengthen our position, continue to make progress in all this. We need the press to help us in this battle. Imagine if we had for example 12 7-foot tall individuals form a basketball team and send them to the Olympic Games without any training. It is very possible that they would not score any points. This is how we are. If we do not get rid of the mystery syndrome -- I was telling Aldana -- [changes thought] what happened the day of the big Havana assembly meeting, which had been organized for days, all Havana knew that we were going to meet at the Karl Marx Theater, and when I read the paper in the morning nothing was reported on the meeting we were going to hold at the Karl Marx Theater. How can one explain that? It is the mystery syndrome. It was a mystery that all Havana knew about, but because of the habit of not informing, not talking about such a meeting. That day the paper did not report about that meeting. It was something all Havana knew about and GRANMA newspaper ignored it. People are very sensitive to all this.

Let me give you two examples. I do not remember what day it was, I believe it was 1 May. My photograph was printed on the last page.

The newspaper was somewhat transparent, and when the page was opened a skull appeared right on the midst of my chest. I appeared with a skull on my chest. It is a skull that is used for the "direct line" news. It was by chance. Lots of persons began calling the ministry; some persons thought that it could have been on purpose... the skull on my chest. It happened that it was a fluke. It was an accident.

Many persons noticed it. Of course, it is painful to me, not the skull, but that there were some who question that someone in the daily GRANMA is doing something wrong, if there is a counterrevolutionary there. People notice all these things.

A few days ago I said: These are years of exigency, sacrifice, and work. Work was at the end, and at the end was Fidel. Those who folded the newspaper would read: Down with Fidel. There was another uproar. Many persons had noticed that and complained about GRANMA publishing "Down with Fidel." That is the people's spirit. They notice all those things.

[Raul Castro interrupts to say: "At the bottom of the page I appeared applauding. That is to round up the story. When the page was turned I appeared applauding."]

Well, I did not see that; no one told me that. I asked for the newspaper and saw it. Well, we cannot wait. I believe we have to advance a little at a time. That is the idea we have. The journalists congress is a congress of Communists, that is what it can be called. We also have to talk about the problems, what to do, what kind of efforts can be made to solve the problems. The people tend to demand a lot in this. Sometimes when the truck was found abandoned, they would ask what was done about the person who abandoned it.

Bear in mind that out of all this information, another demand arises, which is: What has been done? I believe we have to act with greater harshness and sanction whoever it may be. If a militant, he or she must be sanctioned in some manner; if not a militant, in some other manner, even by dismissal. I understand that all those responsible have been sanctioned administratively. If he or she were in charge of the crane, he or she was transferred. I do believe measures have to be adopted. What has happened in these past days is a test.

GRANMA has published all calamities that have been discussed at the provincial level, without fear, with courage. It has published what one comrade said, and the other, everybody, and when a comrade leader made a statement, what he said. Why he made it. All that has been published in the newspaper. I believe that no one can be tougher than that. Who cares what the newspapers say. Let them report, that is their mission, that is their duty, that is their role as a detachment of the revolution, to report, to report clearly, to report to help the revolution, to report to strengthen the revolution in a correct manner. Of course, these are powerful weapons, one must know how to use them. It is the same thing when you give someone a tank, or a bomber, or a fighter plane, that person must be responsible. Those people who have this political weapon, such as the media, we have to demand responsibility from them. The use they might make of it is of great significance.

How many mistakes had the managers of cooperatives made? Nevertheless, how much honesty was observed at those cooperatives when the problems were brought up? They committed themselves to solving them. I based my argument on the fact -- and I am sure I am not wrong -- that our people are incapable, that is they are not capable in many instances, they lack above all responsibility. They want to solve the problem in any manner, hastily, inflexibly. Our people are unflexible, but they are not incorrigible thieves. The incorrigible thieves have to be wiped out.

Then that is the reason I say we have to decide how to use those weapons, and not finish everything overnight. If before we used to get from Radio Rebelde what we got, how is it possible that we cannot get anything from that many thousands hours of radio and television, the media we have? The dream of a revolutionary was to own a newspaper. Now we have a newspaper with one million copies daily. Why can we not make the best use of it? If the battle before was against oppression, exploitation, tyranny, now the battle is for building socialism.

The motivation is enormous. How can we not learn how to use those means we have in an optimum manner? I am not saying that those means have not been useful. That is what we are thrashing out here at the Central Committee, that we are aware of the problem and that we consider that using the media is essential in this battle, using that detachment efficiently. I believe that many of the points discussed here, all noted here in the Central Committee and those noted in the government document are guidelines with which to ask the media to participate in this battle for correcting all that is wrong, which is not only this. There are many other trends.

There is the trend of deliquency, laziness, mercantilism, summing up, many of them. A group of things that have been discussed in recent days, in one way or another.

The pre-university vocational schools will become vocational schools of exact sciences. They are great schools with great programs. Together with this, the working hours in the vocational schools, which were not many because the planned industries never materialized, were reduced to 1 working day, to devote all that time to study. The vocational schools are logically more demanding, so the parents requested a point allowance, that is because their children were attending those rigorous vocational schools they wanted three points. They were going to get three points. If they got 90 points, they would be allowed 93 because it was a tough school.

That is why when I thought about the other preuniversity schools in Pinar del Rio, Matanzas, which are not vocational, where the youths work and participate, I reached the conclusion that I was going to do something very edifying in connection with youths who were working in production, who were lending many services to the country, and that those who had the best professors, more time for study, even if required to work more, they would have an irritating advantage over those students in those lonely places in Ciego, Sola, everywhere, in Jaguey. Very vehemently I maintained that view, even though there was an agreement on reviewing the concept.

I asked some vocational schools what was the percentage of youths going to the preuniversity level, and the response was more than 90 percent of those graduating from vocational schools -- on their own, without any point allowance -- were admitted to preuniversity schools. Sometimes 95, 96 percent were admitted to the university. Why were we going to give them three bonus points? Their parents were the ones waging the old battle, struggling to obtain priviledges for their children and they spoil them. We stopped that on time. Of course now...there are in fact some priviliges because families with a higher cultural level also have some influence on the children's education. Now the scores used to admit them to the exact sciences preuniversity schools are figured out by considering their point average and a test equally. They have to take a test.

I was thinking about preuniversity students. We found a fair solution, that exact sciences preuniversity students not obtain bonus points. They did not need them anyway.

Basically I am saying that in a socialist system, the Central Committee, the Politburo, the leadership, are the ones that have to take care of quite a few things, science among them. I do not know if Rosa Elena [Simeon, Cuban Academy of Sciences president] today or tomorrow will give us an overview of the status of science because she has an action plan. Here everyone wanted to be a doctor. Have you not noticed that everyone here is a doctorate candidate? Many times their doctorates have nothing to do with the country's interests, with what needs to be researched, what needs to be done. It is silly. If we have done dumb things with the jobless workers [interruptos]. With medical certificates, with this and that, I want to let you know that we have done a lot of dumb and silly things in the field of science.

It would be good if Rosa Elena would also tell us about it because it is very important and what we plan to do in that field.

Therefore, financial matters are not the only things -- as I was saying yesterday, that when the illustrious commission we created comes here with its proposals and brings all the conclusions all the ministers have reached -- that is all those comrades who are more familiar with the problems -- we can sit down and think, meditate, analyze, and make decisions. The same way we did with the plans.

Unfortunately, the time we are making all those innovations is the time we have more problems, when it is more difficult to make plans because of resource shortages, when we have a foreign currency shortage. But we have another procedure for people to come and explain these things to the Politburo. I am convinced, every day I am more convinced about the task of leadership in socialism, the work of the party, the Central Committee and Politburo. It is not like capitalism in which a private enterprise does research...we can do a lot of things. We can do a lot of things [Castro repeats himself]. It is incredible what can be done under one condition. That there is guidance, leadership, it is known what needs to be done in all these fields. I am more and more convinced of the importance that all this has -- I believe it is a key problem -- I believe education is also very important.

I have always had my doubts about those emulations based on percentages. Because the teacher makes up everything so that the students get a good grade. Everyone who has been a student knows that there are youth who study more than others. There are families that are able to make one child study and cannot get the other one to study. We all know that. Because I believe that if everyone passes easily, there is something wrong. Either the course is too easy or ... [changes thought] I see now that there are greater demands. I see students studying hard. It is difficult now. I know medical school is very difficult. I see that. Very difficult. Those who have performed poorly in secondary and preuniversity school I doubt that... [changes thought] One time we discussed the problem at medical school professors meeting, that it was too big of a change for students. That resulted in that meeting you had and all the measures that were taken regarding the preuniversity students. Because we realized what the professors were saying about how poorly prepared students were when they were admitted. We had no other choice than to set higher standards. It is difficult but it is better. I believe this is the only way we can make professors to make more efforts and for students to make more efforts. In this country students do not study hard enough, some of them. Some of them cannot survive if they do not study because if not, they flunk. I believe that they need to study more and we have to continue to demand more. If we are asking people to work more we have to ask professors to work more, to teach more and better. We have to ask students to study harder, more and better.

I'd rather make more demands despite all the inconveniences they bring so that we can improve the quality of education and that we do not have to talk about all this during our next congress. We have to keep in mind that all these matters were emphasized. We talked about it during last February's congress at the Pioneers assembly meeting. It was a logical thing. I believe they had to be discussed beginning this year even when a number of weaknesses were discovered. I believe that the report should be published in Havana, in the HAVANA TRIBUNE.

I am going to attempt to really be brief this time. I am not going to repeat here -- it is absolutely unnecessary -- many of the things I have said during these last months in connection with the problems we have been discussing.

You have read about it during the congress, about general matters. I also remember that when we had to strongly criticize the things that were not going well, I attempted to make an inventory of calamities, to put them together. Instead of discussing good and bad things at the same time, we discussed the satisfactory things and the poor things separately.

A great number of pages were used to discuss problems. People paid a great deal of attention to them. International news agencies wanted to take advantage of it. We were hit hard but stood firm. They are no longer successful when they attempt to take advantage when we acknowledge the things that are going wrong. They are almost left without arguments. But the population paid a lot of attention to the congress report. It was a kind of prelude to what happened latter. I wanted to talk very little about problems on 19 April and everyone was talking about them the next day.

I do not have to repeat myself, you have heard about them during the congress, on 19 April, during assembly meetings, the meeting with peasants, the meeting with peasants [repeats himself], assembly meetings [repeats himself], the national assembly meeting, the Pioneers meeting.

One does not clearly see a problem all of a sudden. One sees negative signals, problems, but there came a time when I began to see the problem as a whole very clearly. A number of factors contributed to this. Even before the congress, I remember how last year around this time in the summer -- August and September -- we began to hear all kinds of complaints about hospitals, people's complaints about hospitals. That worried me. I thought that after all the attention we pay to hospitals, the things we are doing, the new things -- undoubtedly many new things have been done such as the campaign against dengue, intensive care units in hospitals, massive graduations of doctors, medical science detachments, a number of programs, remodeling of pediatric hospitals and optical offices were remodeled. A number of measures were taken in the field of health. The education detachment was created. Two groups of medical faculties were created, one with those from Havana and another national one. A lot of work, a lot of comrades were taking care of the field of medicine. Hospitals were also inspected. We solved many problems, all kind of problems. We worked with nurses, doctors, nurses salaries were increased. A number of measures were taken. And I thought, how do you explain that we begin to hear that complaints increase regarding services,. Hospital care? What could we do? We could not send more people to visit hospitals, they had been visited several times. So I wanted to find out what was happening in hospitals.

I suggested we hold a meeting with all the hospital staff. I wanted to have a personal contact with hospital directors, party committee secretaries -- almost all hospitals have party committee representatives -- with labor unions, head nurses, and youth. Over 300 people gathered in this same place. It was a long meeting, from 3 to 12 or 1 during 2 days. Various problems were intensively discussed. We had met to analyze subjective problems and we actually discovered a number of problems, not only subjective ones but also objectives, and a combination of both. There was a hospital where a people's government [corrects himself] no a construction industry enterprise had finished an elevator and a people's government enterprise had to receive the elevator which had been built 3 months ago and the transaction had not taken place. Consequently, 100 beds of the Camilo Cienfuegos [hospital] were not being used. That came up during the meeting's first day and the problem was solved the following day. We discovered that equipment which had been delivered to hospitals had not been assembled in 2 years. A multi-million dollar power plant required a small building because a transaction had not been completed. New expensive equipment was not installed. There were an incredible number of problems, not only subjective but objective ones.

We found out that there was a deficit, all kinds of problems, that while we built hospitals in the rest of the country -- some of them have taken 10, 12, and 13 years to built -- we found that we already had a deficit of beds here. That the revolution had not done anything.

That was when I found out about the terrible things that were going on at the Salvador Allende [hospital] which had 14 different managements operating in it, among them a people's government cafeteria. A hospital with 14 or 15 different managements. What? Were there 16? It is possible. Including the institute. What was happening? A number of organizations had warehouses in the ward's basements. There was a little bit of everything. It was one of those cases when people accumulate things, they get used to live with them. I thought the kinds of things that the hospital had were amazing. The trailer trucks coming and going, that is the story Caballero told here which almost ends in a war. I said how could that be, when were those things delivered, under which circumstances, how has that situation prevailed for so long?

We kept examining all kinds of problems. I was asked to go to such and such place, to go to the Julio Diaz. I found that the Julio Diaz, which is a very important hospital in this country because it rehabilitates people who were born with defects, children with birth defects or who have defects because of illnesses, because of a trombosis. It takes care of the most difficult human problems you can find. Hydromassage baths were needed there, some beds were needed. The staff was making a heroic effort because they had no other choice. The Salvador Allende staff were making a heroic effort. What is interesting about this is that in the midst of this incredible calamity, something which could not have occurred in any other hospital in the world -- a hospital whose wards' basements [being used as a warehouse], a Spanish hospital which had also lost some 300 beds for one or another reason, or lack of maintenance -- despite that, it had been designated national vanguard. So the workers and the party made big efforts and were able to accomplish a feat. They were national vanguards. You can imagine a hospital with those kinds of problems and being national vanguard at the same time! That was the situation. But the Julio Diaz staff was also making incredible efforts. They had problems. The day I visited that hospital I had already gone to the Albarran [hospital] and a lady told me, there are no beds available in the hospital, I have an aunt here with such a condition, with a paralysis and is here in the Albarran. We realized hospitals had a number of problems which I could not even imagine. There were problems with construction projects. At the Frank Pais [hospital] there was a hydromassage room under construction. It had been under construction for 7 years and it was still in its third stage. That did not appear to be serious work. I estimated that it would take 21 years to complete the project. I asked, what has happened? What has happened to us? How can this be? As we discussed subjective aspects we found about objective things. I thought we were falling into deep water. It was very dissapointing. I learned about all kinds of problems. There was an excess of people, bureaucracy, things that were not working properly because we had given nurses abnormal conditions. The nurses aides who worked with lepers were not receiving anything extra for working with lepers, in infectious places. So we decided of all the efforts -- and we were not in the productive area although there were problems of the productive area which were having an effect over all these matters. I asked to meet again. Later, I met with the institutes. On the 31st I began to tour the hospitals.

Yes, on the 31st I said I was going to tour the hospitals. I didn't have any desire to do so. I visited the Calixto Garcia Hospital at night. The problems of the night shift were frightful. It was chaos! I said, my goodness, all the effort we are making in this field and this is how things are!

A program came from this, and just a few months later it is already having an effect. A considerable effort is being made in that field. It was necessary to improvise a program and ask the comrade construction workers to make an effort, to draw up plans, because we foresaw serious shortages of hospital beds. We decided a series of things then. This, combined with the plan for 500 new physicians...because we discovered at the same time that with the family doctor system, nobody was going to the hospital emergency staff. I imagine that the problems of emergency staff were caused by requests for doctor's excuses. I believe Panchito [not further identified] said, the good workers are the ones harmed by the doctor's excuse requirement. Because a worker who has the flu -- and everyone know he has the flu and is ill -- has to get out of bed in the morning to go to a polyclinic for a doctor's excuse like a good worker to show that he has the flu, when everyone where he works already knows it.

The emergency staffs were overwhelmed. We held other meetings. We met with the institutes, then with the family doctors, and we began a program to begin to overcome the problems. Its effects began to be noticed. The party began to work systematically: it held meetings with the members and is meeting with the members every month to determine how hospital work is going. In this way, with a series of practical measures and a good policy, we began to see the results, and the people spoke of it. Assemblies were held at all the places of work and hospitals, and the people began to react, to make performance pledges. This forms part of a program that we intend to follow tenaciously for as long as it is necessary. I have cited this example because, well...this is where I began to see a lot of things in a lot of places. Party reports appeared on what was happening on the cooperatives, and a lot of circumstances like these showed up in a period of 3 months, more or less. We realized the disastrous situation of the cooperatives, the great number of problems and irregularities in which cooperativists were involved. It was very painful.

Some cooperatives earned 50,000 pesos or tens of thousands of pesos without doing anything. They simply allowed private broom manufacturers to use their names, and sell brooms as if they had been produced by the cooperatives. We were horrified and decided it would be necessary to meet with the cooperatives. There was a cultural problem. Those people earned 300,000 pesos. We started to receive reports of truck drivers who earned tremendous amounts, and we continue to receive reports about certain work centers with very large salaries.

Well, we could see what was happening with the famous housing law we drew up, and I began to see the entire problem clearly. I want to meet with the pioneers, who were concerned with educational problems. I spoke to them of the problems and told them they have to study, and discussed problems after the 19th, as I have told you. I had no intention of uncovering anything. My idea was to address the problems little by little and not do anything traumatic or spectacular. The same thing happened as at the congress. When I touched upon these problems on the 19th, the following day everyone was talking about them and nothing else.

During those days, by chance, I had met up with...[changes thought] touring the area of the beaches, I studied the problems of the beaches and of the National Institute of Tourism (INTUR), which included the problems of salary, extra pay, premium pay, and others. During those days, there were people who wanted to leave the houses of protocol because of their piratical charges. Touring the area of the combinado del este, studying how much all that meant in dollars, I saw a lot of problems. I stopped because I saw a crane and thought the crane should not be there and that someone had taken it home, and what I found there is what I told about later. The other day, I was near (Margloa) and I saw a truck there. I said, go in there and ask what that truck is doing there. The truck in fact should not have been there. I asked for information on the man and found he was a good man who was not engaged in thievery; the neighbors had a good opinion of him and his family. The first thing I do is ask about the individual to find out who he is. I said, you have done a bad thing, don't do it again, it isn't right.

I calculated how much gasoline he would use by making 1, 2, or 3 trips every day. A truck like that must consume 15 or 20 gallons every 8 km. [figures as heard] I saw that the problem was quite widespread and on 19 April, when I spoke of the problem, there was a strong reaction. I was able to realize to what degree the people have been sensitized by all that garbage and how greatly extended the irregularities had become.

All of this began to add up. We were meeting with the doctors, and I said it was necessary to meet with the peasants to talk with them about all these problems. Then I spoke with Lezcano and told him, look, Lezcano, there are so many state enterprises implicated in this, and so many reports are coming in about irregularities of very kind that we have to meet with the workers of the capital. We are going to call all the capital workers together, that is, we are going to call together the enterprises, the workers, the party, and youth groups. This is how the idea was born.

Later, when the change was made in the .... [changes thought] we met in Havana Province to propose changes in the movement of cadres, I also spoke of this, and I now see it all very clearly. We decided to invite Havana Province also. This is how that meeting came about, and then came the Politburo meeting. I didn't want, I didn't have any intention of uncovering anything or of doing anything abruptly. To the contrary, I wanted to work patiently as we have been doing with the doctors. But this was not possible. We had hardly touched upon the subject when it appeared to explode. I met with the reporters and explained this to them... [corrects himself] the first meeting was with reporters to discuss all these problems in view of the congress, which was fast approaching. The big meeting we held later in Havana, the Politburo meeting, and then the provincial meetings served to give shape to this battle. We are involved with 13 incredible problems that I consider negative, very negative and dangerous, especially to the degree that they coincide with the greatest economic difficulties of the country. Not all of the economy but rather a part of the economy, the convertible currency part, which has enormous weight.

The worst economic moment we have ever had. [sentence as heard] Each year, although we had a minimum of convertible currency for what we had to import, it was not so severe. All this is coinciding with a degree of laxity, laxity everywhere, reflected in a thousand reports. I saw this was becoming a really serious problem. Fortunately, we were able to dedicate ourselves to this problem. We could dedicate ourselves to the problem because earlier we had done a very good thing. We had made an enormous defense effort. I believe that, in these years of the Reagan presidency the country has passed through its most difficult stage, after the October crisis. No, I think it was more dangerous than the October crisis: threats, irritated every day, insolent bullying this country. We analyzed the reality... we made an analysis of our defense unlike any that had ever been done. The concept of a people's war was developed, and we began to strengthen our defenses. I presented a large number of my concerns about a series of things that appeared absolutely necessary, using our socialist experience as a starting point, correcting things that had been done wrong, including idealistic errors. We are going to continue along this path, we must be prepared. Rene [not further identified] has read here a lot of the matters I dealth with in 1975. I wrote them down myself, nobody helped me to write down the ideas that are there, where I presented all the concerns that Rene read about here: that we could not trust the mechanisms, and that political work and morals are more important than any mechanism, especially under socialism.

If capitalism is the empire of blind laws, ocialism is the empire of the plan, of rationality, of the work of man. Socialism is not built by virtue of blind laws. Socialism has its laws but the subjective factor -- the role of the party, the role of man -- is fundamental. It uses those things as instruments, as mechanisms, as scientific knowledge of the process, but it cannot be even imagined that it works alone or that socialism can be built like capitalism, starting with laws that function by themselves and blind laws instead of mechanisms.

When we saw those salaries of 700, 800, 900, 1,000 pesos, I asked, when they go on internationalist missions, what are we going to pay them? What are we going to pay these men that in the number of 300,000 were willing to go to Angola and Ethiopia? What do we do with them?

Voluntary work has been abandoned despite what we said 20 times. But fortunately, voluntary work found a place of refuge. It took refuge in the field of defense: in training, in preparations, in the digging of trenches, in all the efforts made. In the Havana meeting, Veiga spoke of what defense had meant to the materialization of voluntary work. Everywhere else it has disappeared. Where a square used to be cleaned up by voluntary work and the grass cut, it is now necessary to pay for all this work. Everything must be resolved with money, everything, everything, absolutely everything. We are entering a process of corruption of the workers. I realize we have created a lot of nouveaux riches of all kinds. Reports arrive of persons who have bought a house for 50,000 or 60,000, an automobile for so much, who have so much money, so much deposited in the bank.

This is how the problems were being presented; I think we are dealing with them although we have not yet solved them all. In Lenin Park, candies and chocolate used to be sold at high prices and nevertheless people bought them in Lenin Park and resold them here in the hospitals. Who knows how much money we have given away? I think it must total billions of pesos, billions! The parallel market cannot absorb all that money. All we import, whatever we do, it is not enough to absorb the money, especially in situations in which convertible currency is restricted. How could we absorb that money? There is excess money here. Everybody has started to sell, to buy lots, to own lots. That law would not have such a negative effect if it had not come along at a moment when there are many millionaries.

Then we began to see very painful situations: Persons who had sold their houses because they needed money. They couldn't do that before. Houses the state had given to workers, persons who built houses and then sold them. We saw all kinds of strange manifestations of capitalism, and good people got caught in some of these errors. With all that money, people began to sell houses for 20,000, 30,000, 50,000 pesos. The people earned sums of money, as in the case I described in which the person earned 300,000 pesos in one year. I told myself, in 1 year they have earned 60 times more than the doctors who do heart transplants. This was a chaos that was really very worrisome, for which reason I said we have to begin to correct this. But if we can begin to correct things without creating a fuss, so much the better, if a measure can be taken, if we can meet with the doctors one day, with the peasants another day, with the workers yet another day.

But this really could not be done any other way, and it is being done with a minimum of fuss, carefully. I think it is being done with all necessary care. It was clear to me that we could not rush into things, that we could not take hasty measures. There was one that turned out to be impossible, and that was the one that had to be done almost drastically: the free farmers' market. I thought that would take us months, but when I saw the spirit, the reaction, the vehemence with which the people said it should be done away with, I said there is no sense to this. We had been thinking about taxes, more taxes, and more taxes, but we stopped. It was nonsense to ask the cooperatives not to go; I realized that many of those of the free farmers' market were laughing at the cooperativists. It became clear that the cooperativists were our vanguard in the peasant sector, and that the best farmers had joined the cooperatives. Those who did not join were the backward peasants. I cogitated a lot about the problem of the farmers' market and all those things. I also thought a lot about this when at the time of a certain economic problem it was presented as a panacea. I also worried about he self-employed workers, and about free contracting, At several meetings with the executive committee, I said we had to be careful of the consequences. I was concerned over the entire matter. I do not believe that everything we did was negative.

At several meetings I expressed concern on the question of free-contract work [libre contratacion]. At the executive committee meeting I stated that one must be careful what consequences will affect women and others. I was very concerned with all those experiences. I do not believe that everything we have done is negative but there are many things that have not produced results.

I think that they did not want to hold discussions. They did not want to give an opinion on the problem of free-contract work. The worker himself, the leaders that charge for trade union membership [vinculacion] should have been asked to speak, to express themselves at the meeting held on the 25th or 27th. It may have been held on Saturday the 27th. [an unidentified speaker tells Castro it was on Friday] our meeting was on Friday the 27th of June, right? Yes, the meeting was held in June and the comrades from the province were asked to think about all these points and questions, I think that they should be congratulated. It is now very opportune, -- more so not at this moment than ever before -- to discuss and resolve these problems because of political and economic reasons and even for the security of the revolution.

I think what our people have done over the past few years in defense is brilliant. A more recent act that the people have done brilliantly under difficult conditions is the last sugar harvest. It is true that we were aided by a final drought. I think that these have been two very positive acts that prove the force, capabilities, and possibilities of the revolution. I think that what the people are involved in now proves it even more.

At the end of 1984, a very important and strategic measure should have been taken in reference to the concept of development and the possibilities for development. It was stated in the speech given to middle-level students and the national assembly. The policy we should be following was stated, repeated, and reiterated as much as possible. That policy was stated at the third party congress.

I already mentioned changing the methods of planning. We should change the mechanism and develop the participation of all factors. An effort was made at the executive committee meeting. The central group made a great effort, I would say that it was a dignified work of the best quality. The work was developed by the central group. The state central organs developed the planning material, 5-year plan, this year's plan, and the perspective plan. It was a great and serious task. It was developed during the entire year of 1985.

At our congress when we still had not experienced the catastrophe of the hurricane... [changes thought] the hurricane was difficult, but I think we still could bear it. Then problems arose that coincided with the congress. They seemed very secure and they immediately failed after the congress when oil prices brutally fell and foreign currency rose by 40 or 50 [percent]. This added to the problem. We were lucky that the misfortune was not worse.

Right now we find ourselves [in a situation] negotiating and renegotiating. Of course, for the work that has been done since last year, all the efforts of 1985, it is unpleasant to find ourselves facing this problem. At this time it is also coinciding with this struggle, and I believe this struggle should prepare us better for any type of difficulty that might arise as a result of these situations. As I said, we are forced to work with much more efficiency, wisdom.

Well, I think what was stated in 1984 was of great importance. The effort made was very big. Now there is another battle. I think these will be two historical moments in the revolution, the end of 1984 and this year, 1986 when we become aware of all these problems and begin to combat them.

The most encouraging aspect of this is, as always, the peoples' reaction even though we make things badly, incorrectly, give poor orientation, and despite the fact that there are many normal workers who have great confidence in the revolution, party, and leadership. They recognize when something should be done well. This should be an experience. It should be correct. We ourselves have made mistakes.

What can we expect; that journalists should not make mistakes? What can we expect; that many people should not make mistakes when we ourselves have made errors We are responsible for establishing the guidelines. We have made things poorly.

We do not have reason to be surprised. Mistakes happen everywhere. Peasants, workers, and trade unions make mistakes. It created a scandal [campanada] in favor of economizing [economisismo], capitalism, and liberalism. I imagine that many people had their doubts. They probably said: Caramba! This is socialism.

Many people lose their confidence when they see and experience things. If I am a worker at Frank Pais [orthopedic hosptial], a nurse, masseur, or someone else who works there and I see many other calamities, that houses are needed as well as other problems, and I see that they are building a whirlpool [hidromasaje] there -- which I estimate will take 21 years to build -- I would be confused as to how to react [sentence as heard]. I would lose confidence because many other things are needed.

Fortunately, I imagine that people see the good with the bad. There are many bad things but there are many other things that do not have to be bad. In the capital, we confronted the problem of construction. Another important meeting was held. The Politburo met many hours analyzing the problems in Havana. They analyzed the problems of growing delinquency, the bums [merolicos], of the problems that exist, disorder, the breweries that are centers of conflict and irritation, growing deliquency, residency problems, the possible influence of socioeconomic problems on the growth of delinquency, loss of authority, delinquents, bums, and others that practically own the street. The Politburo met to elaborate a plan, measures to confront these things.

The question of the microbrigade was presented. We ruined the microbrigade because we wanted to. We broke away from the original premise. We assumed there would be no surplus of people. The brigade was never conceived. The microbrigades were never conceived. It was never an activity done with the energy or work force of a factory or done according to production needs. The microbrigrade was also considered plus work [plus trabajo]. "Plus work" means that everyone gives an extra 10 minutes. Instead of working 6 hours, one would work 6 hours and 10 or 15 minutes. Some factories were able to make it with plus work and many were able to make it without any plus work. They simply worked and possibly took better advantage of the work day and the surplus of people at the factory. This is how dozens of thousands of homes were made. At one time it was the only hope the country had to resolve the problem of homes and supposedly our capital ...[changes thought] remember some of us were distressed because we were asked for homes every day. Suddently there were no more requests. Occasionally, there was someone who wanted a house. The microbrigades were building homes. Dozens of thousands were built by the microbrigade workers.

These were created with plus work, but it is obvious that nothing can work with plus work when there is a surplus of people at the factory.

The microbrigade was eliminated under the premise that there should not be a surplus of people.

Now there is an even greater surplus. Only by using the workers who have no job but remain on the payroll [interuptos] and by taking advantage of the work day can we construct homes in the capital. Simply by using those two resources: Workers who have no jobs but remain on the payroll and better use of the work day.

In the 1970's, when we were trying to resolve the problem of homes, there were no enormous cement factories, the Karl Marx Factory did not exist. The Artemisa Factory did not exist. The Nuevitas extension did not exist. This plant gave us a capacity for an additional 3,000 tons of cement. The Antillana de Acero steelmill extension did not exist. The new factories and bathroom fixtures did not exist, neither did the new bathroom fixture factory in Oriente.

There were more resources, many more possibilities and nevertheless, the Republic's capital was left without a workforce. It was now critical, gentlemen. I want you to know that the Republic's capital has 1,960 [corrects himself] 1,794 construction workers to build homes. There could not be less... [changes thought] That is why those 22 buildings have been under construction for 4 years and could take another 10 before they are completed. There is no workforce. We were building 5,000 houses some of which had to be dedicated to defense and security. More than 25 percent of these homes were reserved for this. That leaves 4,000 home. That will not do even for homes on the outskirts. Not even for those who live in shelters.

For the first time in the entire history of the revolution, the problem of homes was being resolved by using a microbrigade of surplus workers.

In the name of the directorate of the economic system, in the name of the principles of Marxism, Leninism -- because this was the way the problem was stated -- the microbrigades had to be eliminated. They were eliminated, except for some who resisted this. There actually was no other solution. There was no other alternative.

What other alternative do we have than to revive the microbrigade? I repeat, if we add workers who have no job but are still on the payroll to the underutilization of the workday -- that is to say the potential earnings for an underutilized workday -- with surplus workers, there are enough to complete gigantic plan for building homes.

That was a large error. Unfortunately, we now do not have the material to let us all go simultaneously through the entire republic building homes.

Also, gentlemen, there was a similar concept with schools. Secondary and pre-university schools were a disgrace. Thanks to the secondary schools in the country, the country's citrus plan exists. The country now exports increasing quantities [of citrus] and has the potential to export hundreds of thousands, which would be impossible without the schools.

The theory that there was a surplus workforce, that there would be unemployment, and others, resulted in losing even the comprehensiveness of plans. During the time when schools, roads, and others things were being built, the plan, irrigation, everything was lost. The citrus plan was made but not the town. If the town was made the road was not. The road was made but the school was not. Each one was reversed. There was no state program to build roads, buildings, schools, irrigation, everything. All that was lost.

The schools were a disaster. Now we have to... [changes thought]. Jaguey has 500 caballerias of citrus. I do not know if it is 500 or more than 400 caballerias but it is approximately 500 caballerias. It does not have one home.

It does not have a school. I had to ask Comrade Luis de la Nuez, who went to Matanzas: Luis, organize two brigades, organize two construction brigades. Organize them within the peoples' government and we will begin to construct four schools a year.

Omani [not further identified] said: Include me in your plans because in this case we have agreed on a policy that does not allow social expenditures to grow. Nevertheless, social expenditures grew in 20 different ways. In addition to increased social expenditures, semiboarding school costs were added. I have always said: Be wary of the semiboarding schools.

A pre-university school in the country is a workforce to insure agricultural plans and thanks to that school, those agricultural plans exist. Sixteen schools can tend approximately 750 caballerias of citrus. There are people... [changes thought] Fernandez [not further identified] has people and now with measures intensifying or requiring more of education, the result is that more schools are needed. That was stated by the Havana Comrade and I repeat: They do not have enough schools.

After Hurricane Kate, Comrade Lazaro [not further identified] insistently asked me to do something for the construction of new schools. He told me about the comprehensive problems there, the problems that exist in that town. It is truly a beautiful plan. Many investments have been made. It has excellent land for quality citrus, which continues to be planted. But he said: I have students; I need schools.

I remember the time we built 100 schools in a year. I said, Omani, do you think we could do again what was done in Isle of Youth the way we are organized now? He said: Well, the truth is no. Could we build another Jaguey? Well, the truth is no. Could we build another Sola? Well, the truth is no. We cannot do anything. We have become impotent. It is a strange thing, a mess. It is as if we were stuck in a spider web, on taffy, or in a swamp. This is how we have ended up in matters of construction.

The brigades disappeared. They made the enterprises. That is correct. Microbrigades could have been incorporated into the enterprises. Now they are called groups of I do not know what, and no one knows what they are. To tell the truth, many times they are chaotic. In the same way... [changes thought] the microbrigades absolutely did not clash with the directorate of the economic system. The economic system, enterprises, and everything can use plus work, real plus work. If we took 100 percent advantage of the work day, and there was no surplus of workers, with plus work alone we could complete many construction projects. The workers would have to work one-half hour more, actually 1 hour more, to resolve the problem of homes, circles [of interest], or whatever the case may be, a polyclinic, or construction of a youth recreation center to combat delinquency.

What did we fall into? We fell into a mess. We were impotent to construct anything. I have already spoken about this and about what we are going to do, what we propose to do with the resources we have, and we will not over extend ourselves. We are going to make some brigades, if we have the materials, in the provinces. We are going to build schools with this workforce. We are going to revive the microbrigades. The workers who have common sense and a revolutionary conscience unanimously became aware that microbrigades did not do any harm to the economy of this country but on the contrary, the microbrigades helped resolve a very serious problem.

We began, I say let us begin again. Unfortunately, this time we cannot proceed slowly because we are going to begin in the capital with the sanitation program. What is happening in the capital is a disgrace. The capital cannot solve the problem itself. We got as far as Batabano building homes. The capital can only build up and in some cases there is a lot-by-lot study. Now we are separating the 4 family doctor homes. Now no one knows who owns the lots. There is a defect in this plan just as there is in the plan that Pepe [not further identified] gave me.

Many peasants held onto a piece of land. Workers held onto a piece of land for cultivation. It was permitted. It was allowed. Much indiscipline was tolerated and later it takes a lot of work to correct this.

Some of the resources we have are sufficient to begin solving some of these problems. We will begin with the capital. Do not be discouraged, we have always begun with the capital, and we have made every effort to take the useful and positive experiences to the rest of the country as soon as possible.

The family doctor program began here, also. Ten doctors were assigned to the Lawton suburb. However, Granma Province has already filled all the positions of family doctors on the mountains. Within a few months, Guantanamo Province will complete its quota of family doctors on the mountains and in the rural areas. Santiago de Cuba Province will complete its quota next year. All this began in the capital, and you see what has been done. We have begun many things in the capital, such as the microbrigades program, which began in the capital and later moved on to the rest of the country.

Solutions can always be found. I learned that there was a grave problem with the child care centers in Havana, and that no more could be built. What does a care center mean? More food, more chicken, more ham. It is a headache. Can we solve it? It looks as if it does not have a solution, yet it can be solved. Havana has 35,000 children in child care centers. That means more food, a little more milk, a little more cream cheese. By eliminating the late afternoon meal, we can feed another 35,000 children with almost the same amount of food. I have estimated that we will have to produce a little more milk. If we ask the agricultural sector, it can produce it with the same resources. If we say we need an additional 15 million liters of milk, they will produce them with effort.

Thus, without bankrupting the country, without aggravating the situation, if we have the resources in manpower, sand, rock, and cement to build the centers without bankrupting the country with additional rationing, the same 100,000 children we have today -- I have reached my figures based on 100,000 children -- if instead of 100,000 there were 200,000 and we eliminate the late afternoon meal, which is not needed when you give them a hearty morning snack, the noon meal, and an afternoon snack -- all this implies a little more milk -- it is possible to have child care centers for 200,000 children without bankrupting the country. I decided to build the centers, a program to build centers. We will begin here, which is what we have proposed, building a number of child care centers, polyclinics, housing for the family doctors. The microbrigades are the ones that have made the miracle possible.

I would like to know if someone present here can honestly say if the 506 consultation office/houses -- these are 506 dwellings, among other things, and a service to the population -- could have been built in any other way than the party did. It asked support from the work centers to build them, with the surplus personnel. Is there any enterprise in the country -- I do not know if there is any in the world -- which would have been able to build in 6 months in 506 different locations 506 consultation office/houses? Is there such an enterprise? Has it been invented? Can anyone show me that enterprise's table of organization? [Castro hits the desk] However, in a very simple manner the province's party, by giving instructions to the people's government and providing support, the two together are building the 506 consultation office/houses. It seems to be a miracle!

I would like to know what would have happened if we had asked the enterprises of the people's government and Construction Ministry to build 506 consultation office/houses in 506 different locations. At least it would have been 2, 3, or more years. It would have been a disaster, chaos. There are a total of 1,500 in the country.

I believe there are revolutionary, new, creative formulas. They must exist with a little imagination, determination, a little less mediocrity. There are formulas to solve those problems. Now we are trying to solve these problems. A few days ago I visited the Guanabacoa suburb and was able to observe this, what building an additional 500 houses means in Guanabacoa per year and the child care centers they need without bankrupting the country to get more food. [Castro hits the desk] When we finish providing the family doctors for the entire municipality in 2 more years, it will be a new revolutionary measure benefitting youngsters who work hard, who get a small salary of 200 pesos, and who have an excellent attitude.

I can remember that they pay the taxi fare when they take a patient to another doctor in an emergency situation. I met with them and told them: I want you to have a notebook and take note of all these expenses so that you can get reimbursed at the end of the month. We cannot accept that you pay for expenses when you receive a small salary. After 2 months I asked about it and was told that no one had presented the notebook, no one had charged, and no wants to charge or that they be reimbursed. After learning about it, none of the neighbors would allow them to do it. They have gained their love and confidence. The neighbors look after them and would never ask the doctor to pay for anything. They have an excellent attitude.

I ask myself if we have underestimated in certain cases and at the same time have overestimated our supposed wisdom, our supposed virtues. We have hidden the reality. We have not magnified things. I believe that in all this we must make an effort to overcome difficulties in a correct manner. As I said, we have a great party, which is a privilege. It is a revolutionary party. These are not uncalled-for praises, I do it because I believe it. We know that we have a great party, the conditions of our cadres, despite all these trash we have discussed, such as deviations, confusions of all kinds. We know we have a great party and a great people.

In recent days we have observed their reactions. What we have to do is very clear, in fact we are already doing it, such as the work of the party, of the state, of the congress, of the provinces, of mass organizations, everybody is involved in this battle. The pioneers were among the first to issue warnings, as well as the workers, women, and students. We have an enormous moral wealth, which made it possible for us to be stronger in defense, and has made it possible for us to face up to all these economic difficulties, whatever they might be. It has been a social and political work and it is very important that we do an economic work, and I believe we can do it.

As I said, we know what we have to do and how to do it, and we will continue to do it and discuss it. It seems to me it is notable and historic the manner in which this meeting of the Central Committee has developed. Over a period of days, many hours, we have worked very hard, but we had never held a meeting such as this, which has been fruitful, earnest, and profound. This meeting is the result of the third congress. During the meeting, the manner in which our central committee has been enriched was clearly expressed. Each congress we have has increasingly enriched our experiences as well as the collective experience of the Central Committee.

Here we have been witnesses of the really serious and deep way the problems have been discussed, in a very calm and serene way.

This is one more encouraging reason to believe that we have a good Central Committee at the head of a great party, a Central Committee worthy of that party. I do not believe I am mistaken if I say that we are going to leave this meeting with a great assurance, with great confidence, with great satisfaction. But we have to work; we have to continue with this effort. The press has to inform about this material in line with what we were talking about education matters, we have to inform the people about the meeting we have held, regarding the contents of the meeting, to consolidate the confidence of the people. We should not despair if some are impatient and are taking immediate measures. All these measures still need to be analysed more. They have to be examined further. We intend to put them into practice as soon as possible every time we agree on a course of action. There are many things which need to be done immediately. Many problems need to be solved. They have been discussed in assembly meetings, and we do not have to wait to begin applying measures that have been established to correct them. We now begin to get involved in more complex problems.

Salary policies have been established and need to be put into practice. Some of the most discussed topics were the work laws and their enforcement. We have to work on this, on the subject of quality, labor unions. Where they need to exist and eliminate them where they do not apply, or apply them correctly where they are incorrectly applied. Many of these problems can already be worked on.

We still have some things to be discussed such as working Saturdays. For the time being what we have to attempt to achieve is that people rally work on those Saturdays. We need to end the softy attitude, the lack of demands, and for people to really work on those Saturdays. We already discussed here on the subject of freelancing, independent work. We noted the dangers of multiple skilled workers, their advantages, how to use them. We have discussed many very useful ideas. They are going to be very useful when the commission begins to present its proposals to the Politburo so that it can begin making the necessary decisions. We are approaching the time that we need to make some decisions. We have to make them wisely by doing political work. I believe we will find solutions to everything and especially political solutions by discussing them at length with workers.

The people's mood is good. The workers responses are good. We have mentioned once and will have to repeat 20 more times that this is not a campaign, this is a big battle, a big process, a big continuous struggle. Because after we begin to solve many of these things, we will have to watch closely how they behave. We have to strengthen them. I am sure that we will find the formulas. I am also sure that what Lazaro said is going to happen. We are going to obtain a victory from these difficulties. I am sure we are going to be strengthened in the same way we have with each and every one of the problems we have had throughout the course of the revolution. Reagan's threats have strengthened us. I believe we are going to take advantage of all these things. It was a great lesson that shows us that there are things that we cannot fool around with, that are too serious, too sacred and cannot be left unattended. I believe we are not working only for ourselves, we are working for the general cause of socialism. Socialism has been accumulating experiences, but it has also accumulated mistakes. We are not going to invent anything new. We are not going to experiment. We are going to correct all the things that are wrong. We are going to take everything good from the positive experiences we have had, and we are going to do it in the way it was suggested in the assembly meeting, calmly, patiently, wisely, without hurried decisions, without extremes. We have to avoid extremes. Any extreme on this can harm corrective actions. Any mistake we make now is going to harm corrective actions. We do not need to hurry. This is why I am glad that Comrade Veiga asked the labor unions to wait. They have to continue to wait so that once we have clear and exact ideas about what we should do regarding freelancing, then we decide what we are going to do and do it. We have to decide what we will authorize, what should not be authorized, why, how it is going to be carried out.

I am referring to independent workers. The matter of freelancing, as Panchito said, all those things that comrades have said, we need to continue gathering information, ask for everybody's opinion. We need to know how we should control that, how to do it. I do not believe that we should go back to what we had before. We should note the positive efforts it could have, the negative ones. But we have to discover the formula. We should use the positive things if they are found, if it provides a little flexibility to workers. But we also have to adopt measures to put an end to all the extravagant or negative things freelancing could have, which guarantees an equitable distribution of work. I also believe that the situation of some provinces -- and I have mentioned this many times -- forces us to give special attention to employment. Because although I said that nowadays the problem of employment is not the most serious one, there are other ones, there are other things. It was the inability of beginning Santiago's factory operations and all these problems we have talked about. Since we are confident that all these problems are going to be solved, we have to look at all those paces where the employment situation is serious. We have to make efforts to think -- considering the matters Comrade Lage talked about and considering some of the suggestions he made -- about what to do in places such as Jibara, in Granma. We continue to struggle. While we struggle against unemployment by building factories or making any kind of plans, we have to guarantee that those factories operate, that they work, that they are productive.

In the 5-year plan there are investments planned in Santiago de Cuba, Guantanamo. Two furniture factories are being built in Guantanamo. A spare parts factory is being planned. We have completed the one in Granma, and we have to build the one in Santiago. There are still things that the country needs. I believe that if we make efforts, we can find a formula that alleviates the crisis situation in connection with unemployment which exists in certain specific areas. The formula should not consist of bringing the people from Oriente to Havana because we are going to increase the capital's calamities. I believe Havana has to take care of its construction problems by itself, with its own energy, with its own sweat. It can do it. Especially with that sweat which is being wasted nowadays everywhere. It is being wasted.

I believe that what we have discussed about the press is also important. Criticism is only part of it. I talked about it. I do not have to say more. I believe the journalists congress will be very important, and I believe we will find adequate formulas to give a definite answer -- much as possible -- to the role of the press in the building and development of socialism. The bourgeois pride themselves on appearing to have freedom of the press, and I actually believe that if we are going to speak about courage, a revolutionary person has much more courage.

If we refer to moral values, the revolutionary person has many more moral values.

Comrades, I believe that with these ideas I have summed up my impressions, I have given the main conclusions of the meeting. Let's continue waging the battle. Let's get ready for the second half of this period. Let's see what can be discussed in the next plenum regarding what we have done, about the progress we have made. We have to systematically work every day with the party members, youths, workers, women, with mass organizations in general. From time to time we are going to be checking what we have done. We are going to have a discussion period, I believe between now and the next plenum, and before the next plenum a very important meeting will be held. It is about everything related to the conclusions of the congress. Progress is being made in the program's discussion process. It is also going to be a very important time. I believe that at that time -- 2 December, the first days of December -- we are going to have a much clearer idea, more exact idea, and possibly a number of measures will have already been taken.

We will approve the program. It will be a good time. Maybe we will have to do some touch-up work considering all these things. I believe that the time of the conclusions of the congress could be the turning point of this struggle. We will continue holding assembly meetings next year to see how much progress we have made regarding this in a year's time. We will hold our plenum again within a year. I believe that within a year we will have made considerable progress. I am confident that when we meet again we will have great successes and few mistakes. [applause]

[Text] As part of his tour throughout several socialist countries, Communist Party of Cuba Secretariat member Jaime Crombet today arrived in Moscow on an official visit at the invitation of the CPSU Central Committee. Crombet will remain in the USSR until 10 August, when he will leave for the GDR. He has already visited the CSSR, Hungary, and Bulgaria, where he held talks with political leaders and officials.

BLANCO VISITS PUERTO RICO DESPITE PROTESTS

[Text] Santo Domingo, 25 Jul (AFP) -- Dominican President Salvador Jorge Blanco flew to Puerto Rico today for a 36-hour visit which the Puerto Rican Independence Party (PIP) has harshly criticized.

The Dominican president will participate in ceremonies marking the 34th anniversary of the creation of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. The president was invited by Rafael Harnandez Colon, Puerto Rican governor and friend of Blanco.

It was officially reported that a retinue of government officials, newsmen, and special guests will accompany the president.

The PIP, a member of the Socialist International, as is Blanco's Dominican Revolutionary Party (PRD), maintains traditional ties of understanding with the PRD. It publicly chastised the Blanco visit, claiming that it endorses "the colonial status of Puerto Rico."

A PIP envoy, Luis Rivera, who was sent to give the PRD the text of the declaration against Salvador Jorge Blanco, was delayed at the Santo Domingo International Airport and then sent back to Puerto Rico. This action prompted even harsher criticism by the PIP.

PRD President Jose Francisco Pena Gomez, a friend of PIP President Senator Ruben Berrios, asked him to work to prevent protests against Salvador Jorge Blanco during his stay in Puerto Rico.

BALAGUER IN U.S. FOR EYE CHECKUP

[Text] Santo Domingo, 27 Jul AFP) -- Dominican President-elect Joaquin Balaguer traveled to the United States unexpectedly this afternoon, to Boston, where he will undergo an eye checkup.

In a brief bulletin, Balaguer's Social Christian Reformist Party announced the departure, even though until noon it was being reported that the trip had been cancelled.

The president-elect is accompanied by his nephew, Joaquin Ricardo, political secretary of the Social Christian Reformist Party; leader Guaro Liranzo; and his new personal assistant, Minu Torres. The party did not state how long Balaguer will stay in the United States, but the stay must be brief because he takes office on 16 August.

The bulletin did not indicate whether Balaguer will meet with Ronald Reagan during his stay.

TRINIDAD-TOBAGO

MINISTER ON COMMONWEALTH ROLE IN SOUTH AFRICA

FL281127 Bridgetown CANA in English 2024 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Text] Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, July 27, CANA -- the Commonwealth grouping may well have a role to play in the reconstruction of South African society when it achieves peace, according to Trinidad and Tobago's External Affairs Minister Errol Mahabir.

Mahabir made the comment in an interview with the TRINIDAD GUARDIAN newspaper published yesterday. His remarks came at a time when the usefulness of the Commonwealth is being questioned.

The current disagreement over South Africa may be a conflict of principle over the direction that the Commonwealth should take against the apartheid regime but is should not be viewed as a fundamental and irreconcilable difference of opinion, said Mahabir.

He pointed to the technical, legal, advisory,and disursory links between the 49-member grouping weighed against the boycott of the Commonwealth Games more than 25 countries are now staging protesting Britain's refusal to impose economic sanctions against South Africa.

Whatever the difficulties and conflicts that the organisation is currently experiencing over this matter, it is nevertheleess more likely to provide effective action against South Africa than an organisation such as the United Nations where the majority can sometimes be overturned by the interests of a minority, he commented.

In this context, Mahabir continued, it therefore seems counter-productive to advocate the dissolution of the Commonwealth on the grounds that one member of the 49 member states is out of step with the rest of the association on one issue.

This is especially important given the role that the Commonwealth may yet be able to play in the reconstruction of South Africa society once peace has been brought to that troubled country.

Parliamentary opposition leader, Basded Panday, told the paper that the grouping should put the maximum pressure on Britain to induce sanctions.

I don't think withdrawing is the idea, said Panday.

Expelling Britain might be better.

I am not too happy over the enormous overriding influence on developed Commonwealth countries over developing Commonwealth countries which contain the greater part of the Commonwealth population, said Matthew Ramcharan, Commonwealth Parliamentary, Association [CPA] Executive Committee member.

Ramcharan is also co-chairman of the local branch of the CPA and speaker of the house of representatives.

It is time that the equal partnership in the Commonwealth should show itself and that the voice of the majority should be predominant, he said.

SANGUINETTI ARRIVES, MET BY ALFONSIN, SARNEY

[Text] Buenos Aires, 29 Jul (TELAM) -- Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti arrived by plane from Uruguay at 1012 [1312 GMT] at the Jorge Newbery Metropolitan Airport.

The Uruguayan chief of state was met by Argentine President Raul Alfonsin and Brazilian President Jose Sarney.

[Text] Buenos, Aires, 29 Jul (TELAM) -- The presidents of Argentina, Brazil, and Uruguay today discussed their subregional integration process and signed a joint communique at the end of a meeting held at the Olivos Residence.

The following is the text of the communique:

The presidents of Argentina, Brazil, and Uruguay today met to discuss the subregional integration process.

President Sarney and Alfonsin, accompanied by their closest aides, gave a detailed briefing on the protocols on economic integration that Brazil and Argentina will sign today.

President Sanguinetti expressed his firm support for these initiatives, which he described as highly significant for the future of the subregion and for the whole of the Latin American integration process.

President Sarney and Alfonsin invited their Uruguayan counterpart to discuss with them those procedures whereby Uruguay could join this process, especially on the basis of economic cooperation and integration agreements already signed by Uruguay with Argentina and Brazil.

To this end, the three presidents decided to instruct their respective foreign and economy ministers to hold meetings within the next 90 days in order to implement this decision.

The communique was released at the Olivos Residence at the end of a meeting held from 1050 to 1245.

Sanguinetti Departs

[Excerpts] Buenos Aires, 29 Jul (TELAM) -- Argentine President Raul Alfonsin this afternoon said it is necessary to build a subregional common market, but he also warned that to boast about the subject would have negative effects.

Alfonsin made these statements to journalists at the metropolitan airport after bidding farewell, with Brazilian President Jose Sarney, to Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti. [passage omitted]

The Argentine president said we wanted Sanguinetti to know about our talks and invite him, as we did, to tell us what he thought would be useful or necessary.

Alfonsin said: We have reviewed all subjects, even the international ones, and we once again have had the opportunity to verify the points that the Argentine, Uruguayan, and Brazilian democracies have in common.

ALFONSIN, SARNEY REACH ECONOMIC AGREEMENT

[Excerpts] Buenos Aires, 28 Jul (TELAM) -- On their 1st day of talks, Argentine President Raul Alfonsin and Brazilian President Jose Sarney today discussed details of the agreements on economic complementary action they will sign tomorrow, including the one giving the initial impulse for the creation of a Latin American economic market.

Sarney, who today began a 3-day official visit to Argentina, tomorrow will hold tripartite talks with Argentine President Raul Alfonsin and Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti on integration and cooperation projects involving the three countries. [passage omitted]

After paying tribute to General Jose de San Martin at his monument in Plaza San Martin, Sarney paid a courtesy call on Alfonsin at Government House. During the meeting, the two presidents expressed their satisfaction at the agreements on economic integration they achieved during their first round of talks. [passage omitted]

In a ceremony held in the White Room of Government House, Alfonsin then decorated his Brazilian counterpart with the Grand Collar of the Order of General San Martin. In turn, Sarney decorated Alfonsin with the Grand Collar of the National Order of the Southern Cross.

Later, the two presidents conferred at the Brazilian Embassy, where Sarney feted Alfonsin with a luncheon and toasted Brazilian-Argentine friendship. [passage omitted]

Yesterday afternoon Alfonsin and Sarney met again at the Olivos Residence to hold another round of talks on the 11 agreements they will sign tomorrow at 1900 local time [2200 GMT] in the White Room of Government House. These agreements will include the lifting of customs barriers, trade in grains and capital assets, and cooperation in the area of energy, biotechnology, and informatics. [passage omitted]

Sign Integration Document

[Text] Buenos Aires, 29 Jul (TELAM) -- Presidents Raul Alfonsin of Argentina and Jose Sarney of Brazil today signed a bilateral economic integration document calling for growth in production, trade, and technological exchange and development projects. The presidents signed the document during a ceremony in the White Hall of Government House in the presence of Brazilian Foreign Minister Roberto Costa de Abreu Sodre and Argentine Foreign Minister Dante Caputo, both of whom signed 12 integration protocols.

As they signed the document, Alfonsin and Sarney noted the need to call on their peoples to jointly try to take the path toward growth and modernization that will allow them to overcome current obstacles and to face the challenges of the 21st century.

The presidents agreed on the need to consolidate democracy as a system of living and government, as well as on the efforts being made by the two governments for stable growth and development.

They said that the creation of a common economic space will open broad opportunities for joint growth and for their people's welfare. This will enhance the autonomous capacity of the two countries. This program constitutes a renewed effort for the integration of Latin America and for the consolidation of regional peace, democracy, safety, and development.

The presidents of Argentina and Brazil have decided to establish an economic cooperation and integration program that will be implemented gradually, subject to annual evaluations, and the negotiation and planning of goals. The plan will be flexible so its objectives, rhythm, and scope can be adjusted. Each stage will include a small group of integrated projects.

The plan calls for technological modernization and more efficient use of resources by the two economies. It also foresees active participation by the business sectors to ensure its effective implementation.

A special executive commission for the program will be formed to hold meetings every 6 months and evaluate the progress of the plan and that of the groups created by the 12 protocols.

This commission will be made up of the Argentine foreign and economy ministers, and the foreign industry and commerce secretary; and the Brazilian foreign, finance, industry and commerce ministers, and the National Security Council secretary general.

It was explained that this commission will be able to increase the number of its members, when necessary, by incorporating other officials to evaluate and propose measures in specific fields.

Alfonsin and Sarney approved 12 protocols to the integration document which will constitute the first stage of the economic cooperation and integration program between Argentina and Brazil.

Protocols on Economic Integration

[Text] Buenos Aires, 29 Jul (TELAM) -- Argentine President Raul Alfonsin and Brazilian President Jose Sarney today signed 11 protocols for economic integration and cooperation. In general, these protocols refer to programs on capital goods, wheat, food supply, trade expansion, binational enterprises, financial questions, investment funds, energy, biotechnology, economic studies and information, and mutual assistance in cases of nuclear accidents and radiological emergencies.

Protocol 1

The chiefs of state of Argentina and Brazil establish an integrated program of production, trade, and technological development of capital goods. The program includes a variety of capital goods which can be expanded by common agreement between the parties and which will serve as the basis for negotiation of a common list of products that will be treated as domestic products in Argentina and Brazil.

These products will not be subject to customs tariffs or to any kind of nontariff restrictions or impediments, whether administrative or quantitative, nor will they be subject to import fees.

The total trade of those products on the common list will have a ceiling equivalent to $2 billion for the next 4 years, distributed in the following way: The equivalent of $400 million in 1987; the equivalent of $400 million in 1988; the equivalent of $550 million in 1989; and the equivalent of $750 million in 1990.

It is desirable that by the end of 1990, the common list should represent at least 50 percent of the goods on which agreement has been reached. It is estimated that the number of products on the list will be increased every 6 months by a given percentage over the 1987-1990 period.

The protocol establishes that Argentine-Brazilian trade will be in dynamic euilibrium provided the 4-month accumulated surplus is not higher than 10 percent of the value of trade for four 4-month periods (the present one and the next two) [as received] taken together, and calculated on the basis of the annual ceilings for total trade.

Should the imbalance surpass 10 percent, new products chosen from the common list will be included, and an additional financial mechanism between the central banks of the two countries will take effect. If the imbalance surpasses 20 percent, the clause of contribution to the Investment Fund will be activated. Should the imbalance surpass 40 percent, measures compatible with the trade situation in general will be adopted to correct it.

It also determines that the value of components of products on the common list imported from third countries should not exceed 20 percent of the product's export price.

In order to increase the level of consumption by the population of the two countries in the most effective way, it is decided to establish an integrated project of production, storage, transport, and supply of wheat. Two working groups will be created by 30 September 1986, one to examine and propose a program of gradual harmonizaton of the Argentine and Brazilian economic policies regarding that integrated project, and the other, to identify critical aspects in the system.

The Brazilian Government commits itself to buy and the Argentine Government commits itself to sell the following minimum amounts of wheat during an initial period of 5 years: 1,375,000 tons in 1987; 1,450,000 tons in 1988, 1,550,000 tons in 1989; 1,700,000 tons in 1990; and 2,000,000 ton in 1991.

The class of wheat, price, payment terms, delivery schedule, and points of loading and unloading will be determined by the National Grain Board of Argentina and the Wheat Deliberative Board of Brazil. The Argentine Government will accord Brazil the position of preferential buyer, and the Brazilian Government will accord Argentina the position of preferential supplier.

This protocol establishes the mechanisms which will pave the way for the total or partial mutual complementation of the domestic food supply in the two countries in case of local production shortfalls.

A working group will be set up to prepare a list of foodstuffs that each country will be able to supply to complement its counterpart's domestic consumption and to propose the mechanisms capable of guaranteeing this complementary supply. This group will be set up before 30 September 1986 and it must submit its first report by 31 December of the same year.

Argentina and Brazil will conduct economic and commercial talks aimed at promoting gradual and sustained expansion of bilateral trade seeking a broad complementation of each other's production. The expansion of the trade must be attained in a balanced and dynamic manner.

As of 4 August the renegotiation of Partial Accord [AAP] No 1 will begin at the headquarters of ALADI [Latin American Integration Association] in keeping with the terms of reference agreed upon on 10 July 1986. These negotiations must conclude by 31 October 1986 at the latest.

An annex to this protocol sets forth the terms of reference for the renegotiation of this partial accord. The rules and regulations governing the future accord must be the ones approved in May 1984, which will remain in effect for 6 years as far as the new accord is concerned. The renegotiation -- from which the goods included in the common list will be excluded -- will encompass all the goods covered by the AAP, as well as any new ones that the parties agree to include.

The Argentine and Brazilian Governments agree to create conditions favorable to the establishment of bilateral enterprises. A working group will be set up to draft a statute for binational enterprises. This statute must meet the requirements of national corporations of the two countries willing to go into partnership. This group must be set up by 30 September this year and submit its first report by 30 November 1986.

Protocol 6

In order to improve the cash flow of the compensatory system of the agreement on mutual lines of credit between Argentina and Brazil, and to reduce possible imbalances in the sector of captial goods, the Argentine and Brazilian central banks will streamline the technical and operational terms of this system by establishing a mechanism for reciprocal financing of the negative balances of each 4-month period.

Furthermore the two banks will establish an an additional financial arrangement which will be activated whenever there is an imbalance of the trade in capital goods included in the common list. Stand-by credit lines will be opened to cope with this possibility.

The Argentine and Brazilian Governments have decided to establish an investment fund to promote growth, especially in the field of capital goods, which in the future will be part of the economic cooperation and integration program. The organizational structure of this investment fund must be ready by 30 November 1986.

The financing of projects aimed at expanding production through medium- and long-term loans will be granted primarily to binational enterprises of national capital.

The investment fund will be able to participate as a minority stockholder in binational enterprises and its initial capital will be equivalent to $200 million. Should trade in capital goods experience an imbalance of over 20 percent of the fund's capital, the two governments will have to contribute equal shares to make up the imbalance.

In the field of energy, the appropriate authorities of the two countries must complete before 31 December technical studies on the supply of Argentine gas to Brazil. They must determine the possibility of carrying out joint oil exploration and exploitation programs in Argentine territory, and prepare a bilateral technological exchange project in the petroleum field, and increased exchanges of petrochemical products and by-products.

This protocol adds that basic plans for the Garabi Binational Hydroelectric dam must be concluded before the end of the year, that the negotiations for the Pichu-Picun-Leufu Hydroelectric Dam must progress, and that the Latin American Energy Organization [OLADE] be supported and strengthened.

Protocol 9

An Argentine-Brazilian biotechnology center will be created. It will be made up of two knowledge-generating sources, existing investigation centers which will be expanded. A working group will be established to prepare the necessary documents. This working group will ensure that the center will be directed in alternative 2-year terms by an Argentine and then a Brazilian scientist.

Protocol 10

In the field of economic cooperation and integration, an Argentine-Brazilian advanced economic studies center will be created. This center will annually select professionals from the two countries to prepare research projects on the economies of the countries. Each government will contribute $200,000 annually for this project.

Protocol 11

Argentina and Brazil hereby decide to cooperate, through the exchange of technical information, to establish measures and procedures to prevent or mitigate the damage that might result from an eventual nuclear accident or radiation emergency, and to set up a rapid mutual information system in case such an accident or emergency occurs.

Each country can request assistance from the other country in case of a nuclear accident or radiation emergency in its respective territory. Control, coordination, and general supervision of the assistance is to be conducted by the country that requests it.

The National Atomic Energy Commission in Argentina and the National Nuclear Energy Commission in Brazil will be designated as coordinating and executing agencies of Protocol Number 11. These two commissions will establish procedures for the execution of this cooperation program by 30 January 1987.

12th Protocol Signed

[Text] The text of Protocol 12 on aeronautics cooperation between Argentina and Brazil was just released. By this protocol it was decided to consolidate actions to manufacture parts of Brazilian airplanes in Cordoba.

The presidents of Brazil and Argentina have decided to study and decide on the possible use by their respective air forces of airplanes manufactured by Argentine and Brazilian industries, as part of industrial cooperation integration, which will depend on the peculiar interests of each country.

The two governments have created a joint working group to study and advise the Argentine-Brazilian aerospace industry cooperative under the supervision of the two air forces.

Protocol 12 refers to the agreement between the Argentine Defense Ministry and the Brazilian Aeronautics Company on 17 January 1986.

FISHING AGREEMENT SIGNED BY SOVIET AMBASSADOR

[Text] Buenos Aires, 28 Jul (TELAM) -- Lucio Reca, the Argentina secretary for agriculture, livestock, and fishing, today signed a fishing agreement with Soviet Ambassador Oleg Kvasov. The agreement will allow the USSR to fish in Argentine territorial waters through joint ventures.

Under Secretary for Fishing Luis Jaimes has reported that the agreement is in line with the Argentine Government's broad policy and with the provisions of the Law of the Sea.

Jaimes said that the agreement outlines the minimum conditions required for its future implementation with a view to preserving and making the best possible distribution of available resources.

In the agreement signed today the USSR has agreed to purchase Argentine fishing products, that is, those caught by Argentine ships and processed by Argentine plants. These purchases will be equivalent to 30 percent of the catch of the Soviet ships. The Argentine Government will establish the fishing quotas annually.

Jaimes added that 10 percent of the crewmen of the Soviet ships will have to be Argentine citizens and that Argentine officials will be in charge of surveillance and control activities in the area.

CHAPARE PEASANTS ON ALERT AGAINST U.S. TROOPS

[Text] La Paz, 29 Jul (AFP) -- Peasants and settlers of Chapare, the main coca-producing region in Bolivia, today declared a general mobilization against the impending actions by Bolivian police forces and U.S. troops against local drug-traffickers. Peasant workers of this tropical region in central Bolivia have stated that they have been notified that the Leopards, an elite branch of the Bolivian police, backed up by U.S. troops and helicopters, are about to launch an operation in Chapare. Leaders Julio Rocha and Alberto Vargas reported that the instructions issued to the thousands of members of our association are secret and will be implemented as soon as the U.S. troops are sighted.

Meanwhile, the Federation of Cochabamba Peasants held a congress at which it agreed to reject categorically the presence of foreign troops in Bolivia and to state its opposition to the attempt to eradicate coca cultivation. Since 14 July, some 170 U.S. soldiers backed by helicopters, planes, modern communications equipment and weaponry have been carrying out operations against drug traffickers in northeastern Bolivia. Their objective is to break up cocaine production and trafficking.

MINEWORKERS BEGIN GENERAL STRIKE 28 JULY

[Text] La Paz, 28 Jul (AFP) -- The general, indefinite strike decreed by the Mineworkers Federation to demand the rehabilitation of the Mining Corporation of Bolivia (Comibol) began today, according to federation leaders in La Paz. Last week, the Mineworkers Federation presented to President Victor Paz Estenssoro a rehabilitation plan for Comibol. Mines Minister Jaime Villalobos considered the plan to be unrealistic.

In the opinion of the workers, the closure of the mines will mean certain death for important cities like Oruro and Potosi, where the civic committees have joined the protest. The Mineworkers Federation maintains that the government, which favors private enterprise, intends to return the nationalized mines to private national and foreign ownership. With that purpose, the mineworkers' leader Simon Reyes said, the government has stopped sending tools and food to the mining camps, and the situation has become so serious that hundreds of children are in grave danger of starving to death.

MILITARY COURT JUDGE ACCEPTS TORCHING CASE

PY291328 Santiago Radio Chilena in Spanish 2300 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Excerpt] Santiago Military Judge Brigadier Samuel Rojas has ruled that the case of burned youths Rodrigo Rojas de Negri and Carmen Gloria Quintana falls within his jurisdiction.

At the same time it was announced that Colonel Alberto Marques has been appointed ad hoc legal adviser to continue the investigations involving the torching case. [passage omitted]

BISHOPS CLAIM TO HAVE VIDEOTAPE OF BURNING

[Text] Chilean bishops have seen a videotape of the burning of Rodrigo Rojas de Negri and Carmen Gloria Quintana. This was announced by Punta Arenas Bishop Tomas Gonzalez. We are in contact now with reporter Rodrigo Araya in Punta Arenas. Come in Araya.

[Begin relay] [Araya] Good afternoon. The people of Punta Arenas are still stunned by the cruel treatment of Rodrigo Rojas de Negri and Carmen Gloria Quintana, who were intentionally burned by persons who, according to eyewitnesses, wore military uniforms. Several expressions of solidarity have been extended to this city to Carmen Gloria and to relatives of Rodrigo Rojas, who died 3 days after the incident. The ruling by Judge Echavarria who was investigating the case has also shocked the people here. As is known, the judge decided to free 24 military men who were involved in this event. He only indicted one lieutenant, who actively participated in the burning of the two youths.

Punta Arenas Bishop Monsignor Tomas Gonzalez has reacted strongly to this unfortunate episode. The day after Judge Echavarria's decision, the bishop sent him an open telegram asking him to reconsider, because justice is more necessary today than ever to prevent violence. Not satisfied with this, the bishop released more details of the horrible intentional burning of these two youths. Let us hear what Bishop Gonzalez has to say.

[Gonzalez] During the episcopal conference we were visited by eyewitnesses. We even had the opportunity to watch a videotape of the incident. I do not know how it was recorded, but we saw the persons involved. This of course made a very bad impresion. [Words indistinct] and how the investigations have taken a different course.

[Araya] According to what the bishop said, all Chilean bishops who met during the past two weekends in Santiago on the occasion of the latest special episcopal conference had the opportunity to watch the videotape. We know who the culprits are, and for this reason we have no fear of telling the truth. We want the truth to prevail, and we will raise our voices to achieve this, the bishop stated. He once again expressed his indignation about this event. This is Rodrigo Araya speaking from Radio President Ibanez Press Hall in Punta Arenas. Good afternoon. [end relay]

Good afternoon Rodrigo. This shocking news that was learned only today in Santiago was published on 27 July by the newspaper EL SUR of Concepcion. I will read it for you. On page 6, the headline reads: Punta Arenas Bishop: We Saw a Videotape of How Youths Were Burned; Punta Arenas, special for EL SUR of Concepcion. Remarks by Diocesan Bishop Msgr Tomas Gonzalez have caused shock in this southern city.

He said that all bishops who participated in the recent national episcopal conference saw a complete video recording showing the two youths, Rodrigo Rojas de Negri and Carmen Gloria Quintana, being burned. The first person died. The report published by the newspaper EL SUR on 27 July adds: According to a report published by LA PRENSA AUSTRAL of Punta Arenas, Msgr Gonzalez stated that all Chilean bishops are perfectly aware of what happened in the burning case, because they have first-hand information of the unfortunate episode, which as shocked national and international public opinion.

The bishop added that during the special episcopal conference the Chilean bishops had the opportunity to listen to dramatic reports by persons who witnessed the arrest and subsequent burning of the two youths. The bishop added that in addition to the reports given by eyewitnesses, the group also had the opportunity to watch a videotape showing these events. He said that he cannot reveal how this videotape was recorded, but that on it they could clearly see the persons who conducted the burning. This of course has given us a very bad impression, and I think that, as it has been reported to the appropriate authorities, this has also changed the manner of conducting the investigations, Bishop Gonzalez added.

We have eyewitnesses, who belong to the parish located a few steps away from where the incident took place. He concluded by saying that the judge hearing the case now has in his hands the tape, on which the incident can be seen very clearly. This is the report published on 27 July by the newspaper EL SUR on Concepcion, and which was read for you by Punta Arenas Bishop Tomas Gonzalez.

Allegedly Shown on Television

[Relay from Punta Arenas by Rodrigo Araya]

[Excerpts] Punta Arenas Bishop Tomas Gonzalez admitted that he is aware of the existence of a videotape showing the incident that resulted in the death of youth Rodrigo Rojas de Negri and serious burns sustained by Carmen Gloria Quintana. A communique issued this afternoon by the Communications Department of the Punta Arenas Bishopric states that Bishop Tomas Gonzalez is aware of the existence of this tape.

Moreover, it is added that the bishopric's Pastoral Commission on Human Rights was informed that this videotape was broadcast during a newscast of an Argentine television channel. [passage omitted]

We reiterate that the Punta Arenas bishop admitted he was aware of a videotape showing Rodrigo Rojas de Negri, who is now dead, and Carmen Gloria Quintana being set on fire and that this tape was allegedly shown during a television newscast in a southern Argentine town.

Episcopate Denies Video's Existence

[Excerpt] Santiago, 30 Jul (EF) -- Sources of the Chilean Episcopate today denied the existence of a videotape showning youths Rodrigo Rojas and Carmen Gloria Quintana being burned on 2 July.

The sources consulted by EFE stated that the Punta Arenas Archbishopric is preparing an official denial to clear up a misinterpretation by the newspaper EL SUR of Concepcion and the Catholic Radio "Chilena" station of Santiago of statements by Punta Arenas Bishop Tomas Gonzalez. [passage omitted]

FOREIGN MINISTER CRITICIZES U.S. LAWYER'S VISIT

[Relay from the Foreign Ministry by reporter Jose Francisco Contreras]

[Text] Chilean Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle has described the visit to Chile by U.S. Republican Party lawyer Bruce Rabb to observe the legal process of the case of the torched students in Santiago as inappropriate. Del Valle said that Rabb's mission in Chile is inappropriate and that it shows how U.S. diplomacy is incongruous with that of Chile. Regarding a rumored Cabinet change that would affect, among others, the foreign minister, Jaime del Valle denied it.

[Begin Del Valle recording] No, not as far as I know. I have been asked the same thing many times. My resignation has not been requested, and I have not presented it, but you journalists will make me resign soon. [end recording]

Regarding news agency reports of U.S. Government spokesman saying that the U.S. Government will forbid the international banks to grant loans to Chile, Del Valle said he was optimistic. He said he believes that it would not be a good decision because the United States knows very well that such a measure would not harm the Chilean Government, but would harm the Chilean people instead. We trust, he said, that the U.S. Government understands that this sort of measure is absolutely unrealistic and that it will only benefit Marxism and those who want to hinder our government's effort to practice full democracy.

Foreign Minister Del Valle concluded by saying that the manner in which the United States is expressing its concern for human rights in Chile is not the most appropriate. Minister Del Valle made these comments after meeting with President Pinochet in La Moneda Palace to brief him on a meeting he recently held with 15 Chilean ambassadors appointed to foreign capitals and to international organizations.

Merino Comments

[Excerpts] Navy Commander Admiral Jose Toribio Merino, at Government House, has rejected the criticism of a judge. Merino said that those who criticize the performance of the judge appointed to hear the case of the burned youths are insolent and audacious. The Navy commander made these comments after an regular Government Junta session during which four important bills were approved. [passage ommitted]

Adm Merino was also asked about the arrival in the country of a U.S. lawyer. He said: We have nothing to hide from the world, and if anyone is interested in learning how things are done he is welcome to come to Chile, unless he is a terrorist.

Referring again to this issue he said he thought that the foreign official's presence does not represent intervention in our domestic affairs. [passage omitted]

POLICE TAKE ANALISIS MAGAZINE OFF NEWSSTANDS

[Text] Santiago, 29 Jul (AFP) -- Executives of ANALISIS magazine have reported that Chilean police have taken off the newsstands today's edition of the opposition magazine ANALISIS, which on its front page carries the headline: Pinochet Alone. The report under this headline refers to the gradual desertion by supporters of General Augusto Pinochet's government.

The confiscation took place following Judge Leonel Beraud's decision to order the arrest of reporter Juan Pablo Cardenas, director of the leftist weekly magazine, who was accused of slandering the chief of state in several articles.

The charges against Cardenas and 29 other reporters and contributors to ANALISIS were brought by the military government and based on provisions of the state internal security law.

Cardenas has not yet been detained, despite the judge's ruling.

ANALISIS Deputy Director Maria Olivia Monckeberg has confirmed that copies of this Tuesday's edition were taken off the newsstands, but added that she does not know who ordered this new action.

She added that apparently it is an administrative punishment and part of the persecution being conducted by the government seeking to close down our magazine.

Judge Indicts Director

[Text] Juan Pablo Cardenas, director of ANALISIS magazine, has been indicted for allegedly insulting the president of the republic. The decision was passed down by Santiago Appellate Court Judge Leonel Beraud, who was notified of the Interior Ministry charges regarding the alleged violation of the state security law.

The ministry's charges involve 29 persons linked to ANALISIS, including journalists, commentators, and interviewers.

The judge has questioned the 29 accused individuals separately, and his decision to indict Juan Pablo Cardenas is the first one passed down. Cardenas is charged with violating Article 6, Clause B, of Law 12,927, which punishes those who insult the chief of state.

Based on the above indictment, the judge will order the arrest of Juan Pablo Cardenas.

RAMIREZ OCAMPO ON U.S., FSLN 'ATTITUDES'

PA281907 Hamburg DPA in Spanish 2009 GMT 27 Jul 86

[Text] Bogota, 27 Jul (DPA) -- Foreign Minister Augusto Ramirez Ocampo criticized the attitudes of the United States and Nicaragua within the political context of Central America, saying that many forces are conspiring against peace in that region.

Ramirez Ocampo has played an intense role in the Contadora Group -- formed by Colombia, Venezuela, Mexico, and Panama -- which has tried to seek peaceful solutions and stability in Central America. He said: "We do not want any type of support for subversive, irregular, or terrrorist forces in that area, which, in our view, is vital to peace."

The minister said: "While the United States continues to support the contras (opposed to the Sandinist Government of Nicaragua) in Central America, in a manner that obviously goes against international law and against the principle of nonintervention, and while some countries cooperate, for example, with the revolution in El Salvador or other nations, there can be no peace."

Ramirez Ocampo added: "The same goes for the repression of freedom in Nicaragua, as in the case of the newspaper LA PRENSA, and the expulsion of bishops such as Msgr Vega. The Nicaraguan Government also refuses to allow Father Bismarck Carballo to enter the country and obstructs the work of civilian leaders presently constitutionally opposed to the regime.

Ramirez Ocampo's statements were published today by liberal newspaper EL ESPECTADOR. He said that he does not believe the Contadora Group, backed by the Support Group -- Argentina, Brazil, Peru, and Uruguay -- has failed because the peace document has not been signed. Ramirez Ocampo pointed out that Contadora has reclaimed the validity of international law, has attracted the awareness of all Latin America, and has opened prospects not only regarding peace in Central America, "but for many other initiatives enormously important to the Latin American community."

After commenting that the Contadora Group will try to ensure that the Central American conflict does not turn into a direct confrontation between the powers, Ramirez Ocampo regretted and criticized the open U.S. support of the military opponents of the Nicaraguan Sandinists.

"International law has been devalued, at least in this case," he added, commenting that the Contadora Group and the Support Group have never lacked sincerity in expressing their points of view to the world.

Ramirez stressed: "I believe that perhaps the only thing we cannot be criticized for is a lack of clarity. Few times has the language (in the document of objectives as well as in the Contadora document) been used in a more correct manner."

On 7 August the Colombian Government will turn power over to the government that will be headed by Liberal Engineer Virgilio Barco Vargas, a former ambassador to the United States who is married to an American woman.

GARCIA ANNIVERSARY ADDRESS TO NATION

PY282132 Lima Domestic Service in Spanish 1726 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Address to the nation by President Alan Garcia Perez on the occasion of Independence Day and the first anniversary of his inauguration, before a joint session of Congress in Lima -- live]

[Excerpts] Mr President of Congress, Messrs Legislators: A year ago I outlined for you the policies of the new government, which we presented as a nationalist, democratic, and popular government. Today, 12 months later, in compliance with the Constitution, I am reporting to Congress to describe what has been achieved, the objectives that were fulfilled, and what the government plans to do in the future. I am addressing the representatives of the people with truth, which is the soundest reason, without arrogance, and with a humble attitude.

I will begin by saying that even though we have done something, there is still a lot to be done, that a lot more could have been done, and that if the government had taken stronger action and if it had demanded stronger support from the nation and its institutions, we would have had better results.

Yet we should admit that the task of reactivating the economy and reorienting our history is a gradual process that will be marked by setbacks and successes, which should neither exhaust our patience nor disappoint our spirit.

Therefore, today I am reporting to Congress to confirm the objectives of the government, which we will maintain despite the great economic and structural limitations that affect us, and despite the regressive influence of force and violence.

We intended and we still intend to overcome the crisis and improve the standard of living of our people, who have been hit by inflation, devaluation, and economic stagnation. We intended and we still intend to strengthen our independence by strengthening our historic, economic, and political autonomy. We intended and we still intend to improve the administration of justice by improving the distribution of wealth and by giving the people more decisionmaking power. We intended and we still intend to strengthen freedom, which is not a bourgeois delusion but an achievement for the spirit. We intended and we still intend to improve the moral standards of society by eradicating the idea that the state is something by which to profit and that social life is a way to promote selfishness.

We have achieved something in all these fields over the past 12 months, although not everything we wanted or everything we could have achieved, because we made several mistakes and omitted several things. Therefore, despite the progress we made and despite the people's generous support, we do not have an overly triumphant attitude.

No one can be overly optimistic at the end of the 1st year of a 5-year term, unless he is arrogant. Yet no one can be overly pessimistic unless he is mean. The real assessment will be made later. Today we must reflect carefully.

Mr President: I would like to divide this message into four parts. First, I would like to report on the achievements in the work for the great national objectives. Second, I would like to explain to the country the scope of the situation we are experiencing. Third, I would like to reflect on the possibilities that we have for the future and, fourth, give a detailed explanation of the work done by each sector and of what we suggest for the immediate future.

I am using this approach because I believe that the annual address by the president, in his capacity as the representative of the people, should help the nation reflect and should strengthen the people's will, so that we might all unite behind the same objectives. I believe that politics involves the art of teaching, because it must awaken the people's awareness. Nothing can persist without the people's awareness, because everything would be temporary. With the people's awareness, even the most difficult problems can be understood as phases leading to a better future.

Therefore, this address will not be a set of promises and hopes as it was 12 months ago, but rather a long reflection I would like all of you to share with me. I know many Peruvians like me, but now I need their reasoning.

This was a difficult year. Its restrictions and problems were overshadowed by the expectations, by the people's generosity, and by the fact that there was a new government putting forward its proposals. Yet, Mr President, this was a very difficult year, just as the years to come will be.

The almost complete restriction on foreign credit, the bureaucratization and sluggishness of the state organization, the passiveness of great sectors of the population, the high inflation rate, the devaluation, and the paralysis of our economy were the negative factors we were facing in addition to violence and lack of authority. During these past 12 months, however, we have made progress in the socioeconomic field, and what is more important, we have awakened the people's awareness. Faced with a chaotic situation in which prices increased at a higher rate than wages, in which lack of production and deterioration of our currency regarding the dollar demanded urgent measures, we had to start by regaining control over our economy and stabilizing the situation before proposing more far-reaching measures. However, to gain control over our economy in the first place, we needed to disengage from the vicious circle in which foreign theories and influences conditioned Peru's economic sovereignty. We needed to strengthen our anti-imperialist stance. We were aware that inflation could not be curbed and the country reactivated without changing Peru's relationship with the international economic circles because the economic chaos in which we lived a year ago was caused by the fact that our country was a satellite of international interests. Therefore, we decided to implement a nationalist government to confront this problem and to be able to implement a different economic policy that was not dictated to us from abroad. For this reason, the government adopted a radical decision regarding the foreign debt problem and restricted the import of foreign goods as a means to defend the national industry. A year ago, speaking before this Congress, and later before the Argentine and Uruguayan Congresses and other international organizations, I explained why the Peruvian Government had decided to restrict payment of its foreign debt. I said that the low prices paid for our raw materials, the incredible prices the rich countries charge us for machinery and technology, and the profiteering interest rates they demand were the cause of our $12-billion public debt. I said that to accept that would compel us to pay more than $5 billion in 1986, when our export revenues only amounted to $3 billion. Moreover, I recalled that during the past few years we were granted new loans to meet our former debts but to grant Peru these new loans Peru was forced to comply with a series of conditions and an economic theory that impoverished our country even more. This theory imposed by the IMF as a condition for granting us further loans, forced the opening of our economy to foreign goods, prompted the devaluation of our currency, and made internal credit interest rates rise. It reduced public expenditures, and demanded the punctual payment of the foreign debt. In other words, the IMF theory demanded reducing growth and consumption to meet commitments to the international banking sector. We also noted that in the past 10 years, this biased policy had destroyed the economy of many Latin American countries.

In view of this situation, the government made a historic decision that has been recognized by several countries of the world. The foreign debt cannot be honored by sacrificing the people. New loans cannot be requested to cover former debts. One cannot surrender economic sovereignty and allow others to decide what to do with our economy. If each time we are paid less for our oil, our copper, our work, how do they expect us to obsequiously pay our debt under the terms they demand?

Peru has set a rule: We are paid so much for our work, we are paid so much for our exports, therefore, we will pay so much of our debt, but without sacrificing our development and consumption. [applause]

We audaciously set a limit of 10 percent of export revenues on our payments. In this way an important portion of the budget that would have been destined for debt payment is now being used to support agriculture, to improve salaries, to undertake projects. Thus, Peru, which was obligated to pay $2.2 billion for its medium- and long-term public debt over the August 1985-July 1986 period, limited that payment to $350 million, which was broken down in the following way: $28 million was paid to commercial banks; $34 million to governments, $69 million, to the IMF; $166 million to the World Bank and the IDB; and $19 million for food and credits. This decision allowed us to increase by $370 million our foreign reserves, and thus to consolidate the stability of our currency, which was spared the severe devaluations that occurred in other countries this year. In view of the speculative rumors and maneuvers that are rampant these days, I must note here that the government will maintain the official exchange rate during the current year, as it promised it would in January. There will be no devaluations, but, on the contrary, considering the situation of 63,000 holders of small savings accounts of less than $1,000, the government has decided to unfreeze their deposits, making available to them their savings in foreign currency. The government did so in recognition of their confidence. [applause]

On this question of the foreign debt, to limit the amount of payment is not the most important aspect, which is that such a limitation made it possible to obviate the need to ask the IMF for new loans. Consequently, we did not have to sign agreements or letters of intent with the IMF, which amount to documents of colonial concessions, which would have surrendered to that organization the administration of our economy. This made it possible to implement an independent and nationalistic economic policy, and this is the most important aspect of the Peruvian decision. We thus implemented a policy of nondevaluation, reduction of inflation, lowering interest on credits, limitation of imports, and stimulation of the state's social expenditures. This policy would not have been possible if we had not made the political decision to limit foreign payments and to discard the liberal and imperialistic economic theory of the IMF.

As a result of that decision we can exhibit the following achievement: on 28 July 1985, the annual price increase or inflation rate was 250 percent, and it was reduced to less than 70 percent over the first 12 months of this government, thanks to the decision to suspend the devaluation of our currency for 18 months. We all know that when the price of the dollar rises, we have to pay more for the products we buy abroad in dollars. We also remember that in recent years, it was more convenient to save in dollars or to hold dollars, because the decline of the value of the Peruvian sol against the dollar was very steep. Every day, the Peruvian currency was losing ground before the U.S. dollar. Rents were paid in dollars, economic transactions and accounts were stipulated in dollars.

In July 1985 only 38 percent of all the economic activities were conducted in Peruvian currency. Twelve months after we initiated the dedollarization of the economy, 81 percent, not 38 percent, of the economic activities are conducted in national currency. [applause]

This, gentlemen, is a key question: What kind of independence can a country have irrespective of its history, its anthem, and its flag, if its entire economy and its social life is controlled by a foreign currency, as is the case with the U.S. dollar? Thus, taking the economy off the dollar standard is a clearly anti-imperialist measure.

Inflation, however, has also declined because of the reduction of interest rates which constitute the price of money. In the past, interest rates were as high as 300 percent per year. For agricultural loans the current interest rate was 180 percent; today it is 40 percent. For mountain areas, the interest rate was 106 percent; today it is 14 percent. In the 81 poorest Peruvian provinces the interest rate was 81 percent; now it is zero. This means that in those provinces we do not charge the peasants any interest rate so as to promote development.

In the third place, inflation has been going down due to the joint national effort to control prices. This effort was made jointly by government, the municipalities, and all social organizations because in this way we could prevent speculation and abuses. Although control has been weakening over these last few months its effects are still being felt because, as we said before, our inflation rate is only a third of what it used to be.

In the case of certain large enterprises, the price control helped us to lower the prices of noodles, flour, and oil -- so necessary for the people at large -- below the level of July 1985 because as soon as we took over the government we managed to obtain price reductions that are still in effect today.

The same thing happened with the bread that costs 250 soles per unit; the same price it cost 12 months ago. I would like to remind the skeptics that in 1980 bread cost 3 soles per unit and in 1985 its price had risen to 250 soles. This means that in 5 years the price of bread increased 80 times. Today, we are supplying the people with bread at the same price at which it was being sold 12 months ago, when we took over. [applause] [passage omitted]

Messrs Legislators:

I have made this review to note that the political decision regarding the payment of the foreign debt has allowed us to enforce an economic policy that better suits the needs of the people and the national development. Therefore, I hereby announce that we shall continue to uphold this decision and that in the next 12 months, we shall only allot 10 percent of our export revenues to the payment of the foreign debt.

The revenue situation of a year ago remains unchanged. In fact, it has deteriorated in view of the decrease in prices for oil and other products. This is why Peru will receive almost $500 million less for its exports.

Peru will have less income. This situation has turned the currency reserve into a strategic national resource. Consequently, we must add that our intention to use 10 percent of our export revenues for the payment of the foreign debt will be made on the condition that those resources used to pay our foreign debt are matched by a similar inflow of credits.

Gentlemen, it would be suicidal to become exporters of net capital if no new credits come in and the prices of our raw materials continue to fall. [applause]

I must acknowledge that friendly countries have been granting us cooperation loans at low interest rates and long terms of payment. Payments to them must be given priority. There are also international organizations whose disbursements or new loans to Peru surpass the payments received from our country. They too will be granted priority.

I hereby announce our decision and willingness to negotiate with creditor governments and banks. However, I warn that Peru can accept neither the present terms nor interest rates that have been established. We shall hold a dialogue but based on conditions regarding interest rates, terms, and years of nonpayment within the framework of our decision to pay 10 percent of our export revenues. [prolonged applause]

Two major decisions should be added to the foreign debt issue. In the first place, the government has decided to limit the payment of the foreign debts contracted by private individuals and enterprises with foreign banks and suppliers, the payment of which has caused millions of dollars to leave the country during the past 12 months, often in an unjustified manner. This situation cannot continue because, as I have already stated, the foreign currencies represent for our country a strategic resource the state must safeguard. The state has decided to limit payment of the private foreign debt. But I must add that, in view of this decision, the government will have to guarantee the resources for investments or projects currently under way, which are necessary for national development. In the second place, the government has decided to restrict for 2 years the remittances of dollars by foreign companies as profits, depreciation, or private debt. [applause]

We welcome and defend foreign investments in our country, but we are also aware that every national or foreign enterprise must share the situation which the country faces because, during the past 12 months, while the government limited the payment of its public debt to $300 million, no less than $1 billion left the country to cover private debts of Peruvian companies and as profits of foreign entgerprises. Therefore, it is only appropriate for the government, in controlling the economy, to limit the flow of money that leaves the country weakening our country's strategic resources, that is, the reserves. These two measures are not taken with a statist and bureaucratic purpose that will cancel or affect private property. These two measures are taken to safeguard the nation's interests in a difficult time. They entail neither expropriation nor confiscation. They are a limitation so that resources generated within the country may be kept in the country and used by their owners in productive investments, which the country requires in these difficult times. [applause]

Messrs Representatives: This first sovereign and nationalistic conception of the government has also allowed us to start the democratization of the society and the state apparatus. We stated 12 months ago that democracy is not only the representative nature of the government or basic liberties as a whole. It is much more. Democracy should be a social and economic model capable of solving social injustice and the differences in regional development, and safeguarding the participation of all citizens. To us the reactivation of our economy and the curbing of inflation represent deeply democratic measures only if they are complemented by a fairer distribution of wealth. The greater the inflation, the greater the concentration of wealth among a few persons.

The liberal theory that was implemented in the past maintained that if the peoples' income is limited there is less demand and, as a consequence, the price of goods will drop because of lack of demand.

We believe that this is an inhuman theory, and we maintain that the greater the purchasing power, the greater the production of the sectors that used to be idle, and as a consequence prices will not increase.

Therefore, our appeal to industrialists has been to tell them that it is not a matter of producing little and charging a high price for each product but rather of producing more products and chargine less for them. However, the government also believes that democracy is a process of a progressive redistribution that should not be hasty or imprudent, thus causing greater economic problems.

Our tax program has substantively reduced sales taxes from 11 to 6 percent and has avoided increasing fuel prices because these two are indirect taxes that tax the rich and the poor equally and, as a consequence, are unjust. In keeping with our principle of making those who have or who earn most pay the most, we have reorganized the tax exemption regulations through which a sizable quantity of resources was lost. Moreover, price controls in many cases prevented speculation or fear from affecting prices. These are measures designed to bring about redistribution, and we will continue to carry them out. [passage omitted] The nationalist and popular government is facing two urgent problems: subversive violence and the limitations stemming from our economic structure. I ask the nation to reflect on these two problems with me.

Twelve months ago, cruel violence ravaged the mountains. Inspired by violent terrorist ideas, armed groups seized and subdued peasant towns, taking advantage of their poverty. This dramatic situation claimed thousands of lives on both sides. Many excesses were committed during the repressive actions, because of the anonymous character of terrorism. We proposed an emergency policy for the poorer areas, the budgetary allocations of which we doubled. For example, in 1985 the Ayacucho Corporation was allocated 143 billion soles. We raised that figure to 362 billion soles, which was a 154-percent increase plus the additional emergency funds it has received.

Microregions were organized in the poorer provinces to allow the state to render its services in the agriculture, housing, and health sectors. Aid programs were designed to help peasant communities. The state established direct links to the towns that have remained historically neglected and that could become the easy prey of subversion.

We also said that the law was to be enforced to the fullest, because the state could not allow the presence of armed groups. However, we gave precise instructions to concentrate surveillance and repression in specific actions. In the first month of our administration, with two dramatic events marked by abuses and excesses, we immediately ordered sanctions and an investigation.

After the action of the state in the poorer areas, however, subversion moved to the cities, particularly to Lima, where there were murders and terrorist attacks. In addition, disregarding the nation and its laws, terrorists sought to turn the prisons into battlefields. When mutinies broke out in three prisons, the government decided to take strong action to restore order and authority. Unfortunately, as the country knows and as I personally reported, there were excesses, the worst of which was the murder of more than 100 inmates. This incident, or for that matter any other incident, cannot be concealed in a civilized country. Investigations are under way and will soon be concluded. The responsibility of those who are involved will be established and they will be duly punished.

These terrible facts should make us reflect on the situation of violence in which we are living.

Violence is no longer the exclusive tool of subversive totalitarianism because at times it is also used by state organizations that fight subversion. I believe that the entire nation should reflect on this and ask why we have reached a point at which our daily awareness of death is becoming more intense as we witness subversive action, excesses, crimes and a violent ideology that fills our minds. This ideology reaches us through press reports and even appears on entertainment programs, which negatively train our children to become witnesses to or authors of death in the future.

This is why our democracy is precarious and weak when faced with the dangers of the brutal regressive situations we experienced, in which we forgot that hatred is not to be met with hatred but with the firmness and fairness of the law.

Thus, subversive violence is the main obstacle for our democracy. However, the spreading of violence to those who combat subversion is also an obstacle. This imposes on us the task of re-education, in which barbaric actions like the ones we have experienced are duly punished.

I am encouraging and asking the Congress to conduct the necessary investigations on this and other actions to prevent repetitions in the future.

I am repeating, however, that those investigations of excesses will rever justify criminal subversive violence or its contempt for human lives and the law.

The state will firmly and energetically continue combatting subversion to guarantee the nation's security and, if necessary, it will defend democracy with arms.

Here I want to express my greetings and full support to the Armed Forces, who are acting in loyal respect and subordination to the constitutional government; and to the police institutions, whose self-sacrificing task cannot and must not be confused or harmed by individual or group excesses or atrocities. [applause]

Aside from violence, the democratic and popular program faces yet a more serious obstacle, which is the main issue of this address.

I am asking the nation to join me and to reflect on the nation's future. I have not come here just to give a detailed account of government's accomplishments but to warn you about our economic structure and its possibilities, and to tell you what we can do.

Our economic structure itself is and has been the greatest obstacle to the efforts made over the past months. That structure cannot be changed by a decree. It is an economy in which industry is essentially based in Lima and controlled from abroad. It is an economy that produces raw materials with increasigly depressed international prices. It is an economy whose agriculture, which has been led into misery, will be reconstructed very slowly. It is an economy involving acute injustice among human groups and regions.

Thus, everything that will be or has been done with goodwill concerning economic policy will have great limitations unless that structure is decisively changed under the aegis of a revolutionary state.

For instance, we all know that our national industry is concentrated in Lima and that its technology and equipment provide few jobs to the people.

The most serious problem, however, is that the centralist industry is basically oriented toward assembling foreign parts and unfinished products. This means that most goods produced in the country are being manufactured by assembling parts purchased abroad. Thus, as we have more industrial production under the current conditions, we will also have more demand for foreign parts and more dollars will be required for the economy to work.

As I have already explained, over the past 12 months, the reduction of interest rates, currency stability, price control, and wage increases have increased demand and consumption and stimulated economic reactivation.

This means that in the medium term our purchases from abroad will have to be increased to enable the industry to grow, and we will need many more dollars for this.

We all know that Peru is not receiving foreign credits because of its nationalistic position. We all know that we are being paid less and less for copper, silver, and oil.

The economic reactivation of the industrial sector can cause strangulation due to the lack of dollars. This causes us to lose ground in the crisis and limits increases of consumption and production, which we have promoted through an emergency policy over the past 12 months. This policy has achieved good results but has limits in the nation's economic structure. This truth must be realized and understood by the nation, because we now have to make a historical and qualitative jump toward a better-planned and more rational management of our economy if we are to continue to grow.

We must ask ourselves which roads we can take to deal with this problem. The first possibility is to pay the accumulated foreign debt so we can request new loans. This, however, is the liberal model that makes development dependent on external credits, and it has been quite negative for the country.

If we choose the road of paying so that we can ask for more credits, we would have to pay out larger quantities than those that will flow into the country as new credits. More importantly if we followed that road we would have to bow to the IMF and accept its theory, thus submitting Peru once again to the economic policy of devaluation, inflation, reduction of state expenditures, and opening our markets to foreign goods. This means we would have to retreat from the position we have gained this year. The second possibility, which is proposed by some sectors, is to have the government take control of the economic activities and entrepreneurial groups. The consequence would be to generate mistrust and fear among the middle class and the economic agents. It would also bring about the unavoidable bureaucratization of our social life. This bureaucratic and statist model would, as it does in other places, promote the flight of economic and human resources, as well as promote intolerance and passivism in our social life. The entire country can attest that bureaucracy is not the best way to manage social resources. The country knows that socialism today is not synonymous with statism and bureaucratization.

We propose a different alternative that is neither liberal nor statist. For the first time, we are proposing the need to guide the actions of the economic agents, both in the private and the state sectors, toward the attainment of national objectives, by defining the course and noting the limitations of a national project.

This imposes the obligation of interpreting the nationalist role of the state in depth.

Here, nationalism means that the state must have preeminence in conducting the nation, because the state is the synthesis of the national will, because the people elect their government to provide guidance and orientation and not to be a passive witness to disorder and selfishness. Today it is fundamental and necessary to break away from the satellitization of our economy, a satellitization that takes place not only in the area of the foreign debt, but also in the dependency of our industrial structure. The change must be carried out gradually through productively investing a greater portion of our economic surplus in the country. We must point out national objectives for the large economic groups that have taken hold in our economy, so that they will cease to be centers of accumulation of wealth and power or accomplices in our dependency, and become centers of support and impetus for national development.

We need an economy that can resist the inroads of imperialism in the near future. We need an economy of national defense against the crisis, concentrating the efforts and resources of Peru on a single objective. We need the state to measure initiatives and efforts, without lapsing into bureaucratization. This is the model of the state we do not yet have. In its absence, great entrepreneurial conglomerates have been formed, without goals relevant to the interests of the people.

In the previous government, which regulated credits, we had banks that attracted public savings to assist the groups that own the banks. In a state with a directed economy, industry grew in disorder, in many cases importing machinery which the country no longer needed. In the first year of our government, we have tried to stabilize the economic situation and, by recovering control over it, lowering inflation, and improving salaries, we have managed to reactivate the country's economy.

This has been an achievement, but it poses two risks, two limitations. First, as I have already said, the economy will be needing more and more dollars that we do not have. Second, as the economy is reactivated and consumption grows, business and industrial sectors, both large and medium-sized enterprises, now have a larger amount of profits in soles. These profits grow in keeping with the productivity of the enterprises. These profits constitute a threat unless they are invested productively in areas that receive state support and are necessary for development.

If these profits are not invested properly they might be used to purchase dollars on the black market, thus driving up the value of the U.S. dollar suddenly and fueling once again the inflation that will make us lose ground.

These are the potential threats the whole country must be aware of. They make it necessary to implement an economic policy that will not allow us to lose ground or plunge us into a quagmire of economic bureaucracy. Rather, it should control, channel, and enforce the productive investment of these resources.

We do not want speculation or idle wealth. We want work, initiative, and fresh capital that can be used for national independence. If we fail to do so, whatever has been achieved in these 12 months is just a cure for symptoms and a cosmetic solution, because devaluation, inflation, and unemployment are merely the outward signs of a poor economic framework. They are analogous to the fever and the headache of a seriously ill person.

Curing symptoms makes one feel better, but the proper course is to deal with the root of the problem. My government could take the easy path, doing over the next 3 or 4 years what it has been doing these last 12 months, trying to get to the end of the 5-year term with higher incomes and more production.

However, if we fail to deal with the true problem in a historical manner, we will deceive the country and leave it on the brink of a much more critical situation. It will have more production and more consumption but no dollars or funds to maintain this situation for much longer.

The people have not elected us to deceive them but to address the historical and structural problems that affect their fate. The economy we propose is aimed at defending the nation within the framework of democracy while strengthening democracy. This economy is based on certain basic guidelines I will now outline.

An economy of national resistance against imperialism can only be possible if the nation is aware that it is necessary. First, the use and flight of foreign currency must be restricted, and this currency must be used very carefully.

At the beginning of my speech I said that in this regard we will maintain our decision to use only 10 percent of our export revenues to pay the public foreign debt, and we will do so only as long as our reserves are not jeopardized.

Furthermore, the state will have to restrict the remittances of currency as private foreign debt payments, profits, depreciation, trademark payments, and royalties to both national and foreign companies.

Thus, we will defend our reserves and stimulate domestic investments of these resources by temporarily restricting their flight and using them to fuel the process of national economic reconstruction.

Peru has defended its reserves during the 1st year of my term in office by cutting down weapons expenditures, whose size was out of proportion to the nation's poverty. With France we have signed an agreement that I announced 12 months ago. By this agreement, instead of the 26 highly sophisticated Mirage plans that Peru was going to by, it will now purchase only 12, thus saving $530 million, that is, 7.5 trillion soles, which it would have had to pay over the coming years. [applause]

I want to state to the entire country that this has been possible thanks to the help, understanding, and decisiveness of our Air Force which, understanding the reasons for the government' actions has granted its generous cooperation in this regard, thus contributing to the national development. [applause]

Likewise, the government has decided to reduce, during the current year, the expenditures of rebuilding the cruiser vessel our Navy acquired from the Netherlands. The reconstruction of this vessel would entail an investment of more than $200 million with its respective interest rates, that is, more than $3 billion Peruvian soles. For this reason we have decided to reduce this expenditure by deciding that another cruiser of the Peruvian Navy be made flagship and christened, appropriately, Admiral Grau. [applause]

In referring to this subject, which is a tricky one for those governments that conceal it or do not know how to tackle it, I want to clearly state that before spending money for new equipment, we must work hard to make fully operational the equipment we already have. Moreover, we must make the people aware that in view of these decisions, national defense is not the exclusive duty of the Armed Forces. It is a compulsory commitment for all Peruvian citizens. Nobody can be a passive and dutiful spectator of national defense, believing that it is only the duty of those who wear the sacred uniform of the fatherland. Therefore I hereby announce that, within the democratization program of our fatherland, the government will shortly propose a law for active participation in the national defense.

The purpose of this bill is to eliminate exonerations, exemptions, and privileges so that all the citizens of Peru, regardless of their economic situation, of the job they have or the position they occupy in a family, will be subject to selection for compulsory military service. [applause]

But the safeguarding of the reserves and resources that originate in Peru must be accompanied by the rechannelling of investments toward decentralized productive sectors that offer job opportunities and consume fewer dollars. Moveover, our industries must start to focus on national objectives working to produce goods and not just tc assemble them, that is, they must reduce their imports. In view of the current situation, this is not just a theory, this is an urgent need, which must be fulfilled through a joint action of the state and the enterprises. It is up to the industries and enterprises to come up with the initiative and imagination to meet the current challenge.

But our economy, which for many years operated with no regulations, has ended up forming great economic groups whose concentration power is dangerous if it does not have a social or national purpose. As I have just explained, the result of the reactivation is the growth of profits, which may have harmful effects if they are not used in a productive manner. We cannot declare the owners of the great economic groups guilty of this situation because the natural logic of capitalism calls for profit and expansion.

Our economy lacks government guidance to make growth serve national purposes. This is why we do not believe that ordering the nationalization of the economic groups is a solution. What they need is government regulation, a democratic regulation of costs and prices. If this regulation is not practiced, our national economy may become subjected to monopolies and to speculation by financial groups.

Our nationalist government cannot and will not allow monopolies, because they are specifically forbidden by our Constitution. Our nationalistic government must correct that situation wherever it occurs. [passage omitted]

We have said that a national economy requires a maximum of foreign currency savings and the investment of profits in productive projects. These measures, however, must be backed by the careful use of credits. We must solve many defects within the credit sector. The state and private banks share these defects. Credits in Peru are mainly concentrated in the hands of the same large economic groups and monopolies. Credits are concentrated mainly among the large companies, which set prices, that is, companies that can easily transfer the cost of interests to the prices of their finished products. Besides, the remaining private sector credits are sometimes siphoned off by the large economic groups which use these pubic resources for their own activities.

Nationalization is not a solution in this case, as some people suggest, because the bureaucratization of the state banks does not guarantee the efficient use of credits. We need what we do not have in Peru: a government that rules, directs, and guides, because that is what it has been elected by the people to do.

We need a clear, legal and administrative regulation to forbid the state or private banks from concentrating their loans on a small number of groups or companies. We need a regulation to democratize credits and to grant loans to agriculture and handicrafts. We must prevent credits and loans from simply being used as a powerful tool by the large economic groups.

To this end, the government today issued six supreme decrees, regulating credit concentration and fund allocations to groups related to each other or to financial entities, and forcing the decentralization of selective credits. These decrees involve the state's using domestic savings and granting the bank superintendency and the Central Reserve Bank the necessary powers to regulate and channel credits to avoid abuses, monopolies, and concentrations and to take advantage of the initiatives of all the institutions related to the state.

Foreign currency savings, the orientation and direction of economic groups and industry toward social goals, and the reorientation of state-run financial activities will remain just a theory if the Peruvian state continues as it is today, that is, slow, bureaucratic, centralist, Lima-centered. An economy of national resistance and growth requires a bold and revolutionary transformation of the state itself.

The national administrative apparatus itself is one of the greatest obstacles facing the government and history. Orders and regulations proceed with exasperating slowness. Change is not taking place among those who see administration just as a means of making a living with no social meaning. The centralist passiveness stalls the best efforts and causes decisions to be made with no consideration for the opinion of those who are directly involved.

The solution does not lie in coercion or in threatening the bureaucracy. The solution will only be achieved by delegating responsibilities which thus far have been concentrated in Lima. Therefore, I am announcing to the country the government's decision to immediately initiate a regionalization process by which territorial limits or regions, comprising one or more departments, administer, govern, and take the helm of their own destinies.

To begin this historic process, I will propose to Congress a bill on the creation of the Altiplano region in Puno, a department which, owing to its characteristics, has only one real situation. I will propose a bill on the creation of the region made up of Tumbes and Piura Departments, which have been called the Grau region, and I will propose a bill on the creation of the Amazon region.

These first three regions [applause, shouts] will be the vanguard of a process that for the first time will place in the hands of the people the full administration and determination of their destinies.

I am asking Congress to give priority to the regionalization bill that is currently being discussed so that after it is approved we may breathe life into the regions I have just proposed.

Contrary to a statist and bureaucratic system, regionalization means a democratic revolution, whose implementation I am passing on to the people as the greatest responsibility of their history. [passage omitted]

To prepare this new and democratic system of public administration, which is not only supported by the Constitution but by my absolute confidence in the people's maturity, I am also announcing the full economic and administrative independence of the state-owned corporations so they can decide what investments to make and how to spend their funds.

Nowadays, every state-owned corporation is experiencing a pinch. This is just a result of the centralist power which, as president of the Republic, I am repudiating.

As things are now, the corporation's meeting raises a proposal. This proposal then must be submitted to the Planning Institute.

Next, it must be submitted to the presidential and economy ministries. Finally, it must be submitted for discussion by the Bicameral Budgetary Commission. At each stop, it undergoes changes, delays, and the distortion of its original purpose.

To overcome this insanity, I am announcing that in the yearly budget bill we will propose a resolution to fully implement the administrative independence of the state-owned corporations as the initial step for the thorough decentralization of the regions. In addition, we will maintain our goal decentralizing economic activities and relocating some state-owned enterprises like the State Petroleum Agency [Petroperu], the national Coca Producing Enterprise, and Pescaperu [State Fishmeal and Fish Oil Production Agency] to areas and departments more closely linked to their activities.

With the same goal, I am introducing a bill expanding the collection of port fees, which formerly were charged only at El Callao port. If the bill is approved by Congress, port fees will be charged at all Peruvian ports. Thus, Chimbote, Paita, Matarani, (Hilo), and other ports will have additional economic resources for their development. [applause]

Finally I am announcing that when regionalization and economic decentralization are fully under way, we will restrict and in some instances ban the installation of new industries in Lima. Because of their size these industries can contribute to the decentralization process if they are installed in other regions. [applause]

Messrs congressmen, these are the goals I am reasserting in your presence; this is what we have accomplished; and these are the historic limitations we are facing, along with proposals for an anti-imperialist but democratic national economy, in which we call for the productive investment of the largest possible amount of funds so that we do not return to speculative activities, which are contrary to the nation's interests. In the economy we are proposing the state will be the best guarantee for a productive, democratic, and decentralized operation of the national wealth.

I want to tell you that these goals and these bills will meet many difficulties and obstacles, but we will implement them with the greatest and most absolute liberty. We will show the world that we do not need to resort to totalitarianism or to shameful excesses to change our country. A revolution can be carried out through persuasion. A revolution can be carried out with total, unrestricted freedom of the press. A revolution should not be something that generates fear, revenge, or hatred. It should be prudent, constructive, and great. A revolution can be carried out by making good use of private initiative.

Contrary to some people's beliefs, one does not need to be a communist to believe in change. We respect the communists and their ideas but our path is different. It is the path of nationalism and democracy. It is different. It is the path of nationalism and democracy. It is the bread-and-freedom path of Haya de la Torre. [applause]

Before finishing this exposition about the concrete works of each sector,. let me add something. I must request the people's help for our great objectives. I will not ask them to go to the streets. I will not ask for government-supporting crowds. Instead I will ask each individual to rule his own destiny in his own field, to help me rule Peru. If that individual knows much, he must teach; if he knows little, he must learn. [applause]

If he is a businessman, he must invest in Peru what he is earning. If he is a professional, he must return to society what it gave him in the university. If he is a craftsman, he must improve his work. If he is a peasant, he must plow 110 furrows instead of 100. If he is a worker, he must remember that the object he is manufacturing is necessary for another worker, and it must be well made. If he is a teacher, he must teach optimism. If he lost his way he must recover it. If he is an artist, he must dedicate to himself to his art. If he is a politician he must not hate, he must be understanding and patient. Only thus will a torch light the end of the road bringing us faith and strengthening us to build our nationalist and popular model. [applause] [passage omitted]

Regarding the Indian communities, we have appropriated two funds amounting to 340 billion soles to them as a concrete redistribution over the past 12 months. The first fund is for direct nonreimbursable assistance, that is, assistance granted free of charge by the state for agricultural and health projects that each community democratically decides to undertake. More than 100 billion soles has already been delivered to more than 1,600 peasant communities. The other 300 billion soles was for rural community development at an interest rate of 2 percent to be repaid in 20 years With this stimulus to the peasant communities and to the profitability of agriculture in general, and with the elimination of interest on credits for peasants in the poorest provinces, we believe that the historical difference between the city and the countryside will begin to be reversed. By giving more resources to those who have less and, as we have said, by gradually changing the structures of the unjust social tyranny, this reversal will ultimately be accomplished.

Agrarian reform has been carried out without carefully considering the relationships between the city and the countryside. Agrarian reform was confused with the concession of land deeds. In some cases, agrarian reform endorsed injustice. For instance, in Puno, where hundreds of peasant communities existed, the latifundia emerged centuries ago to conquer and to wrest the land from the peasants. Following this the agrarian reform created associative enterprises on the foundation laid by the latifundia that pushed the peasant communities onto small parcels of land, from which they looked, as from a balcony, upon what used to be their property.

Thus poorly implemented, agrarian reform served only to seal the historic despoliation of our peasants.

Therefore, we no longer speak of agrarian reform. We proposed an agrarian revolution in Puno through Decree 006, which restructures agriculture throughout the department, so that large portions of land that are now idle can be distributed and returned to the true heroes of the Andean saga. In this way, the communities have been historically vindicated. At the same time, we have promoted the development of production, which is now small or nonexistent because of the poor organization of the enterprises and the large size of the properties.

We have already expropriated 744,000 hectares of land and will continue to expropriate up to 1 million hectares. This land belonged to 43 agricultural enterprises of social interest. In a few more days, we will begin to distribute this land to more than 400 peasant communities, thus confirming their right to the land that was taken from them during the conquest. [applause] [passage omitted] In addition, because of reduced bank interest rates, formerly bankrupt enterprises have been able to resume their payments to the Industrial Bank and to other financial institutions, which are becoming increasingly overextended in their loans.

At the Industry Ministry, which has been the most bureaucratic sector, efforts have been made to simplify paperwork, and 1,170 enterprises were created in the past 12 months.

As a result of these measures, in the first half of 1986 the manufacturing industry has grown by more than 14 percent compared to the first half of 1985. Yet, even if we consider that the price of fishmeal and oil has dropped by one-third, industry has grown by 7 percent and the employment rate derived from it has increased by almost 5 percent.

However, we still have idle capacity. We still have unused industrial facilities, so we can continue growing. As I have already announced, however, we must urgently begin to change the centralized industrial system based on assembly plants. This is a challenge for the so-called industrialists and businessmen. An industrailist is not a speculator. An industrialist is not someone who seeks complete security. An industrialist is someone who takes risks for himself and for Peru.

In the future, therefore, our industry should not use many dollars and the factories should make better use of the nation's manpower and work more closely with the country's agriculture and mining.

With this pressing goal in mind, the state will begin active negotiations, to which I invite all Peruvian industrialists, to achieve a productive domestic reinvestment of the funds generated by reactivation over the past 12 months.

A concrete example of technological change that interests the entire country involves the conversion of oil-fired boilers into coal-fired or solid-fuel-fired boilers. At the present time Peru is squandering hundreds of millions of dollars worth of oil, which could be exported.

We have important anthracite deposits, which have excellent energetic yield and a lower pollution rate. Through credits and tax incentives, the state can stimulate this conversion, which demonstrates how private industries can indeed contribute to sound planning of the economy. At the same time, however, the nation, the people, and the government have a right to demand honest dealings by the businessmen. A large number of products are still being sold without invoices or on the black market to avoid taxes. A significant number of import and export deals are being made with forged prices so that businessmen can deposit funds abroad. This is not a patriotic way of working.

I am announcing that the state will establish a firm alliance with productive capital, but the state will severely punish these crimes. In this regard, we have submitted a bill establishing prison terms for those who sell goods without invoices or who forge prices of imports or exports, thus deceiving the country. [applause] In the fishing sector, the situation turned dramatic when fishing agreements with the Soviet Union were cancelled because of charges made, paradoxically, by the same politicians who made the agreements or maintained them in recent years. Twelve months later, however, we are able to demonstrate that in the first half of 1986 fishing activities have increased by 44 percent compared to the first half of 1985, as a result of an effort to increase consumption by Peruvians, especially by the low-income groups.

From January to May 1986 fishing catches totaled 102,000 tons -- 22 percent more than the 83,000 tons caught last year. Frozen fish production has increased from 7,600 to 12,100 tons in the first half of 1986, that is by 60 percent. Canned fish production has increased from 525,000 units in the first half of 1985 to 787,000 units in the first half of 1986, that is, by 50 percent. The important factor, however, is those who benefit from this growth in canning activities. The government and private industry have begun to produce a line of low-price canned fish products. On 28 July 1985 a 148-gram can cost 6,000 soles. A 400-gram can now costs 5,000.

This so-called national line of goods is specifically intended to help the most remote areas of the country and those sectors of the population that do not have the benefit of electricity and refrigeration.

With this purpose in mind we have reopened and put into operation the Ilo Canning Factory, which employs 450 people, the COPEC [not further identified] plant in Chimbote, and the plant in La Puntilla. At this point almost 2 million cans of this popular product is being sold in the country every month.

But the most important project in the field of fishing is the rebuilding and refurbishing of fishing ships and trawlers that had been completely abandoned. We have put an end to the spendthrift policy of buying when we can rebuild and improve.

We found many destroyed ships as well as ships that had been impounded by state banks because they had been purchased by private companies with Peruvian money and had been abandoned for 4 or 5 years, falling part or getting looted. Two large ships with storage and cooling facilities have been rebuilt by the Peruvian Enterprise for Fishing Services. Yesterday, I attended the dedication of the first of these ships, which can store and refrigerate up to 800 tons of fish. [passage omitted]

As to communications, 150,000 new telephone lines will be installed and the 9 new centrals have already been built for the 65,000 new telephone lines in Lima. Furthermore, taking into account the cost of each individual telephone line, the government has installed 30 communal public telephone centrals where people of low-income neighborhoods can receive telephone messages and make long-distance telephone calls.

Meanwhile, the National Telecommunications Enterprise [ENTEL] is continuing to dedicate new direct-dialing centrals in the provinces. I dedicated the last such central, with 1,500 lines, in Pacasmayo just a few days ago.

In the coming year, ENTEL, taking advantage of its idle capacity, is planning to build 140 more telephone exchanges that would help link provinces and districts with the rest of the country and the world.

Yet another sector important for development is energy and mines, and in this sector oil is the key issue, it is also a controversial issue.

The situation we found 12 months ago was that Petroperu exploited only 36 percent of all the petroleum produced in Peru. Furthermore, Law 22123 issued in 1981 had reduced the taxes paid by oil companies from 68 percent to 41 percent without making them invest in new prospecting projects. Several supreme decrees issued illegally granted tax exemptions to foreign companies.

Firmly but prudently, the government abrogated Law 22123 and raised taxes from 41 percent back to 68 percent. The government also annulled the illegal decrees, and made foreign companies pay taxes from which they had been exempt before. Finally, the government began negotiating with the two foreign companies operating in the country to make them invest fresh money in risk-prospecting contracts as retribution for the profits they made within the framework of Law 22123.

The government signed a contract with only one of the companies that agreed to the new conditions and Petroperu took over the operation of the other company. Under the new contract the foreign company agreed to provide the appropriate guarantees that will invest $277 million over the next 6 years. Furthermore, the rate of 50 percent of the price obtained for a barrel of oil, which the companies formerly received has been reduced to 47 percent.

We must bear in mind that when the contract was signed a barrel of oil cost $24 on the international market. In view of this, the company was to receive $11.50 per barrel of oil it produced, that is 47 percent of the price of the barrel of oil. Over the last few months the world has had to deal with a serious problem. The price of oil dropped from $24 per barrel to less than $10 per barrel. This situation has serious consequences for Peru because it undermines our foreign currency revenues. Thanks to the contract, however, the amount that the company receives has been reduced as well. This is something that certain people have failed to understand.

When the price of oil was $24 per barrel, it was agreed to pay the enterprise $11.50, that is, 47 percent of the international price per barrel, taking into account that the extraction and labor costs per barrel amounted to over $8. However, with the drop of the oil price, the amount paid to the company has dropped in proportion, and it now gets approximately $5 per barrel, or 47 percent of the international price.

As a consequence, the company obtains less than what the barrel costs to produce, and it has no chance of making any profit. In other words, for a barrel of oil that would cost Petroperu more than $8 to produce, Peru pays the Occidental Petroleum Enterprise approximately $5. This same barrel can then be sold for approximately $9 to $10. In keeping with the terms of the contract however, and under the risk of losing all its assets, the company is compelled to continue its exploration program for which it must invest fresh capital.

Moreover, with the creation of Petromar to replace VELCO enterprise, Petroperu, for the first time undertook activities in the continental shelf.

In sum, Petroperu, which in July 1985 exploited only 36 percent of all the oil produced in Peru, now exploits and handles 52 percent of it and has engaged in exploiting activities. Currently, Petroperu has two seismic teams working; it has started work to confirm the existence of oil deposits in Pirim, Puno Department, and in (Lancones), Talara; and it has begun drilling to explore for gas in Aguaitia. Should the existence of gas in Aquaitia be confirmed, we would guarantee, in the medium term, the supply of electricity to the entire department of Ucayali.

In the administrative sector, Petroperu has had too many managers, positions, and bureaucratic privileges. The current administration has reduced the number of managers from 71 to 26, and reduced by more than 1,200 the number of employees, thus cutting down the current budget by $12 billion Peruvian soles. [passage omitted]

In the mining sector, Peru, like other countries, suffers a loss of income because of the decline in international prices. A national solution to this problem cannot be found. In this field, assistance has been directed at the small and medium mining activities, which will receive credit help once their finances are in order. The state mining enterprises have been reoriented to face the present situation, so that their operational costs can be lowered.

In view of the impossibility of investing $300 million in the second stage of Cerro Verde, which is owned by Mineroperu [Peruvian Mining Enterprises], a process of high-technology recovery has been applied: The process of ferro-acid lixiviation has been installed with an investment of $8 million. Also, the production of copper cathodes in the Ilo refinery has been increased by 16 percent, and the production of zinc in Cajamarquilla, by 11 percent. It must be noted that, despite the difficulties in the international market and the problems of producing a sulphur-containing mineral, Hierroperu [Peruvian Iron Mines Enterprise] has boosted its production to 500,000 tons and has expanded its export market. [passage omitted]

I would like to refer now to the justice sector. In the justice sector, a number of important projects have been implemented and a number of important proposals have been made.

Unfortunately, in this sector a dramatic riot occurred, and during its repression unforgivable excesses, which the government is not concealing and will not conceal, and which must be exemplarily punished, occurred. The goals set forth by the justice minister last year still hold.

These goals of the justice sector include expediting lawsuits, lifting punishments, and assisting in the administrative moralization process.

With these goals in mind and with the assistance of more than 100 lawyers from the Justice Ministry, and thanks to the law reducing punishments, which was approved by this Congress, the release of 5,300 inmates has been achieved. A total of 1,022 prisoners were pardoned. Most mothers who had children were set free because a goal we mentioned here 12 months ago was that children were not to suffer imprisonment.

Through a supreme decree, it was established that the members of the Armed Forces or the police, indicted or sentenced for common crimes, be transferred to prisons run by the National Institute of Penitentiaries, thus putting an end to an unacceptable situation of privileges. In March, 249 inmates of the so-called [word indistinct] were moved to regular penitentiaries run by the justice sector.

Construction of the high-security (Canto Grande) Penitentiary, which had been interrupted for a long time, has been completed, and it can now hold 1,150 prisoners. Work to complete the Chiclayo, Huancayo, Arequipa, and Trujillo Penitentiaries continues.

To these actions, we must add the activities conducted by the Justice Ministry for the benefit of the children, owing to the initiative of former Justice Minister Dr Luis Gonzalez Posadas. These include opening new houses for children, struggling against drug abuse, and establishing legal offices in shantytowns.

In addition, legislative discussions have been promoted, and 1,240,000 copies of the Constitution have been freely distributed. The publishing of the popular legal library at special prices has already begun. Two volumes have already been published.

I must especially mention a proposal by the government and approved by the Congress concerning the abrogation of Law No. 23 321, which was known and approved as the contempt law. This law was abrogated because we deemed necessary a broad freedom of the press, and we considered that this law was against freedom of the press, as established in the Constitution, which calls for all the necessary changes, transformations, and efforts, to guarantee the free opinion of all Peruvian citizens. [applause] [passage omitted]

In the security and Interior Ministry field there has been an outstanding effort supported by Congress; the government's effort to help preserve the Republic's safety and order enjoy the full confidence of the nation. With this purpose the law for the reorganization of the police forces was proposed and approved by congress. This law establishes the role played by the political civilian authorities, and sets the grounds for the unification of the police forces under a single command and with an integrated training center. To consolidate this project, I hereby announce to the nation that we will propose a constitutional amendment bill, which I hope Congress will approve through the corresponding procedures with the purpose of uniting the police forces under a single institution. [applause]

In addition to the moralization and re-education problem, the Interior Ministry was confronted with an excessive number of personnel who hindered and bureaucratized the work carried out by the institutions. Therefore, and abiding by the law, almost 1,000 officers of the three institutions, and several hundred low-ranking personnel were dismissed. The government has reiterated that this was the beginning of the police reorganization process, whose results cannot be appreciated immediately but only after a long integrated re-education process. It has stated its unwavering determination to publicly sanction any member of the institutions who may commit a crime or abuse his authority.

Tribute should be paid, however, to the job fulfilled by the policemen who place their lives at stake. In the past few years 500 policemen have been the victims of terrorism and deliquency. Institutions that have specified so much in carrying out poorly rewarded efforts and jobs cannot be stained by incidents perpetrated by individuals or groups. Therefore, we have substantively improved their salaries and are currently reequipping them so that their salaries and are currently reequipping them so that they can struggle against crime. In July 1985 there were only 16 patrol cars in Lima. This year we have acquired 282 new patrol cars and one helicopter and, during the next few months, we will incorporate 385 new vehicles throughout the country.

As a result of the antiterrorist operations more than 200 weapons and 51,000 sticks of dynamite have been seized, 15 terrorist cells have been dismantled; and 736 persons suspected of being engaged in subversive activities have been handed over to the courts.

In the drug-trafficking field, the government has acted with determination to break up important drug rings; destroying 270 cocaine base paste manufacturing plants; arresting 1,200 drug-trafficking suspects, and 1,900 drug consumers. A total of 46 tons of cocaine base paste have been seized.

The ministry has acted with the same determination to combat kidnapping which, due to the novelty it represents, has shaken the country during the past few months spreading fear and uncertainty in the business community. Of a total of 54 kidnap cases 41 have been solved, the perpetrators identified and captured, and a total of 85 delinquents placed at the disposal of the judicial branch.

These, Messrs Representatives, are some of the actions carried out with the purpose of fulfilling the objectives that will allow us to implement the nationalistic and popular democracy we referred to 12 months ago in our first address to the nation. This is the internal effort, but it would be limited if it were not extended to Peru's presence in the international arena.

The government has promoted a nationalistic and anti-imperialistic foreign policy whose guidelines are based on integration and nonalignment. The international policy promotes fair Peruvian participation in the international economic system, allows Peru to take advantage of other countries' cooperation, seeks autonomy for internal development and promotes, together with other nations, a new international economic order.

With these objectives we unfurl the flag against the arms race to put an end to distrust and fear with neighboring countries. We did this by inaugurating a direct dialogue and signing border integration projects like the Duyango-Tumbes agreement with the Republic of Ecuador and the important bilateral talks in which military commanders of the Republic of Chile took part together with high-ranking officers of our Armed Forces.

Likewise, we have given our links with Colombia, Bolivia, and Brazil a renewed impetus within the framework of a new and more dynamic policy with our neighbors.

Upholding these principles, we have come before the United Nations, the FAO, and the beloved sister nations of Argentina and Uruguay, strengthening our bilateral relations with them and always proposing a continental consensus for decision to face imperialism and the pressing foreign-debt problem. Peru has supported the need for Latin American unity in the face of the Central American crisis which, in our opinion, has threatened the right to self-determination because of the growing intervention taking place in that region.

A year ago, from this same forum I proposed the idea of creating a support group for the Contadora Group to seek a negotiated solution to the Central American conflict and to avert foreign intervention in Nicaragua. I said then that Latin American problems must be solved by Latin Americans.

We have actively participated in the efforts and proposals made by the Contadora Support Group. We will always uphold the idea that Latin American countries should solve their own problems without the arbitration, the dictates, or the arrogance of any big country.

We are not in solidarity with foreign ideologies or mistaken domestic policies. We cannot be. We do state, however, that no mistaken domestic policy can justify the intervention in or the invasion of a Latin American country. As a government of the people we are firmly convinced and determined to express our solidarity with and to support that sister country in Central America that might be attacked by a great power. [applause]

We reiterate the need to strengthen the Andean Group and to promote the creation of a Latin American community. We have sponsored and signed the Rodrigo Lara Bonilla agreement to carry out a continental struggle against drug trafficking. We have proposed the restructuring and renewal of the OAS objectives, which must become more free and Latin American.

We have shown our solidarity with the oppressed peoples of the world in keeping with our constitutional principles. We have headed a world movement to abolish the inhuman South African Apartheid regime and to support the independence of Namibia.

Conscious of our points in common with the Third World countries, we have strengthened our participation in the Nonaligned Movement.

In this manner, Peru will continue facing its difficult economic limitations, the dramatic world crisis, and the selfishness of the rich and powerful. However, we will face these situations with a single objective: to start a prudent democratic process that will be firm and revolutionary and to build a society that will enjoy a different quality of life, where misery, injustice, and pain will be banished by the efforts of all Peruvians.

In the last 12 months we have learned much from the limitations of power, from bureaucratic indolence, from the intolerance of those who want everything done immediately, from the selfishness of those who wish a change but one that does not affect their wealth.

In the last 12 months we have not only tried to help save the country from an apparently irreversible situation but we also have managed to attain something very important: We recovered the people's credibility and faith. Those people, who for centuries had very little or nothing at all, know that despite the government's good intentions, things cannot be solved from one day to the next. That is why these people are generous and patient. When I listen to disorderly claims, demands, and shouts, I also listen to the silence of those who are patient and who I know now have new optimism, faith, and trust in the future.

As the head of this nation, I thank the poliitical parties and the different ideologies, some in the opposition, for their contribution to maintaining this democratic test despite difficulties. I thank the social and cultural institutions, particularly the church, which represents a hope we will never lose. I thank all the political parties, but I especially thank my party, which has never before had the responsibility it now has. Despite this and despite our mistakes and learnings, we are demonstrating that where there is a will, something important can be done for Peru.

Once again I thank the Peruvian people, because their faith fuels my enthusiasm, because during the hardest times, the economic crisis, and the pain of sudden death, I just had to walk among the people to feel their cordial presence to again take the helm and firmly maintain our course. I appeal to each citizen for unity and patriotism.

This is the concrete result of a year in power, but we still have something far greater to do: the moral task of faith that will make each one of us grow before adversity to be as great as history demands that we be.

There are some circumstances when the people must be collectively aware of their difficulties and their destiny. In dramatic circumstances such as war, we must understand that we are not likely to get a respite from adversities and difficulties.

Restructuring our economy and society, transforming the state to give it the necessary energy and inspiration, eliminating the passiveness and the selfishness from our nature, are very difficult tasks that demand time, perseverance, and patience. Nothing will be achieved in a short time. Those who expect to feel the satisfaction of immediate accomplishments are mistaken and are bound to be disappointed. We do not want or need this kind of bystander. What we need are Peruvians who are aware of the complexities of Peruvian problems and who are able to understand that every process is bound to go forward and backward.

We must comprehend that as far as Peruvian history is concerned time goes beyond our momentary enthusiasms and disappointments.

For this we must recall the [Inca] empire, the powerful thrust of Pachacutec [Inca emperor in 1417, a main builder of the Inca empire], the pride of having been the capital of the new world, the memory of our heroes of the tragic war, the voices of the masses who have fought for justice.

Taking our strength from all this, driven by our willpower and our awareness, we shall not be stopped by either violence or lack of tolerance, pettiness or hatred, difficulties or selfishness. We will not lose our illusions when faced with obstacles because we know that time is on our side and because we will have the faith of a victorious people.

Once again I want to reaffirm before the nation my commitment and my decision to continue struggling forever in life or in the deep sleep of death, until I do my duty for the poor, the humble, the nation of Peru. [applause]

GOVERNMENT SUSPENDS FREE FOREIGN EXCHANGE

[Excerpt] Lima, 29 Jul (EFE) -- The Peruvian Government today suspended the remittance of foreign exchange abroad for a period of 24 months, according to a decree that has just been published in the official gazette EL PERUANO.

The restriction refers to foreign exchange that is used for purposes of depreciation, the amortization of debts, payment of interest, dividends, profits, royalties, payment for brands, technical assistance, and other similar payments.

The measure includes payments that have been authorized for the oil and mining enterprises that have signed special contracts with the state, with the exception of payments for specially justified services.

The Central Reserve Bank can issue bonds in foreign exchange, against a payment in Peruvian money, which will be redeemable once the 24 months end.

The decree also says that both public and private enterprises without exception must maintain in Peruvian currency all of their resources that are not used for savings.

All those who possessed foreign currency before the approval of this decree must sell it to the Central Reserve Bank within the next 10 days at the financial market price.

The decree also states, among other things, that this measure is being implemented because the Constitution establishes that during a serious crisis or emergency, the state can intervene in the economic sector with temporary measures of an extraordinary nature. [passage omitted]

COSTA RICA

ARIAS CALLS NICARAGUAN ACCUSATIONS 'CYNICAL'

PA300203 San Jose Radio Reloj in Spanish 0100 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Text] President Oscar Arias has called Nicaragua's charges against Costa Rica at the International Court of Justice cynical. Arias said he is concerned about the cynicism of neighbors who have turned to the Hague court because they are the ones responsible for reporting the war and the violence in the (?area). Arias stressed that Costa Rican unity is needed in the face of this kind of situation.

DENGO CRITICIZES NICARAGUAN ICJ LAWSUIT

[Excerpts] Washington, 29 Jul (EFE) -- Costa Rican Vice President Jorge Dengo criticized the Nicaraguan Government today for having used his country before the ICJ for its alleged collaboration in anti-Sandinist activities.

After a long meeting with high-ranking U.S. Government officials at the White House, Dengo told EFE: "We do not know details of the lawsuit," but "it surprises us that Nicaragua believes it has reasons to sue Costa Rica over that situation." After reiterating that his country is "neutral," Dengo pointed out that it is "absolutely false" to say, as Nicaragua does, that Costa Rica is an instrument of the United States. [passage omitted]

Dengo, who in his visit to the United States is accompanied by the Costa Rican ministers of foreign affairs and the presidency, said the members of the Reagan administration with whom he had met did not request from Costa Rica any help for the Nicaraguan contras.

Before refusing to make any comments regarding U.S. financial aid for the rebels, Dengo said the United States "understands Costa Rican neutrality" because aid to the rebels is "a U.S. domestic policy problem." In addition, the Costa Rican vice president expressed his optimism regarding the U.S. reaction to his presentation of the country's economic and commercial problems.

HONDURAS

FOREIGN MINISTER DISCUSSES NICARAGUAN ICJ SUIT

PA291333 Tegucigalpa Cadena Audio Video in Spanish 1130 GMT 29 Jul 86

[News conference by Foreign Minister Carlos Lopez Contreras with unidentified foreign and domestic correspondents on 28 July; place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Lopez Contreras] The Nicaraguan Government has decided to file suit against Honduras in The Hague court, claiming that international law has been violated because Honduran territory has been used by Nicaraguan guerrilla groups that are fighting against the Nicaraguan Government.

We have just received this information and are now studying it. Of course, we will take the necessary steps regarding this case.

[Reporter] [Passage indistinct]

[Lopez Contreras] I have said that apparently the basis for the suit is the alleged use of Honduran territory by the counterrevolutionaries. I have said an alleged use. It is not an official use. I want to make it clear that on previous occasions when we have explained this point, the foreign minister, the government, or the president have never denied the presence of counterrevolutionary armed groups. We have emphatically said, and this is in the records of the OAS and other organizations, that Honduras has not authorized armed groups to enter neighboring countries. If they do enter, they are doing so illegally.

NICARAGUA

ORTEGA SPEAKS BEFORE UN SECURITY COUNCIL

PA291802 Managua Domestic Service in Spanish 1520 GMT 29 Jul 86

[Speech by President Daniel Ortega before the UN Security Council in New York -- live]

[Text] Mr President, your excellencies, representatives to and members of the Security Council:

On 25 March 1982, exactly 4 years, 4 months and 4 days ago, I came to New York to explain to the security council, the highest body in charge of safeguarding international peace and security, the situation that prevailed in Central America then, and the serious repercussions that President Reagan's Nicaraguan policy was having in the area and in the international community in general. We said that we had come to this forum because we shared the concern of the international community; of the U.S. press; of U.S. political, labor, and religious leaders; and of the common citizens of this great nation who oppose having another Vietnam and who want peace. At that time we expressed our willingness to make all the efforts necessary to avert a catastrophe. I believe the developments of these past 4 years have confirmed our concerns about the war of which we are a victim and have proven the sincerity of our commitments and efforts for peace.

I have come here today to address a matter that concerns not only Nicaragua or each of the members of this council, but all the members of the United Nations. I have come to discuss the very survival of the international legal order and international law. The survival of international law is currently at stake, and it is up to the world's nations, particularly the members of this Security Council, to defend and preserve it.

International law guarantees each state's right to self-determination, to freely choose its political, economic, and social system without interference or intervention by any state. International law guarantees each state's sovereignty, territorial integrity, and political independence, and it precludes any foreign interference in these basic rights. International law also precludes the use of armed action by one state against another, with the only exception of the right to self-defense in the face of an armed attack. International law does not make distinctions based on the size or geopolitical location of states, which would undermine it. Without international law, fundamental rights would disappear. There would be no rights. Justice would be nonexistent. Power would supplant law. Bloodshed and suffering would multiply. Small states would be rendered totally defenseless.

The current international legal order is fragile. There is no executive authority or permanent international police force with the power to enforce international law. It is difficult, if not impossible, to coerce a state into compliance with its international legal obligations. If international law is not respected, if we reject laws and the obligations they impose on us, states will be tempted to repeat that bad example, and then international law will be on its way to extinction. Every time a state rejects or shows disregard for international law, a dangerous trend is strengthened in which laws are replaced by power; that is, by the law of the jungle.

When the highest UN legal body, the world's highest court, the International Court of Justice [ICJ] issues a ruling that delineates international law of applies it to a specific case, it should be the responsibility of all those states that want to preserve and maintain international legal order to endorse that ruling. The 16 ICJ justices represent a broad spectrum of the world's legal systems and constitute a body of eminent and prestigious scholars and legal experts. They are highly moral and objective men. Their decisions are not only legally binding for the parties that come before them, but constitute a statement on and interpretation of the law that should be respected by all nations.

The ICJ has made public its decision on the Nicaraguan case. After 16 years....[Ortega corrects himself] After 26 months of deliberations, the ICJ has issued a ruling in the case of Nicaragua versus the United States. After 26 months of deliberations, the examination of evidence, and careful discussions, the court issued its pronouncement on the case. Its decision has already become part of international law.

After its main examination, the court decided that the United States, by training, arming, equipping, financing, and supplying the counterrevolutionary forces, or by encouraging, supporting, and aiding military activities against Nicaragua, acted against the Republic of Nicaragua in clear violation of its obligations toward the common law of not intervening in the affairs of other states.

The court also decreed that the United States, upon carrying out certain naval and aerial attacks against Nicaraguan territory with U.S. troops and intelligence personnel, acted against the Republic of Nicaragua in violation of its duties toward the common laws of not using force against another state. The court also decreed that upon placing mines in Nicaragua's international and territorial waters, the United States acted against the republic of Nicaragua in intervening in its internal affairs, violating its sovereignty, or interrupting its peaceful maritime trade.

The court decided that there is no legal justification for any [words indistinct], and it expressly rejected the U.S. justification of collective self-defense regarding military and paramilitary activities against Nicaragua. As a result of these decisions, the court has ordered the United States to immediately cease and desist from all of these illegal activities and to compensate Nicaragua for the damages it has suffered.

It is important to stress that on each of these issues, the court's vote was almost unanimous. On certain issues the vote was 14 to 1, the negative vote coming from the U.S. judge. On other issues the vote was 12 to 3, but even in this case only the U.S. judge supported the U.S. position. The British and Japanese judges refused to join the majority because they felt that the court did not have jurisdiction, not because they agreed with the United States.

The court's opinion is a model of legal wisdom, of judicial leniency, and of objectivity. The court carefully considered each of the U.S. Government's arguments to justify before the world, and especially to worldwide public opinion, its policy of intervention and force against Nicaragua. After an in-depth and careful examination, the court rejected all of the U.S. arguments. The principal U.S. argument was that its actions against Nicaragua were in collective self-defense because Nicaragua is allegedly committed to and sends arms to the Salvadoran revolutionaries. Nicaragua is thus committed to an armed attack against El Salvador. The court found this argument unfounded.

First, the court decided that [words indistinct] and the public in general were insufficient to satisfy the court that the Nicaraguan Government was responsible for sending arms to the Salvadoran revolutionaries. Therefore, the court rejected the very basis of the U.S. charges against Nicaragua; it also rejected the U.S. argument that Nicaragua has failed to fulfill the commitments it has made to the OAS regarding its internal political system, and that instead of fulfilling this alleged commitment, it has established a dictatorship that does not respect human rights. First, the court found that Nicaragua had never made any binding commitment to the OAS regarding its internal political system. Likewise, the court indicated that even if these commitments had been made, Nicaragua had fulfilled them.

The court expressly declared that elections were held in Nicaragua in November 1984, and that a president, vice president, and National Assembly were elected, that seven political parties were elected, and that the elections were monitored by international observers. The court also pointed out that Nicaragua had fulfilled its promise of inviting and receiving representatives from the Inter-American Human Rights Commission, who were allowed to conduct a complete investigation of human rights practices in Nicaragua and to report the results of their investigation.

Finally, the court found that even if a legal agreement had been made with the OAS and even if it had been broken, this would not justify the United States insisting on an agreement that was not made directly with the United States. The organization with which it was made is the only organization that can monitor its implementation.

In the most important paragraph of its ruling, the court said U.S. discontent with the political and socioeconomic system could not be a basis for it to intervene in Nicaragua's internal affairs. This was a strong reaffirmation of the principle of the existence of a sovereign state. It was expressed by the court in the following way: A state's adherence to any doctrine is no violation of international law. To interpret this differently would make the fundamental principle of sovereignty senseless. It is the principle on which international law rests and through which the people have the right to choose a country's political, social, economic, and cultural system. The court cannot permit the creation of a new law that allows a state to intervene in another country because the latter has chosen a given political system or ideology.

The last U.S. argument studied by the court was the alleged excessive militarization of Nicaragua. This argument is equally inconsistent. At the very same time, the United States was intervening in our internal affairs, carrying out armed attacks against our important economic installations, mining our ports, and protesting Nicaragua's arms purchases, which were necessary for our defense. It was natural for the court to reject this argument. It said it was irrelevant and inappropriate to accept this U.S. contention because, according to international law, the only laws that exist are those that are voluntarily accepted by a state, be they a treaty or other agreement.

When Nicaragua filed this historic suit in April 1984, our foreign minister, Miguel D'Escoto, said we were taking this step to claim the right of the Nicaraguan people to their sovereignty and self-determination. This was to reaffirm and to preserve the right of small countries, especially of nonaligned countries, to their sovereignty, political independence, and territorial integrity. He added that Nicaragua was filing this suit to support and to strengthen conduct in international relations.

By appealing to the ICJ, Nicaragua not only sought to claim its legal rights; it also accepted its legal obligations. We can only insist on our rights under the law if we accept the obligations imposed on us. By submitting our case to the ICJ, we pledged to abide by the obligations imposed on us by the court, whatever it ruling may have been. We also pledged to abide by international law.

This continues to be Nicaragua's policy, and it will remain unchanged. We have voluntarily pledged to respect and to obey international law and we shall honor that pledge.

Mr President, we cannot fail to note that following the court's ruling, the situation in Central America is getting worse, not better. The United States continues to meddle in the internal affairs of Nicaragua and in those of the other countries of the region. Its systematic blocking of all peace initiatives and its determination to seek solutions by force has made it evident that regional and international peace is in danger. The United States has persisted in increasing the militaristic course of its policy against Nicaragua.

The military infrastructure created in the last 5 years by the United States in the region, the construction of military bases and training centers, the staging of giant military maneuvers, and the introduction of new military equipment never before seen in the region have a scope beyond dealing the mortal blow the Nicaraguan revolution. The U.S. military presence in Central America is aimed at undermining the sovereignty of the countries in the region. It is an attempt against the integrity and independence of the Latin American and Caribbean countries.

Nothing illustrates the nature of this policy better before the eyes of the world than the U.S. Government's illegal intervention against the Nicaraguan Government and people. A total of 31,200 Nicaraguans have become victims of this dirty war, of whom 14,260 were patriotic and honest Nicaraguans killed while defending their homeland's sovereignty, independence, and self-determination. This cruel and imposed war was taken a toll over 174 innocent children and wreaked over $2 billion in physical destruction in this country.

And as if this were sufficiently cruel, upon the U.S. President's request the U.S. House of Representatives has approved $100 million, weapons of all types, and U.S. Army military advisers to enable the mercenary forces -- organized, directed, and trained by the U.S. Government -- to step up their policy of death and destruction against the Nicaraguan people.

Just yesterday, this terrorist policy took the generous lives of three international cooperation workers. They were Benhard Erich Kalberstein from the FRG; Ivan Slaude Leyuraz [words indistinct] and [name indistinct] from France. They were working on social programs for the Nicaraguan people.

However, nothing will ever be able to bend our people's strong determination to defend their dignity. Today, like yesterday, we must repeat that neither threats, [word indistinct], nor invasions will destroy our strong will to safeguard our legitimate right to self-determination. We, the 3.5 million Nicaraguan men, women, youths, children, and elderly, are prepared to sacrifice our lives for it.

Today, like yesterday, we must repeat that we do not seek confrontation; that we have not come to the UN Security Council to hurl insults at the U.S. Government, but to seek peace and respect for international laws; to seek a peaceful and honorable settlement to our differences; and to again offer an opportunity to the U.S. Government to think things over and adjust the behavior to the principles [word indistinct] of international law.

A few days ago we heard President Reagan say the imposition of a trade embargo on the hateful regime of apartheid in South Africa would be an immoral action because it would hurt the South African people. However, President Reagan has imposed a trade embargo on Nicaragua that is harming the Nicaraguan people. President Reagan must admit that the policy of state terrorism that has administration is enforcing on the Nicaraguan people is immoral. President Reagan must admit that another Vietnam is being promoted in Central America along the path and that this will lead to U.S. youths also dying in Central America.

[Former U.S.] Ambassador to Honduras John Ferch has confirmed this militaristic tendency. He has stated that if the current policy is maintained, the $100 million that was recently approved by the House of Representatives will be nothing but a down payment [preceding two words said first in Spanish, then in English] for a much larger amount of aid. He has said he feels he was to victim of a lie from his own government. I think he was led into believing something that was not true because he believed in the declarations in favor of a negotiated solution until he became convinced that the goal of the Nicaraguan policy was something different, a completely military goal. This was said by the [former] U.S. Ambassador to Honduras [words indistinct].

Mr President, loyal to our desire for peace, we have done all possible and necessary to facilitate the success of the pacification effort carried out by the Contadora and Lima Groups on behalf of Latin America.

On 17 June of this year, making a [word indistinct] effort, for the second time we were the only country that told Contadora that we were prepared to sign the most recently revised Contadora peace act, which had been presented at the meeting in Panama on 6 June.

All of us are aware of the danger to the efforts of this group of countries because of the current U.S. Government's lack of political will to truly support this Latin American effort.

The U.S. position toward Contadora has been one of rhetorical support, but in reality, it is an effective boycott in the form of pressure, blackmail, and military activities in the area. The contempt for the search for peaceful and political, solutions is evident.

The U.S. Government must correct its course. To do so would not be humiliating; on the contrary, this would bring honor and international respect and recognition to the United States.

Nicaragua is willing to immediately begin negotiations with the U.S. Government to solve existing problems and to normalize our relations. Mr President and council members: The future of international law, the international legal order, and all they represent is now in your hands.

What is in store for the court, for the international legal order, and for the fundamental principles of international law on which the court based its decision if this decision, which was based on fundamental principles of international law, is not respected and endorsed? We are certain that we will receive your support so that the court is not undermined and so that the fragile structure of international law will not sustain a deadly blow but, on the contrary, will be strengthened. Nobody is more obligated than Security Council members to promote respect for the court and legal order in relations between states. Nicaragua is not asking for the condemnation of anyone; Nicaragua only seeks support for the ICJ and for law in international relations.

We are sure the Security Council will give its full support to the international legal order, to the UN Charter, and to the ICJ. In this way, the justice, peace, and self-determination to which small countries such as Nicaragua are entitled will be defended. Thank you very much. [applause]

ORTEGA, D'ESCOTO HOLD NEWS CONFERENCE AT UN

[News conference given by President Daniel Ortega Saavedra and Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto Brockman at the United Nations for correspondents accredited to the United Nations -- live]

[Text] [Reporter] [Words indistinct] at the International Court of Justice [ICJ] that the United States rejected beforehand. What right do the countries that disregard the ICJ have [words indistinct] the policy of the empty chair within the court?

[Ortega] The U.S. Government has not officially rejected the ICJ ruling. Therefore, what we did today was suggest the need to boost our support for the ICJ, boost our support for its actions, boost our support for international law, and [words indistinct] to all the states.

[Reporter] But there are states, permanent members of the ICJ, that because of their doctrine reject the position of the court. One of these countries was absent from the 28 June, [as heard] session, the day on which the ICJ ruled in favor of Nicaragua.

[Ortega] I will let Father D'Escoto answer that.

[D'Escoto] I am not aware of any state openly rejecting the ICJ's jurisdiction. What we do have is some states, most of them, in fact, who have not accepted the court's jurisdiction and therefore only allot it jurisdiction in certain cases [words indistinct]. However, it is absurd to say there is a state that has total disregard for the ICJ. [words indistinct] that is not correct.

You mentioned the judge who was absent from the 28 June session; I imagine you were referring to the Soviet judge. The Soviet judge could not participate because he had just been appointed to the position and had not participated in the debates. He therefore had no right to participate on the day of the ruling. This is why he did not participate, not because he was absent, as you said. It is very important that you find out what really happened before you ask questions or make statements that are not correct.

[Hawkins] Marion Hawkins. Mr President, your government has said that there were no [words indistinct] with the United States; however, the Nonaligned Movement's bureau has released a communique supporting a reopening of these talks, and draft statements are being distributed regarding the reopening of talks between Nicaragua and the United States. Is Nicaragua offering the United States anything to reopen the talks interrupted 2 years ago?

[Ortega] Yes. Nicaragua has very specific proposals for treaties and agreements that we would be willing to sign with the United States and that establish a framework for mutual security.

[Ortega] This is a challenge for all the countries of the world. We must prove that respect for the law strengthens [words indistinct] and all the countries of the world want this.

[Reporter] [Passage indistinct]

[Ortega] For your information, political delegations -- including U.S. delegations, U.S. Government representatives, and U.S. congressmen who defend Reagan's policy -- have visited Nicaragua. They meet with Nicaraguan officials and political groups and make statements. They have absolute freedom to do this. Even President Reagan can do this, we have told him so on several occasions. We have told him that he can use the Nicaraguan media. President Reagan's speeches are heard in Nicaragua. We have told him that if he visits Nicaragua he will have Nicaraguan television at his service to speak to the Nicaraguan peole.

[Reporter] What importance do you attach to the support and solidarity of the freindly countries within the UN Security Council?

[Ortega] We consider the attitude assumed by these countries very important. We cannot dispute the fact that the countries that have good relations with Nicaragua, friendly relations with Nicaragua, are very concerned about the situation in Central America, a situation in which Nicaragua is directly threatened. Our efforts are aimed at getting the support of all countries and for these countries to express their support before international organizations.

[Reporter] [Words indistinct] reason for the Nicarguan Government to take the case of Honduras and Costa Rica before the ICJ? You have already explained the activities of the contras in those countries against Nicaragua.

[Ortega] This is all part of the same problem. What is the problem here? The policy of the U.S. Government. They have imposed these (?men) on those countries, on Honduras and Costa Rica, and have established camps of mercenary forces in those countries, even against the will of the governments of those countries, even against the policy of neutrality that is defended and has been made official by the Costa Rican Government. Nicaragua has tried to talk to these two governments to try and find a bilateral solution to the problem. It has also made efforts within the Contadora Group. Witeh Costa Rica, we even worked on a proposal to establish a multinational force at the border area to guarantee stability there. That did not work due to U.S. meddling that blocked that effort. We have made similar proposals to Honduras that have also been blocked by the U.S. Government.

Therefore, what other path is left for us? Given that we respect the law and international [word indistinct] we resorted to the court again to brief it on this situation so that the Honduran and Costa Rican Governments would become interested in finding a solution to this problem.

[Ortega] I think so; the fact that this case has been taken to the court helps the Central American governments to defend the institutional framework and their rights as sovereign nations to prevent the U.S. Government from occupying their territory to attack Nicaragua.

[Reporter] From the London Business Publications: What impact do the oil restrictions and the blockade have against Nicaragua? What measures is the government implementing to remedy this in the short - and long-run to control this situation?

[Ortega] Yes, the U.S. Government's embargo policy has been highly costly for the Nicaraguan economy. It has forced us to seek other technological alternatives in Latin America, in Western Europe, in Socialist community countries. We are facing those problems in this way.

[Reporter] Mr President, Nora Astorga, your ambassador to the United Nations, was rejected by the United States as ambassador to that country. You appointed her as ambassador to the United Nations. Why was she rejected in Washington and why did you appoint her to the United Nations? Is this not a slap in the face of my government?

[Ortega] I think that the attitude of the U.S. Government is a political attitude against Nicaragua. That is why the appointment of our ambassador was rejected. They were afraid of the message she could carry to the U.S. public. However, we are honored that she represents us at the United Nations, which is an organization that means so much and is so well-recognized by the peoples of the world.

[Reporter] News agency from Nigeria. Would you please comment on reports that you suggested that the wife of LA PRENSA's editor serve a 30-year jail sentence? Would you please confirm this report?

[Ortega] This is what happened: I explained that in the United States people who violate the law as LA PRENSA owners have are tried, jailed, and condemned. We have a recent case involving a spy. The United States is not involved in a war, it is peacetime. A U.S. citizen, however, was captured, charged with espionage, and condemned to two life imprisonment terms plus 50 years in jail.

In Nicaragua, certain people such as LA PRENSA's owners and some bishops such as Bishop Vega have committed treason against the homeland that are as grave or graver than those that can be committed in the United States, because we must take into consideration that Nicaragua is at war. That is, their actions involve treason against the homeland in wartime.

What they deserve is a trial and a maximum sentence allowed in Nicaragua of 30 years, because there is no electric chair, death penalty, gas chamber, or life sentences. That is what I said.

I also said that instead of applying the corresponding sentence, we decided to implement the measure affecting [words indistinct] less. They are free over there; they are not in jail; they are [words indistinct]; they are writing anywhere. This is proof that they are safe in Nicaragua.

[Reporter] Channel 7, THE NEW YORK NEWS. What do you have to say about President Reagan's attitude toward the counterrevolutionaries? How do you feel here in New York, meeting with various groups of citizens who have different views?

[Ortega] I think that here in the United States there are important sectors who understand the Central American problem and who do not approve of their government's policy. I can assure you that, in general, the people of the United States do not approve what already is an interventionist policy against Nicaragua, which will possibly lead to U.S. troops invading Nicaragua, because it would be another Vietnam in Central America. I realize that there are minor sectors supporting the interventionist policy against Nicaragua. However, what I feel is very significant is the increasing concern over the situation in Central America. We hope the U.S. Government will stop to think about the possible consequences of its attitude.

[Reporter] You have been saying that Nicaragua wants to negotiate with the United States. What specific proposals would you make to establish a situation of mutual security? Could you give details of such proposals?

[Ortega] We have proposed a direct agreement with the United States in which we ask the United States to guarantee that it will not threaten Nicaragua's security, that it will recognize and respect Nicaragua's right to self-determination, and that will not use neighboring countries to launch attacks against Nicaragua. On the other hand, Nicaragua will agree to take the necessary measures to guarantee the security of Central American countries, which the United States feels is being threatened by Nicaragua. In reality, Nicaragua is not a threat to those countries' security. We are willing to sign agreements with the Central American countries [words indistinct].

For example, the last proposals we made during the Contadora meeting were very definite proposals on the number and type of weapons in Central America. We proposed a limit on the acquisition of a specific weapons system. We are referring to all types of planes, helicopters, tanks, heavy artillery, military maneuvers, and military advisers along with many other points we submitted. We submitted a proposal in which Nicaragua would agree to [words indistinct] and to see that the five Central American countries start getting rid of foreign military presence in the area. We think that this is very important.

[Reporter] Your government has taken a number of security measures since the approval of the aid to the counterrevolutionaries [words indistinct] the expulsion from the country of Bishop Vega [words indistinct] to get in touch with the Catholic Church in New York. I would like to know if you got in touch with the Catholic Church? If you did, how was it, and will your government resume or hold a new dialogue with the Nicaraguan Catholic Church?

[Ortega] We have always been ready to engage in dialogue with the church. For example, I talked with Cardinal O'Connor when he went to Nicaragua, and we are always prepared to hold this type of contact.

As for a concrete initiative on our part, this has not existed. I think that there has been some mutual interest but up to this moment nothing concrete has resulted from it.

[Reporter] What about the meeting you asked to have with the cardinal in New York?

[Ortega] I have not asked to hold any meeting with the cardinal. I repeat that there has been mutual interest, but nothing definite has been decided so far.

[Reporter] Mr President, is Nicaragua planning on taking legal action against the U.S. Government in a U.S. court, as Professor Abrams indicated, based on the ICJ decision?

[Moderator translates into Spanish answer in English by Foreign Minister D'Escoto] We cannot say off hand what will be our future steps. Yet, you can be sure that Nicaragua in the future, as it has been done in the past and in the present, will always try to resort to every means possible for a peaceful solution to conflicts. This is all we can say for the time being.

[Reporter] You said in your speech that you know that the people of the United States do not want another Vietnam in Central America. What makes you think that President Reagan wants a Vietnam in Central America?

[Ortega] Because the President of the United States is thinking about a quick solution. He believes that a military action against Nicaragua would be a rapid alternative. This is entirely a false belief. A military action against Nicaragua would result in U.S. troops being bogged down in Nicaragua.

[Reporter] Mr President, as you have done before, you are asking for peace talks with the United States. However, this administration does not seem to have the same interest. How do you plan to face this situation?

[Ortega] Well, it is a fact that the U.S. Government's terrorist policy against Nicaragua has not weakened the people's confidence in the revolution and the counterrevolutionaries have not made any advance in Nicaragua. They have only had defeats. Besides, the people in the United States do not approve of that policy; Latin America does not approve of that policy. Contadora has been asking the U.S. Government for a peace solution. The international community does not approve of President Reagan's policy. In view of all this, President Reagan will have to think things over and think about Nicaragua's proposal to hold talks to solve the conflicts and have peace.

[Reporter] Doctor... [corrects herself] Mr President, you have said that Nicaragua has the right to chase the contras beyond its borders. Do you agree with what President Reagan has said about this and do you agree that Nicaragua has the right to chase the contras who are inside its borders?

[Ortega] Well, Nicaragua is defending itself from a foreign aggressor, and we have every right to defend ourselves from this foreign aggression. The mercenary forces have bases in Honduran and Costa Rican territory, and we have asked the ICJ to help us solve this problem by enforcing the law. Meanwhile, we must logically continue to stop the mercenary forces at the border areas with Honduras -- where they have their main camps -- and thus stop them from entering deep into Nicaraguan territory.

[Gonzalez] Roberto Gonzalez of NOTIMEX. Mr President, when President Reagan refers to Nicaragua he talks about the communist threat. I would like to know if your regime is communist or, if it is not, what ideological inclination does it have?

[Ortega] Well, the court has said that if a country has one type of social and political regime this does not give another state the right to attack the first country and try to change its regime. Consequently, President Reagan has absolutely no right to launch an attack against Nicaragua under the assumption that it has a communist regime, socialist regime, or whatever. Anyway, this is a secondary matter; the important thing is that the U.S. Government is violating international laws by acting in this way against Nicaragua. Now then, our regime is a revolutionary regime based on a nonaligned principle with a domestic regime of political pluralism and mixed economy. We call this a popular, revolutionary, and Sandinist regime; if others want to say that our regime has different characteristics, that is their affair.

[Scotland] Sue Scotland, for a Zimbabwean newspaper. Sir, I suppose that you are going to the seventh nonaligned summit in Zimbabwe. What statements are you going to make to this group of 101 member-states and what type of requests would you expect... [corrects herself] would you make after presenting your statement -- under the assumption that you will attend the summit? Also, when you return to the UN General Assembly this year, what will you state at the assembly?

[Ortega] We support the country that will host the nonaligned summit -- this time it will be Zimbabwe -- and the summit to be held in Harare and [words indistinct] Comrade Mugabe. It is obvious that some states are interested... [corrects himself] do not want the summit to be held there. South Africa has already begun terrorist actions so the summit will not be held there. I might add that the summit to be held in Harare -- and Nicaragua will undoubtedly attend it to support the principles of nonalignment -- will be mainly aimed at defending the South African people's rights, because they are currently withstanding a regime of apartheid and oppression; this will be an action of solidarity with the South African people. Nicaragua will obviously support all the resolutions and topics of interest discussed by the nonaligned countries, and will discuss the crisis in Latin America and Central America.

[Seaberg] Phil Seaberg of USA TODAY. You said in your speech today that the Nicaraguan people are willing to die for their self-determination. Could you please give more details on this statement?

[Ortega] Well, the Nicaraguan people have the will to defend their self-determination, and they have proved this throughout these years. They are not easily cowed and they are not cowards, despite the sacrifices, the harsh struggle, and the outlook -- which is not the best. They stand firm, prepared to fight and defeat the aggression. They are also exerting themselves in the producton and social sector to develop the country.

[Bishop] Nick Bishop [words indistinct]. As far as I know, this is the first time that a Latin American country has filed a suit at the ICJ against U.S. intervention. Will this have any consequences on Latin America's future?

[Ortega] This sanction is very important because it defends the legitimate rights of Latin America and the Caribbean, which have been systematically threatened by the United States. The U.S. Government's long list of interventions, occupation of territories, and theft of territories in Latin America and its interventions in Nicaragua are well known.

Consequently, this establishes a very important precedent concerning the defense of the Latin American nations' sovereignty, self-determination, and independence.

[Reporter] Commander Ortega, how many Soviet and Cuban advisers do you have in Nicaragua?

[Ortega] I can state to you that in Nicaragua there are no Soviet troops, there are no Soviet military bases, and no military maneuvers are held with Soviet troops or foreign military forces. We are ready to withdraw all foreign military advisers and instructors in Nicaragua as long as there is reciprocal attitude on the part of the rest of the Central American Goverments. As for the number, I would say that the number of Cuban military instructors -- because we only have Cuban military instructors in Nicaragua -- is a number that is gradually decreasing as they are replaced by national instructors. Right now... [changes thought] the number of instructors, which was larger, some weeks ago, is currently approximately 500.

[Shannon] Don Shannon, LOS ANGELES TIMES. Mr President, you said you would attend the nonaligned summit. One of the problems being faced by that community is the position adopted on the Afghan revolution. You have always sided with the Soviets concerning this controversy. Was this done because you believe the Afghan rebels can be compared with the contras? What is your opinion on this?

[Ortega] We have a clear position on this matter, and we voted accordingly at the United Nations on the Afghan issue. Now, I believe the situation is completely different concerning U.S. relations with the contras -- which are not a government and do not represent a state -- and the Soviet Union's relations with the Afghan Government, because there has always been a government in that state, and the Soviet Union has relations with that government.

[Reporter] Thank you, Mr President.

PROTEST NOTES SENT TO U.S. ON ALLEGED ATTACKS

28 July Protest Note

PA300205 Managua BARRICADA in Spanish 29 Jul 86 p 2

[Text] Managua, Nicaragua, 28 July 1986

His Excellency Mr George Shultz, Secretary of State,

United States of America

Mr Secretary of State:

Again I find myself with the obligation of referring to very grave events that I list herewith:

Today, 28 July, at 1330 hours at a place called "Zompopera," located 53 km in the northern sector [as published] of Jinotega Department, mercenary forces serving your government ambushed two civilian vehicles. As a result of this treacherous attack, five civilians were murdered and another three were injured.

The names of the civilians murdered, among which there were three internationalist cooperation workers of different nationalities, are as follows: Ivan Leyvraz, Swiss; Joel Fieux, French; Bernhard Erich Kalberstein, German; and Mario Acevedo and William Blandon, both Nicaraguans.

Likewise, I inform you of the names of the Nicaraguan civilians injured: Juan Avendana, Arnulfo Herrera, and Carlos Lazo.

Faced by military failures, the mercenary forces created by your government carry out indiscriminate actions against civilian targets, encouraged by the operations manual made up by the CIA.

These crimes add to the long list of murdered, injured, mutilated, kidnapped, tortured, and displaced that has been produced by the brutal mercenary aggression against my country. With this policy of force and threats, the U.S. Government ratifies its decision to remain outside the bounds of international legal order and confront the ICJ ruling of 27 June.

Despite the ICJ ruling, issued barely a month ago, condemning the United States for its persistent violation of the most basic norms of international law, these crimes clearly show that the U.S. Government continues to be determined to intensify its official policy of state terrorism against the Nicaraguan people and citizens of various nationalities who are cooperating in civilian activities in Nicaragua. Far from stopping the unfair, immoral war against my country, the U.S. Government increases its military, paramilitary, and interventionist activities in the area, thus dangerously aggravating the Central American conflict.

Those tragic events took place at the moment Nicaragua requested a UN Security Council meeting to motivate a deep reflection on the need to abide by international legal order and the aforementioned ICJ ruling.

The Nicaraguan Government firmly and vigorously protests the continuation of the official policy of state terrorism that has cost many lives and material damage. The Nicaraguan Government holds the U.S. Government responsible for this criminal action. These new actions should make the U.S. Government reflect on the matter so that it will abide by its international duty and the ICJ ruling and stop encouraging, promoting, and directing this type of action, which shows the U.S. Government's contempt for human life and the basic rights of the peoples.

Yours truly,

Victor Hugo Tinoco

Acting Foreign Minister

29 July Protest

[Text] At 2300 on 28 July a group of approximately 30 mercenaries at the service of your government attacked with mortars and RPG-7 rockets the settlement of Panali, 6 km southeast of Quilali, Nueva Segovia Department. As a result of this criminal attack, 1 woman and 4 children were murdered and 26 persons, among them women and children, were injured. The attack also caused damage to property in the settlement.

Just as I reported to you in my note dated yesterday, 28 July, on the same day a few hours before this new crime was committed, a group of mercenaries organized by your government ambushed two private vehicles, killing five persons and wounding three.

Although the International Court of Justice [ICJ] in its 27 June ruling ordered the United States to immediately stop and abstain from all such actions, which constitute violations of the legal obligations established in the ruling, the U.S. Government has persisted in its policy of violating the international legal order.

Following the ICJ ruling, the armed actions, threats, and intervention against Nicaragua not only have not ended, but instead the terrorist actions have continued and increased against civilian targets, and the preparations for the escalation of the war against my country are continuing.

In this respect, the murders and kidnapping of civilians have continued, including citizens of different nationalities, the mining of road used by private vehicles, the attack on vessels and civilian transportation facilities, and the attack on peasant's cooperatives, among other actions of violence and terror, for which we already lodged official protests to your government.

These inhuman actions that have taken place during the past 5 weeks have caused new victims in the aggression launched against my country, including children.

This situation urgently calls for abidance by the appeal made today by President Daniel Ortega at the United Nations, urging your government to reconsider and act according to the international legal order.

The Nicaraguan Government strongly and officially protests these barbaric actions, which undermine the foundations of civilized coexistence and violate basic principles of humanitarian and international rights. For this reason, the U.S. Government must stop and give up its illegal, immoral, and arbitrary conduct and resume the realm of respectful and civilized relations among nations, for which it is necessary to abide by the ICJ ruling.

Signed: Acting Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco.

Ramirez on Volunteers' Deaths

[Speech by Vice President Sergio Ramirez Mercado in Matagalpa during funeral services for the volunteer workers and Nicaraguans killed by counterrevolutionaries near Wiwili -- live]

[Text] Companeros: We have come here this afternoon on behalf of the FSLN National Directorate and the president of the Republic who, as you know, is in New York where he spoke today before the UN Security Council. We have come to bring a message of sorrow, but also of hope, of the Sandinist people's revolution in the face of this crime carried out by the Reagan administration. This has been another of the many crimes of which the Nicaraguan people have been victims. When we speak of the Nicaraguan people we are also speaking of all those brothers and companeros who have left their homes in far away lands to come here and join this solidary and fraternal task of helping the Nicaraguan people. For this reason, they are also a part of our people. [applause and slogans]

First of all I wish to say that with the Reagan administration's terrorist plans to destroy our revolution there is a conspiracy of the CIA, its mercenaries, and its terrorist agents to stop Nicaragua from receiving international cooperation. When the seven FRG companero volunteers were kidnapped on the Atlantic coast of Nicaragua a few months ago, I was visiting Europe on a mission for the revolution. I was able to see how the reports on this kidnapping had been manipulated to such an extent that the terrorists were presented as the kidnap victims instead of kidnappers. They tried to make the people believe that it was a crime to come to Nicaragua to help the people in the rural and poor areas.

According to their way of thinking, it is a crime to come to Nicaragua to build schools; it is a crime to come and help improve the water systems in the rural areas; it is a crime to come to Nicaragua and help build the peasant settlements; therefore, it is a crime for the Nicaraguan people to want to advance in their own revolution.

What we have to say to them is quite simple. Those who want to destroy the Sandinist people's revolution and who murder the children of Nicaragua and the international volunteers, who are also children of Nicaragua, are the real criminals. We cannot say that only those who fire their guns against our people are criminals. The criminals are also those who direct, finance, and plan the destruction of a revolution and a people. They are not only criminals but also fugitives from international justice because they ave already been condemned. The International Court of Justice at The Hague has ordered them to stop their actions. Despite this, they continue to kill and destroy.

To our brother Ivan Claude Leyvraz and to our friends of the Swiss Workers Aid organization that brought Leyvraz to Nicaragua; to our brother Bernhard Erich Kalberstein from Freiburg and to the Friends of Nicaragua Association in Freiburg; to Companero Joel Fieux, who had already become a Nicaraguan, and to his mother who is here with us today; to all of you we say that the revolution will pick up your example and your blood together with the example and blood of our brothers William Blandon Aguilar and Mario Acevedo Fuentes, who were also killed in this ambush in Zompopera. From this podium and facing the bodies of our fallen brothers, we wish to send a message to the world; a message to the countries where our brothers came from.

We wish to say that the opinions of those countries, of the political groups, trade unions, and governments, must be heard. They must condemn this campaign of terror aimed at isolating Nicaragua, at preventing international cooperation from reaching us, and at keeping our brothers from Europe, the United States, Canada, Latin America, and other places from coming to Nicaragua. What we must do is stop the hand of the killer, not the hand of the volunteer who wants to come to Nicaragua. [applause] It is important to encourage the brothers and sisters from all over to come to this country to work, to experience our situation, because this a revolution that not only belongs to the Nicarguans but a revolution that belongs to all men and women of goodwill. What we need here in Nicaragua are men and women of goodwill; men and women who come to work with their hands and with their minds to help Nicaragua advance, just like our brothers who died in Zommpopera were doing.

As I said earlier, this is a message of sorrow but also of hope and above all a message of victory. The FSLN has never doubted that it will win this war. [applause] The Nicaraguan people have never had doubts that in the end their rifles will win. The Nicaraguan people have truth and justice on their side, and truth and justice can never be defeated by crime, evil, and lies. The blood shed in Zompopera vouches for the cause of the people of Nicaragua. It is a generous blood, the blood of men of goodwill. It is an invincible blood.

BELGIAN VOLUNTEER WORKER DESCRIBES KIDNAPPING

[Excerpt] Pierre Diron, the Belgian volunteer worker, thinks that his kidnapping by the contras was due to three reasons: first, to intimidate the internationalists who work on the project at El Chile and adjacent areas; second, to gather information about the operations in the zone; and third, to change the people's opinion about the mercenaries for a possible recruitment of forces in the future. Diron said this during a news conference held today with international journalists.

He also said members of the counterrevolutionary group that kidnapped him came to the town disguised as members of the Sandinist People's Army. Consequently, the people were not afraid of them -- they even welcomed them and offered some food.

The Belgian volunteer worker said he did not learn they were FDN members until he was taken far from the village, where another group of contras was hidden in ambush; he saw their documents and the uniforms they wore, which had the FDN-U.S.A. insignia.

The Belgian volunteer's story indicates that the group of mercenaries sought to gather information from the population concerning the EPS' situation in order to carry out armed attacks on the town in the future.

CASTRO DELIVERS 26 JULY ANNIVERSARY ADDRESS

FL262340 Havana Domestic Service in Spanish 2228 GMT 26 Jul 86

[Speech by President Fidel Castro at a ceremony commemorating the 33d anniversary of the assault on the Moncada Barracks at Sancti Spiritus -- live]

[Text] OK, now its our turn. Distinguished visitors, people of Sancti Spiritus, compatriots, everyone: Following the tradition of the last few years, the ceremony commemorating the Moncada anniversary is assigned to a province based on its work and merits. In this case, and on this occasion, this assignment fell to Sancti Spiritus province.

It is also traditional on an important day like this to dedicate an important amount of time to analyze the revolutionary, economic, and social development of the awarded province.

For the immense majority of those present here, many dates and acts are recognized. This is not exactly the case for foreign visitors.

Sancti Spiritus is one of the newer provinces created by the new political administrative division of the country established in 1976. The area of this province totals 6,744 square km with an approximate population -- because boys and girls are being born every day -- of 414,000 residents. It comprises approximately 6 percent of the national territory and approximately 4 percent of the country's population.

If we take into account that more than half the population of this province was born after the triumph of the revolution -- and there are many young people here, among whom are enthusiastic students who are not always enthusiastic in their studies but always enthusiastic in revolutionary commemoration and always enthusiastic in general -- it is good to recall, and even though it seems unnecessary, it is good to remember what the situation was in this territory before the revolution.

Those who already had the ability to reason, as it is called, before the 1st of January 1959...[changes thought] I can assure you that the city of Sancti Spiritus does not at all resemble the city we visited on 6 January the year we told the people of Sancti Spiritus that the time of the true revolution had arrived.

The territory occupied by this province was one of the country's poorest and most underdeveloped. Its economy was fundamentally based on agriculture, a very backward agriculture where a good number of landowners occupied the vast majority of agricultural land.

During the revolutionary years, the country has invested almost 2 billion pesos to develop Sancti Spiritus province economically and socially. Agriculture used to be almost totally manual. It has become mechanized over the past few years. It has been mechanized considerably. From barely a few dozen rubber-tire and track-operated tractors, this province now has no less than 4,000 rubber-tire tractors and approximately 400 track-operated tractors. There is no comparison between the techniques used in the sugar and rice harvest -- preparing and fertilizing the land, spraying herbicides, pesticides, and carrying out other tasks were all done manually -- with what is current being used.

Since this province has a potential for rich lands, one of the tasks completed by the revolution was the construction of a number of dams, which total five. Among them is the country's largest dam, the Zaza, with a capacity of over 1 billion cubic meters of water. With seventy small dams, or microdams as we call them, the area under irrigation has been increased considerably, reaching approximately 40,000 hectares of land. One of the country's largest and most productive rice fields was developed in the southern part of the province. Two hundred eighty different kinds of dairies, hundreds of additional cattle pens, and tens of poultry and swine production centers were built in these years. Cane fields were rotated and expanded, and new varieties were introduced.

Efforts were made not just in the area of agriculture. The industrial sector showed considerable progress and became the province's main source of production. The 300,000-arrobas Uruguay sugarmill was expanded to a 1-million arrobas capacity. It will be expanded further until it reaches 1.4 million. It will be one of the largest in the country. The Feneta sugarmill was expanded and modernized. Most of the province's sugarmills had their machinery replaced and modernized. Sugarmill railroads were modernized. Twenty-five collection and processing centers were built. Hundreds of cane harvesters were introduced and allowed to mechanize up to approximately 65 percent of the harvest. The number of canecutters in this province was reduced from approximately 20,000 to 3,800 as a result of the mechanization of cane cutting and collection -- where harvesters had no access -- and the mechanization of collection centers, which increased work productivity thus humanizing one of the province's most difficult jobs. The construction industry made progress. A new cement factory was built during the first years of the revolution. It has an annual production capability of 670,000 tons, which is equivalent to two-thirds of the total cement production capability of the country at that time. Important rock crusher plants [molinos de aridos] were installed -- two of them -- four sand washers, two "grand panel number four" prefabricated housing components plants, two general prefabricated component plants, block factories, and other installations.

In the foodstuff industry, two new and modern rice mills, eight drying rooms, the Rio Zaza foodstuff plant, the Sancti Spiritus slaughter house, the modern Trinidad factory which produces export candy, soft drink plants, and other facilities were built. Protein was produced using molasses. One of the most important industries was the recently built -- at a cost of over 240 million pesos -- the Panchito Gomez Toro paper mill, in Jatibonico, which is now the most modern as well as the country's largest producer of paper pulp and paper. It will allow us to satisfy national needs and to export the surplus.

The 110,000-kw electric power lines have tripled. The 33,000-kw power lines have grown by five. This is not all. The construction of what may be the largest industrial installation of this province in the energy field has begun. It is unique in Cuba. It is the hydroaccumulator in Fomento, in the Escambray Mountains, the cost of which is calculated at 400 million pesos. It will complement the Cienfuegos nuclear power plant. I remember that, on the occasion of the 26 July celebration in that province, I tried to explain what a hydro-accumulator is. I know that many know what it is. I know that others hear the words but do not know their meaning. The hydro-accumulator is really interesting. It is a hydraulic installation. At certain hours of the day it consumes electricity, and at other hours it uses electricity. [sentence as heard] But if we bear in mind that the Cienfuegos nuclear power plant will have four reactors, each producing more than 400,000 kw, and that it is a product of Soviet technology that is being built with painstaking quality and with great security guarantees, we can affirm that the power plant will be safer than any of the nuclear power plants that have been built in the United States. [applause] It will have a greater number of skilled engineers and workers than any nuclear power plant in the United States, and a safe technology that has been tested internationally.

I had occasion to express this in a letter to a U.S. legislator from Florida who, with great respect and without the arrogance which some of these gentlemen have accustomed us to, wrote to ~~me as~~ a neighbor, asking about the security of the plant. In the same spirit of respect with which he wrote, I answered him, giving ample explanations about security matters and guarantees concerning our perhaps one day soon it will be advisable to publicize that letter; I do not know what he has done with it. I hope he has received it; I sent it several weeks ago. But in that letter I told him that, as neighbors, we were willing to give him that information. However, as neighbors, we also expected him to give us information about security matters and guarantees of the nuclear power plants of the United States. [applause]

I mention this because it is germane -- we were talking about the hydroaccumulator -- and because after the accident at Chernobyl in the USSR, some tried to create an uproar over this matter and began to create an uproar over the construction of the Cuban nuclear power plant in Cienfuegos which, I repeat, is being built with all the guarantees and with an absolutely safe technology. But, above all, it is going to have personnel with an extraordinarily high scientific and technical level because we have been training them for years. These reactors function all year. It is not like a thermoelectric plant that is fired up at a specific hour and shut down at a specific hour according to the demand for electric power. These four reactors will function constantly, all four, except when a reactor is shut down for maintenance each year. That is, there will be a period when three will be functioning and the other will be undergoing maintenance.

But in general all four will be working all year. As you know, the consumption of electricity is not the same during the day. It also is not the same during the whole year.

When this work is completed, we will use more electricity. The so-called peak hours when all lights, television sets, irons, fans, and domestic appliances are all turned on at the same time is when the electrical demand will be enormous. The demand decreases at dawn when it is much less. The demand is less during the day then during the peak hours which fluctuate between 1900-2200, depending on the time of year. The country needs to have installations for those peak hours, not for an average but rather for the moment of maximum demand.

Those four reactors will have a very high rate of electrical production even through they are transmitted to the western, central, and eastern parts of the country. When three or four reactors are operational, there will be a surplus of electricity at certain moments. This electricity needs to be used at that time. Naturally, if the country develops production installations, for example for special tractors, electricity can be used for that kind of production during those hours.

Clearly, however, the availability of electricity does not always correspond to the demand. What should be done then with that extra electricity?

The hydroaccumulator is a dam that has pumps to force the water up as well as electrical generators to produce electricity similar to the generated, for example, by the Hanabanilla hydroelectric center. When there is surplus of electricity, the hydroaccumulator pumps the water up and when there is a lack of electricity during peak hours, the hydroaccumulator lets the water fall and produces electricity.

If the four reactors had a capacity of 1.45 million kilowatts during peak hours, their production would be added to the electricity from the hydroaccumulator, which had accumulated water and at that moment was also producing electricity. At a certain time of the day, they could be using almost 2 million kilowatts between the four reactors and the hydroaccumulator.

I am not an engineer, so you will have to excuse me if my explanation is not perfect or even less, but I hope that the people of Sancti Spiritus clearly understand that the hydroaccumulator will serve the peak hours and will produce hundreds of thousands of kilowatts per hour during that time. It will also save the country hundreds of thousands of tons of oil a year. It will reduce the country's thermoelectric needs. When everything is operational, the less-efficient thermoelectric centers will be stopped. They will only be used at peak hours when they are needed. The electronuclear center will be the fundamental source. The more-efficient thermoelectric centers will be operational and will also conserve much combustible fuel.

This is better understood if I tell you, for example, that there are still some plants in the capital of the country that consume 400 grams of petroleum, which is almost one-half a kg of petroleum per kilowatt. We have more modern thermoelectric centers that use 230 or 220 grams per kilowatt which is less than one-fourth a kg of petroleum needed to produce 1 kilowatt of electricity. It seems to me that it is not necessary to explain to the people of Sancti Spiritus the importance of electricity to the development of the country. We know that nothing moves, not one hospital or its staff, not one school, cold-storage plant, or factory. Nothing moves in a home without electricity and there is no possible development without electricity. That is why the world needs to find new sources of energy since the supply of petroleum is limited. It will become exhausted. The tendency of oil prices, no matter what the fluctuations and falls are as is the case with the current price, is to rise. Oil is lost this way. One can say that a very important natural resource is burned, utilizing only a small percentage of energy. The energy contained in a ton of petroleum is reduced by one-third after it is processed at a thermoelectric center. What reaches the consumer is less than 30 percent of the energy contained in the petroleum.

It is possible that humankind will someday regret the manner in which it has wasted this excellent natural resource that has many other uses, more logical and rational than to be wasted producing electricity. When the countries have coal, they have another important resource. Europe, the United States, and the USSR are rich in coal. There is a large number of countries that have coal. Unfortunately, our country is not rich in coal.

There are countries that have large rivers and can dam them to produce electricity. As you all know, our rivers are small and very short, and the most rational use that can be given to water is precisely in agriculture, in the production of cane, in the production of rice, etc. There were very few big forests left in our country, they had been demolished.

That is why for our country the use of this new energy source, nuclear energy, is essential, because we do not have any other alternative. During the first years of the revolution there was no way we could think about that, because we only had a capacity of some 350,000 kw and just one of these reactors has a greater capacity. Small reactors were not being built and are not being built. The smallest being built today is more or less at this level, around 400,000 kw. If the country had installed one of those reactors, and in addition we would have had the economic resources to install it and the technical capabilities to operate it, the day the reactor was shut down for maintenance the country would have been without electricity. Now it is possible to have one, two, three, or four reactors because our capacity has multiplied by about 15 times, that is, the capacity for producing electric energy.

That is why we are still building some thermoelectric plants, however, in the future we will only build nuclear power plants. This plant alone will save the country some 2.6 million tons of fuel yearly. If we include the hydroaccumulator, I estimate we will save more than 3 million tons of fuel a year. What does 3 million tons mean? How much do they cost today?

How much will they cost in the future? It could be said that for every 3 million tons of fuel, 10,000-ton tankers would have to make 300 trips, or 100 trips by 30,000-ton tankers. On the contrary, only one freighter need only make one trip to bring a container with the nuclear fuel needed by our Cienfuegos nuclear power plant.

Please excuse me for having taken so much time explaining the energy issue, but I wanted you to be aware of the importance of the hydroaccumulator that will be built in Fomento and which, I repeat, will be the most important industrial installation of the province. [applause] Of course, there will be all the electricity Sancti Spiritus needs. We hope you will try to save it and not use it all. [applause] I stopped at the point when I was referring to the province's industrial development.

You also know that Trinidad's "Pulpa Cuba" plant, inaugurated in 1959, has been modernized and expanded during these years of revolution. A lot of work has been done in other smaller industries in the province. Likewise, in recent years the fishing industry production has markedly increased. Today Sancti Spiritus' fishing industry complex in Trinidad has 106 vessels where the fishermen work.

You also know that this province has a great tourist potential, that tens of thousands of foreign tourists visit this province every year because they come here looking for beauty, historic places, and the architectural style of the old buildings. This city was one of the first founded in Cuba. It is as old as Baracoa and Santiago de Cuba. Fortunately, the revolution had the opportunity to rebuild those historic values, the so-called historic shells, as Havana has done, Sancti Spiritus and Trinidad have also been doing. Our people with a greater culture now have the possibility of recognizing the importance of these values. Thus, tourism is one of the province's potential resources which has been developed and should continue to be developed increasingly more. Six hotels and motels have been built for international tourism, and the Ancon Hotel on that magnificent Ancon Beach, near Trinidad, which will have more than 200 rooms, is under construction and will be completed by year's end.

Also during these years we have worked on reforestation, with 50 million trees being planted. All these efforts -- in the economic development which is basically the one I have been referring to -- have caused this province's production to increase five times during the years of the revolution. With this information, I myself was thinking about which areas had grown the most.

In the area of agriculture [changes thought] the sugar industry in general, agriculture and sugar industry. [sentence as heard] This province's current sugar production is twice that reached during the years of capitalism, not only because sugarmills and fields have been expanded but because the harvest season is longer. Before, the harvest season was 90, 100, or 110 days. Now it is 130, 140, 150 days, even longer. We are doing much better in using the facilities, which have also been expanded.

I already mentioned what we did at the Uruguay sugarmill which was expanded to the equivalent of three sugarmills. That is, sugar production doubled. [sentence as heard]

Other kinds of production grew even more. For example, poultry production increased sixteen times. Egg production actually increased over 100 times. During that time, egg farms, not including the peasants' egg production, produced less than 1 million, around 500,000 or 600,000 eggs a year. Currently, 84 million eggs are being produced. So you figure out how much it grew. One can say 50, 60, 100 times as much and one is not exaggerating. [music heard]

What is this music about? [applause] Oh, the clock? Thank you for reminding me that I have been speaking about 30 or 40 minutes. I have to take this into account. I hope that does not happen every 15 minutes. Am I right?

[Castro] It happens every hour. Well, I will be glad to be reminded if I have not ended by then. [laughter] Well, swine production grew 18 times. Very importantly, rice production increased 18 times. That production has currently reached around 125,000 tons of wild rice a year. There is a rice field that produces over 1,200 quintals per caballeria. It has considerably increased the productivity per hectare. Comrade Bernal was telling me that this year it may surpass the 1,250 quintals per caballeria.

Construction material and cement production cannot be compared because cement was not produced here. It has increased many times. Not only construction material production but also construction projects have increased.

Now that the paper mill has opened, figure out what it is going to contribute when it is in full production. Later, we will have to add what the hydroaccumulators produce, etc. etc. I hope we can continue to grow the same way we have so far and, if possible, more.

I have talked about economic development. But there has also been an extraordinary social development during these years. If you are a little patient I can tell the people from Sancti Spiritus and our guests [applause] what the social development has consisted of.

If you want to, we can begin with education. This is very important for the young ones, for those students who are not always enthusiastic with their studies. Although the ones who have come here I believe have won awards because of their merits, the Augusto Cesar Sandino School [applause] received an award. I was telling them that I considered that a homage to the 7th anniversary of the triumph of the Sandinist revolution which was just commemorated on 19 July. [applause] Previously we did not have these healthy youths going to school the way we do now. On the contrary, there were thousands and thousands of 9-12 year old illiterate children. They were working under poverty conditions when there was work in the sugar fields and the countryside. According to historical data, the province had a 65-percent illitaracy rate. Over 70 percent of the children between 9 and 12 years of age were illiterate.

I do not believe anyone doubts that the situation has changed radically. Today the province has, I believe, 670 primary schools of different sizes, some large, some small. In the mountains they are smaller and sometimes isolated because it cannot be helped. The province has 44 basic secondary schools. I do not know how many it had under capitalism, but I imagine there were very few. The children did not reach third or fourth grade. It has 44 basic secondary schools.

The province has 12 preuniversity schools and 3 vocational schools, including the Camilo Cienfuegos School, a preuniversity school also, making a total of 15 preuniversity schools. The province has 19 technical and professional schools thanks to the effort made during these years and to the literacy campaign, there is no illiteracy in this province. Not having completed the sixth grade is to be almost illiterate. But fortunately we can say that the majority of the workers in the province have completed at least the sixth grade, and many have reached grades higher than the sixth. I will give more information on this later.

As a result of this effort, 97.3 percent of the children between 9 and 12 years attend school; 97.3 percent! Furthermore, 87.1 percent of the adolescents between 13 and 16 years attend classes in those secondary, preuniversity, and technological schools. Could we have dreamed of this prior to the revolution? Would it have been possible for all these young people who were born after the revolution to have this opportunity to study without the revolution? We would like them to think about this. Because the generation that preceded them -- their parents, uncles, grandparents -- did not have this possibility. They couldn't even dream of it.

You know well that only a few families could send their children to an expensive private school that was beyond the possibilities of the workers. Now there are laws that protect adolescents, sometimes even to an excessive degree. They establish the minimum age of 16 to go to work as a professional. Youths are protected, adolescents are protected. Many children used to have to drop out of school to earn a living some way, and sometimes they even had to beg.

In the province, there were no centers of higher education. They began to exist with the branch of the Jose Marti University, the first one where hundreds of residents of Sancti Spiritus have graduated. Then came the branch of the Higher Institute of Physical Education. Then came the Higher Institute of Economy. Then the branch of the Higher Pedagogical Institute, and then the Higher Pedagogical Institute itself, and now, the School of Medicine. [applause] In Sancti Spiritus, anyone who had spoken of this in 1956 or 1957 would have been called crazy. We now have a school of medical sciences where the doctors of the province are trained, and specialists are also trained, which is of great interest.

There wasn't a single special school in this province for children with problems. Today we have 24 schools with almost 3,000 students, and they are so necessary, so vital. The families whose children need these schools know how to appreciate what they are.

There was another great revolution in the field of public health. It is my understanding that in Sancti Spiritus there was an old building that had been converted into a general hospital, 7 first-aid stations, and 14 private clinics, that is all there was, with 182 doctors, which I suppose included those from the tuberculosis hospital which, when the battle against tuberculosis was won, was not needed, and 40 dentists, most of them in private practice. Who knows what the infant mortality rate was? It is estimated -- a very noble, very conservative estimate -- at somewhat more than 60 per 1,000 live births. It was certainly higher than that but statistics were not kept. The people died and the deaths of the children were not even recorded. In Sancti Spiritus, infant mortality may have been between 60 and 100 per 1,000 live births. Life expectancy was barely 50 years. That is how things were before the triumph of the revolution in this province.

What can we count on in this province, in this territory? There are 5 general hospitals, 2 clinical-surgical hospitals, 1 pediatric hospital with a modern intensive care unit which has modern equipment and is perfectly maintained, 2 obstetric-gynecological hospitals, 1 maternal-infant hospital, 12 rural hospitals, 19 polyclinics, and if I add the new Jatibonico polyclinic it would make 20, and 7 dental clinics in addition to the services rendered in more than 30 centers -- dental services are not just rendered in those 7 clinics but also in more than 30 centers. Now they have the hygiene and epidemiology center and the family doctor program to complete this scene. There is a new pediatric project. The cement has been laid. When an opportunity arises, every effort will be given to this.

There are certain deficits in Sancti Spiritus, Marianao. Ciego de Avila, and Vayamo. Those four projects have not received a great effort because of economic difficulties. However, the time will come when we will promote the construction of those new pediatric centers. Meanwhile, services are being rendered.

The family doctor has now appeared. If you have within...[changes thought]. Supplying the entire province with doctors will be delayed approximately 10 years. Since your university is new, few doctors are graduating. I think they have 12 in Fomento. [unidentified voice confirms that there are 13] There are 12 in Fomento, and there will be 20 more in Fomento. After Fomento has 20 doctors, Sancti Spiritus will receive its first 12 doctors. Escambray will have its moment. The mountains in Granma have their family doctors. [unidentified speaker's words indistinct] There are 17 doctors in Fomento, that is correct. At the end of this year, in October, all the mountain and rural areas of Guantanamo will have their family doctors. This is truly revolutionary.

You at the university will create what you need. If you like, I can calculate it for you. If there is one family doctor per every 600 ... If within 10 years -- I do not expect that you will grow that rapidly, there is no rush -- if you had 400,000 residents, you would need 800 family doctors plus a reserve. You have the faculty and you will continue to expand it and possibly receive aid from other provinces so that the movement can keep the same pace.

We cannot expect that you alone will train all those doctors, and we will have to give you some help, as it has been given to Granma, as it was given to Santiago, as it has been given to Guantanamo, as it was given to Havana, as it will be given to Santiago de Cuba, and will be given to Havana next year, because by next year we plan to have family doctors in all the mountains of Santiago de Cuba, and in practically all rural areas.

These are very important achievements. A total of 12 new specialties that did not exist before have been brought to the province. Maternity care centers [hogares maternos] have been established as well as other institutions that have made possible a fabulous thing: the reduction of infant mortality in the province. This rate had been dropping as it does throughout the country, but it was over 15 percent. However, during the first 6 months of this year -- that is, so far this year, I am not certain if it is up to 30 June...[unidentified speaker corrects Castro: "It now stands at 10.3 percent"] Good, I am glad, today, 26 July; that is excellent. You had already heard what it was before I did not have today's figures. The rate was at 11.2 percent.

We can tell Mr Reagan about this so he might stop talking stupidities and foolishness, as he usually does. During some petty political meeting over there in Miami in support of one of those candidates, he said that someday our people might work in freedom. To talk such banalities at this stage -- that is idiotic, it makes me laugh. [applause]

But I can tell Mr Reagan: Just imagine how freely these people have worked, and without having done everything they should have. The truth is that it has not been so much a question of working in freedom, as it has been one of freedom of not working all that is necessary. I can tell Mr Reagan that right here in Sancti Spiritus, in this province that is one of the poorest ones of the country, there was...[changes thought] This was one of the poorest and most backward provinces, where 65 percent of the population was illiterate. Today, there are fewer illiterates here than in Washington, and fewer illiterates than in New York. [applause] It is then inferred that it was necessary to work, as we have worked in these yars. I repeat, we have not worked as much as we should have.

I can also tell Mr Reagan that in Sancti Spiritus, there is a lower infant mortality rate than in New York and Washington, than in the United States. [applause] To commemorate with all dignity this 26 July, this province has a rate of 11.2 percent, and today, 26 July ... [corrects himself] yesterday, 25 July, there was a rate of 10.3 percent. [applause]

The United States has a higher rate. That is why I am saying we are going to beat them. We are going to leave them far behind, in health rates, in the outlooks of ... [changes thought] I can also tell Mr Reagan that thanks to the revolution, life expectancy in Sancti Spiritus Province now stands at 75.3 years, [applause] and we are going to continue improving this. Just wait until we have more experience, when those hospitals are operating fully, when we have a family doctor everywhere, in the rural areas and the cities. Just wait until these rates start dropping.

There are certain factors that might exert an influence. However, just the fact we have reached those levels is truly astonishing. I also know you have worked hard these days in prenatal genetic laboratories, and that will help discover in time any congenital malformations that might result in interrupting a pregnancy. This will prevent the tragedies that some families have to suffer. All this will help reduce infant mortality.

In addition, the provinces's cardiology center has been inaugurated in Santa Cira, not far from here; and the William Soler Cardiology Center will be inaugurated next August in Havana, to provide service at the national level concerning cardiovascular surgery for children and thus save many lives. We will establish other health programs and, based on your example, we do not doubt that one day we will lower that 10.3 percent. Well, this will turn our country into another power. Could anyone have dreamed about this in 1958 or 1957? Did capitalism do anything in this country? Fat chance! What has it done elsewhere? What have they done for the countries where they have their capitalism, the capitalism which Mr Reagan adores so much? That is the capitalism of the big landowners, the machete plan [plan de machete], hunger, unemployment, disease, and illiteracy.

Well, we have achieved extraordinary social progress. We have developed our people's general culture; the 8 municipalities in this province have 10 modules, their own cultural modules from 10 institutions -- all 8 of them. [laugh] I think that you are more advanced than the rest of the country in many things. Let me tell you: Havana does not have this index of infant mortality; it is under 15 percent this year... [corrects himself] right now, but yours is much lower. Granma was even lower, with 11.1 percent; I believe that the struggle will now be between you and Granma, because you have the lowest percentages in the country. Two of the poorest and most backward provinces [laughs] with an index far below that in the United States.

Well, we said that you had cultural modules in all the municipalities. The library... [changes thought] there was one library in Sancti Spiritus Province... [corrects himself] throughout the territory of this province. You now have 14 with approximately 200,000 volumes; 616 groups of amateurs with 80 physical education instructors. You may wonder how I can remember these figures but, let me tell you, these figures are impressive. If a person is used to handling these figures, and then sees a figure like this and remembers what is happening everywhere... [changes thought] there are many countries... [changes thought] 200 children die during their first year in many Latin American countries for every 1,000 who are born there. In other countries it is 150 children, or 100 children; nothing like the levels that have been achieved in Cuba. No, no way. That is why one remembers these figures; that is logical. We constantly read the news from other countries concerning unemployment, illiteracy, etc.

Sports have been developed. Can anyone deny this? Does anyone doubt this? There were 66 sports installations, and we now have 504 installations. Sports are really an activity for the masses. You are quite developed in this, you have developed baseball a lot. You should develop other sports, too, not only one; for example, soccer. The installations can be used for this Pedrito Miret, who is a soccer fan, would be enchanted with this.

The few people who defend soccer should be more. You have built the Cabaiguan Stadium with lights and all; and the one in Yaguajay, and in Jatibonico. I also know that you are impatiently waiting to see the one in Sancti Spiritus completed. [applause] As a result of this economic and social development, the province's employment levels have increased. Let us see, if there were 40,000 jobs in 1958, according to the latest figures, there are now 163,800 jobs in the province. Perhaps Joaquin will say that this has increased in recent days; he may say that it rose to 164,000 on 25 July. New things happen every day; new things are being built, new acitvities are being carried out. The employment index has increased four times; consequently, the population increased 40 percent, and employment increased 300 percent in Sancti Apiritus. The population increased 40 percent and employment increased 300 percent [repeats himself].

Women joined the work force; this offers new opportunities. Consequently, more than 50,000 women have joined the work force nowadays, and 32 percent of the work force is comprised of women. Furthermore, 53.4 percent of the technicians in the province are women, who work as nurses, doctors, teachers, engineer, [applause] 53.4 percent. They are a majority in the technical sector; that is quite an achievement. We might ask if this is the situation in the United States, and who knows what they would answer; we might also ask if this is the situation in the other Latin American countries. We could ask Mr Reagan what he knows about this, what news he has about this -- given that he is so worried about us.

More than 22,000 workers of the 163,800 who are working in this province are technicians, and 8,400 of these have a higher education; in other words, they have graduated from universities and higher institutes. These are evident results of the efforts exerted here.

There is something that I forget to mention, [laughs] and now I am seeing some buses over there and they reminded me of transportation. I do not want anyone to get angry because they may think that I have underestimated that sector or forgotten it. I recall that this province had 60 buses. Approximately 10,000 [number as heard] trips a day were made. Today we have 8 times that number of buses and 14 times the number of trips per day. The people of Sancti Spiritus travel at least 14 times more than the people who live in the capital city. Then we have the school buses; there are at least 170 school buses in this province. However, this is not the only area in which the people of the province have worked. No.

The cooperative movement is developing; the results are good. There are 71 cooperatives. Approximately 55 percent of the land that does not belong to the state belongs to cooperatives. Production has increased considerably. Of the 71 cooperatives 57 have power. Several thousand houses have been built, and we hope that this cooperative movement will be promoted as it deserves and needs to be.

Lastly, a very big effort has been put forth in the area of defense. We had the honor of presenting the ready for the defense flag here. A few days ago Companero Raul inaugurated an important training center for the Territorial Troops Militia [MTT] and I know that one out of every three inhabitants -- everyone included -- is active in the militia. I am including the children, they cannot be militiamen, but they are counted among the 414,000 inhabitants of the region, and one out of every three inhabitants are active MTT members, or members of the production and defense brigades, one out of every threee inhabitants. The entire province is ready for defense, every municipality is ready for defense, every zone is ready for defense.

Companero Bernal was talking about this a while ago: He said that there are now shelters for practically the entire population of Sancti Spiritus -- in the schools, factories, everywhere.

In other words, this has been taken seriously. Take note of this, too, Mr Reagan, take note. No one can threaten us! [applause] No one can threaten us!

We have spent lots of energy and resources on this; do not forget how much has been spent in this project of the revolution -- sweat, energy, resources of all kinds. We have had to spend enormous resources in the defense throughout the country. Had it not been for the imperialist threats and aggressions, all this could have been invested in constructions, houses, schools, factories, etc.

Mr Reagan, we have taken not of this, of the sacrifices that the imperialism has forced upon our people with its intentions of maintaining its hegemony over the Latin American and Third World countries.

To all of this we must add, and it would not be right to forget it, the enormous efforts made by the Sancti Spiritus Province on the occasion of this anniversary, the 33d anniversary enormous efforts. I have mentioned some of the things, but have not been able to speak of all of them, nor would I have the time to speak of all that the people of Sancti Spiritus have done in these past few months. Dozens of very important projects and hundreds of other kinds of projects. These include the effort made to finish the construction of the school of medicine -- and it is all but practically finished. I went by there, and I saw the students and all that. It is a beautiful school of medicine.

They also made a huge effort to finish building the airport; the expansion of the airport. We hope that they will continue to work on this airport and that soon it will also have lights, so that the people of Sancti Spiritus can travel by plane during the day or night.

We have also seen the efforts made to finish the EIDE [School for Sports Beginners], to finish the 12-story building, the 10 apartment buildings, the cleaning of the El Yayabo Rive, the first phase of the aqueduct system -- and I understand you have accomplished this. I have heard that the 180 liters per second you were supplying has been increased to 600 liters per second. You are better off than Havana. In Havana we do not even get rain. No rain, and that is putting it nicely. We have had drought after drought and this spring has been a dry one.

They do not have the privilege there of having these rivers you have nearby here, but it is great news that they have the rain. The little companera read what you had done and perhaps this is one of the most important works there is. The airport is important, and so is the 12-story building, and the EIDE. Regarding the EIDE, I think you have the highest per capita sports registration of any province in the country with this school with an enrollment of 1,000 students. Who would have dreamed of this? But this is really great news. The province has made an intelligent effort. Well they were given a certain amount of money, and they used it for classroom purposes to implement this double session [doble sesion].

Sometimes, in some years, they only had a 14 percent students enrollment in the double session system. [applause] You had already reached approximately 55 percent in the double session system. You will take a giant step, from 55 percent to 99.2 percent, in this system in the next school term. [applause]

I believe that no other province in the country has that percentage. We would have to compare it to Havana or Matanzas, but I do not think either of them has really taken such a giant step, with such tremendous inplications for education. A special effort was also needed in the field of education, that is, in the sense of quality. It was a big jump in quality. We have undoubtedly progressed. We cannot deny that. However, we cannot be satisfied with what has been achieved. We still have some gaps in education.

You have seen what has happened, when the secondary school tests and the pre-university tests became more demanding, because of laziness and tolerance have existed ever since awards were granted based on the number of students who passed. The quality of a professor was measured only by the number of students who passed, not by the quality of his classes and the demands he made. That is how the quality of a professor should be measured. As a result of this, there were students who earned easy grades. There were very kind professors who sometimes passed the test material on to the students. The student who was not a fool could figure out what was most important and then devote his attention to that.

There was always some sort of guidance in the classroom, but that does not really help students to study hard. Now, more demands are made. Now the professors giving the tests are different professors. The tests are more difficult, and, as a result, the passing rates in certain provinces are low. In Havana the rate was about 69 percent, in Santiago, approximately 70 percent, for both secondary school and pre-university. A situation had developed which we analyzed carefully.

I am afraid that it is not only the fault of the students, but, to a great extent, of the professors also. Taking this situation into consideration, it was decided for once -- and only for once to increase the demands at schools. Therefore, we have an entire year ahead so that everyone will know that the demands in schools are increasing, and will continue to increase. This is a problem that was brought up at the third congress, that is, the need to make the schools more demanding. There was a gradual increase in this. Before, a student could be promoted with two failures. Later, he could be promoted with only one failure, but now the student is not allowed to fail. This demand level is necessary for development, necessary for the future of the country; it is necessary that we require more all the time in education. That is why the decision was taken now.

One month will be given for studying before the make-up test. The ministry has already issued the instructions: Prepare the students to prevent their...[rephrases] to avoid their getting the blame in this case. Give them another opportunity so they can study hard during their vacation time; study hard because the tests are going to be hard. The students who did not pass last year, should then be able to pass, and a certain amount of time should be given to students, relatives, teachers, everyone, so that from the very first day of classes, of the academic year, they should begin a demanding schedule.

The fact that we already have a double session system, weakens us, aside from the fact that it creates problems at home, as there are some children whose parents are working and the children are wandering the streets. [sentence as heard] No longer will there be primary school children wandering in the streets at a time when they are not in class. They will have more time to get involved in organized activities, to read, study, participate in athletics, etc. That is why you are at the vanguard. You have already been outstanding in recent years in primary school education, and now with the two sessions, you will be able to defend the position you have reached. It is going to help you very much in the secondary schools, the pre-university, technical, and professional schools, in the university. It is an important achievement, and very good news. You gave me the album, and I must say I really appreciate this gift very much.

As we say in the National Assembly and elsewhere, we have been trying to find resources for the eastern provinces, which were the most backward in this sense. You have shown here that it can be done, and without great resources. If with only 2 million [currency not specified] you have completed projects which are worth almost 4 million; [applause] you only had a budget of 2 million, how did you manage to perform this miracle? You have completed projects worth 4 million with the support from the masses, the workers, the people, with the work and cooperation from the people.

Here you have an example, an example [repeats himself] that volunteer work is golden, [applause] that the cooperation from the people is golden, [applause] because you have managed, you have managed to build 20 schools, 20 schools in a few months. I see that those 20 schools have 162 classrooms. In addition to that, you have build 250 classrooms for double sessions. In all, you have built 413 [as heard] classrooms in a few months -- we could say in a few weeks -- with the cooperation of the people [applause]

This demonstrates that this is the way to truly build socialism. Are we going to speak now about the nonsense or foolishness that only with money or by waving money at the people [can we] move them to achieve these feats? Lies! People are corrupted and alienated in that way, as capitalists do with workers. In addition, 71 classrooms for educational workshops, for work training [education laboral] 56 libraries, and 52 sports areas were built, we could say, in a few weeks. This truly deserves recognition and admiration. I am not going to say that everything has been perfect in this province, far from it, or that work these years has been perfect. I am fully aware that this has not been the case. Some of the widespread foolishness also happended here. We have to speak the truth. This is not the province's fault. We cannot fault the province for that. If there are some highways -- and I am familiar with them because I have visited all of them at one time or another, I have visited all of those projects; I visited the Zaza Highway several times when it was under construction. [sentence as heard] In Lebrije -- in fact, I was reminding (Quino) of the night when the workers saved that dam which was under construction by using sand bags. Building and building quickly, [applause] building quickly [repeats himself] and closing the duct [vaso], because that dam, worth over 100 million [currency not specified], was bursting, and had it burst it would have collapsed, but the workers saved it! There, early in the morning, in a torrential rain, and in the mud, at the edge of the sustaining wall they raised the dam with sandbags. Now I know when these dams were built. Other times came later, other concepts, other views, which were mistaken. We had to spread the budget a little for each project. And so, the Iuinicu dam is already giving us water for 15 million [units not specified]. It has already been in operation for 10 years. I know that some projects have been stalled. The Pitajones-Meyer road, which was begun on several occasions -- the bridge had already been built as well as everything around that area -- has been stalled for 10 years. No one knows why. Then came the administrative political division and the theories. No one knows what happened to that bridge. Before leaving Sancti Spiritus, I hope to find out a little about what became of it.

I visited that highway several times, the one we had planned, linking Yaguajay, Chiquima to here in Sancti Spiritus, the famous road from Fomento to (La Sierpe). Now we know what the difficulties are. In (La Sierpe), we have to build a bridge. As a matter of honor, we will have to begin the work as soon as we can. In Pitajones, let us seek some resources to see if we can link Yaguajay with Sancti Spiritus. Let us see what can be done with what we have. Still, some real stupidities existed, to the effect that these roads were not needed. The bridges, a few here and a few there were like gypsies running from one project to the other. A few pesos here, and there, and there. All that nonsense. Still, I have the deepest faith that we will be able to overcome this with our ideas about a constant building process.

I was telling Comrade (Quino), and I advise all Sancti Spiritus residents now, that immediately after these celebrations are over, they should go quickly back to work again. [applause]

We have to finish these projects. We have to finish that building [not further identified], the others, and what remains to be done, the small details of the medical school.

We have to continue working in everything, everywhere, in aqueducts and the rest. Do not begin any new project; instead, continue with the exicting ones and conclude them in the next months. One should say that this and that project has been concluded. That is what counts, do not just go by the number of unfinished projects, because some unfinished projects such as the nuclear power plant, Moa, and the hydroaccumulator take years and will increase the number of projects under construction, rather, not the number, but instead, the number of millions [not further identified] under construction. All projects that are completed are an important statistic, a building there, the EIDE. We should not return to them. Finish the medical school facility, and so on with all the other things. Finish the polyclinic center. If you build a children's center in Yaguajay, finish it. Do not spend 2 or 3 years on it. I hope that one day we will return to making highways that way. They are initiated and completed in 1, 1 and 1/2, or 2 years. If a dam is begun, it should be completed in 1 and 1/2, 2, or 3 years, or it should not be started. We should only initiate the projects that we plan to complete. To fail to do this is crazy, and furthermore, it is degrading.

We have an overpass here and peasants pass by and are confused by it. Those peasants can be easily deceived but would not be if they are smart, because they can see beyond that. However, that overpass, constructed years ago, is a momument to stupidity because it has never been used. Sometimes, when we are on the highway, I see that overpass without approaches and I wonder: Who was the madman who did this? An overpass without approaches.

I have struggled to make the people take advantage of all of the overpasses, to complete the approaches. Unfortunately, no one wants to waste time doing that because when the highway was new, an overpass was made even over the Zaza. We cannot call on the highway construction brigades to do this, because they are also a work force reserve to do the groundwork for important industrial projects. They must work on airports; at present they are working on an airport in Baradero, a tourist in Matanzas where they are working on a highway, with a view to the country's foreign exchange income, which is very important.

Very well, but during this time these brigades built the overpass, continued and built the overpass over the Zaza. Now we cannot tell them to continue onward. We must tell them to come back. They have made one path, now then they must make the second from Santa Clara to here, complete, painted, and pretty. After that they can move backward and complete the highway between Havana and Caraiguan so that one day that highway will be complete. They must do this before continuing onward, because it is not worthwhile to move forward without consolidating what is already there. We must see if one day we can at least have a two-lane road from the highway to Santi Espiritus, because once you leave the big highway you get on this road and the jumping starts because the road is narrow. It is dizzying to travel on these roads. One gets the impression of being on a small, narrow asphalted path; that is how it is. We travelled on that road. I wanted to see the road and suddenly we found ourselves in front of the old central highway, which is as old as Methuselah.

I believe that it has been proven here that it is possible to prepare projects to broaden roads as you all have done. You have a two-way road; all who transit that other road, all who unfortunately must travel that road, when they reach Santi Espiritus at least can still entertain hopes of reaching the capital city alive, when they see that the horizon broadens in this city. It takes a great deal of ability to transit that asphalted threshing machine and still reach your destination alive.

I wonder how many springs have been broken on that road, and how much gasoline, time, and everything else have been lost. Allow me to tell you that I arrived in Santi Espiritus in less than 3 and 1/2 hours, in about 3 hours and 25 minutes, without speeding. I was thinking that the highway must be completed, at least this road which is the most transited. I repeat that hope is found in the midst of misfortune when one reaches Santi Espiritus. The day will come when you will have a two-lane road. We should make six double-lanes to Santi Espiritus.

During the past few days the province has debated national problems at the assembly with the different businesses, and the press has published the discussions, the problems, the difficulties, the errors that have been made. I say that the province is not exempted [of these problems] but its faults are few. That is a part of it. When a business is not going well it needs resources, unfair salaries are paid, many things happen. Therefore, the province has its share of responsibility, of course, but these responsibilities are not the province's fault. This province won fairly the right to host the celebration of the 26 July national ceremonies. The province earned this honor [applause] and some of the things I have seen are true feats, such as this effort to involve as many children as possible in the double session system. Some 320 children who live in remote mountain areas will benefit from this, which seems extremely difficult as the mountain areas are also in the process of developing. I believe that one day 100 percent of the children will benefit from the double session. That is why the fellow patriots in this province deserve admiration, recognition, and congratulations. The mass organizations, the party, the directorate of the party, and on their behalf, campanero Joaquin Bernal. [applause]

The bell is about to ring again. [laughter] Should I have known, I would have spoken a little more about Cienfuegos before discussing other subjects. We must move onto another topic now because I have already taken advantage of your patience and I want to discuss a few other things. [shouts, laughter]

We have progressed. That is clear. We have progressed must but we could have progressed farther and better. We have done many things in these years of revolution, but we could have done more and better things if we had been more capable, if we had been more numerous and better workers. If we had been more numerous and better revolutionaries. [applause]

In recent days we were talking and imparting many lessons about politics, political philosophy, and political history. We have not been able to stress and instill that the first duty of a revolutionary is work. Some have confused the revolution with the abolishment of work, as if man could liberate himself from work.

I have a 40-second delay. It seems that the batteries of the clock have been running down [laughter], 3 seconds, 2 seconds, 4 [music heard]. Good. If people really paid attention to the clock and were punctual in arriving at their jobs, [laughter, applause] if people paid attention to the clock and worked the hours they are supposed to in the morning without losing so much time in so many breaks and so many other things that are more explainable among hard labor workers than among office workers, those lunches that last 10, 15, 20, 35 minutes, 1 hour, if the people were not in such a hurry to leave when the end of the work day is coming, in short, if they worked as they should, how much more could we progress.

The work has become humanized. We no longer have 350,000 workers cutting cane, but instead approximately 80,000, or less. The machines now do the work. The rice is no longer harvested by hand but by combines. The land is no longer plowed with oxen. The machines have come. Carts are no longer used for transportation because there are trucks.

Men no longer break stones to build a road as they did for this central road, this path about which I was talking. It was built by hand, with picks, carts, and all that and not with the bulldozers, loaders, and the steam rollers that we have. We have a number of tremendous and fabulous pieces of equipment. There are 4,000 rubber tire and track-operated tractors in this province. What could all these resources mean if they were well used and if time was well used. We see that wealth will only come from work. It will not fall from the sky. We have had resources. We have not used them in an optimum way. That is why we were saying that we have to reach some goals and establish some principles. One of those principles is that the work day is sacred. It is necessary that we stress this. Everyone thinks things up to do during the work day, carries out errands, meetings, all sorts of things. I think that not a single meeting should be held during the work day. They should be held at the end of the work day. The principle that the work day is sacred must be the standard practice. [applause]

We have discussed this at length. We are involved in that battle. I do not have to go more deeply into this. Recently, the essential content of the meeting of the party's central committee was shown publicly on television. It was a promising and fruitful meeting. We have to firmly resolve to overcome all these negative trends and to undertake a jump in the quality of the revolution. You will see how many more and better things we can do. This is not only a moral necessity but an economic necessity. This process is being carried out in the circumstances of a tremendous economic crisis of the Third World countries in which the conditions of unequal trade have worsened. I will give you an example. A few years ago, some soft ice cream dispensing machines were purchased. As you know, it is a small piece of equipment that produces a frozen cream. All of you know what it is and probably like it, except for those who do not want to gain too much weight and so abstain from eating it. Many factories have that equipment because when we bought it we distributed it. That equipment cost $2,000. There was a little reserve that was used in different work centers. I ask: how much do the soft ice cream dispensing machines equipment cost now? Those soft ice cream dispensing now cost $8,000, four times more. When that equipment was purchased, sugar was at 8, 9, 10 cents. Today, sugar is at 5 cents. In other words, eight times more sugar must be produced to buy a soft ice cream dispensing machines. The same is true regarding the purchase of a truck.

I am talking about the relations with the Western capitalist world. That is not the situation of our relations and our trade with the socialist countries, which as you know is very different. We are not affected by that problem.

We have to import a number of raw materials, important raw materials such as those for the feed industry so as to produce eggs, poultry, meat, etc. We inevitably have to pay for specific expenditures, raw materials, and equipment with foreign exchange. The products that the Third World countries export increasingly cost less and all that they import increasingly costs more.

A bulldozer, -- I talked about soft ice cream dispensing machines -- a bulldozer at that time cost $25,000. Today it costs $80,000, $90,000, $100,000. Anything costs three, four times more. A truck, industrial equipment, a lathe, a factory are all increasingly more expensive. But that is not the case with what the Third World countries export. They cost increasingly less. This is a world tragedy, and not just a Cuban or national tragedy. It partly affects us, but it affects us. And the situation is getting worse. This year, the Third World countries will receive $150 billion less because of the lower prices of their export products. This is not only due to the drop in the price of raw materials, but essentially due to the drop in petroleum prices. I was making estimates, and every day, the industrialized capitalist world, which exploits the Third World so much, is now saving $400 million in petroleum; that would be enough to pay the interest of the foreign debt and, in the long run, the foreign debt. The developed capitalist countries are carrying out an atrocious plunder of the Third World through those mechanisms.

We who were not traditional exporters of petroleum had converted our savings of petroleum -- which you know we had stressed a lot -- into foreign exchange. Due to the price that petroleum had reached, we were receiving more than $400 million. It helped us to face this situation of the low prices of sugar, the ridiculous prices of sugar. Well, with the sharp fall of the petroleum prices, we are losing this year more than $300 million. This creates a serious difficulty for us. The sugar prices have not gone up.

The drought affected us by 1 million tons. Fortunately, Hurricane Kate affected us less. When I visited the sugar fields after the hurricane and when I saw the cane not only bent over but knocked down, twisted, and many stalks broken, I asked myself how this cane was going to be harvested. I wondered what kind of a yield we could expect -- in sugarcane and sugar. I must say that one of the positive things of these times, and one of the most extraordinary efforts put forth by our people in recent times, was seen during this harvest. A potential loss of 1.5 million tons was decreased to less that 250,000 tons, to less than 250,000. [applause] This was done with the hard work of our workers. I must say that when he decides to do something, and when we want to do [illegible]hing, we can achieve great feats. And our workers harvested that crop under those conditions. The last drought helped us some. Had the rainy season started when it usually does in late April, the loss would have probably been some 700,000 tons. However, our people with their efforts, and some help from mother nature, took advantage of that drought.

Despite all the efforts, this still represented 1.25 million tons of sugar that were not exported. This had nothing to do with lower prices, but we had less sugar to export. We did fulfill our commitments with the socialist countries. We are using less sugar in order to export it to the convertible area. The imperialists are trying to create obstacles for us, they try to block our nickel and other exports.

But this is not all. There is something incredible and paradoxical; when the dollar lost its value, the other currencies increased their value, and the imperialists, in an attempt to decrease their trade deficit, pressured their allies to revalue their currencies, their Japanese, German, Western allies in general.

When we speak of the price of sugar we speak of 5 cents of every dollar, and you can get up to $100 per ton of sugar. But since we do not import from the United States but from other Western countries, if their currency goes up we are affected. If in the past we needed $1 to purchase a Japanese-made product, today we would need $1.50. In other words, with the loss in value of the dollar and an increase in the value of the other currencies, if we were to purchase from the United States we would be paying less, but since we purchase from other Western countries whose currencies were revalued, we have lost approximately $150 million.

If you add here and there, you find that the country has approximately $600 million less. We knew we were headed for a dry season. However, the loss in value of the dollar and the terrible drop in the price of oil -- we were receiving more than 400 million [unit not specified] -- has caused serious damage to our financial situation and has placed us in a truly tense situation because our country had been accustomed to paying off all its debts. It is from this economic viewpoint that we are waging this battle. We would find ourselves waging this battle even if the price of sugar were to go up to $1. It is one of the most difficult situations we have confronted. This also coincides with a tense international situation.

There is a tense international situation. The country has had to live these years in a permanent state of alert, paying close attention to our defense, investing vast resources in defense. Because, fortunately, much of the revolutionary and patriotic spirit of the country that was not evident in the activities that we have mentioned -- in material production -- was evident in this area of defense, working, building fortifications, training, devoting unending hours to that task. We have had to live through very tense years, and we cannot neglect this front. We are nothing if we neglect that front and we weaken ourselves. That would encourage imperialism, that imperialism which looks at our country with respect and knows why it has to look at us with respect. [applause]

It is a tense and complicated international situation. The USSR and the socialist countries have made great efforts seeking an international detente, trying to prevent a catastrophic arms race that would increase and multiply the threat of war. Those efforts by the USSR and by the socialist countries have crashed against the reactionary and obsessive spirit of the current U.S. Administration, of the pressures ...[corrects himself] against the pressures of military industrial complex, hoping for an arms race that will provide it with high profits. The socialist countries and the progressive forces insist, and should continue insisting, on the struggle for peace. They will continue insisting, using the full weight of international public opinion against those who are responsible for this threat, this arms race, this enormous waste of human and economic resources in weapons.

We have seen how this warmongering, fascist spirit of the current U.S. Administration is expressed in the brutal and cowardly aggression against Grenada. We have seen it in the dirty war that it has been waged for more than 5 years against the heroic people of Nicaragua. [applause] We have seen it in the dirty war that imperialism is waging in alliance with South Africa against the brother people of Angola. [applause] We have seen how Reagan meets with the Somozist counterrevolutionary chieftains who are directing the treacherous counterrevolution in that country. We have seen how he meets brazenly with such individuals as Savimbi, whose criminal bands have murdered tens of thousands of men, women, and children in Angola. His bands sometimes wipe out entire villages, without respecting age or sex.

Those are Reagan's friends. That is the type of people Reagan likes to meet. We have seen his alliance with South Africa. We have heard his last speech where he completely removed his mask, that is, if he still had any portion of a mask left on him, in order to defend South Africa, [applause] that racist and fascist regime of South Africa, in order to oppose the enforcement of sanctions. That same administration is intensifying its criminal economic blockade against Cuba, is waging economic aggression, an economic blockade against Nicaragua. However, that administration takes pleasure in lifting the shield in order to protect South Africa from the economic measures, from the economic sanctions that the international community and the U.S. allies themselves are demanding. In that speech, Reagan went as far as saying that Mr Botha -- the Hitler of South Africa, the fascist-racist Nazi that rules that country -- had no obligations to talk with the ANC [African National Congress], because this was a group of terrorists, and -- he added -- communists. Reagan is describing as terrorists the African patriots, the patriots of South Africa, the black patriots of South Africa who have been confronting the fascist regime in a heroic manner and without any weapons. He calls them terrorists, and instead he describes as patriots the UNITA [National Union for the Total Independence of Angola] bandits who murder and massacre entire villages. He describes as patriots and freedom fighters the Somozists, the criminal mercenaries and counterrevolutionaries in Nicaragua, who have been armed, trained, and directed by the CIA, and who have also murdered thousands of men, women and children in that country and who have tried to destroy its economy.

Those bands [corrects himself] those mercenaries are champions of liberty and patriots for Reagan. That is the empire's logic, and in his demagogic and politicking speech -- recently delivered in Miami and no doubt he was referring to his hopes -- he said that liberty was on the offensive. The U.S. imperialism's treacherous and criminal actions are described by Reagan as a liberty offensive. Such aggressions and insults represent, in fact, an offense to liberty.

However, that is how the reactionaries and imperialists have acted everywhere; that specially is how the fascists have acted. The Nazis used similar arguments when they took over Austria, when they took over part of Czechoslovakia and then all Czechoslovakia, and when they attacked Poland, when they began their wars.

The empire's acts are described as a liberty offensive. In fact, the ones who are on the offensive, and have been on the offensive for some time, since the glorious days of the October 1917 revolution, have been the people [applause] the people who started the era which marked the emergence of socialism -- which keeps Mr Reagan awake so much at night. The ones who have been on the offensive have been the people, who were capable of annihilating fascism, even though they had to pay a high price; who were capable of annihilating colonialism and launching the independence of dozens and dozens of countries -- almost 100 countries -- during the least 40 years.

The ones who have been on the offensive have been the people in Europe and Asia, who were capable of carrying out the socialist revolution; the people who, like the Vietnamese, were capable of defeating Yankee imperialism, the people who, like Cuba, have heroically and gloriously resisted 27 years of imperialist hostility! [standing ovation] The people of Angola, Mozambique, and Ethiopia, who were capable of shaking off the yoke of colonialism and feudalism, the people of Nicaragua, who were capable of shaking off the tyranny [fumbles for words] the 50-year-old tyranny that was installed there by the U.S. imperialism and now defend themselves heroically, courageously, and successfully against the dirty war which is being waged by the empire! [applause] The people of El Salvador, who are an example without precedent in courage, capacity for struggle, and who have been capable of resisting all the imperialist maneuvers, and all the repressive actions of a genocidal government supported by U.S. imperialism.

The ones who are on the offensive are the people, everywhere; in Latin America they cast aside the yoke of tyranny imposed by Yankee imperialism. The ones who have been on the offensive are the Uruguayan, Argentine, and Brazilian people; the heroic Chilean people who, with their courageous and assertive actions [applause] have led Pinochet's fascist and proimperialist tyranny to a crisis. The people of South Africa [applause] the people of South Africa [repeats himself] who are practically unarmed and have provoked a crisis for the racist regime of apartheid by shedding a river of blood.

The reactionaries are the ones who are really facing a crisis; U.S. imperialism is the one facing a crisis. The people are on the offensive, and the idea that the crimes perpetrated by U.S. imperialism in its desperation are liberty offensives can only be the product of a sleepless mind which has lost all sense of reality concerning the world in which we live. [applause] U.S. imperialism attacks, aggresses; that is what it has always done, furious in its impotence, because it cannot stop the struggle waged by these people -- the ones we mentioned and many others.

We are an example of this truth. The commemoration of this anniversary in this province -- which has achieved considerable progress in a relatively short period of time -- this proves that those days have been left behind -- those days when the empire issued the orders and established the norms.

U.S. imperialism tries, in its desperation, to use its troops to exert internal roles in Latin America, as recently happened in Bolivia, where imperialism sent its helicopters and troops to take over internal matters, preparing for an intervention, under the pretext of a struggle against drug trafficking. The failures in the struggle against drug trafficking represent U.S. society's failure. It has no virtues, it cannot prevent corruption. There is another thing that we can tell Mr Reagan: Cuba has no drug problem; Cuba has no need to send soldiers as policemen to any place in the world to fight cocaine or marijuana or whatever -- because drugs are not imported in Cuba drugs are noted used in Cuba! [applause]

U.S. society is incapable of curbing the growing use of drugs, and this is why it wants to send soldiers to fight drug trafficking. Using this kind of reasoning, one day it will try to use nuclear weapons to fight marijuana and cocaine in the world. But the truth of the matter is that it is in the United States itself where they must put an end to the use of marijuana and cocaine. Then the drug problem in the world will have been resolved. [applause]

It was in this era and under these circumstances that our revolution and our process developed confronting these objective difficulties of an economic nature, as I explained earlier, of an international nature, as I have tried to explain in the past few minutes. These are difficult times but, when were times not difficult for the revolutionaries? There were, and always will be, difficult times for revolutionaries.

We faced difficult times 33 years ago, very difficult times. But no times have been too difficult for a true revolutionary to overcome. [applause] Also, we have always been willing to sacrifice rather than turn our backs on the banners of the revolutionary. We have upheld these banners against the empire for many years; we have prepared to curb the empire, and not only curb it, but defeat it should it attack us. We can overcome all difficult times or difficulties.

We are here in this province today. It is precisely in this province where one can breathe the air of struggle, the air of history, the air of legend. Since ancient times, since the times of the uprising of the slaves, since the times the early patriots began their work, since the independence war -- the first war of independence also touched this area -- this region backed men like [Carlos Manuel de] Cespedes and [Ignacio] Agramonte and it was one of the first regions to join the struggle of independence.

Illustrious men have been born in this region. Men like (Adonato Castillo), Serafin Sanchez, (Ramon Leocadio Bonacheda), and others; illustrious women who wrote glorious pages in our history. These were lands that witnessed Maximo Gomez' feats and his brilliant campaigns in 1868 and 1895, lands that witnessed the feats of the invading column and Antonio Maceo. In all the times, in the times of the colony, the struggle of the colony, and in the times of the Republic, this province was outstanding in its struggle against the injustices of the vassal republic, of the Yankee neocolony, in the struggle of its courageous workers and peasants. It was through this province that, during our last struggle -- our last and final struggle -- the glorious forces led by Che and Camilo came in [applause] and found solidary support, backing, and a large group of combatants willing to join the forces of the rebel army.

There was fighting going on in this province while we fought in Oriente. When the revolution triumphed, this province supported the revolution with ardor and confronted the counterrevolutionary and mercenary bands that imperialism organized in Escambray. The spirit of patriotism of the people of Sancti Spiritu shone in that struggle; in that struggle that cost many lives, sweat, and human resources; in that struggle that used much of the time that we needed for development. But today this same province is an example of the spirit of development, progress, and peace. The bandits learned their lesson a long time ago. They found out that those mountains, zealously guarded by the patriotism of the people of Sancti Spiritu, Cienfuegos, and Villa Clara, not even an ant can attempt to fight. They learned that lesson a long time ago, [applause] more merit for this province that invested strength and blood during the early years to repair the damage caused by that war. Here the people can speak of patriotism, firmness, heroism, courage; all risks and dangers can be challenged here. Here the people can speak of their difficulties just as the rest of our people in this country do. They can speak without fear of these difficulties. Here, we can find mothers, ascendants, descendants, brothers, family, and companeros, of the combatants who died during the attack on the Moncada. [applause] They are outstanding witnesses of how, throughout these 36 years, we have kept ourselves loyal to the principles and goals of the revolution; they have been outstanding witnesses of how our people confronted all obstacles, difficulties, and risks. It was a long time ago, but they were hard, very hard and very difficult days, when we were nothing more than a handful of combatants who embraced ideas we considered to be just and which history has proven were just.

Today we are no longer a handful of combatants, we are no longer a few dozen combatants. In this plaza alone we can count 100,000 combatants. [applause] Throughout the country we can count millions who with patriotic ardor and revolutionary fervor continue to embrace these ideas; ideas that until today have been victorious, ideas that will be victorious forever. These just ideas have demonstrated their strength and capacity to confront the most powerful empire this would has ever had; an empire located 90 miles off our coast, only inches from us in Guantanamo, and we did this with the faith of the most difficult ways, with the faith and security that victory has given us. Today we tell the imperialism and our enemies that our people will be able to surpass any obstacle, any difficulty, our people will be able to march forward and nothing will stop us. Our people will be able to surpass our own weaknesses, [applause] will be able to overcome our own defects, our people will be able to surpass our own mistakes. A people who are capable of overcoming their own defects, their own mistakes, a people who fear nothing, a people who do not yield to anything, are, and will always be, an invincible people. Fatherland or death, we will win. [applause]

D'ESCOTO SEES U.S. POLICIES AS GUNBOAT DIPLOMACY

[Interview with Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto by Orlando Matos in Managua; date not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Matos] Mr Foreign Minister, recently the United States seems determined to change its international foreign policy of peaceful coexistence and respect for internatinal law to one of forceful impositions, which is a return to gunboat policy. I would like you to address this issue.

[D'Escoto] In reality, what you have said is very true. Under the present administration we are seeing -- for the first time, I would say, since World War II -- not only a disregard for the rules of coexistence established by law, because that has always been the case, but an effort to destroy put international law aside and impose the law of the strongest. This was quite clear during the invasion of Grenada. The fact the invasion took place was not new. I was not surprised because we have been invaded and occupied many times by U.S. forces. The United States is the quintessence of interventionism. That is the situation.

We have heard U.S. Secretary of State Shultz say -- and he has said this so many times -- that there is no effective diplomacy which does not contain the use of force as an essential element. Imagine that. He said this force, at the service of diplomats to increase their powers of persuasion, can include armed force. Imagine that, gunboat diplomacy as you said earlier, which the U.S. is justifying. Shultz says that only through the ability to use force in limited wars as a means of persuasion can diplomacy be effectively implemented. Well then, what about us? We cannot use it and we do not want to because we have principles. However, we are not able to. That means that the only diplomats who can use force are the Americans, who have the weapons and are willing to use them to impose their will, the will of the United States.

ORTEGA SENDS REGARDS TO MARK MONCADA ANNIVERSARY

[Text] Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega has sent a message to Fidel Castro to mark the 33d anniversary of the attack on the Moncada Barracks and National Revolt Day. The message states: Moncada was the revived bugle call of Bolivar, Marti, and Sandino that, with Fidel, ratifies the will for struggle of the Latin American and Caribbean peoples.

CASTRO, ROMANIA'S CEAUSESCU DISCUSS COOPERATION

AU291638 Bucharest AGERPRES in English 1540 GMT 29 Jul 86

[Text] Bucharest, AGERPRES 29/7/1986 -- The first secretary of the Central Committee of Cuba's Communist Party, Fidel Castro Ruz, president of the Council of State and of the Council of Ministers, received Ion Ceausescu, first vice-chairman of Romanias State Planning Committee and minister secretary of state, on an official visit in Havana.

He conveyed the Cuban leader a comradely salute from the general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party and president of Romania, Nicolae Ceausescu, alongside wishes of health and prosperity to the friendly Cuban people.

Fidel Castro Ruz thanked and asked that his best wishes of health be given to President Nicolae Ceausescu, as well as wishes of prosperity and further successes in socialist construction to the Romanian people.

The continuing development of the bonds of friendship, cooperation and collaboration between Romania and Cuba was discussed during the meeting.

[Text] Washington, July 29, CANA -- Retired civil servant Margaret McDonald today presented her credentials as Bahama's Ambassador to the Organization of American States (OAS).

She presented here letters of accreditation to OAS Secretary General Joao Clemente Baena Soares and chairman of the OAS permanent council, Ambassador Pierre Sam of Haiti.

Speaking afterwards, McDonald, a former cabinet secretary, singled out the traffic and abuse of drugs among the pressing challenges confronting the inter-American community.

She urged the OAS to take vigorous steps in the areas of cooperation for development, capital investment, development of exports, human rights, and the promotion of democracy.

DISRUPTION MARS MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

[Text] Kingston, Jamaica, July 29, CANA -- Amid reports of chaos in municipal elections here today, leader of the opposition People's National Party (PNP) Michael Manley tonight accused his opponents in the ruling Jamaica Labour Party (JLP) of malevolent intention to undermine the new electoral system that aims at rooting out fraud.

There is very clear evidence that the idea of a free and fair election that is free from fear has already collapsed, Manley told reporters.

Whether the wishes of the people will survive remains to be seen, he added, pointing to what he said was absolutely massive intimidation of voters and electoral officers in six constituencies in the urban Kingston/St Andrews region.

Radio and eyewitness reports spoke of incidences where ballots were reportedly snatched and scrutineers and officials chased out of stations.

Manley said he personally saw JLP supporters intimidating electoral officials during visit to polling stations.

Opinion polls predicted a win for Manley's PNP, which is viewing the poll as a referendum on the performance of the JLP government, led by Prime Minister Edward Seaga.

BOUTERSE ON POLITICAL SCENE, REVOLUTION'S GOALS

[By Marcel Roo]

[Text] Paramaribo, 26 Jul (EFE) -- Suriname leader Desi Bouterse wants to end the racial and ethnic conflicts in his country and give the former Dutch colony a structure of a nation.

During an interview with EFE at the Government Palace, Bouterse said that Suriname was divided by racial, religious, and ethnic criteria before the 1980 revolution that placed him in power. "We were living on a volcano and an explosion, a struggle between the racial forces, was threatening to cause untold damage to the country. Situations such as the one in Beirut and Sri Lanka could have happened here," he noted.

Johan Ferrier, the first president of the former Dutch colony after its independence, was deposed by the revolution in 1980. He was replaced by Chen A. Sen, while Bouterse became chief of the National Military Council. Sen resigned in 1982; Colonel Bouterse, who foiled a military uprising on that occasion, became Suriname's strongman.

Suriname is ethnically heterogeneous. Hindus, Indonesians, and blacks make up the leading ethnic groups and are the ones active in the political arena. According to Bouterse, one of the basic goals of the revolution is to establish a united nation by holding together all racial groups. Based on this principle, the revolutionary commander managed to incorporate into the government all of the parties that had been engaged in nonlegal opposition activities, momentarily eliminating a dissidence that responded more to religious than to ideological criteria. "The basic condition to reach understanding was that all parties agree that we are a country and not a number of ethnic groups dependent on others," he explained. In addition, he stressed that the traditional leaders must agree that there is a need to achieve true economic independence. Bouterse declined to make a direct statement about the possibility of calling free and honest elections. "We are talking about a new democratic model that includes elections. But these things must be established in the new constitution, which the people must accept or reject in a referendum within 9 months."

Suriname, a country with barely 350,000 inhabitants distributed over 163,000 km, is faced with an economic crisis evidenced by the scarcity of staples in shops.

Bouterse expressed optimism over the future, however, remarking that the most important achievement of the process has been the reduction of the unemployment rate to less than 20 percent.

Regarding the Netherlands' decision to cut economic aid to Suriname following Bouterse's assumption of power, he said his country had adopted a democratic system similar to the Netherlands that did not work." [quotation marks as received]

According to Bouterse, his model of democracy is based on the people's participation in the drafting of their own development plans, and announced that he has talked with the political parties to open the way to the creation of a coalition government. He admitted, however, that certain leaders did not participate in this dialogue, such as former President Sen, who is now pursuing opposition activities in the Netherlands, and Emile Wijntuin, who was an adviser to the colonel who later fled to Curacao.

Bouterse stressed that he cannot respect those who left the country and, "based on their fantasies, develop negative concepts in order to try to convince other foreign nations that the military and the revolutionary processes have to be eliminated."

Finally, Bonterse said that he would have no problem accepting a civilian government, providing its goal is to work for the country, "although I do not believe there will be a government opposed to the revolutionary objectives," he stressed.

NETHERLANDS PAPER INTERVIEWS RADHAKISHUN

PM291422 Rotterdam NRC HANDELSBLAD in Dutch 16 Jul 86 pp 1, 5

[Unnamed "own correspondent" report: "Surinamese Prime Minister Wants Talks With Lubbers"]

[Text] Rotterdam, 16 Jul -- A meeting with Prime Minister Lubbers and friendly relations with the Netherlands are high on the list of priorities of the new Surinamese prime minister, 50-year-old Pertab Radhakishun. However, for the time being there will not be a general election, according to last night's interview with Vara Radio.

Regarding a possible meeting with Prime Minister Lubbers, whom he described as a very important figure, Radhakishun said it does not matter who initiates the talks. "What is important is to talk," the new prime minister said.

Radhakishun said nothing about a possible resumption of Netherlands development aid to Suriname. Despite the statement from new Development Cooperation Minister Bukman that the Netherlands Government's attitude to Suriname will change only if the country holds elections, Radhakishun will strive for better relations with the Netherlands in the form of a "friendship plan." The prime minister appeared optimistic about the possibility of implementing such a plan.

The new government under Radhakishun will remain in office until 31 March 1987, when the transitional phase which began with the appointment of the Udenhout cabinet in 1985 will end. There will be no elections before April. According to Prime Minister Radhakishun, further work must be done on the new constitution before elections are held. "The outlines of the construction are already in existence and in the next 8 and 1/2 months we must see to it that a definitive foundation is created."

The Radhakishun Cabinet sees remedying the current economic situation and combatting corruption as important tasks. In the past, ministers and other high-ranking officials in Suriname are said to have been guilty, chiefly of violating currency regulations.

The new prime minister thinks that the new economic program has a good chance of succeeding. "The new government has a broad political foundation and as a result there is a better chance of implementing our plans than there would be if this foundation did not exist," Radhakishun said.

SARNEY, ALFONSIN HOLD NEWS CONFERENCE

[Text] Buenos, Aires, 30 Jul (TELAM) -- Argentine President Raul Alfonsin and Brazilian President Jose Sarney today agreed that it is essential not to turn the South Atlantic into a conflict area; that it is fundamental for the development of the two countries to overcome the scourge of hyperinflation; and that the integration treaty signed yesterday is open to all Latin American countries.

These were some of the more important issues addressed by Sarney and Alfonsin during a joint press conference this morning at the General San Martin Cultural Center, during which the presidents answered questions by Argentine and Brazilian reporters.

The presidents agreed that there is a specific will to carry out integration plans and to put aside the rhetoric that has prevailed for many years in Argentine-Brazilian relations.

Asked if the bilateral agreements would harm foreign companies, Sarney noted that foreign companies will continue to fulfill their role both in Argentina and in Brazil.

Regarding the role of workers within the framework of the bilateral agreement, Alfonsin said that because this is an effort to achieve cooperation and integration between the two countries, the working classes of these countries will play an important role in trying to achieve the objectives.

Asked if these agreements imply an immediate social cost for Brazil, Sarney said that this was not the case, because overcoming the barriers imposed by backwardness signifies a social achievement. He added: The philosophy of my government is based precisely on granting priority to the social sector. The ultimate goal of all these agreements is to improve the standard of living in our countries. Therefore, overcoming the barrier of backwardness is a social achievement.

Alfonsin said that Latin American countries should be firm in their position regarding the foreign debt, adding that in the Cartagena Consensus we specifically noted the importance of establishing a political dialogue within the framework of which we can explain our aspirations regarding financial and economic problems, as well as problems that fundamentally affect the development of our countries and consolidation of democracy.

I categorically agreed with President Sarney, said the Argentine president, that the only way we can overcome these international financial problems is through economic growth.

Alfonsin added that the only answer for Latin American is to grow because that is the only way our economies can develop and, consequently, fulfill our international commitments.

Sarney stated: We want the South Atlantic to be an area of peace in which our countries might decide to exploit sea resources.

Alfonsin added: We have greater possibilities of succeeding and achieving integration in the economic, financial, and technological fields, as well as in the political field. All of this will be part of a process of achieving the dream of those men who gave us our independence.

The Brazilian president noted that their position on disarmament has been publicly expressed in all countries and all international forums. Brazil does not have that much importance in the international arms market, it is quite small. We have been manufacturing arms for a long time, so as to avoid importing them and to meet domestic demands.

Alfonsin said: The Governments of Brazil and Argentina do not need to sign political pacts or agreements to inform everyone that we support the democratization of Latin America.

Alfonsin and Sarney agreed that Brazilian and Argentine businessmen will be the true protagonists of the agreements that were signed.

Alfonsin said: We are beginning to overcome the ghosts -- which like witches, do exist, as people say -- the ghosts of hyperinflation. We were confronting a truly serious situation. He added that we already know that this year we will grow, and we are determined to take the necessary steps to achieve economic development, which must be accompanied by social development if we are to speak of true development.

Regarding Brazil's trade commitments with the United States and the priority granted to trade agreements with Argentina, Sarney said: These agreements will strengthen trade relations between our two countries. He also noted: Everyone knows that the economy of today's world is integrated, but Latin America has yet to benefit from an integrated economy.

Regarding the great differences in Latin American economies, Sarney noted that the European Common Market is 20 years old and it has not yet been completed. We are just beginning.

Asked if an end to the military regimes in Chile and Paraguay would help Latin American integration, Alfonsin said: We do not wish to make any specific comment regarding any Latin American nation. We have simply said we believe that the presence of democratic regimes on the continent is necessary for integration.

Answering another question, Sarney said: If Argentina had been unable to create conditions leading to domestic economic stability through its Austral Plan, we would have been unable to achieve this second stage.

The Brazilian president stated that foreign companies will be dealt with in keeping with the laws of the two countries; we are trying to see if a binational company can be treated as a national company.

Alfonsin said it is well-known that during these meetings we have achieved an agreement that establishes close ties between the Brazilian and Argentine Air Forces and that talks are under way between the navies of the two countries. Alfonsin said: I think we have been able to overcome forever the mistrust between Brazilians and Argentines that may have existed earlier, but which now has completely disappeared.

Sarney said that the situation in Europe in the 1950's was much better than the one in Latin America today, but this is exactly why we should advance further, so we can pass rapidly through development stages. he added that we cannot remain idle in the face of poverty. We must seek mechanisms to overcome it.

He stated: I believe that the experiences of the European countries will also help us to avoid the same errors and to learn from their successes. He also said he agrees with Alfonsin that the state of armed conflict between Brazil and Argentina is buried forever. This is a time of love and not of hate.

Brazilian President Departs

[Text] Buenos Aires, 30 Jul (TELAM) -- Brazilian President Jose Sarney departed for home at 1747 at the end of his 3-day official visit to Argentina. Shortly before the Brazilian Air Force plane left the Jorge Newbery Metropolitan Airport, Sarney stated that he had spent 3 very important days in Argentina. He said: I am leaving happy and satisfied with this visit, which has been very important, not only for Argentine and Brazilian economies, but also for the other Latin American countries.

Argentine chief executive Raul Alfonsin and members of his cabinet said farewell to his Brazilian counterpart.

GOVERNMENT URGED TO STOP CLANDESTINE STATIONS

[Text] Buenos Aires, 28 Jul (TELAM) -- Evaristo Alonso, president of the Association of Argentine Private Radio Stations (ARPA), today issued a communique on the frequent appearance of clandestine radio stations which are either private or owned by municipal or provincial governments.

Alonso said ARPA considers it its duty to emphasize the need to put an end to this situation, which could only bring anarchy to electronic communications. Alonso said: To this end, the national government must resort to institutional mechanisms to enforce the laws, which are being violated by these unlawful actions.

The ARPA president added: It should be noted that this request is not prompted by an alarmist reaction, but by facts. If this trend continues, there will soon be more clandestine stations than legal ones.

The communique says that ARPA believes that instead of contributing to and strengthening our democratic institutions, this situation will undermine them. Only by abiding by the law, which can only be amended in accordance with constitutional procedures, will we be able to strengthen our institutions.

The ARPA communique concludes by saying that the operation of clandestine radio stations is not in keeping with federalist, democratic rights, but is detrimental to these rights because it means to contribute to fait accompli situations, to unilateral decisions, and to arbitrariness as ways to achieve a goal.

PRESIDENT TO ADDRESS CONGRESS 6 AUGUST

[Text] La Paz, 28 Jul (AFP) -- A firm pact between the ruling Nationalist Revolutionary Movement (MNR) and the conservative National Democratic Action (ADN) has been instrumental in determining the names of the lawmakers who will preside over this year's legislative session in the Senate and in the Chamber of Deputies, MNR and ADN leaders reported here today.

The opening ceremony of this year's session will be held on 6 August, the Bolivian independence day, when President victor Paz Estenssoro will read a message to report on the first year of his administration.

According to these sources, MNR Senator Raul Lema Patino will be elected president of the Senate; and ADN Deputy Willy Vargas Vacaflor will be elected president of the Chamber of Deputies.

Last year's session was presided over by Senator Oscar Zamora Medinacelli, of the Marxist-Leninist (pro-Chinese) Communist Party, and by Deputy Gaston Encinas, of the Movement of the Revolutionary Left (MIR) in the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies, respectively.

ALFONSIN SAID TO CRITICIZE U.S. TROOPS' PRESENCE

[Text] La Paz, 30 Jul (AFP) -- Jaime Paz Zamora, former Bolivian president and MIR [Movement of the Revolutionary Left] leader, said here today that Argentine President Raul Alfonsin has expressed his disagreement over the presence of U.S. troops in Bolivia to combat drug trafficking.

Paz Zamora, who met with Alfonsin in Buenos Aires a few days ago, said that the Argentine president is in favor of establishing a Latin American economic fund to combat the drug trafficking mafias that operate in Bolivia without resorting to the help of U.S. troops.

According to the MIR leader this Latin American economic fund may also help promote Bolivia's economic development.

Paz Zamora also said acting on his suggestion Argentine President Raul Alfonsin and Brazilian President Jose Sarney have included in their agenda the discussion of drug trafficking in the region.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON MAJOR ANTIDRUG CAMPAIGN

[Text] La Paz, 28 Jul (AFP) -- It has been officially reported that the two antidrug operations conducted today did not produce any significant results and that the two Blackhawk helicopters that participated in the operations have returned to their base. The Interior Ministry, which is coordinating the actions of the Bolivian Police and the U.S. troops, has reported that the operations cover an extensive area of Bolivian territory within a radius of 150 km.

The report indicated that today's operation reached Santa Marta, but that no cocaine factories were found in the area. Information was obtained, however, to conduct new operations. The U.S. helicopters returned to their base in the late afternoon.

New protest demonstrations against the presence of foreign soldiers in the country demanding their immediate withdrawal have been held in several cities.

On 14 July a U.S. Galaxy brought 160 soldiers, 6 helicopters, and communications equipment from the 193d U.S. Army Brigade in Panama to help the Bolivian police in the so-called cocaine war.

Narcotics Office Bombed

At 0630 Colonel Mario Vargas told me that the attack could have been in reprisal for the crackdown on the smuggling of sulphuric acid, which is used primarily for processing cocaine, from Chile to the Chapare region.

Police officials have announced that investigations are under way and that a detailed report will be released at noon today.

Factories Destroyed; Arrests Made

[Text] La Paz, 29 Jul (EFE) -- The Bolivian Interior Ministry today reported that the Mobile Units for Rural Areas (Umopar) have destroyed nine cocaine factories, and that six drug trafficking suspects have been arrested in various operations in the last few hours. The cocaine-paste factories and the suspects were found in Chapare and the areas bordering Cochabamba Department, 403 km east of La Paz.

A factory in the so-called "Senda 3" sector was discovered while in the process of manufacturing cocaine, but the police forces who participated in the operation with the support of a Bolivian helicopter were unable to arrest anyone.

Police found at the site seven coca maceration pits, four bags of lime, and two containers of gasoline and sulphuric acid, all of which are used to process of cocaine.

Umopar troops also located eight other factories in which they found 1 coca maceration pit and 50 liters of enriched water.

These factories were burned in the presence of reporters who were at the scene. The operations were carried out in the Cochabamba provinces of Jordan and Punata and the troops confiscated 21,820 grams of cocaine base.

During these operations the special troops arrested Victoria de Ortuno, Eugenia Machaca, Zenaida Cardenas, Fausto Gonzalez, Felix Rojas, and Raul Peralta, all Bolivian citizens, who were in possession of cocaine.

Interior Ministry sources said that the antidrug police carried out a dragnet operation in the Beni district, northeast of Cochabama, but that it did not yield positive results.

Group To 'Expel' U.S. Troops

[Excerpts] La Paz, 31 Jul (EFE) -- Labor unions, opposition parties and several well-known Bolivian public figures today created the "Board for the Defense of Nationl Sovereignty" [Junta Defensora de la Soberania Nacional], whose objective is to "get U.S. troops expelled from Bolivian territory."

A communique released by representatives of this organization stated that "first manifesto to the nation" on this subject will be released tomorrow, 31 July, at the headquarters of the La Paz Pressworkers Association.

The communique added that the "board" is made up of the Bolivian Labor Confederation [COB], the Trade Union Federation of Bolivian Mineworkers [FSTMB], the Single Trade Union of Bolivian Peasant Workers [Csutcb], and various opposition political parties.

It also stated that several lawmakers, retired military officers, priests "and men and women who believe in this patriotic cause (that is, the withdrawal of U.S. soldiers)" also belong to this organization. [passage omitted]

CONSUL GENERAL MEETS WITH PINOCHET, RETURNS

[Excerpts] Jorge Siles Salinas, the Bolivian consul general in Chile, yesterday met with Chilean President Augusto Pinochet. A few hours later Siles returned to La Paz.

An official of the El Alto Airport prevented newsmen from entering the VIP room, where Siles stayed for 15 minutes after his arrival. Siles announced thathe would not make an statement to the press, that he would do so only after meeting with Foreign Ministry officials. [passage omitted]

An EFE report datelined Santiago confirmed Siles' meeting with Pinochet. According to EFE, Siles termed the meeting with Pinochet a courtesy call and said that his trip to Bolivia was in no way related to this meeting with Pinochet.

FOREIGN MINISTER ON RAPPROCHEMENT WITH CHILE

[Text] Judging from remarks made by Foreign Minister Guillermo Bedregal, the rapprochement process between Bolivia and Chile is being conducted with great prudcence and caution.

Bedregal said that the process designed to reestablish (?Bolivian-Chilean relations) is being conducted with great prudence and caution to avoid sensationalism and misinterpretation.

Bedregal was thus commenting on press reports about a meeting he will hold with his Chilean counterpart in Bogota in the occasion of the inauguration of Colombian President-elect Virigilio Barco Vargas. Bedregal said tha no special plans have been made for this meeting. He said, however, that he, will be pleased to meet personally with Chilean Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle.

Foreign Ministry sources have reported that the meeting is scheduled for 8 August, the day after Barco's inauguration. The negotiations for this meeting are being conducted by Bolivian Consul General Jorge Siles Salinas with President Augusto Pinochet.

[Excerpts] Foreign Minister Bedregal Gutierrez this morning met with the deputy prime minister of South Korea, Kim Man-je who has just arrived in Bolivia.

Kim visited the Foreign Ministry to convey his government's greetings to the Bolivian foreign minister. He said he is happy to be in Bolivia and that his visit is historic because the time has come for the countries of the Third World to strengthen their relations with South Korea. [passage omitted]

AIRLINE PILOTS GO ON STRIKE; MINES PARALYZED

[Test] La Paz, 30 Jul (AFP) -- Labor leaders today reported that Bolivia awoke today with two strikes: one of miners, which will mean the paralyzation of all mines; and the other of pilots, which has stopped all Lloyd Bolivian Airline (LAB) flights.

The strike affecting the nationalized mining sector is being held to pressure the government of Victor Paz Estenssoro to grant salary increases; to supply provisions to the Bolivian Mining Corporation (Comibol) general stores; as well as to provide for the economic rehabilitation of the cooperation.

According to Mineworkers Union Leader Simon Reyes, the mines are suffering such an acute lack of supplies that dozens of children may starve to death. He added that Paz Estenssoro wants to eradicate the state-run mining sector and transfer the profitable deposits to the private sector.

LAB employees are demanding the resignation of LAB President Agustin Saavedra Weisse, who they say does not understand the problems affecting the business.

PRESIDENT SARNEY ARRIVES FROM BUENOS AIRES

[Text] Brasilia, 30 Jul (AFP) -- Brazilian President Jose Sarney's plane tonight landed in Brasilia bringing the president back from Buenos Aires after his 3-day official visit to Argentina, during which he signed, with his Argentine counterpart Raul Alfonsin, several economic integration agreements. The Brazilian chief executive resumed power at the Brasilia military base where he was welcomed by his constitutional replacement for the duration of his absence, Senator Jose Fragelli, president of the Brazilian Senate.

FINANCE MINISTER COMMENTS ON PROTOCOLS

[Text] Finance Minister Dilson Funaro has assessed the main protocols signed yesterday by Presidents Sarney and Alfonsin during an interview granted in Buenos Aires.

[Begin recording] [Reporter] Minister Funaro, could you assess the agreements signed by President Sarney here in Argentina?

[Funaro] In the first place, these agreements are aimed at complementing the economies of the two countries. The government is creating an administrative [word indistinct], to participate in the growth of the Argentine and Brazilian economies. We are not agreeing to replace an existing market, we are taking complementary action so that the two countries can participate in the development process which will take place in Brazil and Argentina over the next few years, and this is the most important part of the government.

[Reporter] How will this investment fund operate? Will it also apply to the Central Bank? How will it operate?

[Funaro] The Argentine minister and I have already agreed on that. We do not want to create any kind of organization to manage these funds and projects. Only one Brazilian Finance Ministry official and one Argentine Economy Ministry official will be appointed, and the entire process, all activities, and the study of the project will be done through each country's development bank. Therefore, there will not be any organization to look after this process.

[Reporter] And concerning wheat, Mr Minister?

[Funaro] As for wheat, it means that if Brazil needs to import it will import from Argentina, depending on the price. Brazil will still give a reasonable preference to Argentine products. This will allow Argentina to program its internal production to some extent. This agreement will also permit substitutions: If Brazil, for instance, produces an excess of corn or wheat next year, it will take as a substitute another product that it needs. This agreement is intended to improve the buffer stocks of both countries, considering that the maintenance of buffer stocks is an important program for both the Argentine and the Brazilian ministries. Our economies are complementary, and therefore it is not necessary to keep stocks for the whole year, since the two countries have different production seasons. [end recording]

The minister also said that, in the case of wheat, this is the first step to help the government to acquire a more favorable buffer stock.

GUIMARAES PRAISES SARNEY'S ECONOMIC PLAN

[Excerpts] Brasilia -- After several meetings with President Sarney and with ministers and experts in the economic area, Deputy Ulysses Guimaraes, president of the Brazilian Democratic Mobilization Party [PMDB], yesterday said: "President Jose Sarney would have been an unpatriotic man if, because of upcoming elections, he had failed, to adopt measures that are indispensable for the country." Ulysses recognized, however, that the measures have caused uneasiness within the PMDB, but said that in an attempt to neutralize the negative reactions, the party will concentrate its campaign on the freezing of prices, and it will explain that the purpose of its Plan of Goals is to consolidate the economic stabilization program.

The first meeting between the PMDB president and the ministers and government advisers took place during a luncheon at Ulysses Guimaraes' home. He reported on the pressure he had received through "anxious phone calls from several states." For that reason, he wanted to know the extent of the measures. Economists Joao Manoel Cardozo de Mello, Luiz Gonzaga Belluzo, and Luciano Coutinho (the latter is secretary general of the Ministry of Science and Technology and is now acting minister, since Renato Archer is abroad) explained that the Plan of Goals is "a necessary evil" to help reduce consumption. [passage omitted]

During the meetings with Guimaraes, the government representatives recognized that the measures would initially have a bad effect on the government, but they insisted that the measures are inevitable.

One of the ministers said: "Only a government which has a 90-percent popularity rating can risk taking measures that initially seem unpopular."

At first, Guimaraes and Senator Severo Gomes, president of the Pedroso Horta Foundation (belonging to the PMDB), seemed to share the candidates' belief that the measures would have a negative effect on the party. Later, the two agreed that the only course of action for President Sarney was to resort to what Guimaraes called "a kind of big savings account."

After the first meeting, Culture Minister Celso Furtado, one of the "notables" within the PMDB and a supporter of Guimaraes, made it clear that he did not participate in writing the Plan of Goals, but that the measures do not sacrifice the middle class.

Celso Furtado also said, practically repeating Guimaraes' words, that President Sarney acted correctly. He said:

A statesman must take that risk. He must face problems squarely while there is still time. Tomorrow, that problem in the area of finances might get out of control. [passage omitted]

Mixed Reactions Voiced

PY310143 Rio de Janeiro O GLOBO in Portuguese 24 Jul 86 p 3

[Text] Rio de Janeiro Governor Leonel Brizola stated yesterday that with the refundable tax the federal government has unfortunately broken the price freeze. He made this comment after listening in his residence to President Sarney's speech on television.

Brizola stated that "the nation must think more seriously about controlling the Sarney government and the groups that influence on him."

He said: The president has made it clear that he is implementing a package of measures that will burden the Brazilian people. He himself admitted that they are taxes. These taxes will first burden the middle class and then the entire population.

Other opinions:

Sao Paulo Governor Franco Montoro stated: "After the president's recent visits (to Campinas and Barretos) and after listening to and seeing the people enthusiastically applauding his measures in defense of the worker, I do not think that the image of the federal government of that of the PMDB can be discredited with these additional economic measures."

Ceara Governor Gonzaga Mota said: "President Jose Sarney's Plan of Goals consolidates the Cruzado Plan and his commitment to the social sector. With this measure, the president will increase even more the trend of his followers and admirers throughout the country."

Mines and Energy Minister Aureliano Chaves stated: "My ministry has had no participation in the adoption of the measures announced by President Sarney regarding the establishment of a refundable tax on alcohol and gasoline. We are neither the planners nor promoters of the refundable tax on fuel. We did not even participate in the studies for it. All these measures were planned by the economic ministries. Experience alone will tell us whether they are correct or not. I hope they are successful."

Mauro Salles, an advertising man and political marketing expert, stated: "It is still premature to analyze the popularity of President Sarney and his economic team in view of the economic measures. There has been such a change in mentality that it is difficult to foresee the consequences of the measures for the public image of the authorities."

Antonio Ermirio de Moraes, PTB [Brazilian Labor Party] candidate for Sao Paulo governor, said: "I do not think that these measures are motivated by political favoritism. Their purpose is to balance Brazil's finances within the Cruzado Plan."

Darcy Ribeiro, PDT [Democratic Labor Party] candidate for Rio de Janeiro governor, stated: "These measures will burden the middle class even more. What is happening is very curious: the sectors that have profited for the past 20 years continue to benefit. This plan will be changed so many times before 15 November that it will probably have a different name."

Miguel Arraes, PMDB candidate for Pernambuco governor, has said: "The final objective of these measures is to prevent a new uncontrolled inflationary process."

COUNTRY RESCHEDULES $31 BILLION OF PRIVATE DEBT

PY300010 Sao Paulo FOLHA DE SAO PAULO in Portuguese 26 Jul 86 p 26

[By Paulo Francis, correspondent in New York]

[Excerpts] Fernao Bracher, president of the Brazilian Central Bank, yesterday signed an agreement with Brazil's creditors to roll over $15.5 billion of its 1985-1986 debt and to maintain $15.5 billion of its commercial credits and interbank deposits.

Brazil will have 7 years -- from 1985 to 1991 -- to pay its 1985-1986 principal, and in 5 years, counting from 1987, it will again be able to renegotiate that principal. The commercial credits and interbank deposits will be available until March 1987. All this will allow the Sarney government to go through the national constituent assembly elections without suffering much pressure from foreign creditors. [passage omitted]

In the agreement, a "spread" [in English] of 1.125 percentage points above the LIBOR rate is established. Put simply, Brazil will continue to pay between $8 billion and $10 billion annually in interest to bankers just to keep its credit-worthiness in the international market. Since there is not the remotest possibility that Brazil will amortize $105 billion of its 1985-1986 principle, it can be estimated that by 1991, Brazil will have paid $40 billion ($8 billion annually according to optimistic estimates) in interest on its 1985-1986 debt, and will still owe $105 billion of its 1985-1986 principal. It sounds like a joke, but it is not. [Passage omitted]

ARMY MINISTER OUTLINES MILITARY INVESTMENTS

[By Adalid Cabrera Lemuz]

[Excerpt] Sao Paulo, 29 Jul (EFE) -- The Brazilian Armed Forces will invest approximately $250 million in 1986 in modernizing their equipment and in strengthening border regiments, Army Minister General Leonidas Pires Goncalves has reported. Gen Pires said that the current Brazilian military force of 197,000 men is small in relation to the country's 130 million people.

Pires said that by 1990 the Armed Forces will have between 15,000 and 20,000 additional soldiers and some new sophisticated Brazlian-made material. Brazil is at present the fifth world exporters of arms: It is even selling arms to Great Britain and to the United States.

The strategy of strengthening and replacing material is part of the Ground Force 90 Program (FP 90), which envisages the incorporation of 236 heavy armored Cascavel units into the Brazilian Army this year.

For this part, General Jose Alburquerque, chief of the material department, today said that the military plans to invest at least $250 million annually until the year 2015 to modernize the Armed Forces. Gen Pires said that although Brazil has no enemies, "it should have strong, well-equipped Armed Forces in order to negotiate agreements because no one seeks agreements with or fears a country that has a weak Army." SUPREME COURT ISSUES RULING AGAINST FRESNO

[Text] Santiago, 29 Jul (EFE) -- The Supreme Court today rejected recent remarks by Santiago Archbishop Juan Francisco Fresno challenging the Court to take action on the torching case. In its ruling, the Supreme Court accused Cardinal Fresno "of inciting the public" and "undermining the prestige of the courts."

The court also announced that it will take "the required measures" and that it will adopt appropriate legal actions against the cardinal.

The Supreme Court ruling was not signed by Chief Justice Rafael Retamal because of his contention that when Cardinal Fresno expressed his opinion on the administration of justice he was exercising his contitutional right "to express his opinions through every means and in any way."

Justice Retamal also noted that the justices, as judges, cannot pass judgment on Cardinal Fresno's remarks.

On 26 July Cardinal Fresno criticized a decision by Judge Alberto Echavarria (who was acting as a special appellate judge), who heard the case of the two youths who were torched by a military patrol (according to witnesses), resulting in the death on 6 July of 19-year-old Rodrigo Rojas de Negri and in serious injuries for 18-year-old Gloria Quintana, who is still hospitalized.

After disqualifying himself from hearing the case, Judge Echavarria turned it over to a military court. Earlier, he had decided to bring to trial only 1 of the 25 military personnel placed at his disposal by the Army. The only defendant in the case was charged with manslaughter (negligent behavior).

In view of Judge Echavarria's decision, Cardinal Fresno said that "the prestige of the Chilean Army and of the courts requires that the necessary steps be taken to get to the bottom of the case so that justice may be fully done."

Reaction to Ruling

[Text] Patricio Aylwin, vice president of the Chilean Bar Association and former Senate president, has said that Cardinal Juan Francisco Fresno has only asked the Supreme Court, in respectful terms, to use the necessary means to conduct a thorough investigation into the case involving the burning of two youths, so that justice may fully be exercised. Aylwin then asked the following question: Isn't this precisely the task of a Supreme Court? And why does it feel annoyed when reminded of this task?

Luis Ortiz Quiroga, lawyer and national adviser of the Bar Association, also referred to the Supreme Court's unanimous decision to condemn Cardinal Fresno's remarks. Ortiz Quiroga said that Cardinal Fresno's remarks are quite justified because they represent legitimate concern by all Chileans about a very important issue, the burning of two youths. This is what Ortiz Quiroga said:

[Begin Ortiz recording] I respectfully want to say that the Surpreme Court's statement, in my opinion, is not appropriate. It is absolutely groundless and seems rather to express personal feelings. It is not a statement based on solid arguments. The Supreme Courts president's statement is quite simple, and it seems to express disagreement with a statement which simply expresses the thinking of most Chileans. On making his statement, Cardinal Fresno was only making use of his legitimate right to dissent or to give an opinion, in accordance with the guarantees provided in the Consititution. It is not appropriate, therefore, to make any statement against it. I really think that the Supreme Court president's statement is inappropriate. [end recording]

According to attorney Ortiz Quiroga, the Supreme Court president's position should be that of receiving petitions, such as that made by Cardinal Fresno.

Jose Ruiz di Giorgio, vice president of the Christian Democratic Party and president of the Petroleum Workers Federation, has stated that the statement by the Supreme Court plenum shows how helpless the Chilean citizens are.

[Begin Di Giorgio recording] At this moment we Chileans are absolutely defenseless, and I think the time has come for the people in general to become aware of the need to reconstruct an autonomous judicial branch that will be really in the service of the nation and not in the service of the current government's interest. This is my opinion of the Supreme Court's position, and this is why crimes perpetrated over the past few years could not be solved, because those who are leading the courts have no desire whatsoever to learn the truth and end conflicts. I also think that Rafael Retamal is an exception. He represents the honorable judges, who are very few, and whose words unfortunately are not strong enough to change an institution which should be at the service of Chileans. [end recording]

Patricio Aylwin said that the Supreme Court statement shows a total lack of understanding of the people's loss of confidence in the courts. He added that Cardinal Fresno only expressed, respectfully and with high moral standards, the tremendous concern which has overwhelmed large sectors of the country, in view of the real scandal resulting from the horrendous crimes that have shocked the country over the past few years, and which remain unpunished. The courts seem unable to clear up the cases and uncover those responsible. Aylwin added that this undeniable fact goes against the moral standards of intelligent people, and the morals of spiritual leaders like Cardinal Fresno.

[Begin Aylwin recording] I cannot understand the judges' response to the cardinal's petition. The cardinal has not brought charges against them. He has just asked them in a respectful way to use all necessary means to conduct a thorough investigation of the case of Rodrigo Rojas and Carmen Gloria Quintana so that justice can be fully exercised. Is this not the task of a supreme court? Why is it annoyed by being reminded of their task? In view of the many lies overwhelming the country and the many crimes terrifying the people, to whom else but to the courts should, and must, the people turn to discover the truth and get justice? [end recording]

Aylwin added that when the court's answer is weak and frustrating, as has happened in many cases over the past few years, and the people are overcome by despair and indignation. Unfortunately, he said, they are also pushed into violence,

CNI EXPERIMENT UNDERMINES ARMY CLAIMS ON TORCHING

[By Juan Jorge Faundes]

[Excerpts] Santiago, 30 Jul (EFE) -- "I am happy, I feel all right..." Carmen Gloria Quintana, the young woman burned by a military patrol (according to witnesses), said to today during a talk she held today with Chilean Cardinal Raul Silva Henriquez. The woman also displayed a "V" sign with her fingers. [passage omitted]

Carmen Gloria, who sustained burns on 62 percent of her body, is still hospitalized and has received several skin grafts by which doctors hope to save her life and improve her condition.

The Army confirmed with some delay that Carmen Gloria Quintana and Rodrigo Rojas de Negri were arrested by a military patrol. The Army turned over 25 military men (3 officers, 5 noncommissioned officers and 17 privates) to Judge Alberto Echavarria, who was at that point in charge of the case.

Echavarria released 24 of the military men and decided to try only Lieutenant Pedro Fernandez Dittus, the leader of the patrol. However, he did not charge him with the crime of burning the youths, but with negligence (a petty crime) for not having taken them somewhere for appropriate medical aid.

The judge also declared himself ineligible to hear the case and turned it over to the judge advocate. He also accepted the report of the involved military men, who claimed that while under arrest Carmen Gloria overturned a container of flammable liquid with her feet, thus causing the tragedy.

Dr Jorge Villegas, who is treating Carmen Gloria, reacted to this report, however, stating that this would have been impossible because neither Carmen Gloria's nor Rodrigo's feet were burned.

Paradoxically, the doctor's statements are now supported by an experiment that the National Intelligence Center [CNI] (political police) conducted yesterday. In this experiment an agent wearing a protective suit kicked a container similar to the one that the military men mentioned in their report. It contained the same type of flammable liquid. Photographs published in the newspaper LAS ULTIMAS NOTICIAS today show that the agent's foot caught fire immediately.

An officer explained that the objective of the CNI was to prove experimentally "what may have happened in the case of the burned youths."

The CNI experiment has given added strength to the arguments of Dr Jorge Villegas and has undermined the official report, because, as the doctor says, neither of the youths had burned feet as would have been the case if they had kicked over the container of flammable liquid.

HOY VIEWS GELBARD'S VISIT, TORCHING CASE

PY291759 Santiago HOY in Spanish 21-27 Jul 86 p 5

[Editorial by Emilio Filippi: "Assistant Secretary Gelbard's Visit"]

[Text] U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for South America Robert Gelbard came to Chile, spoke to government officials and members of the opposition -- as well as with representatives of various other groups -- and, at the time of leaving our country, explained his conclusions.

Summarizing, he sympathizes with all that is being done to advance toward democracy, but he pointed out that in order to make this advance real it is necessary to adopt immediate measures aimed at the reestablishment of fundamental freedoms, such as freedom of assembly, freedom of information, and the freedom to fully engage in political activities.

What has occurred is quite curious. Despite the insistent protests against foreign intervention in our country's domestic matters, all Chileans, whatever sector they belong to, were interested in making known to the U.S. Government envoy the reality we are experiencing. And this was due to the fact that, despite certain chauvinist feelings that arise from time to time, no one fails to recognize, deep inside, how important it is for our nation to be really part of the civilized world.

The old ideas which tend to isolate nations to satisfy misinterpreted nationalisms have been set aside in favor of modern concepts of broader integration and interrelation. The village concept favored by some belongs to feudal times and has been surpassed by history and by the developments of communications, science, and exchange. In this world we all need each other, and to a certain extent we feel that we have a right to enjoy the advantages of universal civilization. We share the destiny of mankind, we care for what happens to each other, wherever he or she still lives. From a political and social point of view, isolation is harmful and greatly affects the economies of the countries of the world.

On the other hand, we cannot be indifferent to the fact that abroad the Chilean situation is considered "a case." Since the current regime came to power, the image of Pinochet's government has had ups and downs. And if, at some time or another, there has been the hope of seeing this image improve, the accelerated rhythm of its recent deterioration shows how urgent the necessity is for change that has been deeply felt by all nations.

For that reason, the presence of U.S. Republican Senator Jesse Helms has filled with enthusiasm even the most naive spokesman of the military regime. Both the flattery of certain members of the media, and the illusion that the U.S. politician has great influence in the White House, have kept a smile on the lips of the most prudent Chilean officials.

From time to time there are politicans in the United States who choose the worst causes and boast of swimming against the tide of good sense, while sailing its most reactionary waters. They use sharp arguments to justify slavery, poverty, or lack of liberties, as long as this situation is contrary to a position which they classify beforehand as pernitious. Now it can be the "communist danger," which they detect even in confessed and militant conservatives, while before it might have been civil rights.

Senator Helms is one of those U.S. politicans. And he has come to help General Pinochet's administration. If it were not so tragic, one could smile complacently at such a grotesque and yet sad thing.

Fortunately, Helms is known in the United States and for that reason has received an adequate response. On the other hand, Ambassador Harry Barnes, one of the victims of his insults, came out of the conflict strengthened by the support he received from his government, from the opposition, and from U.S. public opinion.

La Moneda should meditate on this incident, on its limited perception of the international reality, and on its disdain for the opinions of the rest of the world.

The fact that the Army has recognized the responsibility of Army officers and soliders in the tragic case of the burned youths is part of this process. Thanks to pressure from the public and, to a certain extent, the interest of the United States in seeing the case clear up, the situation has become clearer. Only a few years ago this would not have been possible. We must not forget that at first the government and the representatives of the Army intended to deny any participation in the case. Only in the face of undeniable evidence, endorsed by eyewitness reports, did they correct this improper attitude.

The official version has yet to be elucidated. This version tries to make a reproachable deed look like an accident. It still has to be made clear why, if everything occurred the way they say it did, the military men took the bodies to another place and abandoned them there. We hope that the investigating judge now fulfills his duty with zeal.

PY291727 Santiago EL MERCURIO in Spanish 19 Jul 86 p C-3

[Text] Several political leaders have reacted to remarks by U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for South America Robert Gelbard, who on 18 July ended a 5-day visit to Chile.

In a written statement, Gelbard said that "the United States support a peaceful transition to full democracy in Chile through the most efficient and expeditious ways." He added that "a transition toward democracy will be feasible only in an atomosphere of more freedom in which decisions can be made democratically."

The U.S. official said that "groups like the Communist Party, which today resort to violence to attain their political objectives, cannot be expected to abide by democratic rules in the future." He added that "those who consider the Communists and other extremists as valid interlocutors are not helping to build a stable democracy in Chile."

National Party President Carmen Saenz de Phillips said that "the statement by the U.S. official reveals that he has an accurate picture of our situation. He did not say much, but he listened to many people. One can see this in his remarks about the Communist Party. He said the Communists cannot take part in the political game because they have promoted confrontations."

Saenz de Phillips added that "we still believe that we should solve our own problems, as we have done throughout our history."

For his part, People's Democratic Movement (MDP) Secretary General Jose Sanfuetes said that "we categorically condemn the Reagan administration's open intervention in our domestic affairs, which once again has been proven by Mr Gelbard's visit."

Sanfuentes added that "the visit and the statements by Gelbard made it clear to the Chilean people that imperialism supports the dictatorship," stressing that "Mr Gelbard's attitude revealed a total disregard for the Chilean people and their democratic forces." The MDP leader said that the U.S. envoy "made considerable efforts to drive wedges within the opposition under the worn-out pretext of violence and anticommunism." Sanfuentes said he disagrees with Mr Gelbard's opinion that the Chilean Government's economic policy is "excellent."

In turn, Independent Democratic Union Secretary General Jaime Guzman said: "I believe it is important that Mr Gelbard said that to choose the best path toward democracy is the Chilean people's own, sovereign affair. In this regard, his opinion on the criteria that the U.S. Government considers the most suitable for the democratization process are based on a general approach. This is quite different from the remarks by other U.S. State Department officials who have openly and unacceptably meddled in our domestic affairs."

Guzman added: "As for his opinions, I share his concern over the possibility of a dangerous radicalization in Chile, and I agree that to avoid it the government must resolutely take all-encompassing measures in the path toward democracy, in line with the deadlines that the Constitution has established."

Guzman stated: "He warned that those who consider the Communists and other extremists as valid interlocutors are not helping to build a stable democracy in Chile. I believe this is good advice. I believe the Christian Democratic Party [DC] and its friends within the Democratic Alliance, who are always so eager to follow the suggestions of the U.S. State Department, should reconsider their ambiguous and hesitant attitude toward the Communist Party and its partners. This ambiguity is reflected by the multiple alliances between the DC and the MDP, ranging from electoral pacts in unions and universities to their links in the so-called National Civil Assembly."

In turn, DC Vice President Claudio Huepe said that "we are obviously interested in the U.S. envoy's opinion, because it reflects the views of a government of unquestionable influence in our continent. I believe the idea that the Chilean people must exercise self-determination is valuable and positive. I hope he realized that our greatest problem is that our fatherland is ruled by a government that bases its power on force and that does not allow Chileans to participate in the making of decisions that affect them." Huepe termed "unclear and worrying" the remarks by Gelbard as to whether "some political sectors, particularly the Communist Party, are legitimate, because this contradicts his own contention that it is the Chileans who have to make this type of decision."

"If this means that he believes the Communist Party cannot enjoy legal status in the future Chilean democracy, then it is unacceptable. We are the majority of Chilean political parties, even some rightist parties, have always maintained that ideas cannot be banned. We believe all parties should enjoy legal status. In addition, this is common to all Western demcracies. Strict laws should be enforced to punish violence, but this affects radical sectors of both the left and the right."

Huepe termed "positive" the U.S. envoy's remarks on the preconditions for a transition toward democracy, such as the existence of "a spectrum of full civil liberties."

For his part, National Vanguard director Jose Ramon Molina Fuenzalida said that "as nationalists, we hold self-determination to be one of the principles of our ideology. Consequently, we deem unacceptable that foreign government spokesman should pass judgment and give advice on our affairs." He added that "faced with such circumstances, the nationalist sector reiterates its rejection of foreign intervention and points out that the opposition is permanently seeking to submit our domestic affairs to foreign arbitration. This is an obvious consequence of the opposition's inability to play a significant political role."

Molina Fuenzalida said that "Gelbard's remarks on a peaceful transition to full democracy, through the most efficient and expeditious ways, show that he agrees and supports the constitutional transition process being conducted by the regime headed by his excellency the president. This process is being swiftly, efficiently, and seriously conducted."

"We agree that the Communist Party, the terrorist groups and those who promote violence are the enemies of democracy, because their principles and their actions are against it," he concluded.

CENTRAL BANK HEAD DISCUSSES U.S. PRESS REPORTS

[Text] Santiago, 29 Jul (EFE) -- Chilean Central Bank President Colonel Enrique Seguel has downplayed the importance of U.S press reports of a possible decision by the Reagan government to oppose international loans for Chile. Col Seguel said the reports are just "speculations published by the press which have no importance whatsoever and no firm basis." The Chilean Central Bank president added that "the formal relations between the two countries are not conducted by reports, but by the organizations which traditionally handle foreign relations.

200 STUDENTS ARRESTED IN SANTIAGO

[Text] Santiago, 29 Jul (AFP) -- Police sources have reported that at least 200 student were detained today in this capital during incidents with the police at the University of Chile law school and at the Santiago Professional Institute. Other incidents took place on Vicuna Mackenna Avenue, in front of the Argentine Embassy in Chile, where groups of university students erected barricades to block traffic. The students were repressed by the forces of order.

Uniformed Carabineros raided the law school that was occupied early today by student demanding an end to intervention in the universities. Humberto Burotto, president of the Student Federation of Chile, has stated that the dean himself called the forces of order to evict the student from the school. Police authorities have reported that 110 university students were detained during these incidents, and that 90 others were arrested near the Santiago Professional Institute, where they were staging demonstrations demanding more state economic support for higher education.

VENEZUELA JOINS FORCES AGAINST REBELS

PA290315 Bogota Emisoras CARACOL Network in Spanish 1215 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Text] Bogota -- Colombia and Venezuela have agreed to form a common front against subversive movements in the American Continent and have imediately begun to contact the defense ministers of Latin American countries. The initiative includes reciprocity of information and logistical integration; the strengthening of border control measures; and information about officials who fight the guerrillas which operate in the region.

Venezuelan Defense Minister General Jose Rafael Cardozo Grimaldi, who first thought about creating a front to fight the guerrillas, said that joint actions will also be carried out to fight drug trafficking, contraband, and kidnappings.

MINISTER JAIME CASTRO EVALUATES GUERRILLA FORCES

[Text] Government Minister Jaimie Castro said that Colombia's current problem derives from public order situations due to the presence and actions of the guerrillas and to the terrorism in the past few months. Castro added that the new guerrilla plan is to destroy the current political system. He noted that, contrary to the first years of the subversive struggle, the current guerrillas are organized and have a hierarchy, with adequate training and an iron discipline.

Several sectors of the guerrilla forces depend on an international power center: there are outside forces who seek to promote or encourage it. In order to accomplish its goals, the subversion in the past few years has sought financing without any scruples or reserve, has resorted to extortion and kidnappings, and in some cases has reached economic agreements with drug traffickers, said Minister Jaime Castro in his report to the congress.

Castro warned that any peaceful coexistence disappears when citizens are subject to attacks, murders, war taxes, and kidnappings, which bring dangerous results such as people taking the law into their own hands.

The government minister warned the guerrilla groups that have not joined the peace process or that withdrew from it that Colombia has no obligation to establish reforms that will lead to its extinction. Castro said the state has the obligation to grant rights and guarantees which give equal conditions to all those who participate in public life. In his report to the congress -- which Emisoras CARACOL has received in advance -- Castro said that it is not possible to seek through agreements or covenants results the guerrillas did not accomplish with arms during 20 or more years of struggle. The guerrillas themselves have understood this. Therefore, their negotiators have said that through the negotiation process they do not expect to receive a socialist regime on a silver platter. They simply expect to be granted decent conditions to participate in politics, to present their thesis and programs, and to defend them, even if it is in a partial way.

BOMB EXPLODES NEAR PARLIAMENT, ONE PERSON KILLED

[Text] Bogota, 30 Jul (EFE) -- According to initial reports, one person was killed and and at least three were wounded as a result of an explosion that occurred near the national capitol (Parliament) and the Presidency of the republic, in Bogota, today. The explosion occurred at 1244 (1744 GMT) on a street close to the Parliament building which is usually filled with thousands of pedestrians.

Security and assistance organizations went to the site of the explosion right away and eyewitnesses said that an unidentified person "was completely destroyed," while three others were seriously wounded. There has been no official information as to the number and condition of the victims, or the exact cause of the expolosion.

Journalists who cover Parliament said that it was a bomb placed by a tree on the sidewalk. According to other reports it could have been the explosion of a gas line. The security forces that protect public buildings in that area reacted immediately; several suspicious individuals were reportedly arrested.

A terrorist attack carried out at 0730 today also resulted in one Navy officer and the wife of an Army noncommissioned officer being wounded in a neighborhood in southern Bogota. The Popular Liberation Army has been blamed.

EPL DENOUNCES FARC STANCE, ELECTORAL AMBITIONS

[By Denis Garcia Salinas]

[Excerpts] Managua, 29 Jul (ACAN-EFE) -- The Popular Liberation Army [EPL] of Colombia has accused the FARC of having become "shock forces" and a group with electoral ambitions. The EPL, armed branch of the Colombian Communist Party-Marxist Leninist Faction [PCC-ML] also blamed FARC for 'promoting the demobilization of the Colombian guerrilla movement." [passage omitted]

EPL leader Sonia Martinez and PCC-ML Central Committee member Luis Gomez have denounced "the revisionist and elections-minded attitude" of FARC.

Sonia Martinez, who arrived at yesterday's news conference with her face covered, and Luis Gomez are participating in the Ninth meeting of anti-fascist and anti-Imperialist Youths sponsored by the Nicaraguan Marxist-Leninist Party. [passage omitted]

FOREIGN MINISTER ON AMBASSADOR'S MEETING

[Excerpt] Foreign Minister Carlos A. Saldivar said at the opening of a meeting of Paraguayan ambassadors: "According to orders from President General Alfredo Stroessner, we have summoned the ambassadors who will occupy their first posts abroad, as well as those who are in Asuncion for official reasons, to a meeting and an exchange of opinions, but mostly so they can receive Foreign Ministry instructions based on the policy outlined by the chief of state regarding the handling of Paraguayan foreign relations."

Concerning the issues that were discussed, the foreign minister said: "They are known to everybody; our main objective is to improve ambassadors' performance. We admit, however, that they have undertaken their activities in keeping with the policies and the work done by the government of President Stroessner."

"Nevertheless," he told the ambassadors, "our country is experiencing an accelerated process of development in all fields, not just in the economic sector. Therefore, we, too, want to experience this development in our sector."

He added then that "although in this era communications have experienced important technological progress which allows us to be in permanent contact with you, these communications do not always let us express everything we want to convey to you or allow you to give us your opinions so that we may immediately develop these aspects of the country's foreign policies."

The minister said that "this meeting's main objective is to discuss general topics. The bilateral topics will be discussed between the ambassadors and the minister or the advisers at another meeting." With this criteria, the meeting dealt exclusively with global topics that make up the country's foreign policy: "To tell the world the truth about the country, its government, and its people, who work in peace for the development of the country and who live happily." ABSENTEEISM IN COLORADO ELECTIONS CAUSES CONCERN

On the other hand, other party leaders have considered the absenteeism unimportant and pointed out that this is usual in the elections of new boards, both in the capital and the interior. Mario Abdo Benitez, political secretary of the party Executive Board, said, however, that the absenteeism "was alarming" and should not recur. But he added that the registers have to be checked to see if they are correct. "Maybe there has not been absenteeism but only mistakes in compiling the registers," he stated.

The Colorado Party Executive Board is also concerned about the appearance of forged party registration booklets, which, according to reports, might have been registered for the recent elections. [passage omitted]

GUERRILLA ACTIVITY MARS INDEPENDENCE CELEBRATION

[Text] Lima, 29 Jul (AFP) -- Local police today reported that 11 people were killed and 55 injured in accidents, terrorist activities, and crimes that took place in several areas of Peru during celebrations marking the 165th anniversary of Peruvian independence.

Carlett Gonzales, deputy prefect of Tocache Province in San Martin Department, located in the northern jungle area of Peru, was killed when eating at a restuarant by four alleged drug traffickers. Carlett Gonzales was an ex-Army captain and a member of the ruling APRA [American Popular Revolutionary Party].

Carlett Gonzales had recently been appointed to his post and according to police reports had plans to undertake a comprehensive operation against drug trafficking and to break up international drug gangs operating in the Peruvian jungle region. Tocache is one of the gang's centers of operation.

In Lima a young worker, Elmer Zamora, was killed by two gunshots when he confronted by a group of unidentified people in the Comas district after participating in festivities to commemorate the nation's independence.

Elsewhere, subversives, allegedly members of the Shining Path terrorist group, attacked a police station in the San Juan de Miraflores district in Lima. Police officer Manuel Palomino was wounded in the shooting that ensued between police and Shining Path.

An APRA party official in the de la Victoria district of Lima was the target of a dynamite attack. No injuries were reported, but the people responsible for the attack left a letter containing death threats for the local APRA party district leaders.

An apartment building was set on fire with a kerosene bottle. The building burned to the ground; 20 people were injured and 1 person died as a result. Elsewhere, two children were burned in their home in a slum. In Ayacucho an unidentified drunk soldier killed the son of APRA leader Juan Vegapatino during a party in a club.

Four high-tension pylons near a police station were blown up by subversives in Ayacucho. Before leaving, the Shining Path subversives left many red flags and propaganda leaflets regarding their actions.

In Huancayo, 312 km east of Lima, a school bus with 30 students went off an embankment when returning from national holiday celebrations. Three children died and 20 others were wounded. In Chimbote, 412 km north of Lima, another bus crashed into a house, killing 2 persons and injuring all 14 passengers. These events took place following the 21 attacks in this capital by terrorists, including the attempts to set on fire the Bolivar, Crillon, and Sheraton Hotels in downtown Lima Sunday night and Monday at dawn.

Strict security measures and an unprecedented security operation to restrict subversive activities have been taken due to the national holidays on 27, 28 and 29 July when Social Democrat President Alan Garcia marks his 1st year in power.

Interior Deputy Minister Augustin Mantilla has reported that in Lima alone more than 3,000 policemen are participating in the security operation. They are supported by light armored vehicles and helicopters. It is also known that police have arrested 20 alleged Shining Path members in the past 20 hours in various parts of Lima. The festivities marking the national holiday were not hindered by the subversive actions or the security measures imposed by the government, including the curfew in force from 0000 to 0500.

Army Kills Maoist Guerrillas

[Text] Lima, 26 Jul (EFE) -- Twenty members of the Maoist organization Shining Path have been killed by Army personnel, after 25 of them tried unsuccessfully to blow up a bridge.

According to a report today in the Lima newspaper LA REPUBLICA, the Shining Path members detonated several bombs yesterday morning under a bridge over the Rio Macro, 118 km from Ayachucho.

Army and police personnel pursued and killed 20 of the Shining Path members. The others escaped, some of the them apparently wounded. The Shining Path casualties are in addition to 18 others, which occurred in Ayacucho Department on 17 July in La Rinconada and Chaupimayo in clashes with army patrols.

According to the LA REPUBLICA report, the Shining Path guerrillas are mostly very young and poorly armed.

It was learned yesterday in Ayacucho that a Shining Path column of 20 guerrillas entered the town of San Jose de Secce on 24 July and killed 5 people, apparently friends and relatives of provincial Governor Victor Naupa of the APRA, whom they seemed to be seeking.

Security Tight For Lima Parade

[Text] Lima, 29 Jul (EFE) -- The traditional military parade which marks Peruvian independence day was held today in Lima under strict security measures, with helicopters flying low over the city surveillance using trained dogs. Some 3,000 policemen were assigned to guard the commemorative ceremonies.

The parade was held in Lima's Plaza de Armas, in front of the Government Palace. A reviewing stand was placed in front of Government Palace to accomodate President Alan Garcia, ministers, accredited diplomatic corps, and civilian and military personalities.

This annual parade usually takes place on Brazil Avenue. This year the ceremony, which marked the 165th anniversary of Peruvian independence, was moved, apparently for security reasons. For the first time in 50 years the parade was held in the Plaza de Armas, where access was strictly controlled. The parade did not include armored vehicles or cavalry, but did include troops, both military and police.

The parade, which started with Navy troops and concluded with police forces, was short in comparison with those of past years. Immediately following the parade, President Garcia returned to Government Palace.

Bomb, Attacks Shake Arequipa

[Text] Lima, 27 Jul (EFE) -- It was disclosed here today that a car bomb and several other terrorist devices exploded in a series of attacks perpetrated in the last 48 hours in Arequipa, 1,025 km south of Lima. The attacks caused extensive material damage but no casualties. The car bomb explosion occured near a shopping center, located in downtown Lima. Seriously damaged were the facade and interior offices of a bank branch as well as windows and doors of a television station, whose equipment was also affected.

According to press reports, a few minutes earlier two buildings of the governing APRA, located in different neighborhoods, were bombed.

Three bomb explosions also took place in Libertad Park, and explosive devices were hurled against the doors of two houses near downtown Arequipa, damaging the facades.

In Chiclayo, 700 km north of Lima, unidentified individuals detonated a bomb at the door of the Agrarian bank branch, near the Plaza de Armas, breaking windows and damaging the building's interior.

MRTA Guerrillas Storm Huancayo

[Text] Lima, 29 Jul (AFP) -- Members of the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA), a guerrilla organization, occupied a small township near the city of Huancayo, 312 km east of Lima, and took medicine and other items, the police reported today.

The attack, which occurred on 27 July, apparently passed unnoticed by residents of the area, but the extremists themselves have disseminated reports on the attack, which was later confirmed by police sources.

This was the first attack on an Andean rural population by MRTA guerilla fighters. Earlier the MRTA engaged only in urban guerrilla operations (attacks and holdups against radio stations and news agencies) in Lima and elsewhere.

AZPURUA INFORMS LUSINCHI OF RESULTS OF U.S. TRIP

PA291241 Caracas Television Service in Spanish 0000 GMT 29 Jul 86

[Report by Elsy Barroeta]

According to Minister Azpurua, the international banks understand the current situation in our country caused by the drop in oil prices. Venezuela expressed the need to modify the financial agreements. It is impossible to pay the $21 billion under the terms of the agreements already signed; therefore, it will be necessary to introduce modifications to place Venezuela in a more flexible position.

[Begin Azpurua recording] In this sense, we also discussed the need to renew talks with the banks' Advisory Committee in order to analyze Venezuela's proposal and its basis, taking into consideration the foreign exchange income, the balance of payments, future prospects, and the time in which Venezuela will need to complete the payments of its public foreign debt. [end recording]

According to Minister Azpurua, after these initial contacts aimed at modifying the agreements on refinancing the public foreign debt, the next step will be a meeting with all members of the banks' Advisory committee. For this, representatives of the Venezuelan Government will travel to the United States during the first 2 weeks of August.

MINISTER CARDOZO PROPOSES REGIONAL DEFENSE GROUP

[Text] Caracas, 27 Jul (DPA) -- According to morning newspaper reports in Caracas, Defense Minister General Jose Rafael Cardozo Grimaldi has proposed a common Latin American front against subversive movements. Speaking in San Cristobal, Gen Cardozo said he will contact other defense ministers in Latin America "to establish a common front against various subversive groups thriving in the continent." He added that there is need for integration in this regard; to achieve that end, "I will contact Latin American counterparts to discuss other security issues, because we need information from other nations just as they need our information. We are willing to cooperate fully and to train officers to fight our common enemies, because Latin American countries, and especially Bolivarian nations, are affected." As for the common struggle against drug trafficking, contraband, border kidnappings, and murders shared with Colombia, the minister said that "we will intensify relations between the two countries in keeping with a treaty signed in 1984," broaden regional meetings, and foster periodic visits between militarymen of the two countries. Emphasis will be placed on these aspects "to tackle problems that negatively affect our societies."

EDITORIAL ON AGREEMENTS WITH FOREIGN BANKS

[Editorial: "The Agreements With the IMF: Four Aspects To Carefully Think About"]

[Text] The signing of the agreement with the IMF marks the end of a phase of difficult negotiations with foreign banks. There are reservations that will exist until the details of the agreement are analyzed and its effect on the Mexican economy known, but it can be said that the agreement, in principle, means a moderate change in the attitude of international banks. As we see it, the negotiations had four basic points that served as the nucleus of the discussions.

The first point eliminates the possibility of reducing interest payments by relating them to export prices. It was agreed that the banks will provide new short-term credits and will be committed to granting additional funds or to reducing them, depending on oil-price fluctuations. Instead of reducing interest payments — which was one of the options — it was agreed to increase the financing to guarantee that the debt will be serviced at all times.

Another main point in the negotiations was the fiscal deficit. One of the most strict guidelines of international financial organizations has been that of making new credits conditional to budget deficit reduction commitments. Recently, there have been drastic budget cuts that have produced an economic recession. The deficit, however, has not diminished proportionately because the impact produced by internal and foreign debt interest and the devaluation have resulted in growing financial expenditures, a situation that the general results make evident. In this regard it is important that the IMF take the operations deficit into consideration when making evaluations.

The third point is the so-called structural change, which includes industrial retransferring [reconversion industrial], the sale of state enterprises, the opening of commerce, and the promotion of foreign investments. There is, in effect, a list of guidelines that have dangerous edges that will deeply modify the Mexican economy, and that could lead to an irreversible situation.

A fourth aspect is that Mexico has noted, regarding the possibility of selling public enterprises and promoting foreign investments, that decisions on strategic and priority enterprises and on foreign investments are to be made only by the Mexican legislature and the product of Mexican policies.

Judging from the contents of the agreements with the IMF, there has been really a moderate change of attitude, considering that the door to new financing has been opened after having been closed to Mexico for the past 2 months. The IMF also agreed to make some type of link with other economic variables, such as the price of oil, in order to avoid new paralyzations of the Mexican economy while Mexico waits for the results of the negotiations. This change of attitude, however, is only small relief, because the unjust international economic order conditions remain and will continue to act against the less-developed economies. The change of attitude of the financial organizations represents a first step on a flexibility road that must be expanded to guarantee economic growth — an unescapable condition for social justice and the foundation of political stability.

PEMEX NOTES THAT GASOLINE NEEDS WILL BE MET

FL282318 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 1554 GMT 26 Jul 86

[Excerpt] Mexico City, 26 Jul (NOTIMEX) -- Gasoline production will increase by 17,000 barrels daily during the present year with respect to the preceding year; production will reach 121,600 barrels daily in 1986, according to Pemex. Pemex also reports that this level of production will guarantee the demand for gasoline will be met nationwide. In cases such as the federal district, the gasoline has been improved to reduct the emissions of gas and contaminating smoke. Nova Plus and Extra Plus gasolines are only a part of Pemex products. Pemex produces 2.72 million barrels of crude oil daily. Of this, approximately 1.5 million barrels are sold on the international market; the remainder is consumed domestically. Pemex produces two qualities of crude oil; light crude, called isthmus, and heavy crude, called maya. Pemex produces 1.16 million barrels daily of the heavy crude, which is of poorer quality, is more viscous, and has elements that make its processing more difficult. Pemex produces 1.56 million barrels of light crude oil daily. [passage omitted]

ECONOMIC OFFICIAL ON TRADE TREATY NONCOMPLIANCE

PA260413 Panama City LA ESTRELLA DE PANAMA in Spanish 24 Jul 86 pp A 1, A 14

[By Edmundo Dante Dolphy]

[Text] Felix Maduro, president of the Panamanian Chamber of Commerce, Industries, and Agriculture, recently reported Guatemalan and Salvadoran noncompliance with the bilateral free trade treaties they share with Panama.

While these countries argued that their Central Bank policies have imposed certain restrictions which prevent them from complying with the agreements, the position of the Panamanian joint commission, made up of private and government sectors, is that treaties among countries should be honored and are above any internal imposition.

Maduro pointed out that among the restrictions imposed by the bilateral free trade treaty with El Salvador and Guatemala, the most problematic is the inclusion of a list of products, which is used as a basis for the payment of a tax surcharge for all products not appearing on that list. Maduro said that very few Panamanian products appear on this list, which adversely affects Panamanian exporters, who cannot carry out free trade operations.

Another negative aspect causing an imbalance is the payment for Panamanian exports by the Central Banks of El Salvador and Guatemala.

Maduro said that because of the noncompliance with these bilateral treaties, Panama has had to take certain unilateral steps including restricting imports of the products of these countries covered by the bilateral agreements.

Panama explained its position at a recent meeting in Guatemala with the economy ministers and presidents of the Central American Central Banks. The joint commission -- which is made up of the Chamber of Commerce, Union of Panamanian Industrialists, Panamanian Association of Business Executives, Panamanian Institute of Foreign Trade, Panamanian Exporters Association, and government officials -- intends to talk with the commerce minister and discuss the issue with the president of the Republic to seek alternatives or solutions to this important free trade problem.

GOVERNMENT SAYS NICARAGUAN CHARGES 'GROUNDLESS'

[Text] Acting Foreign Minister Carlos Rivera Bianchini said today that Costa Rica considers the Nicaraguan charges groundless and invalid. Rivera made this remark when he referred to Nicaragua's petition to the UN Security Council to investigate the activities of the Nicaraguan counterrevolution [words indistinct] in Costa Rica.

[Passage indistinct] Rivera said Costa Rica will respond appropriately to the Nicaraguan petition to the UN Security Council. He added that this petition is groundless and that it is intended as a smokescreen to pave the way for Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega's upcoming presentation at the United Nations. Rivera reiterated that the Nicaraguan charges have been rejected and added that this will be noted in the response to be sent to Managua.

Rivera said the government is obliged to give proof of its neutrality only to the Costa Rican people. He admitted, however, that in the past few weeks the authorities have taken some actions that prove neutrality is being enforced. Rivera was referring to the expulsion of two Nicaraguans and to the discovery of a clandestine clinic.

[Text] San Jose, 30 Jul (DPA) -- Acting Costa Rican Foreign Minister Carlos Rivera Bianchini said at noon today that Costa Rica will go to The Hague's International Court of Justice [ICJ] to defend itself against the accusations made by Nicaragua. Rivera said: "In the face of the accusation presented by Nicaragua, we have decided to go to the ICJ to state our defense there."

Two days ago, Nicargua submitted charges against Costa Rica at the ICJ, saying "Costa Rica cooperates with the rebel groups that are attacking the Nicaraguan Government."

Rivera said: "Costa Rica maintains its neutrality in the hostilities, and it has categorical proof of its actions against rebel groups." He added that although the Costa Rican Government feels the Nicaraguan accusation is groundless, it will go to the ICJ because Costa Rica signed the agreements creating that court.

Protest Against EPS Attack

[Text] Costa Rica has presented a new protest to the Sandinist Foreign Ministry over an EPS armed attack in the Boca de San Carlos region at 1515 on 26 July.

Costa Rica requested that the Nicaraguan Government do all it can to prevent that type of action from recurring. It also requested that Nicaragua investigate that attack so the ones who carried out that illegal action, which aggravates relations between the two countries, are properly sanctioned. Several mortar shells hit Costa Rican territory in the attack.

The note sent by Costa Rican Acting Foreign Minister Carlos Rivera Bianchini to Sandinist Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto points out the incongruities of Nicaraguan policy on Costa Rica. While high-ranking Nicaraguan officials make statements in favor of constructive and friendly relations between our two nations, Costa Rican sovereignty continues to be attacked from EPS-controlled Nicaraguan territory, the note adds. This new protest was delivered to the Nicaraguan Embassy in San Jose in the last few hours.

MINISTRY DENIES ENTRY VISA TO FDN'S CALERO

[Text] The Costa Rican Security Ministry yesterday rejected a request by FDN counterrevolutionary leader Adolfo Calero to enter the country. Government Minister Guido Fernandez reported to the Security Council that one of Calero's lawyers had presented the request. According to the request, the FDN leader would reportedly stay in the country 1 week to visit some relatives.

The government minister indicated that the decision to turn down Adolfo Calero's request was based on the same reasons for which it had previously been turned down. Fernandez admitted that last May Calero had also requested, through a lawyer, a permit to enter Costa Rica. Nevertheless, on that occasion the Security Council turned down his request because it considers that Adolfo Calero represents the FDN military branch. Consequently, his presence in Costa Rica would have compromised the government's neutrality, Guido Fernandez said. He added that people have political freedom in Costa Rica, and exiles are asked to live according to the country's civic and political guidelines.

VISA FOR LIBYAN OFFICIAL UNDER INVESTIGATION

PA301431 San Jose LA NACION in Spanish 21 Jul 86 p 4-A [Text] The Foreign Ministry will try to find out today why our consulate in Rio de Janerio granted an entry visa to Kamil Maghuri, a Libyan People's Committee for Foreign Liaison official.

Immigration regulations have been in existence for months that restrict the entry to Costa Rica of Libyan citizens.

Although Maghuri was identified in Brazil as the Libyan foreign minister, it was then clarified that this post is occupied by 'Ali al-Turayki.

Deputy Foreign Minister Carlos Rivera Bianchini said yesterday that all he has in his possession is a very plain, unofficial report on the visa authorization granted by Consul Jose Hilario Villalobos. Maghuri arrived on Friday in the Brazilian city from Casablanca, Morocco. He was planning to travel to Nicaragua and other countries in Central America, according to what he said, with a stopover in Costa Rica.

VARIG Airlines had refused to transport Maghuri to Juan Santamaria Airport because he did not have the permit to enter our territory.

On Friday night, however Maghuri obtained a visa. He was unable to travel on Saturday because there are no flights to San Jose on that day. VARIG only has flights to San Jose on Fridays at 1635. The Libyan also was not able to travel to La Paz, where he planned to go.

One of his assistants said Maghuri had planned to make a "secret" trip. Moreover, he was annoyed because Maghuri's situation had been made public.

Yesterday afternoon, the Costa Rican deputy minister insisted that he does not have sufficient details about this matter and that he would proceed with an investigation.

It is possible that information on this will be received from Consul Villalobos today.

HONDURAN PRESIDENT AZCONA ARRIVES ON VISIT

PA310447 San Salvador Domestic Service in Spanish 0354 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] At his arrival at Ilopango Air Force Base, Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo was received by Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte, accompanied by members of the Legislative Assembly and of the Cabinet, as well as by top-ranking military commanders and directors of autonomous and semi-autonomous institutions.

The troops of the Air Force base rendered the respective military honors to the two presidents. President Duarte said President Azcona Hoyo's visit is a very important event.

VICE PRESIDENT DISCUSSES PEACE PROCESS

PA281730 San Salvador Radio Cadena YSKL in Spanish 1730 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Text] [Hurtado] Mr Castillo Claramount, what is the specific and real situation of the Contadora Group? Is there any hope that it will move forward?

[Castillo] Look, the problem is that I do not know to what extent the Contadora and Support Group countries will really maintain their determination to continue with this effort. I am concerned over the fact that in Caracas there was no decision or initiative taken to further such efforts. They only participated in a protocol act to accept decoration.

I had sincerely hoped that there would be some kind of statement, but there was none. Our reply coincides with that of Costa Rica and is less like that of Honduras, although Honduras is leaving a door open. Apparently, Guatemala has not yet replied. The one from Nicaragua also leaves a door open. I am referring to the replies given by our countries after having received the document in June.

Given that they asked for our reply, we said, in El Salvador's case, that we take the Contadora Group at its word and that we hope it will resume and continue its efforts.

[Hurtado] There is much talk about a surprise meeting by the four countries -- namely Honduras, Guatemala, El Salvador and Costa Rica -- with Nicaragua to discuss this Contadora problem.

[Castillo] No, there is no surprise meeting. It is most probable that on 13 August, when we all meet in Guatemala -- that is, vice presidents, foreign ministers, and three parliamentary representatives of each country-- there might be an informal meeting to explore a possible meeting between the five countries. I said before that this must be done in accordance with an agenda allowing us to make progress and work seriously. That is definitely our idea; we are not working on surprise meetings of any kind.

[Hurtado] Mr Castillo Claramount, if this 13 August meeting is to establish a Central American parliament made up by all countries, could this in the end displace the Contadora Group and bring about a Central American solution?

[Castillo] No, this is not a move to exclude that group. It was never conceived with that purpose. Specifically, in our case, we proposed the paraliament to the Contadora Group and the group accepted our proposal that it be a group to support Contadora. That is still our position.

We believe Contadora produced a system. The Contadora Group has brought some results besides the integration of the countries, etc. It is important that we rescue it and that it not be forgotten. Our Foreign Ministry has designed an entire scientific concept around this position, the so-called Contadora doctrine.

We are treating this with all the seriousness that is deserves. There are a number of elements with political, juridical, diplomatic, and military security connotations. It is very important to follow up on them. We must improve and develop them. I think that this must be done within the framework of the Contadora Group document-- within the 21 objectives and the Contadora document concept.

[Hurtado] To end this interview, is there any hope for Contadora? Do you think that this could really be the beginning of a peaceful solution in the Central American area?

[Castillo] We hope so; however, realistically speaking, I think that as long as the five Central American countries do not meet to probe the extent of our determination and desire to reach firm and sincere commitments and to achieve progress, I will not be able to reply to your queston in realistic terms. I can simply express optimism and my desire, but that is not what we need. We need to know the extent of our determination. That can be decided at the discussion table. I think that 13 August will be an appropriate day to examine the possibility of such a meeting. In that meeting, we will see how far we can really go. Future developments will depend on this. I honestly think that to a large extent, this will depend on Nicaragua's position.

DUARTE ISSUES COMMUNIQUE ON KIDNAPPED COLONEL

[Communique signed by President Jose Napoleon Duarte as commander in chief of the Armed Forces -- dated 29 July]

[Text] The General Command of the Armed Forces of El Salvador hereby responds to recent reports on the kidnapping of Colonel Omar Napoleon Avalos made known here and abroad.

1. The armed institution has been concerned with making possible the return of Col Avalos to his family and to his professional tasks from the very moment that he was kidnapped by a subversive FMLN-FDR group.

2. Unfortunately, the subversive organizations refused to allow personal contact between Col Avalos and representatives of the Salvadoran church and other international humanitarian organizations, and for this reason the physical condition of the victim could not be established. The conditions under which he is being illegally held could not be established either. This made efforts for his release more difficult.

3. During his illegal and unjust captivity, Col Avalos has been deprived of the guarantees to which he, as human being, is entitled.

4. Since the Armed Forces have been inflicting many casualties on the extremist groups, the latter have appealed for a humantarian gesture on the part of the Armed Forces to allow the evacuation from the country of an undetermined number of rebels crippled by the violence that they have chosen to impose on the Salvadoran people.

As a result of this, the Armed Forces High Command has made this humanitarian gesture contingent on the immediate release of Col Omar Napoleon Avalos, but the irresponsible leaders of the FMLN-FDR have refused to fulfill minimum humanitarian obligations toward their own crippled elements and have refused to release Col Avalos.

5. Nevertheless, in the 9 months of the inhuman capitivity to which Col Avalos has been subjected, this is the first time that the possibility of his release has appeared, although so far there has been no formal and specific proposal from the extremist FMLN-FDR groups.

6. Once the demands of the Marxist organizations are known, this General Command is prepared to consider adequate possibilities to find a solution to this case within the framework of the law and the humanitarian principles that must be observed and respected by all those who are deeply committed to the search for peace in our country.

San Salvador, 29 July 1986

President of the Republic and commander in chief of the Armed Forces.

Archbishop To Visit Avalos

PA310404 Panama City ACAN in Spanish 0245 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Excerpts] San Salvador, 30 Jul (ACAN-EFE) -- A military source reported to ACAN-EFE that Salvadoran Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas will travel tomorrow to the eastern department of Morazan to visit a solider who was kidnapped 9 months ago by the guerrillas.

The visit of the Salvadoran prelate follows a request made to the church through the media 2 weeks ago by the kidnapped man, Colonel Napoleon Avalos. Avalos was kidnapped 9 months ago by FMLN guerrillas. [passage omitted]

Regarding the visit to the prisoner, the prelate said: "Surely the years take their toll, but I can go, although to go I might have to call off the Episcopal Conference meeting that was scheduled for this week." [passage omitted]

COPREFA ISSUES REPORT ON REBEL CASUALTIES

[Excerpt] The Armed Forces Press Committee, Coprefa, in its weekly report says it inflicted 13 casualties on the guerrillas. It acknowledges the deaths of 3 soldiers and reports that 13 others were wounded.

The military report details that during the past week, the insurgents killed 2 civilians, wounded 3, kidnapped 12 others; it did not provide further details.

According to Coprefa, in the economic area, the FMLN destroyed five pylons, an ANTEL [National Administration for Telecommunications] office, one cargo train, a vehicle of the Ministry of Agriculture and Livestock, an excavator, a bulldozer, and a CEL [Lempa River Hydroelectric Executive Commission] sub-station, which was partially destroyed. The report also states that during counterinsurgency actions carried out by the Armed Forces in various strife-torn areas in the country, different kinds of weapons were seized, including 19 rifles, 21 grenade launchers, 7 grenades, and 186 mines. 'Important' Rebel Casualty

PA282321 San Salvador LA PRENSA GRAFICA in Spanish 26 Jul 86 pp 5, 25

[Text] Colonel Jesus Caceres has reported 18 subversives were killed and 35 wounded in the initial part of the seventh phase of the military operation in Chalatenango.

Col Caceres, commander of Military Detachment No 1 headquartered in Chalatenango, said yesterday that one of the most important casualties sustained by terrorist groups in the past few days was Commander Susana, one of the FPL's [Farabundo Marti Peoples Liberation Forces] most important leaders.

He said the late commander was not only one of subversion's most courageous combatants in the northern area of the country, but was in charge of funds coming from abroad that only she knew how to obtain and send to the most critical areas.

This is the main reason why, said Col Blandon, her death constitutes a heavy blow to the terrorist organizations.

As for the weapons seized, he added that the varous units participating in the Chavez Carreno Operation, which is already in its seventh phase, seized 15 rifles of various calibers, including FAL, AR-15, M-16, and G-3 rifles.

Blandon said most military actions have concentrated in Arcatao and its surrounding area, which are at the highest points in Los Filos, La Canada, and Los Bolsones de Zazalapa.

Thanks to the arrival of the Atlacatl Battalion headed by Colonel Juan Carlos Carillo, the situation in that border area is completely under Armed Forces control. It is expected that this northern area will be thoroughly cleaned up in the next few days, concluded Col Blandon.

AZCONA ON CONTRA PRESENCE, NICARAGUAN ICJ SUIT

[Text] Tegucigalpa, 30 Jul (AFP) -- Honduran President Jose Azcona today admitted the presence of anti-Sandinist rebels in Honduran territory but reasserted that his government will not control the situation to "protect the Nicaraguans' backs." He also suggested to the government in Managua that a wall like the one in Berlin be constructed throughout the common border to stop refugees from entering Honduras, "because they affect our economy in an extraordinary way."

During statements to the local station Radio America, Azcona said: "We would have to use all our resources" to prevent the contras' actions in Honduras, and "we will not act as guards to protect the Sandinists' backs."

The radio station's editorial questioned Azcona's statements, in which he publicly acknowledged the rebel presence in the country, stating that Nicaragua might use this argument in its charges against Honduras before the International Court of Justice (ICJ).

Nevertheless, Azcona asserted that Honduras has not officially recognized the rebel presence, and recalled that his government has already told the ICJ that it does not recognize the court's jurisdiction in this case.

Azcona reasserted that "the contras currently live in Honduran territory and come and go as they please," and sometimes "they establish temporary camps."

Nevertheless, Azcona stated quite clearly that "the contras and the U.S. Armed Forces do not have permanent bases in Honduras."

Azcona admitted the possibility that there are contra camps and hospitals in Honduras, but insisted that "it is not easy for Honduras to limit the activities at the border" with Nicaragua.

He added that "it has also been impossible to limit the Salvadoran guerrillas' entries, even though it has been ascertained that they have links with some sectors in the refugee camps."

He added that "the contras also come and go in Costa Rica" -- which is also being accused by Nicaragua at the ICJ of letting the anti-Sandinist rebels use its territory for armed actions -- "and the government in that country has maintained a position similar to the one adopted by Honduras."

The radio station reported that the Salvadoran refugee camps are closely watched while the Nicaraguan refugee centers received protection from the Armed Forces. However, Azcona denied that Nicaraguan refugees are being given special treatment in Honduras.

Referring to the charges presented against Honduras at the ICJ, Azcona said: "Knowing that Nicaragua might use any action for its propaganda and publicity plans, we notified The Hague in May or April that we do not recognize its jurisdiction."

The president asserted that Honduras has based its policy concerning Nicaragua on three points, as follows:

-- Honduras will never lend its territory for troops from any power to invade Nicaragua.

-- The Armed Forces will not enter 1 inch inside Nicaraguan territory; in other words, Honduras will never invade Nicaragua.

-- Honduras will not earmark its resources or send all its battalions to guard the border to protect the Sandinists' backs.

Azcona asserted that Nicaragua "has no evidence that a single Honduran soldier has crossed the borderline, and Honduras has even returned some Army prisoners" following the mass raid during Holy Week.

He also asserted that "we have begged President Ortega that, for the sake of peace in Central America, his government allow an opening in his country and act democratically so that we do not continue to suffer the effects of the internal pressure that prevails in Nicaragua."

"However, we are extremely concerned because -- far from seeking a political solution -- the Nicaraguan Government is making this almost impossible by adopting measures against the church, press, and unarmed opposition," the president stated.

NICARAGUA

FOREIGN MINISTRY COMMUNIQUE ON NEW ICJ SUITS

[Foreign Ministry communique issued on 30 July; read by Ambassador to the Netherlands Carlos Arguello -- live or recorded]

[Text] The Foreign Ministry hereby reports to the people that on 18 July 1986, the Republic of Nicaragua presented two requests for [words indistinct] the respective judiciary procedures against the Republics of Honduras and Costa Rica before the International Court of Justice [ICJ] Inasmuch as it feels that all efforts in recent years to reach a peaceful solution in accordance with international law have been useless, Nicaragua adopted this decision in view of the very serious situation that has arisen as a result of the forceful and interventionist policy of the U.S. Government against Nicaragua in complicity with Honduras and Costa Rica.

In the case of Honduras, Nicaragua has been trying since 1980 to reach a bilateral agreement that will put an end to the illegal activities against Nicaragua. From the presidents' meeting held at the Guasaule border post to this date, Nicaragua has made many efforts to reach a bilateral agreement. Unfortunately, there have been negative answers to these efforts to end the complicity with the illegal policy of the United States and a growing involvement with this policy.

Referring to Costa Rica, both the mixed commission created in 1982 and the supervision and prevention commission formed in 1984, as well as the bilateral talks held in (?our) country with the support of the Republic of France, also have been useless. In spite of the sincere efforts of Nicaragua and the public statements made by the Costa Rican Government, the truth is that the complicity of the Costa Rican Government with the illegal policy of the U.S. Government has not ended, and the armed actions, the acts of intervention, and other illegal actions to the detriment of Nicaragua have continued.

Nicaragua believes it has made use of all means for bilateral and direct negotiations to find a solution to this situation in accordance with international law and the fraternal relations that should prevail among brotherly nations. Nicaragua therefore is now compelled to resort to this means of peaceful solution with the hopes that through these resources the ICJ will be able to restore peace, mutual respect, and trust among our nations.

Nicaragua feels that the Contadora Group (?should report to the ICJ) on its efforts to reach a regional solution to the Centrral American crisis. In view of the violations of the basic norms of international law, Nicaragua particularly seeks to prevent bilateral issues from leading to a generalized war situation. The Contadora Group is trying to find an agreement among the five Central American countries that will restore -- through international law -- peace, trust, and cooperation among all states in the Central American region.

As an act of courtesy to Honduras and Costa Rica, the Nicaraguan ambassadors to those countries presented on 18 July an official note informing the respective countries of Nicaragua's decision.

Nicaragua hopes that by presenting these bilateral conflicts with Honduras and Costa Rica to the ICJ, it will be possible to strengthen an understanding with these countries and reach a peaceful solution to the controversies.

GRANMA 'GAFFES' SUGGEST CRITICISM OF CASTRO

PA251733 Paris AFP in English 1712 GMT 25 Jul 86

[Text] Havana, July 25 (AFP) -- Cuban President Fidel Castro has been the butt of ridicule by some unofficial editing of the official party paper GRANMA that has even caught Mr. Castro's attention and which analysts said were the most violent attacks on him in his 27-year rule.

In its report of the traditional May 1 marches, GRANMA's back page had a photo of the president that if held up to the light showed a skull on his chest. The paper followed this up with a headline on the front page of the July 4 edition that, if folded a way that Cuban readers do, changed the headline to "Down With Fidel." Mr. Castro himself mentioned the two layout gaffes in a televised report Thursday on a recent meeting of the Cuban Communist Party Central Committee. He dismissed them as simple coincidences without any mystery involved, but analysts said that, the second case at least, could not have been a coincidence, with typographical errors that were glaring to most newspaper professionals. And the president did not mention a third layout gaffe on June 7 which intentionally or otherwise published a particularly damning anti-Castro message.

Again on the front page, a picture to commemorate the anniversary of the Interior Ministry, shows Mr Castro in uniform surrounded with other uniformed officers, but with his arm raised in a manner that looks unmistakably like a fascist salute. In one corner of the photo the word "ario" (aryan) is seen. The word "aniversario" (anniversary) apparently got cut in layout, but analysts again said it should have been easy to avoid such coincidences.

Diplomats in Havana said that the layout coincidences are similar to those already used by opposition members in other communist bloc countries. Both they and journalists said that someone, perhaps from inside GRANMA, must have been energetically spreading the word, so that the population got to know about the clever design slips. Veteran analysts and journalists here said that these were the fiercest attacks directed against Mr. Castro in his 27 years in power in Cuba.

They added that the attack had come at an embarrasing time for Mr. Castro, with Cuba saddled with severe economic problems and the president himself calling for a "revolutionary counter-offensive" against "mistakes and negative tendencies" in Cuban society.

'OUR AMERICA' ON PINOCHET'S HOLD ON POWER IN CHILE

["Our America" commentary]

[Text] General Augusto Pinochet has unexpectedly begun a retreat, at least verbally, regarding his intention to remain in power in Chile indefinitely. During a recent speech to inaugurate the Eighth National Mayor's Congress, Pinochet said that he will not be a candidate in 1989, because many things can happen in 3 years. His reasoning regarding his future as a dictator caused suprise, because in all his public appearances Pinochet has shouted his intention to remain in power, not only until 1989 but to run for president in the 1989 elections. Since the bloody coup d'etat in 1973, it could be said that this is the only truth spoken by the head of the regime: In 3 years, many things can happen.

However, we should add that much has been happening for quite some time. The magnitude of the people's demonstrations, the strikes, and the radicalization of the masses are more than enough to give Pinochet and the other members sleepless nights, but above all they have influenced the president into reconsidering. It would be naive to think that someone who is so bent on remaining in power can, from 1 minute to next, change his mind. The truth of the Chilean situation is pushing the general to take back his own words. Very important factors in this situation are the mobilizations against the regime and the demands for a change as soon as possible. However, there is also pressure being exerted by the one who until lately Pinochet considered his strongest supporter: the U.S. Government.

By this we do not mean to say that the U.S. Government has decreased its support for the Chilean dictator, but it is pressuring, through various businessmen, for more flexibility in the junta's policies, because it foresees that, the way things are going, Pinochet's fall is not too far away. This would bring about a very deep change in the Chilean situation, and it would be very difficult for the U.S. Government to control such a situation.

Aside from all this, there is a deep uneasiness within the Chilean Armed Forces. Its members do not seem very pleased with Pinochet's personal plans. When referring to the presidential aspirations of the dictator, Navy Commander Admiral Jose Toribio Merino recently said: Pinochet can say whatever he likes, but what we want to project is a political idea, not men. Meanwhile, Air Force Commander General Fernando Matthei said that it is quite possible that the Constitution implemented in 1980 will have to be amended so that free and direct elections can be held in 1989.

It is quite obvious that there is a power struggle in Chile, but above all there is a great fear of radicalization and change. All this causes a retreat and marks the possible beginning of Pinochet's defeat.

SATELLITE TV STATION SCHEDULE, PROGRAMS NOTED

FL291503 [Editorial Report] Havana Tele-Rebelde Nework at 100 GMT on 29 July, interviews RAmon Chile, international technical center director, and Danilo Cirio, programming director of the new Cubavision satellite television station.

Mr Chile explained that the station is using the Soviet stationary satellite number four, which covers the Atlantic coast of North, Central and South America, the Caribbean, Europe, and Africa. He notes that the signal is transmitted on 3.7 (?diahertz) in the 7.5 mHz bandwith. They have been informed that Cuban internationalists in Angola and Ethiopia and Cuban diplomatic missions in Moscow and Nicaragua have satisfactorily received the signal which began broadcasting on 26 July.

Danilo Cirio indicates that initially Cubavision will transmit three times a week -- on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday -- for approximately 3 hours each day starting at 1800. This schedule will continue until the end of the year and will be gradually expanded to broadcast 8 hours a day. Cirio notes that the new channel uses the best of Tele-Rebelde and Cubana televison programming, with the exception of a newscast which is produced especially for the international channel.

PINDLING IN LONDON, CHAIRS COMMONWEALTH MEETING

FL301627 Nassau Domestic Service in English 1200 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Text] Prime Minister Pindling, armed with a mandate from the Caribbean leaders to use every means possible to further the objectives of the Nassau Accord, is in London this morning. The prime minister is there for a meeting of seven Commonwealth heads. They will review the work of the Group of Eminent Persons in regards to the situation in South Africa. The eminent persons group's report earlier had said the situation in South Africa was not getting any better, that the South African Government was showing no real signs of dismantling the apartheid system.

The prime minister will be chairing the meeting of seven Commonwealth heads and, depending on progress, there could come a call for a meeting of all Commonwealth heads to deal with the situation.

Debbie Battlet was at the airport as the prime minister left for London last evening. She reports this morning that Sir Lynden has some definite ideas about handling the situation.

Prime Minister Pindling says South African President P W Botha must stand firm because he has very adamant extreme right-wings in his party and so he is not free to make any concessions. However, he remains optimistic about the results of the upcoming meeting. [passage indistinct]

JAMAICA

SEAGA DEFEATED; PNP SWEEPS MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

[By Paget Defreitas]

[Text] Kingston, Jamaica, July 30, CANA -- The opposition People's National Party (PNP) swept yesterday's municipal elections handing a heavy defeat to Prime Minister Edward Seaga's Jamaica Labour Party (JLP).

The election was fought on national issues and in a late night statement, Seaga conceded his party's defeat put into question the policies of his government which has held power since 1980.

He acknowledged that the PNP had gained the support of the voters.

It (the loss) obviously would need a good deal of deep looking at the party, at our organisation, at our candidates, at our policies, at our members of Parliament and, if I may say so, at our leadership, Seaga said.

The twice-postponed poll was the first real contest between the two major parties since 1980 when the JLP won power, the PNP boycotted a snap general election three years later to press for electoral reform.

It campaigned this time on the premise that the election would be a referendum on the austere economic policies of Seaga, suddenly changed in May with an expansionary budget.

The next step has to be general elections, Manley said last night.

Manley said the result of the election indicated that it was time for a serious reflection on Jamaica's future.

I think this has been a very substantial expression of opinion by the Jamaican people in the contest of a judgement both on this government and on the fact that we don't have a normal democracy operating, he said in a reference to the country's one party parliament.

An estimated 60 percent of the eligible 970,000 votes cast their ballots. Polling was marred by by scattered violence, administrative hitches and allegations of intimidation.

The deaths of two men yesterday were attributed to political activity. One man in St Thomas, eastern Jamaica, was shot dead in a scuffle near a polling station with a plain-clothes soldier in the military intelligence unit while in western Kingston, one died and another was hospitalised with gunshot wounds when passing bandits shot up a polling station. In addition, the body of a man was found after gunshots were heard in Spanish Town, just outside Kingston, but it was not immediately clear whether this was connected to the voting.

Electoral officials reported instances of individuals armed with guns forcing their way into polling stations and intimidating officials into letting them vote. Witnesses said supporters of both parties were involved.

Elsewhere two policemen were injured, one stabbed during a melee at a polling station and the other, a special constable sworn in for the day, shot during an attempted ballot box theft in a Kingston constituency, officials said.

There were also isolated reports of ballot stealing and late appearance of polling officials and furniture.

Just after the polls closed, Manley had claimed in a statement issued through a spokesman that there had been intimidation, provocation, and attempts to frustrate voters.

Views On JLP Defeat

[By Paget de Freitas]

[Excerpts] Kingston, Jamaica, July 30, CANA -- The defeat of the centre-right JLP in yesterday's municipal elections has placed Prime Minister Edward Seaga on a frayed political high-wire requiring an extremely delicate balancing act, analysts here say.

The result, they add, amounted to a rejection of Seaga's austere economic policies -- eased slightly in his May budget -- and gave support to calls for general elections by Michael Manley's PNP.

People are hungry and people are unemployed, said South African-born novelist and political commentator Peter Abrahams, who has lived here for nearly 30 years.

These are the grass-roots reasons for the vote, he added. The unofficial results so far show the PNP winning 10 and possibly 11 of the 13 municipal authorities, taking approximately 57 per cent of popular vote on an estimated 60 per cent voter-turn out. There are over 570,000 persons on the voters register.

The results confirmed a big swing back to the democratic socialist PNP since the 1980 general election that produced a JLP landslide with figures approximating those of yesterday's poll.

It was in fact the first real contest between the two parties since that bitter election that pitted Seaga's free enterprise, pro-American programme against Manley's social democratic ideals in a campaign that cost nearly 800 lives. [passage omitted]

Seaga has recognised that he has a big problem and that he needs to re-assess his programmes as well as the party.

It obviously will mean a good deal of deep looking at the party, at our organisation, at our candidates, at our members of parliament, at our policies, and if I may say so, at our leadership, he said after the PNP victory was clear.

In fact, Seaga has already been doing some reflecting on the policies that have cost his government dearly in popular support.

After years of dutifully pushing through International Monetary Fund (IMF) and World Bank requested programmes that required hefty devaluations of the local dollar, the firing of thousands of public sector workers, cuts in public spending, and economic deregulation, the prime minister balked last October.

At the IMF/World Bank meet in Seoul, he complained about the short time span they gave developing countries to carry through painful adjustment programmes and said that, despite doing everything required of it, the Jamaican economy was still in trouble.

He invited the two institutions as well as the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) to send a joint mission to the island to take a fresh look at the economy and to assess the government's view that it was time to induce growth rather than further contraction.

The mission disagreed with Seaga, and in their report called for more bitter medicine through further devaluations and additional public sector job cuts.

With an election around the corner and his party trailing in public opinion polls, Seaga threw out their report, and in May presented an expansionary budget aimed at stimulating a more than five per cent growth this fiscal year, against the big decline in 1985-86.

Savings from falling oil prices were used to provide subsidies on a number of basic good and other items.

In essence, according to University of West Indies economist Dr Omar Davies, Seaga has for the past few months been defying these institutions which are major factors in any equation on the Jamaican economy.

The island is currently only a little over half-way through a 22-month IMF agreement, and the fund and the government are negotiating on this fiscal year's programme.

Seaga has said that he has a contingency programme if the institutions force him to push through more austerity.

But economists point out that the government needed the fund's seal of approval if it is to approach foreign creditors and institutions for aid and the inevitable need to further rescheduling some of the country's U.S. 3.3 billion dollar external debt.

In this scenario, the prime minister might be forced to reach an accomodation with the fund, and possibily risk further eroding the 43 per cent of the vote captured in yesterdays election.

Mr Sega might have to take the plunge for the next few months (and continue to defy the institutions with his government spending) and then go for the general (election), Davies said.

But there is also a view that his defeat could provide the prime minister with a bargaining chip -- the argument that he is a more reliable customer of the free enterprise product than Manley would be.

In any event, Seaga, who has a reputation for toughness, is likely to face considerable pressure that will require all his noted political skills.

In spite of Mr Seaga's posture of being super-tough he has increasingly become subjected to the PNP opposition pressures, said comentator professor Carl Stone.

Now that the people spoken, I hope everybody respects the implications of the statement, said former prime minister Manley.

INDIA GIVES LINE OF CREDIT; TERMS CITED

FL242212 Bridgetown CANA in English 2153 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Text] Kingston, Jamaica, July 24, CANA -- India has given Jamacia a J4 million dollar line of credit for the purchase of Indian goods, the Export-Import Bank announced.

The bank said the facility will be open to both the public and private sectors for a wide range of goods.

They include chemical and pharmaceutical plant and machinery, earth moving equipment, leather tanning and processing machinery, power generation transmission, distribution equipment, and textile machinery.

The Ex-Im Bank said that under the terms, it will finance 90 per cent of the fob value of the goods, with the Jamacian importer required to find 10 per cent, which must be paid to the Indian supplier at the signing of the contract.

The rate of interest will be 11 per cent plus the bank's two per cent service charge.

There is currently little trade between Jamacia and India, and India High Commission officials say they hope his could lead to the opening of a new trading gate between the countries.

If this take off, maybe we can identify also areas of imports from Jamaica, a high commission trade official said.

JOINT CONGRESS DOCUMENT SIGNED WITH BRAZIL

[Text] Buenos Aires, 30 Jul (TELAM) -- Argentine and Brazilian congressmen today signed a joint document promoting the creation of a binational forum, which will include other countries as well, to analyze Latin American political, economic, and social issues.

The document was issued during a meeting at the National Congress, where an agreement was reached to give concrete answers to certain subjects related to the region.

Radical Civic Union [UCR] Deputy Federico Storani, head of the Chamber of Deputies Foreign Relations Committee, termed the congressional document historical because it ends rhetoric and hollow good intentions that previously existed.

The document stresses the approval of the summit conference between Presidents Raul Alfonsin and Jose Sarney, which ended with the signing of economic cooperation and integration agreements between Brazil and Argentina.

The congressmen also repudiate apartheid, encourage Latin American democrats, and ratify the political origin of the foreign debt of Latin American countries.

In the document, they also request a summit of Latin American presidents and ask for the withdrawal of the military presence of the world powers from the South Atlantic. They reject any form of foreign intervention in National Latin American territories.

The Argentine and Brazilian congressmen state that it is necessary to free ourselves from all forms of oppression in order to win our sovereignty and independence. They recall the colonial period and the different forms of dominance that led them to internal wars and artificial crises.

They state that democracy is a form of permanent people's power. Therefore Latin American political forces are always committed to fighting for democracy and to eradicating illiteracy, ignorance, unemployment, and misery.

The document was signed by Argentine Senator Adolfo Gass (Radical Civic Union, UCR, Buenos Aires Province), president of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, and by Deputies Federico Storani (UCR, Buenos Aires), Jose Bordon (Justicialist Party Renewal faction, Mendoza Province), Maria Julia Alsogaray (Democratic Centrist Union, Capital), and Oscar Alende (Intransigent Party Buenos Aires).

The Brazilian congressmen who signed the document are: Senators Cid Sampaio (Liberal Front Party) and Joao Medieros Calmon (Brazilian Popular Mobilization Party PMDB), and Deputies Haroldo Borges Rodrigues Lima (Brazilian Communist Party), Joao Hermann Neto (PMOB), and Vasco Acevedo Neto (Christian Socialist).

AUSTRAL DEVALUATION -- For the tenth time in four months, the Central Bank has devalued the austral by one cent against the U.S. dollar. The $1 dollar now costs 0.92 Australes, a 1.10 percent increase. This devaluation was made 7 days after the last one which shows that readjustments are being made more frequently. VICE PRESIDENT PROPOSES U.N. ANTIDRUG FORCE

[Text] La Paz, 31 Jul (EFE) -- Bolivian Vice President Julio Garret told EFE today that the internationalization of the fight against drug trafficking must be carried out within the framework of the United Nations. In the opinion of the Bolivian vice president, who is also president of the Andean Pact, according to the philosophy of the United Nations, "if the Bolivia task must be undertaken through an international force organized by the United Nations and it must receive the approval of Congress."

"If such UN international forces were to operate in Bolivia, with the approval of Congress, they would have to be replaced every 3 or 4 months to prevent their being corrupted by drug trafficking," he added.

In Garret's opinion, the "immediate" call for an international conference of drug-consuming countries has now become a priority; "to propose international cooperation in the fight against drug trafficking in Bolivia." According to the Bolivian vice president, "the great industrialist countries which consume drugs, such as the United States, FRG, England, Italy, France, Canada, Japan, and Spain," should attend the conference.

Concerning the U.S. participation in the antidrug-trafficking operations, Garret said that "the government will respond in Congress to all the objections to U.S. military participation in Beni Department (northeast of La Paz)."

He added: "These operations, however, have helped to break up drug trafficking in the country and to give international crediblity to Bolivia's intention to fight drug trafficking." According to the vice president, in Bolivia "misery, unemployment and the economic crisis encourage drug trafficking and are a "very good culture broth for it. A mere repressive policy will not reach the roots of the problem."

In conclusion, Garret told EFE that drug trafficking can only be eradicated "if a great national effort is made for this purpose. This effort will only be displayed when the consuming countries decide to cooperate with Bolivia through a plan aimed at creating economic options, particularly in the field of agriculture."

Bedregal Seeks Joint Effort

[Text] La Paz, 29 Jul (EFE) -- Foreign Minister Guillermo Bedregal Gutierrez has stated that at a meeting to be held in Colombia, Bolivia will seek a joint effort to counter drug trafficking, an effort that may also include other countries. The foreign minister has said that the Bolivian Government will discuss the need to conduct an international campaign to control and exert pressure on drug trafficking, with the heads of state who will meet in Colombia on 7 August for the inauguration of president-elect Virgilio Barco Vargas. "The Bogota meeting will be useful because information will be exchanged in order to conduct a concerted struggle against drugs, a scourge that is harming various social sectors," the foreign minister stated.

Bedregal will attend the presidential inauguration in Colombia, representing President Victor Paz Estenssoro. The foreign minister's comment came after the U.S. Government announced that within 60 days it will withdraw from Bolivia its military troops trained in antidrug operations, who arrived on 14 July.

Interior Minister Fernando Barthelemy Martinez has said that the government will negotiate with the EEC, the United States, and other Latin American countries for assistance, including equipment and logistical materials, in order to continue controlling and repressing drug trafficking so as not to leave unfinished the program that began in Bolivia with the cooperation of U.S. troops. Barthelemey said: "We have troops capable of controlling and repressing drug trafficking, but we lack funds and support. Because of this we will ask the U.S. Government to leave us its equipment."

MINISTER SAYS TAX LAW INCLUDES 'INFORMAL ECONOMY'

[Excerpts] The finance minister has stated that there is a very large informal economy that must be brought into the national economy. "It is for this reason the the tax law was issued, to take into account the great informal sector. In other words, we have moved from the traditional system to a new system that will control account all sectors of the economy."

Referring to remarks by the Bolivian ambassador to the United States that the Bolivian economy receives $600 million from drug trafficking, he said that the ambassador was referring to the informal economy, within which drug traffickers operate. "This is all the more obvious because the export economy has been reduced by the drop in international prices of minerals and petroleum."

He believes that the operations against drug traffickers will have an effect because drug traffickers are suppliers of currency. "I can assure you, however, that the Central Bank is in a position to guarantee the stability of our money and the control of foreign currency because every peso that was put into circulation is backed by dollars. This means that, with half of its net foreign reserves, the government of Bolivia could redeem all the money it has printed." [passage omitted]

The minister said that among the achievements of the government's economic policy we can mention the elimination of hyperinflation and economic stability, because the handling of the finance sector is quite balanced. "Of course there are obstacles, but achievements can be seen when there are sufficient reserves and when it is obvious that money issuance is under control. Things have returned to normal, and problems (like drug trafficking) have no negative influence on our economic stability because in addition to the reserves, we have the support of gold, which we do not need to touch."

PROPOSAL TO PEG DEBT PAYMENT TO GROWTH

[Text] Rio de Janeiro, 31 Jul (AFP) -- It was reported here today that next September Brazil will propose to its creditors the renegotiation of its $105-billion foreign debt by restricting amortization and interest payments to 6 or 8 percent of the Brazil's economic growth.

In remarks to the newspaper GAZETA MERCANTIL Henri Phillipe Reichstul, secretary general of the planning secretariat of the presidency, said that Brazil will invite the rest of the world, especially the international financial community, to help Brazil grow once again.

Reichstul said that the Brazilian Central Bank will start renegotiating its foreign debt next September, after it signs agreements for $31 billion with representatives of 750 creditor banks.

According to these agreements, short-term credits amounting to $15.5 billion will be renewed for 1 year, and $15.5 billion in principal and interest that came due in 1985 and 1986 will be paid off.

According to reliable sources, more than 80 percent of Brazil's creditor banks signed the agreements last weekend in New York. The others will sign in the next few days.

After saying that Brazil will negotiate the rescheduling of all its foreign debt with the private banks, Reichstul added that we are defining a negotiation strategy aimed at maintaining a constant annual economic growth rate of 6 to 8 percent.

He also said that Brazil is a developing country that has made several internal adjustments, and it is preparing to grow again. Despite the fact that we have a $12- to $13-billion surplus in our trade balance, we need to reduce the remittances of currency to pay the foreign debt. [passage omitted]

BUSINESS RESPONSE TO SARNEY'S PLAN MIXED

PY311840 Sao Paulo FOLHA DE SAO PAULO in Portuguese 24 Jul 86 p 31

[Text] Some of the most important businessmen have judged the new economic measures announced last night by President Jose Sarney in the following way:

Cesar Rogerio Valente, president of the Rio Grande do Sul Federation of Commercial Associations [Federacao das Associacoes Comerciais do Rio Grande do Sul] has said that "whatever argument is used, (the measures) seek to accomplish just one thing: to cover the inefficiency of the government which once again seeks to transfer resources from the taxpayer to the public coffers." In the opinion of this businessman, "the measure is a simple breach of the promise made to the Brazilian people that prices would not rise. The government, that will not talk about unfreezing prices, has unfrozen the tax burden by the unexpected creation of a tax which will be applied to a large section of the Brazilian population."

Paulo Francini, 45, vice president of the Sao Paulo State Federation of Industries (FIESP), said: "The measures show coherence. It was necessary for the government to find a formula to accumulate resources with which to finance public investments."

Horacio Cherkasski, 63, president of the National Association of Paper and Cellulose Manufacturers [Associacao Nacional dos Fabricantes de Papel e Celulose] said: "My impression is that I have seen this movie before. Former Minister Mario Henrique Simonsen tried taxing gasoline consumption and didn't succeed. The so-called 'simonetas' [from Minister Simonsen's name] could never be applied. I understand the government's initiative, but I can't see how it will be implemented."

Fermino Rocha de Freitas, 62, president of Bravox, said: "The measures show a degree of intelligence and fair play, especially when compared to the compulsory loans and taxes created by some former governments."

Arthur Joao Donato, 63, president of the Rio de Janeiro Federation of Industries (FIRJAN), said: "The compulsory loan will correct a distortion generated by the Cruzado Plan, which has caused an exaggerated consumption due to frozen prices. Even though it might hurt, it is the only alternative if we want to revitalize the economy of the country."

Luis Roberto Andrade Ponte, president of the Brazilian Chamber of the Civil Construction Industry [Camara Brasileira da Industria da Construcao Civil] said: The compulsory loan will mean new resources that are not inflationary."

Alberto Sehbe Simon, president of the Rio Grande do Sul Shop Managers Federation [Federacao dos Diretores Lojistas do RS] said that "the government's credibility will be in jeopardy if the new measures put pressure on final consumer prices."

Luis Salles, 51, president of Inter-American Salles and first vice president in charge of the presidency of the Brasilian Association of Publicity Agencies (ARAP) [Associacao Brasileira das Agencias de Propaganda] said that: "The cooling of demand should not cause any harm to the publicity business, even though the industry will be left with some idle capacity."

Odilon Fernandez de Queiroz, manager of Mappin Shops, thinks that "the measures should not discourage consumption. The government measures will affect the upper middle class (buyers of cars and people accustomed to traveling abroad), but not the large majority of consumers."

BRIEFS

POLIO CASES DETECTED -- The Health Ministry has confirmed that out of 145 cases of polio reported during the first 5 months of this year throughout the country, 122 cases were found in the northeast. Joao Batista Risi, national secretary for prevention and education of the Health Ministry, said that the main reason for this increase in the number of polio cases in the country is that many children have not been vaccinated, or have received only one dose of the vaccine. Risi recommended that the parents of children under 5 have them vaccinated during the next vaccination campaign set for 6 August. During this campaign, the vaccines used will be slightly modified to more effectively combat the type 3 polio virus, which has been detected mostly in the northeastern region, in the states of Sergipe and Paraiba. INTERNATIONAL PRESSURE 'INHIBITS' PINOCHET

[Relay from La Moneda Palace by Eliana Henriquez]

[Text] President Augusto Pinochet admitted tonight that he cannot take stronger measures against terrorism because he feels inhibited by international pressure. Speaking to a group of young people and women at the Diego Portales Building, the chief of state said that in other countries said to be democratic, assassinations and killings are perpetrated, while the Government of Chile is looking out for the tranquillity of the people.

Pinochet said that he cannot take further measures because he feels that his hands are tied by international reactions. The politicians are slandering the country abroad, said Pinochet, adding that they travel abroad to defame Chile, inventing stories about the country. They go abroad to spread slander and to beg for money so that they can continue their opposition to the government.

In his impromptu speech, Pinochet said that the politicians have never done anything for Chile, because they have turned politics into a profitable business. They want to return because, having been out of business for 13 years, their pockets are empty. The chief of state then told the young people not to let themselves be deceived by communism, which is the worst tyranny that can exist. He asserted that the government is struggling for freedom, happiness and life. I am willing to lay down my life, Pinochet emphasized, for the freedom of every one of you.

These remarks were made by the chief of state to a group of women and young people who attended a meeting organized by the Directorate of Civilian Organizations.

From the Diego Portales Building, Eliana Henriquez reporting.

THREE MINISTERS REACT TO ABRAMS REMARKS

Comment by Delano

[Text] Economy Minister Juan Carlos Delano has stated that the elections scheduled for 1989 in the country have been guaranteed by President Pinochet and by the 1980 Constitution. We Chileans must not get excited over the threats voiced by some U.S. congressmen, he said.

The economy minister has thus reacted to remarks by Elliot Abrams, U.S. assistant secretary of state for inter-American affiars, who stated that the decision to approve the granting of loans to Chile by multilateral organizations will depend on the improvment of the human rights situation by Pinochet's regime, and on the development of the democratic process.

[Begin Delano recording] I do not think there is anything definite in this regard. The only thing we can do now is listen to some comments, but I do not really believe that the United States is aware of what it is doing, or of what is being done in Chile regarding the electoral process, which was requested by the U.S. Administration for 1989.

Of course this process has been guaranteed by the president of the Republic and the Constitution. I think these are mere comments and there is no reason for us to be nervous. I think this issue will be decided on during the last quarter of the year. There is still some time until then, and I do not see why we should adopt measures or become nervous about it. [end recording]

Delano also referred to the talks held with top leaders of the World Bank and the IDB.

[Begin Delano recording] All talks have been kept on the technical level, and it was stated that Chile has a well-balanced economic sector, and that we are fulfilling all our agreements with the IMF and the World Bank. Moreover, we are increasing production, we are increasing production, we are increasing investments, we are increasing savings. Therefore, I think this country is serving as an example for many other countries with similar problems. In this regard, I think the multilateral organizations are using us as an example, and it would be absurd to correct an example through a political measure which is not in keeping with justice or with efforts not only by the Chilean Government, but also by the Chilean people to comply with this new international situation. [end recording]

The economy minister made these remarks during a visit he made at noon today to the Andromaco Pharmaceutical Laboratory.

Remarks by Garcia

[Relay from Mobile Unit No 6 in the Carabineros School of Santiago by unidentified reporter -- live or recorded]

[Text] There will be no cabinet change, Interior Minister Ricardo Garcia said today after attending a ceremony to bid farewell to former Carabiners Subdirector Juan Bautista Alegria Valdes and to swear in his replacement, Carabineros Inspector General Oscas Torres Rogriguez.

Minister Garcia said the remarks by U.S. official Elliot Abrams were not made at random, but rather they must be understood within a general context.

Regarding the visit of the U.S. lawyers, Garcia said that they will have a good opportunity to observe how Chilean justice works. About relations with the Church, Garcia denied any deterioration. On the contrary, he said, there is an established dialogue with Church authorities.

The minister also referred to the latest terrorist actions, and described them as extremely serious. He compared them to recent events in the Middle East, adding that extremism affects any sort of regime. Terrorism is not aimed at any particular government, he said, it is aimed rather at destroying human lives.

No Comment by Del Valle

[Text] Elliot Abrams, U.S. assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, today stated that the United States might vote against the granting of new loans to Chile to put pressure on the current government to improve the human rights situation in the country.

Abrams referred to this possibility in remarks to the U.S. House of Representatives Bankin subcommittee. We should note tht Abrams has already said that President Pinochet's government must begin preparing an electoral list and legalize the political parties. Now, pressured by congressmen wanting to know whether Washington will continue approving loans to Chile, Abrams said he will recommend that the government vote no.

So far, the Reagan administration has never voted against the granting of new World Bank and IDB loans to Chile. Last year, however, it abstained from voting on three occasions. According to some observers, these abstentions have helped bring about the lifting of the staet of emergency that had been in effect in Chile.

Abrams added that he is against al bill that would prevent the authorization of any loans to Chile for 1 year. According to him, the United States must continue with its policy of flexibility toward Chile. Otherwise, Abrams stated, the Chileans might decide to sever all relations with the United States.

This report has had immediate repercussions at the Chilean Foreign Ministry. Reporter Jose Francisco Contreras will give us further details on this from the Foreign Ministry. Good afternoon, Jose Francisco.

[Begin Contreras relay] Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle categorically refused to comment on cable reports of possible U.S. rejection of future loans to Chile. The report coming from Washington states that Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, has said he will recommend that his government vote against a $250-million loan for Chile by the World Bank unless the Chilean military regime ends human rights violations. The U.S. decision regarding this loan has not yet been made. According to Abrams it will depend on human rights developments in Chile.

A few days ago, Del Valle expressed optimism, stating that the United States would not adopt economic sanctions against Chile because such measures would only affect the people and not the government, and that they would favor Marxism. Asked his opinion today on Abrams' comment' the foreign minister categorically refused to comment. He was also questioned about Pinochet's comment that he is inhibited by foreign pressures from adopting certain measures. Del Valle again refused to comment to the press. [end relay]

AIR FORCE COMMANDER DECRIES 'HASTY REACTIONS'

[Text] During an unscheduled press conference at the Cabo de Hornos Hotel in Punta Arenas, Chilean Air Force commander in chief General Fernando Matthei said: I believe we have realized we must begin building Chilean institutions. Gen Matthei made this statement shortly after arriving in Punta Arenas to attend a ceremony honoring three pilots who died in a collision between two planes.

Matthei said this is the time to work on national institutions, and I believe this is what we and the wise people who want democracy are doing. If we do not have democracy today, and if we are eagerly trying to build a democratic system, it is because, as Jorge Alessandri said in his opening remarks at the Council of State, our democracy fell to pieces under the weight of its own weakness, Matthei said.

The Air Force commander said that to build something new is very difficult and calls for considerable patience and imagination.

Asked to give his opinion on the situation in our country, he replied that it is calm. However, there are always problems about which Chileans are concerned, he stressed. There are controversies such as the ones which we have just read about here in Punta Arenas and in Santiago and which are part of a nation's daily life. There are people who react hastily to a situation when they should remain calm and conduct themselves more wisely. For example, they talk about a horrendous crime before such a horrendous crime has even been confirmed. At least, this is what the judge said, and he has not indicted anyone for any horrendous crime, but rather on charges of negligence. Consequently, one should expect more prudence from some organizations and people, Gen Matthei told the journalists.

Explains Opposition to Party Law

[Relay from Punta Arenas by Rodrigo Araya]

[Excerpts] Air Force Commander General Fernando Matthei has stated here in Punta Arenas that if the law on political parties has not been promulgated yet, it is because of him. He explained: I have opposed this law because the number of signatures required to form a political party is unrealistic.

The Air Force commander made these comments during a visit to this zone, where he participated in a memorial service at the site where two aircraft crashed 3 weeks ago. Since then three Air Force officers have been declared missing. [passage omitted]

On this occasion the Commander referred to various issues such as the promulgation of the law on political parties. In this regard he stated:

[Begin Matthei recording] The executive branch hopes to promulgate it in March 1987 so we will see what happens. Everyone is aware, and I have said it here too, that there is a (?serious obstacle) involving the number of signatures required. I think that it is a bit unrealistic. If the law has not been promulgated yet it is because I am against it. I hope we will be able to agree on a more realistic number. [end recording] [passage omitted]

FRESNO 'REGRETS' INTERPRETATION OF HIS COMMENTS

[Excerpts] Santiago, 31 Jul (EFE) -- In public comments aired by the Santiago archbishopric press office, Cardinal Msgr Juan Francisco Fresno defended the "authority of a priest to refer to subjects related to the moral standards of the people."

In the document, the Santiago archbishopric "regrets the interpretation which most of the Supreme Court of Justice has given to the statement made by Msgr Fresno." [passage omitted]

Msgr Fresno's statement was prompted by Judge Echavarria's sentence. Fresno noted the impact that Echavarria's decision would have on the prestige of important Chilean institutions.

The cardinal's statement was rejected by the Chilean Supreme Court of Justice, which asserted that statements like the one made by the cardinal only "serve to instigate the public and undermine the prestige of the courts."

Today, Cardinal Fresno regrets this interpretation. Meanwhile, criticism has increased against the judicial branch's performance during the past few years, especially since September 1973, when a military coup brought General Augusto Pinochet to power.

On the afternoon of 30 July, some 100 persons belonging to "Sebatian Acevedo Movement Against Torture" gathered inside the Supreme Court building where they left a letter for Special Judge Alberto echavarria.

The letter states: "We reject your recent ruling regarding the case of the youths who were burned alive by military personnel, because it is false, unjust, and outrageous."

According to the "Movement" the judge's ruling is "outrageous because it conceals a horrible crime and protects the practice of torture." The letter concludes by stating "your resolution definitely discredits the Judicial Branch before the entire citizenry."

The "Movement Against Torture," comprised mainly of priests and nuns, adopted the name (Sebastian Acevedo) of a father who, desperate over the disappearance of his son, and the Chilean authorities' denial that he was being held under arrest, set fire to himself at the entrance of Concepcion Cathedral 4 years ago.

Sebastian Acevedo died a few hours later, publicly asking forgiveness for having committed suicide, but "happy" because the police forces, after Acevedo immolated himself, admitted that his son was under arrest.

Valdes Supports Cardinal

[Text] The Supreme Court's response to Santiago Archbishop Fresno's request to clarify the case of the burned students has startled the Chilean public. This statement was made by Christian Democracy [DC] leader Gabriel Valdes, who also expressed full support for the archbishop. Valdes said that the cardinal had respectfully made a request to a branch of the government because he was concerned about the case of the students.

[Begin Valdes recording] The Supreme Court's response is incredible. It reacted as if contempt of court had been committed. I think that if one reviews the history of Chile, one will find many cases in which moral authorities, even intellectuals, or scientists have bravely addressed a government to express their point of view.

In the cardinal's case, his statements were calm and, I believe he interpreted the people's feelings, because the crime of the burned students has reached deeply into the conscience of all the Chilean people and of people abroad, considering the news we get from abroad.

It is therefore natural that those whose mission is to look after morals, justice, and peace should ask the court to quickly clarify the case. This is particularly true because, as the archibishop said, the crimes committed in Chile over the last 13 years have not been solved. [end recording] [passage omitted]

Gabriel Valdes added that the many crimes committed abroad and in Chile have discredited Chilean justice. [passage omitted]

He said that the government should drop the charges against the Vicariate of Solidarity and the leaders of the National Civic Assembly because they have not committed any crimes. Finally, the DC has issued a statement denouncing the increasing vulgarity and lack of manners in the ruling class.

COURT RELEASES VICARIATE DOCTORS ON BAIL

[Text] Santiago, 28 Jul (EFE) -- The Supreme Court today ordered the release on bail of doctors Alvaro Reyes and Ramon Rojas who have been tried by the military court in a case in which the Vicariate of Solidarity of the Santiago Archbishopric appears to be involved.

The doctors have been under arrest for approximately 80 days, together with lawyer Gustavo Villalobos and Doctor Ramon Olivares, members of the Vicariate.

Both the doctors, who were set free today, and Villalobos and Olivares are being tried by the Santiago military court, accused of having given aid "to combat groups" of the opposition.

Everything began on 28 April when Villalobos and Olivares tried to administer first aid in the Vicariate's infirmary to Hugo Gomez Pena, who had sustained a bullet wound in the buttocks.

Gomez Pena told the Vicariate that he had been walking and had been caught in the middle of a shoot-out between Carabineros and assailants of a bakery. He said that he had been wounded accidentally.

Villalobos and Olivares, seeing the nature of the wound, sent Gomez Pena to the clinic hospital of doctors Reyes and Rojas, where he was given the assistance and later discharged.

The government asked the court to try the two professionals from the Vicariate of Solidarity and the two doctors from the clinic. It accused Gomez Pena of belonging to the opposition militia, which conducted the attack on the bakery. A carabinero was killed in the attack.

On 13 May, after being at large for several days, Gomez Pena sought the assistance of another doctor, Juan Macaya, who is also under detention.

Dr Macaya advised the Vicariate of Solidarity which in turn advised the military court. The military court then proceeded to detain the wounded Gomez Pena.

According to opposition press reports, Gomez Pena has cooperated with the court, accusing the detained professionals and denouncing persons who allegedly granted him refuge while he was at large. This, according some publications, could be some sort of revenge against the Vicariate of Solidarity for having placed him at the disposal of the court.

ANALISIS DIRECTOR ARRESTED; MAGAZINE SUSPENDED

PY301614 Paris AFP in Spanish 0444 GMT in Spanish 30 Jul 86

[Text] Santiago, 29 Jul (AFP) -- Juan Pablo Cardenas, director of the opposition magazine ANALISIS, was today arrested in connection with a criminal lawsuit brought against him by the Chilean Government. The government charges Cardenas with having committed libel against President Augusto Pinochet. The director is not being held incommunicado. The lawsuit against Cardenas and 29 other ANALISIS journalists and reporters is based on the Internal Security Law, which was also applied to the magazine. The front cover of today's issue of ANALISIS, which was confiscated by the Chilean police, carries the headline: Pinochet Alone.

Speaking at the court house before being arrested, Cardenas said: This will not intimidate us. We will still continue to perform our reporting activities.

Judge Leonel Beraud has ordered that ANALISIS, which has always criticized the military government, suspend its publications for five weeks.

Cardenas said: If the suspension of our magazine is extended and if they attempt to intimidate us, we will still continue to perform our professional duty, which comes before any of the arbitrary provisions enacted by this regime. Cardenas' lawyer Guillermo de la Jara announced that he will file a motion in court to protest the five-week suspension of ANALISIS. Ignacio Gonzalez, president of the Chilean Journalists Association, said: The government is harassing ANALISIS: it is simply seeking to eliminate this magazine.

73 STUDENTS HANDED OVER TO INTERIOR MINISTRY

SUPREME COURT MAGISTRATE KILLED IN ATTACK

[Text] Bogota, 31 Jul (EFE) -- According to authorities, Hernando Baquero Borda, a magistrate of the Colombian Supreme Court of Justice, was killed today during an attack in Bogota.

Witnesses to the attack said that two men traveling on a motorcycle approached the vehicle carrying the jurist and his wife, Susana San Pedro de Barquero, in northern Bogota and fired at him repeatedly. After the murder, the motorcyclists clashed with Baquero Borda's bodyguards, three bodyguards were wounded.

Baquero, who had been a magistrate of the republic for more than 5 years, was unhurt during the occupation by the M-19 of the Palace of Justice in November 1985 that resulted in [word indistinct] dead.

[Text] Bogota, 31 Jul (EFE) -- A man presumed to be one of the killers of Colombian Supreme Court Justice Hernando Baquero Borda was caught by police several minutes after the attack in which the justice, one of his police escorts, and a 17 year-old were killed. In a swift reaction to the attack, the police were apparently able to catch one of the killers, who according to Radio Cadena Nacional (RCN), is a young, 1.6 meter-tall, dark complexioned man. the description matches the descriptions of the killers furnished by eyewitnesses to the attack.

Justice Baquero Borda, who was a member of the Supreme Court of Justice's criminal repeals court, died after two men on a moving motorcycle fired at the vehicle in which he was traveling, on a street in northern Bogota. Cne of his police escorts and a motorcycle rider who happened to be traveling down that same street were also killed during the attack. Three other members of his bodyguard corps, as well as the justice's wife, Susana San Pedro de Baquero, who was in the car with her husband at the time of the attack, were wounded. Baquero Borda, who had been on the court for more than 5 years, emerged unhurt last November from the occupation of the Justice Palace in downtown Bogota, which ended on 7 November with a toll of over 100 dead, including 11 of Baquero Borda's colleagues. The police have initiated a large-scale operation in an attempt to track down the culprits, who according to eyewitnesses, fled on a powerful motorbike toward western Bogota, where reports indicate that one of the two killers has been caught.

ARMY CLASHES WITH FARC, M-19 GUERRILLAS IN TOLIMA

PA290415 Bogota Television Service in Spanish 0000 GMT 29 Jul 86

[Text] There have been four attacks on vehicles during the past 15 days on the road that links Chaparral to Rio Blanco, in Tolima Department. Reports say that the situation has worsened in the past 24 hours. Although there has been a relative calm, two soldiers and an undisclosed number of guerrillas were casualties in recent clashes.

New clashes between the Army and M-19 guerrillas have been reported. The guerrillas ambushed a 3rd Brigade patrol yesterday in the rural zone of Chaparral municipality, killing two soldiers. In the clashes that followed, 10 guerrillas were killed, according to the 3d Brigade spokesmen.

Farc and M-19 Guerrillas from Valle Department, are operating in the area of Rio Blanco. Meanwhile, a clandestine grave containing 27 bodies was found in the Toribiio area. These bodies are supposedly members of the Ricardo Franco Front, victims of a purge which so far has left more than 200 dead in the region.

A commission from the Justice Department and the governor's office of Cauca Department was participating this afternoon in the removal of the corpses.

ENERGY MINISTER ON RESULTS OF OPEC MEETING

[Text] Quito, 30 Jul (AFP) -- Three of the 13 OPEC countries have rejected the quotas the organization has suggested to them, Ecuadoran Energy and Mines Minister Javier Espinosa reported from Geneva. Espinosa, who is alternate president of the OPEC, also commented on the OPEC talks in Geneva.

According to the official report, Espinosa said that two countries have fully accepted the quotas suggested by the organization, three rejected then, and the remaining eight -- including Ecuador -- accepted them conditionally. He also reported that seven countries have offered to reduce their production voluntarily, including Ecuador. He did not comment on the positions of the other oil-producing countries. Ecuador would reduce its daily oil production by 40,000 barrels. This represents 13 percent of its current production, according to Espinosa, who said there is hope that the other six countries will also come out in favor of a voluntarily reduction. Espinosa reveled that the voluntary oil-production cuts adopted by the seven countries amount to a daily reduction of 1.6 million barrels

ALFARO LIVES MEMBERS ATTACK IETEL GROUND STATION

[Text] The IETEL (Ecuadoran Telecommunications Institute] ground station located in (?Valle de los Rios) was attacked early yesterday by six people who identified themselves as members of the Alfaro Lives group. As a result of the attack, two private guards were wounded, but the attack was repulsed by guards. Guards Bolivar Murillo and Pedro Diaz were seriously wounded when they exchanged fire with the assailants. The youths, who were allegedly members of the Alfaro Lives group, arrived at the IETEL ground station in a green jeep at approximately 1600 yesterday.

According to the guards, who work for the Cosmas Private Security Company, one of the youths got out of the jeep and drew the attention of the guards at the guardhouse located at the station's entrance. Meanwhile, two other youths climbed the fence and caught the guards who approached the entrance by surprise.

The youths overpowered Diaz, tied his hands, gagged him, and took the keys. They then drove the jeep in. They had to stop near the gigantic antenna due to barriers. One of the guards in that sector asked them for identification; the youths, four or five of them, fired their weapons, wounding him.

According to witnesses, another guard repelled the attack with a rifle, forcing the assailants to flee.

GARCIA INTERVIEWED ON DOMESTIC PROBLEMS

PM300746 Milan L'UNITA in Italian 27 Jul 86 p 1, 7

[Interview with President Alan Garcia by Maria Giovanna Maglie in Lima; date not given]

[Excerpts] Lima -- "They will not succeed in making me the second Allende," Garcia said. "I want to go down in history not as a martyr but as a president who gave Peru back its dignity as a great and ancient nation with confidence and prospects for its people. To do this will take time -- time for democracy. In a democracy you take steps forward, you even make mistakes, serious accidents occur, and you achieve large and small successes. I am young; I have no intention of falling into the trap of resignation or impatience." [passage omitted]

[Maglie] Mr President, how long will it take to complete your project, to alter this country's injustices? They are so glaring and desperate that, despite your optimistic figures, they strike even a hardened observer.

[Garcia] To alter the structure, you mean? At least 10 years. But that does not mean that the APRA [American Popular Revolutionary Alliance] party wants to remain in power for 10 years, of course.

[Garcia] Well then, if you are asking me how long it will take for a comprehensive transformation of society, including culturally, I would say 20 years. Let me tell you why. There are two further onerous impediments: egoism, encouraged for years by the situation, by television, and by the social model; and the weight of the state bureaucracy, a vast and very slow-moving apparatus with very low productivity. Well, under such conditions one must try to decentralize the state and democratize even the health service.

[Maglie] I visited Lima's Carrion a Callao hospital and gained the impression that one is unlikely to leave there alive.

[Garcia] I will tell you, moreover, that there is the problem of hospital service and the reconstruction of hospitals providing treatment for serious illnesses such as cancer and surgical treatment. But in Peru people die because they drink dirty water; because they contract a common virus; children die of dysentery. It is not even so much a matter of equipping hospitals as of providing preventive structures in places where people live and work. The same applies to housing. I do not intend to concern myself for the present with the middle class; it is the poorer people who must be guaranteed ownership of the land around Lima, loans to construct small houses with basic services -- water and electricity -- and social services such as health, welfare, and education, which is what we are doing now. And the same must be done in the Andean regions, in the provinces distant from Lima.

[Maglie] This is what we could call the medium-term program for the coming year. But how is it to be achieved in practice? Peru is a country poor in resources, dependent on imports, and internationally very vulnerable.

[Garcia] It is difficult, you are right. The major difficulty lies in the fact that not only wealth but also education -- ideological hegemony -- is in the hands of a few. So what can I do -- I believe the most radical left is wrong in this respect -- should I nationalize industry and entrust it to the same unproductive state bureaucrats? Should I nationalize industries and frighten a country unprepared for such a traumatic move? I believe that Salvador Allende encountered the same problem. No, people must see the model changing naturally during the course of time, see doors opening and problems being resolved. And these innovations must also make headway and be introduced in schools, in education.

[Maglie] What do you call this model of society, this bold blueprint? Socialism? And how do you reconcile it with the violence, the clash between the terrorism nurtured by poverty and the repression behind which are often the forces that want to change?

[Garcia] I call it a nationalistic model for social democratization which is confronted by the very serious problem of violence. And so we come to the latest events. I say that violence is now a structural element in Peru. Read the newspaper headlines. I am sure it is possible in Italy for a policeman to kill his wife or carry out a robbery without its becoming the news story of the day, every day. Violence is part of the country's consciousness, a deep-rooted legacy, and Alan Garcia cannot overcome this force by means of his charisma, his image. It will take a long, long time.

[Maglie] When you talk about violence what do you mean? The violence of the system; subversive violence; the violence of the history of a country split between winners and losers, colonizers and colonized, city dwellers and inhabitants of the Sierra; the violence of foreign capital?

[Garcia] The violence is in the "Pol Pot-ism" of Shining Path -- a barbaric movement entirely devoid of any respect for life and entirely divorced from the romantic ideals of liberation held by the people to whom I am close, such as Che Guevara. The violence is in the newspaper reports; in the television news which reels off lists of deaths and sequences of ghastly events; in the police forces, whoever has a weapon to use against those who have none; in the bureaucrat, who is strong compared to the poor man who needs something. Violence is everywhere. Let us be clear about this: Since 1948 there have been 600,000 deaths in Colombia. We have not yet reached this figure, but death here is amplified, propagandized. You ask me what I am doing about this. Well, the other day there was a riot by prisoners at a jail a long way from Lima. Once again orders were issued for vigorous but legal action to be taken. But those who intervened -- the police forces -- are imbued with this violence. What can I do? Violence in front of me, violence behind me; the violence of the means available to me. What can someone do who has only the law in his hands? [passage omitted]

[Maglie] Despite everything we have said, you are writing a speech in which you say that democracy in Peru is strong. How can you be sure of that?

[Garcia] Nobody in Latin America can rule out the possibility of a coup. But I think that democracy in the country is strong and that a process is developing. We are coming out of a conservative phase and an extreme monetaristic policy. We have begun a new period of economic revitalization and winning national independence. The Armed Forces are the same as they were 1 year ago when I became president; they have accepted the constitutional government and are committed to it.

And Peru's Armed Forces are certainly not equal to those in other Latin American countries. As far as I am concerned, I became president through the will of a people to whom we must explain and teach that this is not just an anti-inflationist spring but a long and difficult process of reviving productivity and the capacity to survive and develop as a country.

[Garcia] Of course, it is impossible to be a socialist in Latin America without being anti-imperialist. This is because all our country's ills have external rather than internal causes. We are socialists because we do not believe in liberal capitalist ideas or system. Its result is the situation this country is in: On the one hand there is the famine of the rural districts, the Sierra, the urban poverty which is the result of migration from the rural districts; on the other hand there are a few people who benefit from the import of technology, from the dollar currency and the debt. We are beginning to dismantle this system without being so foolish as to kick against everything: the World Bank, the IMF, the Lima industrialists, and the people themselves, who, thanks to the mass media, have a capitalist model for their lives. First, I am paying what I can of my debt, I am paying 10 percent of what I receive for my exports, and I am therefore tying the value of products to the value of our currency. Second, I am reviving national industry. I do not mean that there is no room for foreign enterprise, I mean I am choosing without following a foreign-style consumer logic with foreign technology which is ultimately just consumption of a foreign product or simply assembling foreign materials and products. I am therefore trying to revive and redirect national industry. National production must be increased. How? By helping agriculture; for instance granting loans to restart the cultivation of hundreds of hectares of land in areas where farming has stopped.

Another thing is the circulation of dollars in the country. Just 1 year ago 38 percent of the currency in circulation was the national currency, all the rest was in dollars. We have now reached 81 percent. This is because it is much less convenient for small savers to save in dollars; this is because we have frozen or stopped large investments in dollars. And to those who protested, we replied: In exchange for your dollars here are soles, the national currency. You have no justification for continuing to grow rich at the country's expense. But, as you can see, this is a process which has only just been started and one which requires a great deal of time. It is a choice which a country ought not to make alone.

[Maglie] Are you referring to integration among Latin American countries? Do you think there is progress in this direction? It seems to me that all the others are continuing to pay interest on the foreign debt exactly as the World Bank is demanding.

[Garcia] The situation in many countries is becoming so terrible, they are becoming so involved in this continuous renegotiation of the foreign debt, that I am sure others will eventually follow our path. And if 7, 8 or 10 Latin American countries all say together: "Let us follow the same criteria for payment," then the world situation will really change. [passage omitted]

CHURCH CONDEMNS TERRORISM, FOREIGN DEBT BURDEN

[Text] Lima, 28 Jul (AFP) -- The Peruvian Catholic Church today questioned the moral obligation of paying a foreign debt when its terms cannot be accepted without lowering even further the standard of living and even the survival and development of our nation.

This was said by Cardinal Juan Landazuri during the Te Deum he celebrated at the Lima Cathedral on the occasion of the 165th anniversary of Peruvian independence.

Regarding the violence that Peru is presently experiencing, the Peruvian church has issued a fervent appeal for peace and for a national reconciliation, and it condemns both terrorist and antiterrorist violence.

The appeal also categorically states that those institutions or persons that cooperate or promote terrorism and participate in terrorist actions cannot be exempt from being condemned for their actions.

This statement was included in the sermon read by Father Carlos Cardo before President Alan Garcia, former President Fernando Belaunde Terry, members of the Cabinet and the diplomatic corps, Marxist Lima Mayor Alfonso Barrantes, and other authorities.

The sermon states that the church believes in democracy and that it encourage those efforts to achieve democracy.

The church wants to see a more representative democracy. It adds that the church is aware of the difficulties that must be overcome, among them economic difficulties, and particularly the nefarious effects of the foreign debt.

After stating that peace is being seriously jeopardized in Peru by the prevailing violence, the sermon adds that terrorism is an unequivocal social aberration an that with its logic of death, terrorism shows the horrors that can result from a moral deterioration that ignores the value of human life.

It also warns that in the struggle against terrorism, minds can be obliterated causing a vicious circle that harms society and provides terrorists with new reasons to hate the authorities.

Quoting Pope John Paul II, the sermon says that no one can ever call an assassination by a different name. May the vicious circle never be called logical, or unavoidable, or necessary.

The church adds that it grieves for those Peruvian families that have lost a father, a husband, or a son, by violence, and that in particular it grieves for the deaths of courageous an honest defenders of the nation.

EL PAIS INTERVIEWS NORIEGA ON SEVERAL KEY ISSUES

PM301130 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 20 Jul 86 pp 4-5

[Interview with Defense Forces Chief General Manuel Antonio Noriega by Jose Comas in Panama City; date not given]

[Text] Panama City -- The 48-year-old Manuel Antonio Noriega is the only general in Panama's Defense Forces and the real strongman in a country in which the Army plays the leading role in political life. Noriega was recently the target of attacks and extremely grave accusations in the U.S. press, including the accusation of being involved in drug trafficking. Military personnel close to him view this as a "conspiracy" instigated by the United States to avoid compliance with the treaty signed by Presidents Torrijos and Carter, which outlines the transfer to Panama of sovereignty over the Canal and its zone in the year 2000.

General Noriega received an EL PAIS special correspondent in his headquarters office in Panama City. Throughout the 1-hour interview he was surrounded by five colonels and answered every question put to him.

Question: General, you seem to have lost Washington's confidence.

Answer: (After 18 seconds' silence) I would like you to expand on that, because, put like that, it is a question which is very...

Question: The U.S. line is generally one of leaving a person alone if he is of benefit. Now the reprimand in THE NEW YORK TIMES and Helms' attacks in the Senate suddenly appear. Does this mean you have ceased to be trustworthy?

Answer: My status as a Panamanian and a member of the Republic of Panama's Defense Forces force me to comply with my country's interests, my nation's constitution, and my government's patriotic plans. This commander, all members of the Armed Forces, and all members of the Cabinet headed by President Del Valle operate within these working parameters.

Question: Do you believe that behind all this (the attacks in the United States) there is an attempt to destabilize Panama?

Answer: There are two things: The official statements made by our Foreign Ministry representatives and the official talks which Panama's representatives have had with members of President Reagan's government. They state -- and I emphasize this, because these are statements by the Panamanian Foreign Ministry -- that there is no attempt or desire on the part of President Reagan's government to harm the Republic of Panama. This is the official version. We Panamanians feel that the same old enemies exist and appear to want to deny Panama the right to self-determination in its own sovereign territory -- The canal strip, which is in our territory.

Question: So do you believe that there is an attempt to prevent the transfer of the Canal to Panama in the year 2000?

Answer: I do. We have sufficient evidence of the conspiracy and the insult which has been received, which was directed not against the commander of the Defense Forces but against the destiny of the Republic of Panama. That conspiracy lies in the same interests of the group which has opposed the signing of the treaties since 1970. That same political, social, and economic group exists and persists in the United States and will confront and attack any expression of nationalism and the Panamanian Republic's sovereign self-determination.

Question: Does this group reach as far as the Oval Office in the White House?

Answer: We could not say so, because that would be to run counter to a policy and statements by the White House, which says that they have no interest in destabilizing the Republic of Panama, that they have no interest in not transferring the Canal, that they are not interested in harming relations with Panama. We must accept that these statements are valid and good, since they come from a friendly government. We must locate the enemies in those ultraconservative groups which have always believed that the area where the overseas force operated was a territory which could be regarded as Algeria was regarded by the French.

Question: This direct attempt against you suggests perhaps that the United States has an alternative.

Answer: You cannot talk in generalizations concerning the United States. U.S. society has political groups with conservative attitudes, and it is to these that we are referring; to those who, without knowing Panama's history, claim that the Canal strip always was or belonged to their territory. It is to these that we are referring, and not to the government as such.

Question: Are you sure of Panama's Defense Forces? Of the new generation which will be at the top in the year 2000? Or do you intend to reach the year 2000 in this position?

Answer: (laughs) When the Panamanian students were struggling in 1964, in 1945, and in 1938, and when President Jose Antonio Remon said: "Neither millions nor charity; we want justice," he did not believe that he would be alive in 1999, when the treaty expires. When Torrijos set things astir, he did not believe, either, that he would live until the year 2000. It is good that people abroad know this struggle and realize that it does not date from this year or last year. This struggle began the year following the signing of the treaty (in 1903). People immediately began to struggle to remove the colonial enclave in the Republic of Panama. That is why nobody owns this struggle. Nobody, as a Panamanian, can claim to be the brains or the sole hero of this venture, which is a struggle lasting generations. Hence the commanders of the year 2000, the young people of the year 2000, will be the witnesses and the heirs of what is done or not done right now, in 1986.

Question: And if the opposition came to power? Or is that ruled out here in Panama?

Answer: Well, there is a situation here which leaves no room for doubt. The Panamanian people, without political distinctions, accept nothing, absolutely nothing, that is not in keeping with their national interests. This is an extremely nationalistic people, without being chauvinistic, without being disrespectful of or aligned with other left-wing or right-wing powers. This is a people who know and have suffered what it is to have a colonial enclave in the very heart of their territory, in half their territory. This people know what it is to have a foreign police force arresting their fellow countrymen. This people know what it is to be tried by foreign courts, with penalties which pertain to other states and to other laws, which are not Panamanian laws. That is why this people will never renounce their gain and their right to be sovereign.

Question: Even if the opposition wins?

Answer: Even if the opposition wins.

Question: You attribute to the opposition the same nationalist feeling which you have yourself?

Answer: I attribute that nationalist feeling to the people, who will prevent their leader, whoever their leader is, from directing an action against the recovery of their territory.

Question: It seems unlikely that the opposition will attain power here.

Answer: Well, it is the people who decide, and the people will know why they do not allow them to attain power.

Question: Did the people decide in the last election?

Answer: The people decided in the last election.

Question: You know that there is talk of fraud.

Answer: Well, there is talk of fraud by those who lost. It is the losing player who kicks up a ruckus.

Question: How long will your personal position, your post at the head of the Defense Forces, last? Is it until your retirement? Is your replacement envisaged? Will you go?

Answer: We have our internal regulations, as do all the armed forces in the world, and the continuation and termination of our duties are subject to the same internal regulations.

Question: That is, you will quit this post when you reach retirement.

Answer: When the internal regulations so require.

Question: Are you worried by cases such as those of Marcos or Duvalier, which could have certain parallels here in Panama?

Answer: Panama is not the Philippines, much less Haiti. Here none of the members of our Defense Forces is either Marcos or Jean-Claude.

Question: But do you believe that the model for ridding oneself of a (U.S.) ally could set a fashion?

Answer: The opposition groups, which pay for the lobbying there and arrange the newspaper fabrication there, link it to this country and take it around to other newspapers, write the news abroad, and release it in Panama. They have persuaded their lobby that an attempt should be made to measure Panama by this yardstick, but there is definitely no parallel, no similarity. The Philippines is a system remote from what Panama is, and Haiti is diametrically opposed in the political, military, and professional aspects.

We have a military force which is patriotic, progressive, and prodevelopment and which works with its central government for the population's good. It is not a military force which is billeted or developed to combat guerrillas within its territory. That is why we reject the comparison with Manila or Port-au-Prince.

(At this point Colonel Roberto Diaz Herrero, chief of staff and second man in the military hierarchy, interrupted to say that "the most irrefutable proof that this is not the model of Manila or Haiti is that, although some people lobbying in Washington would like to make some of those ultraconservative groups believe this view, they are making a real effort at opposition, having the profoundly antimilitarist octogenarian Dr Arias (the elderly former President Arnulfo Arias) as the opposition's top leader, but they succeed in bringing only 1,000 people onto the streets in the greatest opposition effort.")

Question: One of the things which came to light in this set of accusations against you is that in 1972 the possibility of assassinating you was considered in the United States. How seriously do you take this?

Answer: This is stated by the newspaper (THE NEW YORK TIMES), together with the whole framework, without any proof. At that time it could be seen in the same publications that the man whom they were going to eliminate was General Torrijos, who was head of government at that time. The elimination depends on the position of the commander or leader of the day.

Question: It has been reported that Torrijos warned the United States that you are a very dangerous man.

Answer: That is totally..., not to use a swearword, it is an absurdity which makes no sense.

Question: Do you consider yourself a loyal interpreter of Torrijos' teaching?

Answer: We who command the Defense Forces not only consider ourselves but are those who truly interpret Torrijos, because it is we who were closest to Torrijos, in his strategy and his ideas. That is why we are here.

Question: What is your opinion of the $100-million assistance for the contras?

Answer: (hesitates slightly) It is a U.S. reaction to an analysis of its geopolitics. (laughs)

Question: Are you afraid of provoking Reagan?

Answer: No, I am not afraid of provoking anybody. It is simply that I..., we have our own idea, and respect for people's stances is directly proportional to the line you take. It is as if I were to ask why the Spanish people have not removed the Americans from there, from the bases. [answer ends]

Dr Hugo Spadafora was a deputy minister in the Torrijos government. Following lengthy personal vicissitudes, he joined Eden Pastora's anti-Sandinista guerrillas. Spadafora was captured by the Defense Forces last 13 September and was found dead 16 September, decapitated and wrapped in a U.S. mailbag. Noriega has been implicated by the U.S. news media in the dissident doctor's murder.

Question: You are being implicated as the instigator of Spadafora's murder. What is your version of what happened?

Answer: The investigation was directed by the Republic of Panama's courts, which are one of the three state powers. The opposition is exploiting a situation and is beginning, through the newspapers, to act as a court of law. When newspapers set themselves up as courts of law there is a danger that justice will disappear.

If we turn directly to the act itself, to the act of bloodshed, we can see that murder did not suit the Republic of Panama's Defense Forces, and less so if we are dealing with professional defense forces. The very characteristics of the act show that professional forces do not make this kind of mistake. This kind of mistake reflects a psychological or sociological characteristic of other Central American individuals, of other people who may use inhuman groups which leave behind a message with vendettas. We totally reject the accusations because we -- we alone -- were the people harmed by that murder.

Question: You were chief of G-2 -- Panama's secret service -- for quite a long time. Are your secret services unable to find out what happened?

Answer: I would not view it in this way, because the murder was not in Panama. The murder was in Costa Rica. We can and do have our own investigation, but that investigation would not be jurisdictionally and legally our responsibility.

Question: Another of the accusations leveled against you is that you are virtually a "double agent," who worked for Cuba and for the United States, who allowed the United States to operate freely in Panama and then passed on information to Cuba.

Answer: If this were so, we would have that all officials of countries which have relations are double agents; the United States has relations with the Russians and with China. [sentence as published] What secrets could the United States hand over to the Republic of Panama? What secrets could Cuba hand over to the Republic of Panama? It is illogical. This is rather a hoax against the United States and its officials in the security services.

Question: What about the sale of technology to Cuba? At least once a week a Cubana de Aviacion freighter lands in Panama and goes to Cuba.

Answer: Yes, there is a Cuban airline here. The sale of technology rests with the United States. Kodak belongs to the United States, and IBM and General Electric, too. All the technology that could be obtained by Cuba does not belong to Panama, which has no technological plants. That purchase is made with knowledge and with books. Where are those companies' books? Those very companies' investigators are Americans, not Panamanians. Hence, that also is self-evident. If Kodak sells all its photographic equipment to Cuba, it does not need Panama. They should know to whom they are selling it and to whom they are not selling it. We Panamanians need not be the intermediaries in that sale. And if it were like that, why do the U.S. authorities not fine Kodak, General Electric, and all the technological companies and forbid them to make those sales?

Question: It is said that you profit from drug trafficking.

Answer: We have been working with the Americans for 16 years, and here, summarized in 480 pages, we have all the work performed since 1970; all the testimonials Washington gave, praising our work.

(Noriega presented a bundle of photocopies containing acknowledgment by the U.S. press and authorities of Panama's cooperation in the struggle against drug trafficking. A Panamanian official attending the interview interrupted to point out that alleged Colombian drug trafficker Jorge Ochoa, recently handed over to Colombia, was arrested in Spain thanks to the information sent from Panama.)

Question: You are accused of forcing Nicolas Ardito Barletta's resignation. (Panamanian President Barletta resigned from his post in October 1985 and was replaced by the then vice president, Eric del Valle)

Answer: The truth of the matter is that the resignation stemmed from a loss of his political platform and of the political support of his party, his government team, and the legislators. When they deprived him of support, they left without any foothold and without prospects for being able to act. He could not act if he was going to have an assembly against him. He could not act if he was going to have a government team and a party with a critical stance -- sustained criticism. It is to this that we directly attribute President Barletta's departure.

Question: But what role do the Armed Forces have in all this? I believe that there has been no president since the restoration of civilian rule in Panama who has reached the end of his term...

Answer: Here the Armed Forces convey the people's decision, convey the majority's decision. When the Barletta affair occurred, it was a majority who decided it. All we do is make ourselves the repository of the decision, the pointer of the scales in which destiny and the future have already been judged politically. It rested with us to carry out and heed the political decision handed down on that president.

DEL VALLE PROTESTS TO UN ON 'DISCREDIT CAMPAIGN'

[Text] New York City, 30 Jul (DPA) -- Panamanian President Eric Arturo del Valle has condemned the procedures that some groups have used to attack his country and has cautioned that such attacks may become a new threat to the people's right of self-determination and sovereignty. In a letter to the secretary general of the United Nations publicized today, the Panamanian president deplored the discredit campaign that has been launched by the United States against Panamanian Defense Forces Commander Antonio Noriega. He noted: "The campaign has been carried out by some important dailies and television networks. The virulence of the attacks by THE NEW YORK TIMES is noteworthy."

On 12 June, THE NEW YORK TIMES quoted State Department, White House, and Pentagon sources as well as U.S. intelligence officials, linking Noriega to the trafficking of arms and drugs and to illegal money laundering, accusing him of spying for both the United States and Cuba.

In a letter to Javier Perez de Cuellar, President del Valle noted that none of the charges have been backed by evidence. He stated: "All the slanderous affirmations are based on allegations from anonymous sources, allegedly secret sources, or on statements attributed to officials asked not to be identified."

Del Valle said that the Panamanian Foreign Ministry received "adequate explanations" from the U.S. Government when asked for its official position on the matter. But THE NEW YORK TIMES, the NBC Television Network, and other U.S. media have continued reproducing this type of information as well as erroneous statements from ultraconservative Republican Senator Jesse Helms.

He noted that the campaign is being launched at a moment when important events are taking place in Panama. He referred to his country's enemies who want to prevent compliance with the canal treaties and to reach power, disregarding the people's will expressed in the latest elections.

He also mentioned that there are important groups "conspiring to disrupt Panama's banking center so that its financial power is taken somewhere else." He called attention to the fact that similar campaigns are being initiated against other Latin American nations struggling for their sovereignty.

President del Valle concluded his letter by strongly rejecting "the slander being put out by the enemies of Panama, who want to undermine our stability, internal peace, and our independent foreign policy."

LA PRENSA POSITION ON NORIEGA CHARGES

PA311557 Panama City LA PRENSA in Spanish 31 Jul 86 p 1a

["As of Today" column]

[Text] When we Panamanians heard the vague official theory that the charges made against General Manuel A. Noriega, which were published in THE NEW YORK TIMES, were the result of a conspiracy aimed at keeping the canal from being turned over to Panama in the year 2000, we thought that it was another improbable story that the regime usually makes up for domestic consumption, when left without arguments and explanations in face of some delicate situation. On this occasion, the matter has gone further, as the government has raised its strange theory about a conspiracy to the level of first-rate diplomatic problem. This is shown by the letter sent by the president of the republic to the UN secretary general. In the letter he refers to the "slanderous statement made by Panama's enemies to undermine our stability and internal peace as well as the independence of our international policy." According to the president, none of these attacks has been backed with evidence and all assertions "are based on anonymous allegations." If the charges against Gen Noriega affect our country as gravely as the president claims, Panama should turn to the U.S. tribunals to demand that THE NEW YORK TIMES either prove its assertions or be sentenced to pay the appropriate indemnity. This is the best occasion for truth to shine for the good of the Republic.

COSTA RICA

ARIAS SAYS PEOPLE NOT SUPPORTING NEUTRALITY

[Text] President Oscar Arias has said that the Costa Rican people are not aware of the need to maintain peace to consolidate the industrial and business sectors. He complained about a lack of support for his neutrality policy to a group of industrialists. He told them that the industrial sector has not decided what should be Costa Rica's role in the Central American war.

Arias said that the needs of a Costa Rica that keeps demanding more are not being met. He noted that it would be difficult to increase production if the country gets involved in the regional conflict. He commented that if the country does not remain out of the Central American conflict many businessmen will soon be trying to sell their factories. He stressed that he cannot see how there can be any foreign investment without peace and noted that what Costa Rica has cannot be maintained if peace is not guaranteed. On the contrary, he said, the situation would become worse.

The immediate measure that businessmen would take in the event of violence would be to sell their factories or deposit their firms' funds abroad.

Arias said that to his government neutrality is Costa Rica's desire, and this means not becoming involved in the military conflicts of third countries. He also said that military actions will not be promoted from Costa Rica. he added: Anyone who disregards these appeals is violating the government's decisions and does not deserve to live among us.

The president said that his government will respect neutrality and emphasized that he did not bring nine Latin American presidents to Costa Rica to tell them something he did not feel. The feeling expressed to them was that he wants Costa Rica to preserve its traditional peace. He said that he does not want the destiny of hunger, unemployment, and misery other nations are experiencing. These are nations with conflicts that Costa Rica must remain separate from.

FURTHER ON HONDURAN PRESIDENT AZCONA'S VISIT

Joint Declaration

PA311923 San Salvador Domestic Service in Spanish 1737 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Joint declaration issued by Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo and Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte at the Presidential House in San Salvador; read by Salvadoran Deputy Foreign Minister Ricardo Acevedo Peralta -- live]

[Text] Joint declaration by the Honduran and Salvadoran presidents:

The president of Honduras, Jose Azcona Hoyo, accepting the cordial invitation of Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte, officially visited the Republic of El Salvador on 30 and 31 July.

They held a major exchange of views regarding bilateral relations that enabled them to draft agreements on measure that will favor strengthening peace; pluralistic, representative, and participative democracy; and integral development and cooperation between the two countries.

The heads of state talked at length about the problems affecting the Central American region, and concurred on the need to combine efforts to create or revitalize, as the case may be, those mechanisms that may contribute toward peaceful solutions to disputes and cooperation, so as to achieve a more harmonious coexistence conducive to political stability and social and economic progress.

Therefore, they declare:

Their full conviction that the traditional, historical, and cultural ties that join Honduras and El Salvador constitute the basis to achieve a fruitful and supportive coexistence for the sake of the two peoples;

Their firm dicision to combine efforts, which have become reinforced through a full and solid understanding conducive to an honest solution to the problems that weigh on the relationship between their peoples. For that reason they reaffirmed their commitment to faithfully comply with the terms of the Lima General Peace Treaty, (?convinced) that international law preserves and consolidates constant fraternity and constructive cooperation among the two countries to work and progress.

They reaffirmed their commitment to submit their border dispute to the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice and pledged to fully implement, and in total good faith, the ruling issued by that court.

To maintain respect for the dignity of the tow states and their citizens they concurred on the advisability of creating a special commission to study and propose solutions to human, civil, and economic problems that may affect their citizens once the border dispute has been resolved.

President Duarte thanked President Azcona for his government's contribution to protect and assist Salvadoran refugees living in Honduras and reiterated the Salvadoran Government's commitment to honestly and decisively contribute to resolving their situation by offering the appropriate conditions and the necessary trust that will permit their voluntary repatriation and their relocation, in accordance with existing agreements.

Likewise, they pledged to explore, promote, and implement joint development projects such as the (Elpreginio) zone, the utilization and exploitation of the rivers crossing or dividing the border of the two Republics, electricity networks, the dry water canal [as heard] between the two countries, and an increase in trade, as well as cooperation in food security [seguridad alimentaria] and an exchange of surplus staple grains, through the mechanisms already established and through the coordination of their foreign ministries.

To achieve permanent and lasting peace in Central America, it has become imperative to foster and reinforce democratic, pluralistic processes based on the furthering and effective implementation of human rights, social justice, and respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the states.

It is necessary to support, create, and further regional forums for dialogue and cooperation that effectively support fostering understanding and democratic coexistence to attain appropriate solutions to the area problems. To this effect, they reiterated their adherence to the Espquipulas declaration of 25 May 1986.

The Honduran president expressed his satisfaction over President Duarte's decision to seek the peace the Salvadoran people so yearn for through means that lead to reason and understanding. They reaffirmed the importance and significance which respect for human rights has in a democracy, and they expressed their decision to maintain and further the validity and the full and effective implementation of this.

They likewise concurred that they should strike to make unified efforts to prevent the problems that currently affect the Central American area from fostering interventions or confrontations alien to the region.

They decided to maintain periodic direct contact to analyze and overcome bilateral problems in a unified fashion and to promote joint stances in the face of the crisis of the region on those matters of mutual interest.

They expressed satisfaction over the major achievements made during the talks, which will reinforce political, economic, social, and cultural relations between Honduras and El Salvador and will promote achieving peace and reinforcing liberty and pluralistic democracy in Central America.

In conclusion, President Azcona, speaking on behalf of the Honduran people, his retinue, his wife, and himself, conveyed his gratitude to the Salvadoran president and Mrs Duarte for their kind hospitality during their official visit. He also extended a cordial invitation to them to officially visit the Republic of Honduras. The Salvadoran president accepted the invitation and offered to go at an opportune time.

Azcona Holds News Conference

[News conference by Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo at the Presidential House in San Salvador, with introduction by Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte -- live]

[Text] [Duarte] Dear national, Honduran, and international journalists: I would like to greet you on this day when we are celebrating Journalist's Day. Tomorrow we will hold the traditional meeting in my house to which I have always invited you, not only now that I am president, but also when I had no post. We have always met in my home so I expect all journalists to be there.

Now we will have with us, for a news conference, the president of Honduras, Jose Azcona Hoyo. As usual, during interviews with distinguished guests, I do not answer questions. You will have the honor to interview the president of Honduras.

I ask you to treat him with love and frankness because he is a man with democratic awareness, and he is fulfilling the right of freedom of expression. Just as you have the right to ask questions, he has the right to answer. Here is the president of Honduras, Jose Azcona Hoyo:

[Azcona] First, before you start asking questions -- which I will answer with my characteristic, frankness and without reservations, I want to congratulate the Salvadoran journalists who are celebrating their day. Congratulations. Success for all of you in your profession as social communicators. We hope that you will contribute to the strengthening of democracy in El Salvador -- as you are in fact doing -- by supporting the decisions of the Salvadoran Government and also by being critical whenever necessary. Congratulations to all of you. I am ready now. You can ask whatever questions you find suitable.

[Moderator] Mr President, the first question will be asked by Joel Burgos of DPA.

[Burgos] Mr President of Honduras, some political sectors have said that your visit to El Salvador is part of a plan to form a front composed of Central American countries against the Nicagaguan Government.

[Azcona] No! That speculation is completely groundless. With President Duarte we have basically discussed matters of interest to El Salvador and Honduras. We will not deny the fact that there is an ideological concurrence, as I said during my improvised speech at last night's dinner with Presidnt Duarte. We belong to different political parties, but essentially we are democratic and pacifists.

Instead of looking for a front to harm Nicaragua, we want to contribute so that Nicaragua may lead its government through paths of democracy, so that there is a political way out of the Nicaraguan problem, so that there is no more bloodshed in that sister Central American nation. There is no such front against the Sandinist government.

[Moderator] The next question is from journalist [name indistinct]

[Name indistinct] Mr President, I would like to ask you two questions. The first one has to do with the agreement you signed jointly with President Duarte on the refugees. We see nothing specific and don't know if the refugees are going to remain there, or if Honduras will keep them where they are now. Please gove us an idea of the refugees situation in Honduras. The other thing, Mr President, is everybody knows at the international level that your country permits the presence of the counterrevolutionaries in your territory. My question is: You once said that you would not permit the presence of the counterrevolutionaries from Nicaragua, but later you claimed that you had not said this. My question is: Why does Honduras permit the presence of counterrevolutionaries on the Honduran-Nicaraguan border?

[Azcona] Regarding the refugees, Honduras is not [word indistinct] of the agreement on refugees. However, I believe the treatment we have given Salvadoran and Nicaraguan refugees has been very humane and within the possibilities of and take care of them within our possibilities. We believe that Salvadoran refugees (?should be) seeking the way to return home, because we feel that there are no reason why there should be Salvadoran refugees in as much as that constitutional and democratic government respects all freedoms and rights.

We know that most of those refugees have been removed from the areas of conflict between the Salvadoran subversives and the government. We understand that situation. We believe that as the situation normalizes, the Salvadoran brothers who are now in refugee camps in Honduras will begin to return to their country, which is where they belong. Salvadorans for El Salvador, and Hondurans for Honduras [word indistinct].

Regarding Honduras, we have been very clear on the matter of the counterrevolution. The Honduran-Nicaraguan border is approximately 750 km long. The southern sector of the border is accessible by road as for as Cifuentes, or rather, [words indistinct] in El Paraiso Department. From that point on, the border is a rural area and very difficult to protect. We have repeatedly stated, and we are not going to deny it: Contras come in and out of Honduras. The contras have not been given official permission to operate in Honduras, but we do not have sufficient material or human resources to protect the entire border and keep the Nicaraguan counterrevolutionaries, which have emerged as a result -- and we say this emphatically -- as a result of the Sandinist government's curtailment of the Nicaraguan citizens' rights, from entering Honduras. This would be tantamount to serving as the nursemaid of the Sandinist government or, to use another term, as a gendarme, as we have already (?stated). We are not going to become the guardians of the Sandinist government, because they would not do so for our democratic government if we were to have (?that problem).

I believe that the phenomena of the counterrevolution and public resistance in Nicaragua are untenable and will suddenly disappear when the Sandinist government in Nicaragua tries to prevent a political solution of its internal problems. [sentence as heard]

[Moderator] Mr President, reporter Julio Armando Valdez of HRN.

[Valdez] I have a question for President Duarte. [passage indistinct] My question is, if the International Court of Justice decides in favor of Honduras, what will be the reaction of the Salvadoran Government, the people, the guerrillas, and the opposition?

[Duarte] My dear friend and Honduran reporter, it would be discourteous of the Salvadoran president to answer this question at a news conference offered by the Honduran president. He will be glad, however, to answer it privately after the news conference.

[Moderator] Mr President Azcona, Reporter Eloy Guevara [name indistinct] of Radio Chaparrastique in San Miguel.

[Guevara] Mr President, I have two questions. First, to what extent does the United States influence Central America policy, particularly in Honduras, and what is the United States seeking with its direct involvement? The second question: What is your policy in response to the problems in your country, where it is known a coup will be attempted?

[Azcona] I did not understand the second part of your question.

[Guevara] The second question?

[Azcona] Yes.

[Guevara] What is your policy in response to the problems in your country, as it is known that a coup will be attempted against your government.

[Azcona] Look, first I will answer the first question regarding U.S. influence. The United States maintains friendly relations with Honduras, and I am not going to deny that Honduras, El Salvador, Guatemala, Colombia, Venezuela, Panama, and Mexico are within the area of U.S. influence. I will go even further. The entire Western world is influenced by the United States because there are two influential powers in the world: The United States and the USSR. It would seem as if these small countries are being given David's slingshot to use it against Goliath, in this case the United States. This is not our position. Our position is realistic.

There are areas of influence in the world, but countries such as Honduras and, I believe, El Salvador are defending our position before the United States with dignity and a realistic manner. That is my response to your first question. You must not believe that only Honduras, El Salvador, Colombia, Venezula, and Mexico are influenced by the United States. There is the FRG, Italy, Greece, Spain, and France. There is a socialist government in Spain that voted to remain in NATO. We have a government in Great Britain that has allowed Euromissiles; the FRG did the same. We also have a socialist government in Greece, and there is a U.S. base there. Therefore, we must be realistic and see the circumstances and situations. The United States does not exert any influence over internal Honduran decisions. If there is a zone of influence, and it does exist, we are part of it. However, our dignity is unchangeable [words indistinct]. Your second question was...

[Guevara] Your policies in response to the problems Honduras is facing.

[Azcona] Oh, about the coup. I want to say that I do not know where that story came from. From EL DIARIO DE HOY here? There is no danger of a coup in Honduras at this time. The government is making the necessary efforts to solve the problems that emerge each day in our country. It is important to (?stress) that in developing countries, problems cannot be foreseen far in the future. They emerge daily. The demands of social sectors, most of which are justifiable, come one after another, and the instruments, the resources that these governments have cannot totally fulfill those demands. These problems will continue to emerge and the governments -- the Honduran Government -- is obliged to solve its problems. However, a coup is not even remotely possible at this time.

[Moderator] Mr President, Reporter Alejandro Casco of the Honduran newspaper EL HERALDO.

[Casco] I only have two questions. One is for President Azcona. The United States gives Honduras less economic and military aid. I want to ask why El Salvador, which is not as docile toward the United States as Honduras. [sentence as heard] What factors make it possible for Honduras to receive less aid than El Salvador? The next question is for President Duarte. If the International Court of Justice rules against El Salvador, will its decision be respected, considering that the Constitution stipulates that the national territory cannot be relinquished?

[Moderator] This is the same question that was asked by another Honduran reporter. You can ask the president that question later. He will be glad to answer it.

[Azcona] I believe that companero, friend, fellow countryman Casco's question [passage indistinct] but I think I can answer it. El Salvador receives more aid, especially in the military field, because it has many more problems than Honduras at this time. It has more problems because [words indistinct] there are guerrillas, and an undeclared war and we -- thank God -- do not have this problem.

However, you can rest assured that if this were to happen, and we pray to God that it does not, we would also need this type of aid. We do not have it now, and we hope we never need it. The situations in El Salvador and Honduras are different. [question indistinct]

[Azcona] We cannot impose conditions in the sense that we be given more aid than any other country. We request with dignity the aid we deem necessary to maintain development, to solve social problems, and also to solve security and sovereignty problems in Honduras. That is my answer.

[Moderator] Mr President, reporter Regina Osorio of Channels 3 and 7 of the Republic of Honduras.

[Osorio] Did you agree on or sign any definitive agreement with President Duarte for the repatriation of thousands of Salvadoran refugees living in Honduran territiory, given that Honduran and Salvadoran military authorities have said that there are guerrillas in the camps that are using them as safe havens?

[Azcona] We signed no agreement because, as I said, although Honduras is not a signatory of the convention on refugees, we have respected the refugees, rights in the sense that the repatriation must be a voluntary move.

As for reports that Salvadoran refugee camps in Honduras, such as the ones in Colomoncagua, Mesa Grande, and San Antonio, have to a certain extent become the sanctuaries of some refugees, we are aware of that. We have implemented reasonable measures to prevent this. We are even working with the UNHCR [UN High Commissioner for Refugees] to ensure that Honduran authorities are present in those camps, that they not be managed only by committees made up of the refugees themselves. That is a right that Honduras is entitled to because the camps are operating in its territory. This is to ensure that the camps do not enjoy extra-territoriality, as is the case of embassies.

However, the repatriation of refugees will be carried out on a voluntary basis. No refugee can be forced to return to his country if he refuses. We think that this problem will be solved, because in my eyes conditions in El Salvador are good as I said before, that country enjoys a fully democratic government. As war-related problems in the areas from which the refugees are coming from are solved, they will return to their places of origin.

[Monge] Mr President, military sources in Morazan reported the presence of merceraries or internationalists, as they were called at that time, within the Salvadoran guerrillas. A capital city newspaper reported that Hondurans are earning $4 a day in the Salvardoran guerrilla ranks. Is the government aware of this situation, and if so, what measures are being implemented?

[Azcona] Well, from any standpoint, that is regrettable. This shows a marked meddling of Central American extremist sectors in Salvadoran affairs. President Duarte denounced that. This clearly shows that we must seek a political solution to problems in the area.

We regret of course that [words indistinct], and we do not allow that to happen at all. Quite the contrary, [word indistinct] Hondurans to disturb order in El Salvador would (?not) sell themsleves as cheaply as $4 a day. I think that they earn more than that. I believe that they receive a lot of money from various channels to support that subversive situation in El Salvador. If we are not careful, money to promote similar situations in Honduras will also appear. That is my answer.

[Moderator] Reporter Raul Beltran of [word indistinct] agency.

[Beltran] President Azcona, I would like to ask you two questions. First, rumors of a coup d'etat in your country originated from the private sector yesterday. They say that your government is too tolerant with the constant civil disobedience, caused by the serious political and economic problems in Honduras. Second, being aware that the Salvadoran Constitution mentions the irreducibility of our territory, would you accept an International Court of Justice ruling that the border pockets belong to El Salvador and not to Honduras?

[Azcona] Look, again we refer to Honduras. I believe and I will proudly tell you that there has never been another government with better communication with all sectors in Honduras than the current one. Honduras' economic problems were not caused today or yesterday. It is not true that the economic problems have worsened. We have economic problems. When there is a democratic government, economic problems abound because social sectors feel rightfully entitled to make demands, and the leader listens to those problems. That is, problems are not (?restrained), they come out freely. That is the reality.

There is talk of strikes. There have been no strikes with major negative effects on the Honduran economy. When strikes were held, we immediately sought solutions. Peasant organizations occupied the installations of the National Agrarian Institute. We appointed a high-level commission and the problem was solved in 24 hours. They had every right to make demands. They claimed that the bureaucratic structure of that institute prevented the development of the agrarian reform. In this regard, the government sided with them. We are seeking ways to reorganize that bureaucratic structure to ensure that part of the millions spent in bureaucracy be diverted toward agrarian reform problems.

All problems have been solved quickly, and there is no chance whatsoever that there will be a coup d'etat in Honduras. That is rather a [word indistinct] of the private enterprise that is supporting the government, that is worried about the large number of demands being made on the government. [Words indistinct] shown that they are friends of our government.

If the level of demands is not lowered, if there is not greater cooperation, if there is not greater patience in the solution of problems, the government could be destabilized. We believe that any government could face such a risk if the various sectors do not realize that solutions cannot come overnight, and that governments acting in good faith have the right to ask for understanding from sectors that have just demands. However, those demands require time to be resolved.

When the two states, that is Honduras and El Salvador, voluntarily and jointly resort to the International Court of Justice and recognize the finality of any ruling coming from it, Honduras will accept the ruling. Each state will defend its rights and bring its evidence.

Once the court hands down its ruling, regardless of what it might be, because we do not know what it will be, Honduras must accept that ruling. Treaties are above any speculation.

[Duarte] I think that the president will allow me to say that the answer to the question from the two Honduran reporters is exactly the same response that the president has given to the Salvadoran reporters.

[Moderator] Now we will have reporter Antonio Fuentes Ibarra of Radio Cadena Libertad.

[Fuentes] Mr President of Honduras, I would like to know if after certain failures -- which must be called failures -- of the Contadora Group in the pacification of Central America, how do you view the possibility of a democratic consolidation in Central America? That is one question; the other is: After your visit to our country, what will be your opinion?

[Azcona] Unfortunately, regarding the first question, the Contadora Group did not achieve progress to the extent that the four democratic countries of Central America expected. It did not make that progress because too much emphasis was placed on the arms buildup and the military problem, when the essence of the Central American problem is political. The Sandinist government, as a last recourse, said that it could return the tanks, the helicopter gunships, the multi-barreled artillery, and so forth. However, it said that it would keep the rifles and the men who carried those rifles. This does not solve the problem because the problem is a political one. If all the countries sign an agreement, and if we only keep the weapons they [the Sandinists] call defensive, they have more than enough with those defensive weapons to continue subjugating their people and prolonging the political problem in Nicaragua. This is (?what this matter) implies. As Presidents Duarte, Arias, and I told President Ortega, it is a problem of how one views power and democracy.

We are democratic presidents who know that power is relative, very relative. We also know that power is not eternal. We know that, undoubtedly, on 27 January 1990, I will turn over power to whomever is elected by the Honduran people, regardless of his party. I also know that the power the people gave me was given to me as a representative of that power. It was given to me in a relative way. I must respect the legislative branch. I must respect the judicial branch. There is also the Armed Forces, to which the Constitution of the Republic gives certain duties. There are peasant group who receive rights through the agrarian reform law. There are unions which the labor code gives rights to within the framework of the labor code. Consequently, power within a democracy is limited, relative, and temporary.

Meanwhile, in a totalitarian government [words indistinct] Mr Ortega. Why hold presidential elections? Why have LA PRENSA? Why let the priests go to the pulpit to express their ideas? That is the problem. It lies in a different concept of democracy and power that is held by those who have totalitarian ideas and those who have democratic ideas. That is the problem. It is not a problem of the arms buildup. It is not a military problem. It is a problem that is esentially political, which is why we have supported the Contadora Group and talked with President ortega. We will talk with him again as many times as necessary. We personally do not have anything against [words indistinct]. In addition, we do not have any hard feelings for the men who are members of the Sandinist government.

All we are asking is that they open the system up, to realize that the Nicaraguan revolution's triumph belonged to all of the Nicaraguan people. By this I mean that the nine commanders did not overthrow Somoza: The Nicaraguan people did. We were overjoyed when the Somozist dictatorship fell. However, there will be no peace in Central America until the Nicaraguans reach an understanding among themselves. There are six political parties in Nicaragua; two liberal parties -- the Independent Liberal Party and the Constitutionalist Liberal Party -- The Social Christian Party, the Social Democratic Party, the Nationalist Conservative Party -- I believe that is its name -- and the Conservative Party [all party names as heard]. These parties represent the full spectrum of democratic thought. They have presented demands to the Sandinist government which -- if my country's parties brought them to me -- I would be ashamed to reject. These include freedom of expression, freedom of the press, freedom of association, free elections, and others.

This is the crux of the matter: The Nicaraguan Government does not want to allow internal democratization there. So long as this is the case, those who are on the other side will continue to oppose them. Because they cannot stage opposition at the polls, through dialogue, or through the press or radio, they will oppose them militarily. This has negative repercussions in the countries that share their borders with Nicaragua. That is the truth of the matter. It must be repeated over and over again without fear. Why should we, who have struggled for freedom in our countries and set forth clear ideas on democracy for many years, now be ashamed to say that there is no democracy in Nicaragua and that that government must open up to democratization? These are precisely the principles we struggle for: freedom of expression and association, and to see to it that no one is forced to sign up for neighborhood committes. That is the problem in Central America: the lack of desire to democratize Nicaragua, and the fact that they feel entitled to oppress their people and believe that the rest of us must put up with the effects of that suppression of the Nicaraguan people's right. That is the truth of the matter.

[Moderator] Mr President, Maria Dolores Alteaga of UNOMASUNO.

[Azcona] Yes, as I have said before, we do not face the problem of an internal military struggle as El Salvador does. [sentence as heard] Thus, I think, it is more understandable to grant more military aid to El Salvador then Honduras. Yes, that is regarding the military assistance. Regarding economic support, the United States is a sovereign country. It can grant the amount of money it believes suitable for every state. With great dignity and firmness, we are requesting greater economic assistance for Honduras because we are affected by the Nicaraguan situation, as Costa Rica is. The Costa Rican president has been far more firm in those positions than we have. He talked to President Ortega more firmly than we did. The Costa Rican president said that Costa Ricans are opposed to the Nicaraguan situation because it affects them. There is no tourism, investments, etc, etc.

Thus, there is a right. We have a right to demand the democratization of Nicaragua. This is not meddling in another state's internal affairs, because if that situation did not harm Costa Rica and Honduras we would not have that right. But we do have it.

[Moderator] Finally, Mr President, reporter Ricardo Chacon from ACAN-EFE.

[Chacon] Mr President, I have two questions. The first deals with Contadora. I know you have already said something about Contadora, but I would like to go further into that matter. Does Contadora still play an important role in Central America? What would your policy be toward that group, toward the member-countries? The second question is related to Condeca [Central American Defense Council]. In the past weeks, much has been said by (?the military chiefs) about the revival of Condeca. What would your position be toward that organization?

[Azcona] Regarding the first question, I think the Contadora Group still has a great number of things to do. It has a great deal to do, but the Central Americans also have to be more active. We have to demand and set forth positions on the Central American problem because we are at the core of the conflict. Honduras, which is next to Nicaragua, cannot view the problem as Venezuela or Mexico do.

Thus, we are part of the problem. The conflict is affecting us. It affects El Salvador, Costa Rica, and it can also affect Guatemala. Therefore, we have to set forth an initiative, or maintain a position in the search for a political solution to the Nicaraguan problem.

Rearding Condeca, I think that there are indeed reasons to reactivate that organization at this time [words indistinct].

[Moderator] Thank you, reporters, for having attended this news conference.

MSGR RIVERA Y DAMAS VISIT MARKED BY CLASHES

PA010104 (Clandestine) Radio Venceremos in Spanish to El Salvador 0023 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] We now wish to report on the irresponsible and cowardly attitude of Colonel [Mauricio Ernesto] Vargas and of the high command of the Armed Forces. As it is public knowledge, today 31 July, Msgr Arturo Rivera y Damas visited the northern area of Morazan Department. Msgr Rivera y Damas entered the northern area of Morazan Department by crossing the Torola River a little after 1000.

In an irresponsible and cowardly manner, Col Vargas ordered troops of Military Detachment No 4 to move behind Msgr Rivera y Damas' retinue. After Msgr Rivera y Damas and his retinue passed the area, Vargas' troops crossed the Torola River in th area of Meanguera. In spite of the fact that Msgr Rivera y Damas had already entered the northern area of the department, several clashes took place at 1155 at the security checkpoint that our forces had set up to offer security for Msgr River y Damas' visit.

Col Vargas (?then) ordered a battery of 105 mm cannons in the southern area of the Torola River to start shooting toward the northern area of Morazan. When the clashes begin, Msgr Rivera y Damas was arriving at Perquin, about 15 km north of where the clashes were taking place.

After hindering the release of Colonel Avalos for several months, with his irresponsible action, the Armed Forces are now further hindering his release and endangering Msgr Rivera y Damas' meeting with Col Omar Napoleon Avalos. On previous occasions, Colonels Vargas and [Miguel Antonio] Mendez prevented the International Red Cross delegation from entering this northern area of Morazan when it was coming to pick up letters from Col Avalos [words indistinct].

This irresponsible and cowardly action by Col Vargas and the high command is similar to their violations of the Christmas truce in December 1985 as well as their attempts to capture FMLN war cripples who were about to be exchanged for prisoners in October of last year.

This has been a preliminary report on the irresponsible and cowardly attitude of Col Vargas and the (?refusal) to allow the retinue of Msgr Rivera y Damas from entering the area, as Col Vargas ordered the Military Detachment No 4 troops to move behind the retinue in this northern area of Morazan Department. We will shortly be giving you more details on this situation.

OFFICIAL EXPLAINS REJECTION OF ICJ JURISDICTION

PA311714 Tegucigalpa Televisora Hondurena in Spanish 0300 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Excerpt] Honduras amended its acceptance of the rulings by the International Court of Justice [ICJ] at The Hague a long time ago. Although it has unrestrictedly accepted the jurisdiction of the ICJ, in June Honduras modified its acceptance of the [ICJ] rulings through a legislative agreement, to restrict certain political aspects, such as the existing situation with Nicaragua. Foreign Ministry Adviser Jorge Hernandez Alcerro will explain our government's stance, which Honduran President Jose Azcona Hogo officially revealed!

[Begin Hernandez recording] A state's acceptance of ICJ jurisdiction is not compulsory, but rather optional. In other words, UN member-states make their own decisions as to whether or not they will accept ICJ jurisdiction. Accepting ICJ jurisdiction can be achieved in two ways. It can be achieved through a unilateral declaration, or it can be achieved through a commitment regarding a specific case. This commitment can be unilateral or it can involve several states.

On 20 February 1960, the Honduran Government issued a unilateral declaration, whereby it broadly and unrestrictedly accepted the ICJ jurisdiction. Considering that this jurisdiction is optional, the states can at any time modify their acceptance of the ICJ's jurisdiction, whether to [words indistinct] to a specific case, limiting it to certain countries.

On 26 May 1986, the Honduran National Congress issued two decrees, regarding amendments to the declaration which the Honduran Government had issued in 1960 accepting the ICJ jurisdiction. One decree involves the amendments introduced to the 1960 declaration, regarding Article 36 of the ICJ statutes. The other decree involves the amendments to Article (?31) of the Liverpool Pact. [end recording]

The professor of international law feels that Nicaragua's suit will not affect at law the legal proceedings involving the Honduran-Salvadoran dispute.

[Begin Hernandez recording] The border dispute with El Salvador is handled through two channels: the General Peace Treaty of 1980, and the commitment the Salvadoran and Honduran foreign ministers recently signed in the city of Esquipulas on the occasion of the meeting of Central American presidents. Although amendments have been introduced to the Honduran declaration accepting the ICJ jurisdiction in May, this will not affect at all a final solution to the border dispute between El Salvador and our country. [end recording]

Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo said this morning that he will not accept the ICJ jurisdiction regarding the suit Nicaragua introduced on 28 July. [passage omitted]

[Excerpts] Tegucigalpa, 31 Jul (ACAN-EFE) -- Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo arrived this afternoon in Tegucigalpa after honoring a 36-hour invitation of his Salvadoran counterpart, Jose Napoleon Duarte. [passage omitted]

The president and his retinue arrived at 1730 at a Honduran Air Force military base. [passage omitted]

Next Saturday, the Honduran president will meet in San Andres, Colombia with Colombian president Belisaro Betancur to sign a document recognizing Honduran sovereignty over the Serrania and Quita sueno cays, Virgilio Barco, of the Liberal Party. [passage omitted]

NICARAGUA

COLOMBIAN GUERRILLAS OFFER HELP 'IF U.S. INVADES'

PA291420 Panama City ACAN in Spanish 2345 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Excerpt] Managua, 28 Jul (ACAN-EFE) -- The Colombian Popular Liberation Army [EPL] announced in Managua today that it is willing to send a brigade of guerrillas to Nicaragua if the United States invades this country.

Sonia Martinez, a member of the EPL guerrillas, said that they "would not hesitate to order our members to come to Nicaragua to defend the revolution from the imperialist aggression."

Standing in front of two red flags, one of them with a star in the middle and the communist symbols of the hammer and sickle, the Colombian guerrilla said that this was a "contribution to the revolutionary process."

In a news conference at the headquarters of the Nicaraguan Marxist-Leninist People's Action Movement [MAP-ML], the guerrilla appeared before journalists with a red handkerchief that covered almost all of her face and that was marked with the EPL acronym.

Sonia Martinez was accompanied by Luis Gomez, 26-year-old member of the Central Committee of the Colombian Communist Party-Marxist Leninist Faction [PCC-ML].

They stated that the EPL is the armed wing of the PCC-ML, which acts clandestinely.

Martinez said that the willingness to send Colombian fighters to the Nicaraguan war is a demonstration of the "Colombian people's solidarity with the Nicaraguan people."

In this way, the leader evaded a question from ACAN-EFE about whether her organization had already proposed this to the ruling FSLN.

Nevertheless, she admitted that her guerrilla group was demonstrating "solidaristic support for the MAP-ML" with this offer.

The MAP-ML, which is represented in the parliament, invited the EPL to the ninth meeting of Marxist-Leninist youths being held in Managua with the presence of organizations of various Latin American countries and Spain.

The Colombian revolutionary leader said that the guerrilla brigade would be sent to Nicaragua on the condition that the Sandinist government "makes the development of the revolutionary process more dynamic."

For his part, Communist leader Luis Gomez explained that their proposal must not be reduced to an action in the face of the "imperialist aggression," but instead, must be viewed as "revolutionary support" aimed at promoting the Sandinst revolution.

"We are for the development of socialism in Nicaragua, and that is why we want to contribute with our support to defend the Sandinist revolution," he said. [passage omitted]

EPISCOPAL CONFERENCE APPOINTS VEGA REPLACEMENT

[By Franco Rojas]

[Excerpts] Panama City, 26 Jul (ACAN-EFE) -- The Nicaraguan Catholic Church has appointed Msgr Guillermo Quintanilla new vice president of the Episcopal Conference to replace Bishop Pablo Antonio Vega, who was expelled from the country by the Sandinist government 21 days ago. [passage omitted]

Msgr Vega's successor, who was in charge of the Catholic communities in Carazo Department in southern Nicaragua, was appointed apostolic administrator of the prelacy of Juigalpa, a city in central Nicaragua. [passage omitted]

On 11 July, the Managua regime told the Catholic hierarchy that a process of "real and productive" dialogue should be begun. These talks would have the objective of easing the tensions and difficulties existing between the government and the Nicaraguan bishops since 1984. However, Episcopal Conference sources indicate that there are no possibilities that the meetings between the hierarchy and the government will be renewed.

Church sources consulted by ACAN-EFE indicated that Episcopal Conference circles "do not have any confidence" that a dialogue will have positive results. [passage omitted]

UNSC ENVOY CALLS FOR U.S. COMPLIANCE WITH ICJ

FL302124 Havana Radio Reloj Network in Spanish 1806 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Text] The Cuban representative to the UN Security Council, Oscar Oramas, has exhorted the Security Council to comply with its responsibilities and approve initiatives to preserve peace and avoid more bloodshed in Nicaragua.

Oramas demanded that the Security Council require the United States to respect the decision of the International Court of Justice at The Hague. During his address to the Security Council, the Cuban delegate stressed the insistence of the Nicaraguan government on attempting to negotiate a peaceful solution to Central American problems with the framework of Contadora, in direct conversations with Washington. Oramas decribed U.S. policy towards Nicaragua as criminal.

COMMENTARY PREDICTS FALL OF PARAGUAYAN GOVERNMENT

["Our America" commentary read by Mario Montes]

[Text") Alfredo Stroessner's desire to perpetuate himself in the Paraguayan Government was evident a few days ago as his paid assassins showed off their aggressiveness against the leader of the Authentic Liberal Party, Domingo Laino, who failed in his fifth attempt to return to his country.

Stroessner's aggressive attitude, reiterated before international opinion, the repressive nature of his regime, and also ended any possibility for dialogue with the opposition for the return to democracy.

During the last three decades Stroessner banished, jailed and eventually eliminated the left. Undoubtedly, the new generations of Paraguayans are making a grass roots resurgence of an opposition movement.

Despite the ambition to remain in power for life, Stroessner's regime shows signs of deterioration and progressive isolation, to the point that conditions are being created for a change whose content and hue are still unpredictable.

Paraguayan opposition are carrying out an international campaign to erode the bases of support of Latin America's oldest dictatorial regime, and whose support is the United States and international financial organizations under Washington's control.

Not long ago, THE NEW YORK TIMES revealed that the U.S. Government is being pressured not to favor the Paraguayan regime with loans amounting to $245 million, which were to be granted by the World Bank and the IDB. Due to the precarious Paraguayan economy, a measure of that nature would have such repercussions that even the regime's stability would be compromised. However, despite the crisis situation, Stroessner does not cease ordering repression against members of political, social, cultural, religious, and peasant organizations; even those who have been in the country's dark dungeons for years.

The international press recently reported that Andres Rodriguez the security director of the Asuncion Tucumbu Penal institution resigned his post after inmates conditions were publicized. Rodriguez stated that inmates are physically punished so they will report on fellow inmates who have active participation against the dictatorship. In that gloomy Tucumbu jail, Antonio Maidana, president of the Paraguayan Communist Party, spent several years. After being freed by the authorities he was kidnapped and missing in Buenos Aires for 3 years by order of Dictator Alfredo Stroessner.

The democratic changes that have been taking place in Latin America since the end of the military regimes in Brazil, Uruguay, Bolivia, and Argentina, and the exile of Haitian dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier certainly surround the infamous Paraguayan terrorist government.

OLD HAVANA BUILDING FIRE REPORTED, NO CASUALTIES

FL311411 Havana Tele-Rebelde Network in Spanish 1100 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] Yesterday, there was a medium-size fire in the warehouse of a cafeteria located in the Palace of captain generals in old Havana. The fire began around 12:30 pm and was put out in less than an hour.

The interior ministry's fire prevention and extinguishing units prevented extensive damages. The damages were limited primarily to provisions and dishes. Area residents were immediately evacuated, avoiding casualties. The causes of the fire are being investigated.

PINAR DEL RIO FOREST FIRES CAUSED BY NEGLIGENCE

FL311335 Havana Radio Progreso Network in Spanish 1100 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] The Commission for Protection of Flora and Fauna has reported that the 37 Pinar del Rio forest fires registered between January and August have been caused primarily by staff negligence and climatic conditions. The commission indicated that the losses surpass 88,000 pesos as a result of 671,000 destroyed hectares of forest and over 560 reported violations of hunting and fishing laws.

TRINIDAD-TOBAGO

TRADE AGREEMENT SIGNED WITH VENEZUELA

[Text] Port of Spain, Trinidad, July 30, CANA -- Trinidad and Tobago and Venezuela have reported agreement on a wide range of areas, including trade, energy, taxation, tourism and maritime transport.

The agreement was reported following the fourth meeting of the Neighbouring States Mixed Commission, which ended here last night. The private/public sector grouping, which last met in Caracas in 1984, issued a communique saying that an agreement had been reached on areas such as exchanging trade information, and on joint ventures. Yesterday, an agreement was signed between the Export Development Corporation (EDC) of Trinidad and Tobago and Venezuela's Institute of Export Trade (ICE) to exchange commercial data, conduct joint market studies, and to conduct and promote joint trade ventures. Venezuela has agreed to provide technical assistance to Trinidad and Tobago's tourism development. It is also to train Trinidad and Tobago nationals in the field of energy in the last quarter of 1986. Trinidad and Tobago's Shipping Corporation (SCOTT) and Venezuela's counterpart corporation are to hold discussions on the possibility of increased shipping between the two countries. The shipping arrangement would take into account present infrequent links between the two countries. The two corporations are also to discuss a possible ferry link between Trinidad and Tobago and Venezuela. The commission established a small working group to identify joint venture projects for further contacts.

Trinidad and Tobago's External Affairs Minister, Errol Mahabir, who signed the Iron and Steel Company of Trinidad and Tobago (ISCOTT) and the Venezuelan Cidore Company will lead to further sales for Port of Spain this year.

ISCOTT is to sell 72,000 tonnes of sponge iron to Cidore this year. ISCOTT has also received 10,000 tonnes of lump ore from Cidore for experimental treatment.

Mahabir said that, if successful, when Cidore closes one of its plants for overhaul next year, ISCOTT will process 300,000 tonnes of sponge iron for export to Venezuela.

The mixed commission evaluated documents on double taxation and will seek to have the information discussed at a meeting of the relevant authorities.

GUERRILLA GROUP CALLS FOR OVERTHROW OF BOUTERSE

[Text] Amsterdam, July 29, CANA -- A former personal bodyguard of Suriname's army strongman, now waging a guerrilla war against the government, has called for the overthrow of the six-year-old leftist military regime headed by lieutenant Colonel Desi Bouterse.

Ex-army sergeant Ronny Brunswick made the call in a statement smuggled out of the former Dutch colony and read on national television here over the weekend by former Suriname deputy prime minister Andre Haakmat, leader of a Suriname exile group based here. Bunswick, 25, has been operating in the remote marshlands of east Suriname over the past year and a half, intercepting military supplies, essentially good, passing through the area from neighbouring French Guiana, and distributing the booty to area residents. In the statement he called on Surinamers to resist the corrupt and criminal regime in Paramaribo. Bunswick's band of 60 fighters were involved in the kidnapping of eight soldiers last week. He said in the statement the soldiers would not be harmed unless his people's resistance front is attacked.

SOLDIERS LINKED TO ATTACK ON POST, MILITARY CAMPS

FL251938 Paramaribo International Service in English 1805 GMT 25 Jul 86

[Text] After the attacks by unknown persons on the military camp at Albina and the military post at (Stockapsafer) last Tuesday, it appeared that the military personnel who were stationed at a post at (Stokapsafer) are missing, it was announced on Wednesday by the National Information Service.

Last Tuesday morning, a camp in Albina and the military post at (Stokapsafer) came under heavy firing from unkown persons leaving three people wounded.

Investigations revealed that weapons taken during the attck on the post were used in the attack on the camp. Investigations into the shootings and the search for the missing soldiers are continuing.

Since last Wednesday, the military police have launched a search for the 12 soldiers who are still missing after Tuesday's attacks by unknown soldiers on the military camp in Albina and the military post at (Stokapsafer). The 12 soldiers who were on guard duty at (Stokapsafer) disappeared without leaving any traces. During the search being carried out by the military police, a few persons have been arrested in connection with the disappearance of the soldiers. However, after being questioned they were later released.

The National Information Service has announced that the national army will do everything in its power to locate the missing soldiers.

SPOKESMAN DISCUSSES ALFONSIN TRIPS, ISSUES

PY032220 Buenos Aires BUENOS AIRES HERALD in English 3 Aug 86 p 15

[Text] (NA-DYN) -- President Raul Alfonsin will travel next week to Colombia and Mexico, where he is expected to meet with other members of the "Group of Six," formed by the heads of government of Mexico, Greece, Sweden, Tanzania, India and Argentina. They will presumably prepare a joint statement calling for nuclear disarmament and a ban on further nuclear tests.

According to presidential aid Aldo Tessio, Alfonsin will suggest the creation of a permanent committee of the Group of Six based in New York or Geneva, with one delegate for each nation.

In reference to Argentina's position, Tessio anticipated that Alfonsin will insist on the de-militarization of the South Atlantic, including British bases on the Malvinas Islands. The presence of US troops in Bolivia and the proposed military aid to Nicaragua's Contra rebels will also be discussed.

Tessio added that in previous messages to the superpowers "(Soviet leader Mikhail) Gorbachev gave a satisfactory answer while (US President Ronald) Reagan showed a certain degree of indifference."

Alfonsin and Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid will also discuss the possibility of Mexico's inclusion in the integration accords signed between Brazil and Argentina. On his way back from Mexico, Alfonsin will stop at Bogota in order to hold talks with incoming Colombian President-elect Virgilio Barco Vargas and outgoing President Belisario Betancur.

The President will leave next Tuesday and will return by Friday. Foreign Minister Dante Caputo, five senators and five deputies, together with other government officials and presidential aides, will join the delegation.

ALFONSIN CRITICISM OF ANTIDRUG DRIVE DENIED

[Text] Buenos Aires, 31 Jul (TELAM) -- Under Secretary for Latin American Affairs Raul Alconada Sempe has denied a statement from La Paz attributed to Bolivian Vice President Jaime Paz Zamora, who said that President Raul Alfonsin had allegedly stated his disagreement with the presence of U.S. troops in Bolivia to control against drug trafficking. According to Alconada Sempe, the Argentine president voiced his concern over drug trafficking during a meeting on 26 July, which was attended by various Latin American politicians. He stated the need to combat this problem with all legal means at hand. According to Alconada Sempe, Alfonsin said, referring to the specific case of Bolivia, that he had no objections and voiced his support for forming a Latin American economic fund to combat the marketing of the drug and the drug traffickers' activities.

U.S. GRAIN DECISION 'BLOW TO ARGENTINE ECONOMY'

[Text] (NA-DYN) -- Agriculture Secretary Lucio Recca said yesterday that Argentina will lose one billion (thousand million) dollars due to the United States decision to subsidize grain exports to China and the Soviet Union, but he added that Japan will not benefit from US grain subsidies.

Recca added that his government will "formally protest" before international forums the US policy of dumping grain surpluses on international markets.

Speaking on Radio Mitre, Recca said that US President Ronald Reagan's decision was taken with the approval of the European Community (EC), and that the measure "worsens the economic confrontation between Argentina and the EC." He also said that the loss of the Soviet market dealt a tough blow on the Argentine economy and its ability to service foreign debt payments, but that the government was reacting by seeking and opening operations in alternative markets such as Japan.

News reports from the United States pointed out that Reagan's decision was taken to alleviate the crisis in the local farm sector, and for electoral purposes. With congressional elections coming up next November, several Republican Party representatives from midwestern rural states are threatened to lose their congressional seats because of the party's inability to deal with the farm crisis.

Reagan's decision is expected to boost Republican candidates and maintain the party's political control of the Senate.

Intransigent Party Deputy Oscar Alende, in turn, said that the United States and the Soviet Union signed the grain accord because they always act on their own self-interest, while "for a long time we've being doing what's best for them, instead of protecting Argentine interests."

He added that "the problem is not (the policies adopted) abroad, but it lies in the Argentine ruling class and its inability to diagnose (Argentina's shortcomings) correctly."

Meanwhile the Radical National Committee issued a statement yesterday condemning the US and EEC for their "perverse" and protectionist" economic policies. The document signed by Radical Alternate President Edison Otero and National Committee Secretary (Deputy) Marcelo Stubrin also stated that despite the current world agricultural crisis, the government "will continue its efforts to modernize the agricultural productive apparatus."

Deputy Jose Luis Manzano (Renewal Peronist-Mendoza) also blasted US subsidies saying that they were signs of US "Imperialism... They want us to pay (the foreign debt) but they don't allow us to sell (by taking over Argentina's markets)," he said.

SOURROUILLE, BRAZILIAN MINISTER PRAISE ACCORDS

[Text] Buenos Aires, 31 (TELAM) -- Argentine Economy Minister Juan Sourrouille and his Brazilian counterpart Dilson Funaro have agreed that the accords signed by the two nations will promote an integration process that will help improve the industrial capacity of both countries. Sourrouille said that the basic objective of the accords is to share the benefits of progress, adding that the only way to share them will be to courageously assume some risks, which will nevertheless be compensated for by the advantages of integration.

For his part, Funaro said: I am sure these accords will promote integration and strengthen economic growth in both countries.

The two ministers, who made these statements during the "To Grow Together" program on Channel 11 last night, said they have confidence in the results of the integration process.

Sourrouille stressed that the accords will allow the two countries to share the benefits of progress. Funaro remarked that if our combined growth will help us create new jobs, improve our standard of living, and let our business sector grow, then this is the path that we have to follow.

Sourrouille said: "We are trying to build a new country and we all find it interesting that a new generation of Argentines who think of a different world and who forget [words indistinct]."

For his part, Funaro said that the countries which seek integration and combined growth improve their bargaining capacity, not only in their negotiations over specific issues, but with the international financial system as well.

Funaro added that the accords will help strengthen the democratic processes and the economy of the two countries. He said that the accords were signed to let businessmen expand their operations and participate in the growth of the economy, because the accords do not seek to replace industries, but quite the contrary.

Communist Leader Denounces Agreement

PY021925 Buenos Aires DYN in Spanish 1416 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 2 Aug (DYN) -- Communist Party Secretary General Athos Fava has denounced the Argentine-Brazilian integration agreement which he said "embraces the interests of the great transnational monopolies, to the detriment of the workers and of the two countries' peoples."

In remarks made yesterday, Fava said: "The agreement that was just signed will favor the imperialist enterprises that prevail in the two countries, and the great local economic and financial groups that are linked to them."

He said that the agreement will attract sectors of medium-sized companies with the "illusion that they will receive some crumbs, but for our workers it will only bring more unemployment and salary adjustments with the purpose of achieving more competitive conditions.

After stating that integration is an objective need for the development of the region, provided that it decisively faces the foreign debt issue and the deterioration of terms of trade, Fava concluded by saying that "a common initiative among the peoples, the workers, and the imperialist forces of the two countries should be implemented to establish a joint position against this integration project, which has been taken over by the multinational companies and their local partners."

FOREIGN MINISTER DENIES CABINET CRISIS

[Excerpt] Foreign Minister Guillermo Bedregal Gutierrez has reported that the president of the republic has confirmed all ministers in their posts, thus expressing confidence in his advisers. The foreign minister made this statement at Government Palace following an unexpected Cabinet meeting called by the president on Friday.

[Begin recording] [Bedregal] The president of the republic had the honor of calling for this Cabinet meeting, first of all to confirm his confidence in the entire ministerial cabinet. We are very honored by his decision. This of course gives us greater responsibility and a task much more difficult than we had before.

[Reporter] Is this meeting the result of some crisis?

[Bedregal] I do not think so. There is no crisis. Your question is the result of mere speculation, speculation by those who want a crisis in the government. There is no crisis. We made a general analysis of the situation in the country. Some problems have already been solved and others are still pending. [end recording] [passage omitted]

GOVERNMENT SAYS 'NO MEETING PLANNED' WITH CHILE

[Text] The Foreign Ministry has stated in a communique that no meeting has been planned with the Chilean Government. The communique states, however, that the Bolivian and Chilean foreign ministers could meet in Bogota as a result of informal, personal initiatives.

In the meantime, Consul General Jorge Siles Salinas, who returned to La Paz after meeting with Chilean President Augusto Pinochet, has remained silent.

The communique seeks to reply to a wave of protests prompted by reports that the Paz Estenssoro administration is possibly promoting rapprochement with the Chilean Government, which is at the center of international criticism.

Bolivia is seeking to solve a century-old problem stemming from the loss of its Pacific coastline during the 1879 war with Chile, but the Bolivian Foreign Ministry has not negotiated a meeting in Bogota with Chile, even with Colombia's mediation.

The Chilean and Bolivian foreign ministers will attend the inauguration of Colombian President-elect Virgilio Barco Vargas on 7 August in Bogota.

Consul Seeks Solutions

[Text] Bolivian Consul in Santiago Jorge Siles Salinas has stated that Bolivia and Chile must seek new formulas to resume diplomatic relations. He added that the territorial compensations issue has become the focal point of bilateral talks. For this very reason, the foreign ministers must try to solve fundamental problems and prepare new formulas to reach an agreement. It has also been reported that the Bolivian and Chilean railroad companies have agreed to review the document that will facilitate an integrated traffic system.

Carlos Delmonte, general manager of the National Railway Enterprise [ENFE], has stated that at a meeting with his Chilean counterpart they studied the possibility of establishing an integrated railroad traffic system. At that meeting they discussed the slowness of the system and the lack of payments for freight between Arica and La Paz. The Bolivian representative stated at the meeting that ENFE does not participate in the Center of Information and Coordination of the integrated traffic system. The two representatives have agreed to outline the strategy to be adopted and to obtain the approval of their respective governments.

DEFENSE MINISTER SEES DESTABILIZATION PLAN

[Text] Defense Minister Luis Fernando Valle stated today that there is a plan to destabilize the government. The defense minister stated that certain sectors are definitely preparing a subversive plan. He said that this plan began with an illegal consultation.

Minister Valle added that the Armed Forces are not participating, nor have they participated, in the preparation and implementation of the joint antidrug operations being carried out by special Bolivian police and U.S. troops. The defense minister justified the fact that the Armed Forces are not participating in the antidrug operation by stating that the Bolivian police do not have the necessary means to fight alone against this calamity that is affecting mankind.

Lechin Oquendo Remarks

[Text] La Paz, 2 Aug (AFP) -- Bolivian Labor Confederation [COB] leader Juan Lechin Oquendo today described a document that accuses the COB of conspiratorial intentions as a crude official maneuver. Defense Minister Fernando Valle charged yesterday that a conspiracy to overthrow President Paz Estenssoro began on 25 July 1986 when the COB conducted a popular consultation on tax reform and the payment of the foreign debt.

Lechin said that Valle should ask General Luis Garcia Meza, former de facto president in 1980-81, about conspiratorial methods since the defense minister served under Garcia Meza as interventionist of the Greater University of San Andres in La Paz. The COB leader added that Valle was a defender of mining businessman Miguel Orlandini, who a few months ago was accused of smuggling minerals and removing foreign currency from the country.

PEASANTS PLEDGE TO FIGHT FOR COCA PLANTATIONS

[By Erick Torrico]

[Excerpt] La Paz, 31 Jul (EFE) -- Coca farmers today reasserted that they are determined to defend "with their lives" their coca plantations against the possibility that Bolivian and U.S. antinarcotics forces might try to destroy them. In this regard, a preliminary announcement was released on 30 July by farmers in Chapare, a tropical zone in Cochabamba Department, 400 km east of La Paz.

Agreement by other sectors did not take long, and the Confederation of Bolivian Settlers today in a document signed by its top leaders declared an "emergency" and a "mobilization" of its ranks to preserve the coca plantations.

The document adds that the antinarcotics groups will use poison to eradicate the coca plantations was expressed after joint operations began in the jungle areas of Beni north of Cochambamba Department, on 16 July. Government sources denied that the specialized troops would use herbicides, but apparently that statement was not convincing.

According to reports gathered by EFE, there are approximately 30,000 families growing coca in Bolivia. These families are distributed in Yungas (La Paz), Chapare (Cochabamba), and in some places in Beni and Santa Cruz departments. The peasants' opposition is based on the fact that after the destruction of the coca plantations nearly 120,000 people will be forced to face an unpleasant future. [passage omitted.]

MINISTER SAYS CAMPAIGN NOT AGAINST COCA GROWERS

PY011641 La Paz Red Panamericana in Spanish 0000 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Agriculture Minister Edil Sandoval Moron has told Panamericana that the agreements reached to combat drug trafficking do not encompass the destruction of coca leaves. He said that the struggle is against drug manufacturers and traffickers.

[Begin Sandoval recording] As I understand it, this antidrug operation is exclusively against drug traffickers and manufacturers. The interior minister said that the repression is not against coca producers in the country, and I reasserted this during a trip I made to the countryside. On the contrary, we will try to achieve a solution to the production and processing of coca leaves within the framework of an agricultural development policy.

This is, for example, the problem in Chapare, where we believe the only solution is to establish a development program that will offer local peasants the possibility of participating in the commercialization and processing of their products. [end recording]

There is also an old project to replace coca growing and to establish a development program in Chapare, but it has not made great progress since it was abandoned some time ago. In this regard, the agriculture minister said:

[Begin Sandoval recording] People have been talking about this development project for many years, but I believe that because of the present repression against drug trafficking, now is the proper time to achieve a definitive solution to the problem and establish this development project. Perhaps one of the reasons this project has been postponed is because of the state of the Cochambamba-Yapacani Road, where in many areas it is impassable because its bridges are in disrepair. I believe that the government is negotiating international credits to continue the work on this important road, which will be the lifeline for this development project. [end recording]

MNR LEADER SCORES PRESIDENT, FOUNDS PARTY

[Text] La Paz, 31 Jul (AFP) -- The governing National Revolutionary Movement (MNR) has suffered a serious division with the resignation of Luis Sandoval Moron, party leader in Santa Cruz (1,000 km east from La Paz), who accused President Victor Paz Estenssoro of having betrayed all the MNR principles, programs, and guidelines.

In comments to the media, Sandoval Moron, who on various occasions was a member of Congress, protested the presence of U.S. troops in Bolivia with the excuse of struggling against drug trafficking.

He added that there is an attempt to forget that the leader of the Nationalist Democratic Action (ADN), General Hugh Banzer Suarez, was the main beneficiary of drug trafficking, which was organized during his administration (1971-1978). Sandoval then stated that Banzer and Paz Estenssoro have established a cogovernment, thus distorting the essence of the MNR doctrine.
He recalled that the MNR was created to defend national sovereignty and the workers, as well as the state owned enterprisese, but that now a foreign intervention is promoted, the workers are repressed and the destruction of the state-owned enterprises is encouraged.

Sandoval announced that he has decided to found the Popular National Revolutionary Movement of the Left [MNR Popular de Izquierda Nacional], through which he intends to advocate a joint struggle with the remaining progressive forces of the country.

GOVERNMENT TO SEEK MORE U.S. ANTIDRUG AID

[Text] La Paz, 31 Jul (AFP) -- Foreign Minister Guillermo Bedregal today announced here that Bolivia will ask the U.S. Government for increased financial support to combat drug trafficking and cope with the economic crisis. The foreign minister stated that this request will be included in a letter President Victor Paz Estenssoro will soon send to his U.S. counterpart, Ronald Reagan.

Bedregal added that the time is ripe to seriously propose such assistance because we cannot restrict ourselves to merely a police operation. Such assistance must have enough strength to last.

In conclusion, Bedregal stressed that during the upcoming international meeting in Bogota, at the inauguration of Colombian President-elect Virgilio Barco, he will propose a foreign ministers' meeting to discuss drug trafficking and regional measures to combat it.

RESULTS OF ANTIDRUG OPERATIONS REPORTED

[Text] We are now going to read the latest communique issued by the Interior Ministry on the joint U.S.-Bolivian antidrug operation. Another cocaine laboratory was found today during a mission by a patrol group east of the Yacuma Province, El Beni Department. The laboratory had been abandoned.

The report released by the National Police Command provides details on the operation conducted early today by the Rural Patrol Unit and U.S. logistical support based on information gathered previously.

The laboratory was found near the Caimanes River. It had been abandoned for some time, although a large Soviet-made electricity generator and a cocaine pressing machine were still there.

The operations carried out in the Chapare region have had positive results. In the San Isidro zone, a cocaine-base factory was found and 800 grams of that product were seized. No arrests were made because the traffickers, warned of the arrival of the policemen by the noise of the helicopters' engines, fled.

In the Lauca and Rivera zones, on the Chapare River, five other factories were found; three in the first zone, and two in the latter. Another patrol operation was carried out in the jungle in the Puerto Aurora, where a Bolivian Air Force Lama helicopter detected a solar battery charger, a large quantity of absorbent papers, and plastic bags with cocaine residue. They were apparently abandoned by escaping criminals. All seized material was burned.

In (Sinahota), 1700 grams of basic cocaine sulfate was seized this morning, inside a temporary hut. No detentions were made here either.

GOVERNMENT ISSUES NEW FINANCIAL LAW

PY012329 Madrid EFE in Spanish 1510 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] La Paz, 31 Jul (EFE) -- The Bolivian Government today took a step forward in the restructuring of its national economic system by approving a new financial law that regulates both domestic and foreign resources, as well as the activities of government officials.

Finance Minister Juan Cariaga has said that the law will support development and investment projects and that it controls public spending with the objective of reducing the fiscal deficit.

According to an official of the National Economic Stabilization and Reactivation Council, the top-ranking organization in charge of economic affairs, this law is a priority within the framework of the reorganization process of the government apparatus and of the economy which the government began to implement in August 1985.

The financial law regulates, among other things, construction contracts and the purchase of property. The new law defines the rights and obligations of public servants who are urged by the government to undertake a joint action so as to overcome the economic crisis.

The law also regulates the establishment of commissions in charge of different studies of national interest, trips of official missions abroad, and the use of government vehicles.

SARNEY CANCELS AGENDA; HEALTH PROBLEMS DENIED

PY040103 Sao Paulo O ESTADO DE SAO PAULO in Portuguese 2 Aug 86 p 5

EDITORIAL VIEWS DEBT PAYMENT REDUCTION PLAN

[Editorial: "Options for the Debt"]

[Text] The idea of reducing foreign debt payment to about 2 or 2.5 percent of the GNP (from the current level which stands at 3.8 percent), as announced by Finance Minister Dilson Funaro, deserves some comment. From a political viewpoint, it is significant that the announcement was made at a moment when Brazil is in a comfortable position to ask for more flexible terms, because our country has repaid its overdue obligations and has chosen to deal directly with its creditors without IMF support. In fact, our economy should continue to grow despite the setbacks that can hamper this process, such as a drop in investments. During the 1970's, investments surpassed 25 percent of the GNP. Now they stand at 15 percent. If the payments on the interest remain at their current level, about 4 percent of the GNP, it will be very difficult to increase investments.

Nevertheless, two observations must be made in connection with the reduction announced by Funaro. First, no one in Brazil will even consider breaking relations with the international financial system. Therefore, it is necessary to couple this idea of lower payments with realistic negotiations. Second, Brazil's own economic growth will automatically reduce the GNP percentage mentioned by the minister. In fact, if one assumes that the total debt remains unchanged, the GNP growth will reduce the percentage, even if the interests do not change.

It would also be opportune to negotiate the spread [preceding word in English] that Brazil pays in addition to the interest rate. Spreads and commissions account for 3 percent of the debt, and it is worth noting that this percentage is equivalent to that of the years in which international interest rates were at their highest. As a matter of fact, when interests stood at 21 percent, the spread and commissions accounted for barely 1/7 of that total. Today they account for almost 50 percent of interest rates, which have dropped to about 7 percent.

Thus, the finance minister's offensive is justified. Yet one must take into account that negotiations should not deal only with spreads and commissions. Negotiations could propose alternatives for longer terms and there are many possibilities in this regard. Never before has Brazil been in such a comfortable position to insist on such proposals. For example, part of the interests might be capitalized and thus be repaid at a time when new investments reach their productive phase, making such payments less painful to the Brazilian economy. It is also possible to transform part of the contracted loans into risk capital, offering creditors a share in domestic investments. In this regard, the recently created National Development Fund, in which foreign capital is allowed to participate, is a good opportunity.

These alternatives must be seriously analyzed and, despite the fact that they deal with only one aspect of the debt problem, the firm remarks by Minister Funaro can serve to bring negotiations closer to our economic reality.

MINISTER SAYS UNILATERAL DECISIONS 'CLUMSY'

PY020202 Sao Paulo O ESTADO DE SAO PAULO in Portuguese 1 Aug 86 p 34

[Text] The Brazilian Government's intention to reduce the servicing of the foreign debt to 2.5 percent of the GDP will be made known to the creditor banks in the next round of negotiations scheduled for September, Finance Minister Dilson Funaro announced yesterday. He affirmed that "the time has come" to review some aspects of the debt negotiations, such as the payment of high spreads in connection with long terms. Funaro believes that apportioning more than 2.5 percent of the GDP to service the foreign debt is incompatible with the government's intention to have the economy grow at 7-8 percent per year. He pointed out however, that this position does not mean that negotiations will be disregarded and added that unilateral decisions are "clumsy."

He then explained: "When Brazil is approaching negotiations, it cannot firm up a position prior to reaching an understanding. A position taken unilaterally would reveal clumsiness, because we have to negotiate. The 2.5 percent is a target that will guarantee both Brazil and the international financial community that our growth will back our decision to honor our commitments, without hindering the country's development." He compared the approach of the previous governments, which "paid attention to foreign policy first and then to our economy," with the approach of the current government, which "has a growth target to serve as a basis for negotiating the foreign debt."

Regarding relations with the IMF, Funaro noted the government's position to coexist as the IMF does with Italy and France, "without negotiating items of our economic policy." He then made it clear that Brazil does not accept specific agreements with the IMF nor the monitoring of our economy by the IMF, complying only with Article 4 of the institution's statute, as do other countries. Under that article, the IMF can send missions to the debtor countries once a year, to review the accounts and examine the performance of the economy.

Further on IMF, Argentina

PY011630 Brasilia Radio Nacional da Amazonia Network in Portuguese 1000 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Excerpt] [passage omitted] Concerning the opinion of U.S. Federal Reserve Bank President Paul Volcker, who has suggested that the IMF should again monitor Brazilian economic policies, Finance Minister Dilson Funaro has said that Brazil is simply a member of the IMF through Article 4, just like the United States and France. In the case of those two countries, the IMF just gathers information without discussing the policies that those countries should adopt. Minister Funaro added that Brazil is not asking the IMF for further loans or asking that it replace its reserves.

Regarding the bilateral agreement between Brazil and Argentina, the finance minister said that a certain period of time is required before the implementation of the measures signed in Buenos Aires by Presidents Raul Alfonsin and Jose Sarney, but he said that the agreement will be registered with ALADI. According to the agreement, the customs tariffs on certain products will immediately be reduced to zero, thus allowing the two nations' agricultural products to complement each other since Argentina and Brazil have different climates and harvest at different times of the year.

CHANGES MADE IN HIGHER MILITARY COMMANDS

[Text] President Jose Sarney has signed a decree by which Admiral Jose Maria do Amaral, chief of the Armed Forces General Staff [EMFA[, and General Ivan de Souza Mendes, chief of the National Intelligence Service [SNI], will be retired. There will be no change in the SNI, but in the case of EMFA there are legal provisions forbidding a retired officer to occupy the position of chief. Admiral Amaral will probably be replaced by General Paulo Campos Paiva, former military commander in the south.

New Army generals have been appointed to the following positions: (Harry Alberto Shardof) will be chief of the Army Teaching and Research Department, Diogo de Oliveira Figueiredo will be chief of the War Material Department; and Athos Cesar Batista Teixeira will be chief of the Engineering and Communications Department.

Meanwhile, the new Division Generals Antonio Luis Rocha (Deneu), Antonio Paiva Chaves, and Inaldo Seabra Noronha will head the Directorate of Specialization, the Directorate of Mechanization, and the Directorate of Training, respectively.

FOREIGN MINISTRY COMMUNIQUE ON ABRAMS REMARKS

PY012348 Santiago Domestic Service in Spanish 2310 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] The Chilean Government has conveyed to the U.S. Government its displeasure over recent remarks of U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs Elliott Abrams. Jaime Herrera, acting director general for foreign policy of the Chilean Foreign Ministry, this afternoon commented on the note that Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle delivered to the U.S. ambassador.

[Begin Herrera recording] On instructions issued by the minister of foreign relations I will read the following press release to you:

At 1730 local time today I received U.S. Ambassador Harry Barnes to whom I handed a diplomatic note conveying the profound displeasure of the Chilean Government over the remarks which Mr Elliott Abrams, U.S. assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, made at the International Banking Organizations Subcommittee of the U.S. House of Representatives on 30 July. In addition to the note, I verbally conveyed our desire to avoid this type of situation, which does nothing to enhance the atmosphere of positive understanding, which we want to maintain with the U.S. Government. [end recording]

Abrams said in Washington that credits to Chile should be restricted, taking into account the status of human rights and of the progress toward full democracy in Chile.

Businessmen Lobby Congress

[Text] Chilean production and industrial organizations have joined a campaign to send telegrams to U.S. congressmen to oppose maneuvers to block international loans to Chile. The plan has already been approved by the Production and Commerce Confederation, headed by Manuel Feliu, and the Industrial Development Association, which is organizing the campaign. The Chilean Construction Chamber, headed by (Jorge Bronfman), will soon join the campaign, according to an announcement by its leader. In Washington, Congressman Michael Barnes is lobbying for an amendment obligating U.S. representatives to the World Bank and the IDB to vote against new credits to Chile.

The Sofofa has already sent a telex to members of the U.S. House of Representatives Banking Committee, telling them that voting against credits to Chile harms all the people, particularly the poorest. The telex adds that this measure counters the efforts of 12 million Chileans to continue the process established in the Constitution to reach full democracy in 1989, despite strong Marxist opposition.

In turn, the Production and Commerce Confederation, headed by Manuel Feliu and including all the branches of production, trade, and finance of the country, has also sent a [word indistinct] letter. It says that voting against credits to Chile will make our transition to democracy more difficult and will only contribute to [words indistinct] because of such restriction on our economy. The letter adds that the results would lower the standard of living of the Chilean people. We strongly oppose these measures, and we ask you not to support them.

EEC ASKS GOVERNMENT TO RETURN TO DEMOCRACY

PY011737 Buenos Aires Domestic Service in Spanish 1600 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Relay from Santiago Radio Cooperative by Jose Luis Levingston]

[Text] British Ambassador John Hickman, in his capacity as representative of the EEC in Chile, today urged the Chilean Government to promptly adopt measures designed to restore democracy in an orderly manner and to initiate a dialogue with the democratic opposition.

The British ambassador held a 30-minute meeting with Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle in the Red Hall at the Foreign Ministry.

Hickman said that he told the foreign minister of the EEC's deep regret at the deaths and damage that resulted from the demonstrations of 2-3 July in Chile and that it condemns violence, no matter its origin. The EEC, he said, believes and hopes that the Chilean authorities will clarify and make public all the details of the tragic cases of Rodrigo Rojas Denegri and Carmen Gloria Quintana.

When the ambassador was asked whether his statement represented intervention in Chilean domestic affairs, he replied: I do not think so because the main purpose of diplomacy is for one government to explain to another its opinions and points of view. This does not, therefore, represent intervention. Intervention means something else, it is something much more direct.

The ambassador was then asked whether he considered the steps established by the Chilean Constitution to be insufficient for a return to democracy. Ambassador Hickman answered: I am not going to make any further comments on this occasion. You will recieve a copy of my statement.

This is all we can tell you from Radio Cooperative in Santiago, for Radio Nacional of Buenos Aires.

PY020127 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0042 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, 1 Aug (EFE) — Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle today denied that a representative of the EEC has conveyed to him that community's desire to see a prompt return to democracy in Chile.

When asked about the remarks of UK Ambassador John Hickman, who contends that during his meeting with the foreign minister today he urged the Chilean regime on behalf of the EEC, presided over by the United Kingdom, to "promptly adopt measures designed to restore democracy in an orderly manner and to initiate a dialogue with the democratic opposition," Del Valle stated that "he told me no such thing and the subject was not mentioned."

When local journalists questioned Del Valle, the Chilean minister explained that Ambassador Hickman went to the Foreign Ministry to greet him after a 1-month absence from Chile.

The minister added that during his visit, the ambassador, "without reading any statement, commented on the concern that the EEC feels over the course that Chile is following toward full democracy."

According to Del Valle, the ambassador "did not read any document, nor did he leave any with me. He simply listed briefly the items over which the EEC is concerned, items which are practically the same as always."

As far as Minister del Valle is concerned, "we are not greatly interested in any calls made upon us because we have a clearly established timetable and a course of action, and the calls that any given country may make are neither here nor there as far as we are concerned."

The foreign minister added that "they are free to make calls if they want to. Our answer to them is that we have a course of action set; it is our sovereign right to follow it, and other countries have no business meddling in how or when we act."

Asked whether Ambassador Hickman's statement implied interference in Chile's domestic affairs, the foreign minister said: "The nature of my meeting with the ambassador did not in the least imply any interference."

COURT UPHOLDS INDICTMENTS OF ANC LEADERS

[Text] Santiago, 31 Jul (EFE) -- The apellate court today confirmed that 13 out of the 14 top leaders of the opposition National Civic Assembly [ANC] organization, who have been imprisoned for more than 3 weeks, will remain indicted. The court did not discuss the appeal of the indictment of Eduardo Valencia, a representative for poor neighborhood inhabitants.

The apellate court today refused to hear an appeal of the indictments of the ANC leaders and ruled that ANC President Dr Juan Luis Gonzales and 12 other members of the national executive board of that opposition organization must remain indicted as presumed perpetrators of three violations of state security law. These crimes involve meeting for the purpose of overthrowing the government or attacking its stability, calling unauthorized public rallies, and calling a general strike. The court cancelled indictments regarding three other crimes related to public order disruptions.

The 14 top leaders of the ANC are in jail and are being tried on a petition filed by the military government for having committed the crimes of sponsoring and calling a general strike for 2 and 3 July.

The ANC, which was created in April 1986, represents the largest group of social, trade union, and labor opposition organizations that has emerged in Chile since the military coup on 11 September 1973.

The ANC is supported by political parties, both rightwing and leftwing, including the Marxists, and its goal is to strongly practice civil disobedience until the regime of General Augusto Pinochet is forced to give way to a democratic system.

At this moment, however, with its top leaders in prison and an acting national executive board studying the strategy to be pursued in the future, the ANC has not sponsored any important actions since the general strike was held 1 month ago.

Jailed Leaders Write Presidents

[Text] Santiago, 2 Aug (EFE) -- The 14 top leaders of the ANC today sent letters to Argentine President Raul Alfonsin, Brazilian President Jose Sarney, and Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti. They told the three presidents that "very soon Chile will join the group of free nations."

The letters are signed by all detained ANC leaders, including ANC President Jual Luis Gonzales, who is also president of the Chilean Federation of Professionals and of the Chilean Medical Association. The letters said: "From the jails of the military dictatorship we want to express to you our gratitude for the solidarity your governments and the main social and political organizations of your countries have conveyed for our struggle to restore democracy in Chile."

The ANC leaders added: "Our unjust imprisonment symbolizes the expressed intention of the current regime to perpetuate itself in office until the end of this century. This is not only a tragedy for the Chilean people, but also a stumbling block for the consolidation of democracy in South America." The ANC leaders concluded by stating that the Chilean people "will remember and will be grateful" for the "democratic commitment" of the presidents and peoples of Argentina, Brazil, and Uruguay.

UNIDENTIFIED PERSONS SHOOT AT OSORNO BISHOP

[Text] Osorno, Chile, 2 Aug (AFP) -- Some unidentified individuals last night fired at Msgr Miguel Caviedes Medina, bishop of the city of Osorno in southern Chile. The bishop was not hit. Caviedes was in his residence when a single bullet passed close to him after going through two wooden screens. The bullet was stopped by a brick and cement wall.

The prelate, 56 years old, said that the Carabineros believe that a large-caliber weapon was used and that the shot was fired from a plaza in front of the house. A nun and a student, living in the same house, heard the shot and the noise of a car that immediately drove off at high speed.

Two days ago Caviedes publicly supported a petition by Cardinal Francisco Fresno that the courts thoroughly investigate the case of two young opponents of President Augusto Pinochet's military regime who were burned alive by an Army patrol according to eyewitness reports.

Someone might be annoyed with me for supporting the cardinal, and that could be the reason for the attack, said the bishop of Osorno, 975 km south of Santiago. The situation in the country is getting steadily worse. Caviedes recalled a recent call by the Chilean Bishops Conference for pacification and said that political terrorism is one of the causes of the violence denounced by Catholic churchmen.

The bishop said: The situation is becoming polarized, and many people see violence as the only solution, while in truth, violence is precisely the nonsolution. He added: People do not listen to the bishops who speak calmly and for the good of Chile, and when the pastors are not listened to, the result is clear: this country is destroying itself. He concluded by stressing that the spiraling violence must be stopped.

BETANCUR'S CABINET TENDERS RESIGNATION

PA011429 Paris AFP in Spanish 1413 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Bogota, 1 Aug (AFP) -- Conservative President Belisario Betancur's 13 Cabinet members tendered their resignations today in a traditional act of protocol that serves as the prologue to the conclusion of his period as head of state. According to the information provided by the public health minister, the Cabinet's joint letter was presented to President Betancur at the last council of ministers of the present administration, which concludes its period in office on 7 August.

BARCO SAYS NEW GOVERNMENT WILL NOT BE SHARED

PA030339 Bogota EL TIEMPO in Spanish 30 Jul 86 p 2-b

Barco said his government would be one "of big changes" and once again requested the active and permanent presence of the members of the Liberal Party and the people in general in political activity. "I will promote change with determination, without truce or rest," Barco told the leaders who were responsible for his campaign in Bogota. [passage omitted] "Today I have come here to reiterate what I said on many occasions during the campaign, because there is no difference between the candidate and the man who will be president. We will face difficulties, there will be setbacks, misunderstandings, as well as the overt or covert actions of the recalcitrant groups. But I know that you will accompany the new government, explain and spread its actions, and understand that the path ahead will not be an easy one." [passage omitted]

FORCES UNCOVER PLOT TO SABOTAGE INAUGURATION

PA031916 Madrid EFE in Spanish 2010 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Bogota, 2 Aug (EFE) -- The authorities have reported that Colombia's secret services recently discovered a guerrilla plan to sabotage the inauguration of President-Elect Virgilio Barco Vargas on 7 August.

Army General Command Augusto Moreno Guerrero said that the country's military and police intelligence forces captured 27 rebels in Bogota and several others in Cali and seized weapons from them.

Moreno Guerrero said that after the operations in Bogota and Cali, "the authorities were able to discover a widespread plan that the subversives were planning" for 7 August to sabotage the inauguration.

On 7 August Barco Vargas will assume office, replacing Belisario Betancur. The inaugural activities will be attended by 8 presidents and chiefs of state of Latin America, as well as by delegations from more than 60 countries.

"We have made efforts to prevent actions by subversives and terrorists," Gen Moreno Guerrero said, adding that the military and police operations that are being carried out, "day and night, will continue until after 7 August." The top military officer said that the military forces, the police, and the intelligence services "can guarantee the integrity of all the people and the chiefs of states who will attend the inauguration of the new president."

An M-19 supply group was dismantled in Bogota in the past few hours. Ten rebels were captured and M-19 weapons and documents were seized as a result of this operation.

General Luis Eduardo Roca, commander of the 13th Army Brigade, headquartered in Bogota, held a news conference at the garrison and said that the M-19 "suffered a new blow" and that 27 rebels captured in the past few days "have been turned over to a military judge."

In Cali, the metropolitan police also captured two insurgents, seized weapons, and foiled plans scheduled for 7 August. The authorities identified the captured guerrillas as Fabio Marino Vargas, alias "Hipolito Blanco," an ideologist and member of the M-19 general staff and of the organization's "Western Regional Office," and Adriana Sandoval Millan, better known as "Marcela," who was in charge of the "people's militias" in the city's poor neighborhoods. The police reported that the rebels were carrying documents on "a vast terrorist plan prepared for the change of government ceremony," as well as weapons and explosives. Last week, the authorities also recovered more than 70 boxes with 25 kg of dynamite each which the M-19 stole from a cement factory near Cali.

According to military sources, the dynamite was to be used to "blow up bridges and public buildings" to cause chaos during the commemoration of the 450th anniversary of the founding of Cali, which was celebrated on 25 July, and also to cause similar chaos to "sabotage the inauguration of the new Colombian president."

BETANCUR DEPLORES MURDER OF JUSTICE BORDA

[Text] The national government and the president of the Republic, deeply affected by the treacherous assassination of Justice Hernando Baquero Borda, express their condolence to his grieving wife, his family, and the judicial branch, including the Supreme Court. They repudiate this action that ratifies the decision of organized crime to destroy the integrity of our institutions and the lives of those who represent them. This morning's terrorist act calls for unanimous action from society and prompt and complete justice in order to stop the plans of violent criminals who are not intimidated and who do not hesitate in the face of the vigilance the state has implemented to protect the lives of the citizens.

The government and the president urge the citizens to overcome the hours of anguish, close ranks, and join efforts in favor of life which the paid assassins of organized crime are trying to destroy. The homeland urges all good citizens to build a wall against crime. The homeland and its good children are stronger than crime and criminals.

Supreme Court Communique

[Communique issued by the Supreme Court of Justice on the murder of Justice Hernando Baquero Borda; date not given]

[Text] In view of the murderous violence that tries to destabilize the republican institutions that govern us, the court expresses to the country its firm decision to continue fulfilling its duties as it has always done throughout the country's history. The court is waging an unequal struggle that must be compensated with the presence of the state and society, not only through the demonstration of the solidarity which such a difficult task demands, but also by the understanding that the first priority, the most authentic urgent need is to meet the needs of the judicial branch. Nevertheless, the court takes the liberty of stating that it believes that the situation in which it has been placed makes it almost impossible for the court to properly fulfill its legal and constitutional functions. In view of that critical situation and aware that the cruel reality of the actions exceed its resources, which are simply legal and spiritual in nature, leading it to the ultimate limit of its capacity of devotion and sacrifice, the court appeals to the nation so that its resolute support will enable the court to overcome this crisis. The court urges the executive and legislative branches to become fully aware of the very grave crisis in which the unleashed violence has placed it and adopt the necessary and sufficient measures for adequate functioning of the nation's institutions, especially the weakest and most defenseless among them, the judicial branch. There is no effective policy to eradicate the causes of the grave violence that affect it, nor has a serious and convincing effort been undertaken to eliminate them through the deep commitment of all the proper authorities. The court reports to the nation that the judicial branch has had to face its mission practically alone. In none of the reports on peace and violence are the countless number of magistrates, judges, and employees who have fallen while fulfilling their duty included. They are anonymous deaths, innocent victims that the society takes for granted as if that was the inexorable fate of those who make the huge commitment of imparting justice. One cannot ignore the fact that one of the factors that serves as a backdrop to this crisis is the extradition treaty signed with the U.S. Government. It was negotiated by the executive branch and unanimously approved by the Congress. The court has solely had to consider specific cases and to rule on their constitutionality, a task that it has zealously carried out with absolute impartiality and total respect for the rights of individuals. In view of this international agreement and the inconsistent way that it has been interpreted by the executive, the court hopes that the other branches of government will also fulfill their own duties so that any doubts will be dispelled, responsibilities will be established, and tranquillity will clearly prevail. Justice requires such a climate for the proper fulfillment of its functions. To date the court has been a defenseless and isolated victim of the most brutal outrages, the sources of which remain a mystery. It is obviously not enough that the people silently condemn them. Colombian society must do more. This is demanded by the grandeur of the fatherland and the citizens' strength of character.

300 Judges Protest, Resign

[Text] Approximately 300 judges in Bogota and El Valle resigned en masse yesterday and strongly protested the murder of Hernando Baquero Borda, magistrate of the Supreme court of Justice.

The judges issued communiques to the news media deploring the murder, which occurred yesterday morning, and rejected the inefficacy of the security measures which were adopted by the executive branch to protect those who are in charge of enforcing the law. The 29 civil judges in Bogota announced that all the legal processes were being suspended for an indefinite time and formally presented their resignations, demanding protection, given the abandoned state in which the members of this branch currently find themselves. They demanded thorough investigations to ascertain who is responsible for this and other crimes. Members of the judiciary in El Valle vehemently protested the crimes against them and also presented their formal resignations. Justice Baquero Borda's murder has provoked serious protests throughout the country and prompted the judicial official's decision, which will paralyze at least 12,000 cases. The judges in Bogota issued the following communique: "The civilian judges of the Bogota Circuit, during a meeting held this morning, 31 July 1986, agreed to issue this communique to state:

"A. Our deep feelings of sorrow and bitterness over the murder of Dr Hernando Baquero Borda, magistrate of the Honorable Court of Justice.

"B. Our solidarity with the illustrious dead man's family.

"C. The feeling that we have been abandoned while engaged in our job of enforcing the law, and the deep sense of defenselessness and insecurity concerning the lives of those who have toiled in these unrecognized and disrespected activities, and who are now victims of all kinds of attacks.

"D. Our request that investigations be carried out to clarify these crimes and to punish the culprits, and that a radical and definitive solution be adopted to offer security to all of us, given that the measures which have been adopted so far have proved ineffective.

"E. Given our awareness of the current situation and our lack of proper means to defend ourselves, we have agreed to indefinitely suspend our activities as of this date.

"F. Given the general indifference which prevails, and the increasing number of victims among us, we present a joint resignation from our posts."

DEFENSE MINISTRY ON GUERRILLA SEIZURE OF TOWN

[Text] Bogota, 1 Aug (AFP) -- The Defense Ministry has announced in Bogota that the Maoist Popular Liberation Army (EPL) is today holding with fire and blood the agricultural town of Andes (population 60,000). Andes is located in the northwestern Colombian Department of Antioquia. The attack began at 1415 GMT, according to initial reports. Several policemen in a barracks that was caught by surprise were killed. Several banks have been seized, and communications have been cut. The EPL has reportedly announced that this attack is in reprisal for the death last week in Antioquia of the second in the command of the leftist M-19 Movement, Gustavo Arias Londono, alias "Boris." The EPL and the M-19 form part of the so-called National Guerrilla Coordinating Board.

ROK DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER ON OFFICIAL VISIT

[Text] Quito, 2 Aug (AFP) -- Kim Man-je, South Korean deputy prime minister and minister of the Planning Board, arrived in Quito today to begin an official visit that will conclude on 5 August. After visiting his country's embassy, Kim will meet on Monday morning with President Leon Febres Cordero, Vice President Blasco Penaherrera, and Foreign Minister Edgar Teran.

Penaherrera will hold a luncheon in Kim's honor. Kim will meet with the president of the Supreme Court and in the evening will hold a reception in honor of the Ecuadoran vice president.

TERAN DENIES CHARGES ON MILITARY PROJECTS

PA020321 Quito Voz de los Andes in Spanish 1130 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Text] Jaime Hurtado Gonzalez, national director of the Democratic Popular Movement [MPD], has leveled serious charges against the national government, saying that an institution similar to the School of the Americas would be established in the country to train military personnel. He also charged that the United States would be allowed to install a missile flight control station in the Galapagos and to build a highway in Manabi. These measures assail the national sovereignty. Here is Foreign Minister Edgar Teran Teran on this subject:

[Begin recording] [Teran] I listened to Hurtado's remarks. He also urged the government to make an official statement. It is my fundamental duty as minister of foreign relations to reply to Hurtado's (?accusations). I will do so now. As the entire country knows, for many years, approximately 25 to 30 years, the Ecuadoran and U.S. Armies have customarily held joint maneuvers.

(?On this occasion) the chiefs of the respective Armies have been talking about the possibility of conducting exercises which are not strictly military in nature, but engineering exercises, [word indistinct] building roads, with interesting technological support from the U.S. Army which has very sophisticated equipment. This could serve to build a 30-km highway between two points in Manabi Province; that is, between San Vicente and (Samoa). Clearly, this highway will serve several towns in that province.

Obviously, this initiative may not become a reality. The highway may not be built. No agreement, commitment, or treaty has been signed and the Foreign Ministry has not been involved in this matter. I make this clarification because of the way in which the government has been (?accused) in this matter. For additional information on this matter, please consult the defense minister or the Joint Chiefs of Staff of the Armed Forces, whom I spoke with before making this statement.

[Reporter] Does this mean that you know [words indistinct]?

[Teran] The initiatives on the joint maneuvers, [words indistinct] stem from the sort of relations between the two (?countries). I do not know the details. The Defense Ministry can provide additional details.

[Words indistinct] when President Leon Febres Cordero requested permission from the Tribunal of Constitutional Guarantees to travel to Costa Rica and Honduras, it was mentioned that there was a project to install sophisticated equipment in the Galapagos for "star wars" [guerra de las galaxias] and that installations for the School of the Americas would be built in the eastern zone. All of this is absolutely false. All of this is absolutely false [Teran repeats himself].

There is no initiative to do anything in the Galapagos Islands other than affirm our sovereignty as [words indistinct] sovereignty, proclaiming Ecuador's sovereignty over the territorial waters as the president did a few months ago. As for the School of the Americas, this is such a crass slander. It is worth noting that the School of the Americas for training officers operated in Panama, about a year ago its highly sophisticated and costly installations were moved to the state of Georgia.

An additional element of this slander is to say that the Ecuadoran Government was thinking of [word indistinct] military objectives for any place in the country. It is false, slanderous, and unpatriotic to utter this sort of remark. These are (?my) categorical and final comments on these remarks. I am delivering to the news media the instructions given our ambassador in Madrid regarding something slightly similar to today's remarks, which have been rehashed in a Spanish magazine. [end recording]

PRESIDENT GARCIA CANCELS TRIP TO COLOMBIA

[Text] Lima, 1 Aug (AFP) -- It was officially reported today in Lima that President Alan Garcia has canceled his trip to Colombia where he was to have attended the inauguration of Colombian President-elect Virgilio Barco. Garcia was scheduled to travel to Bogota on 7 August and return immediately. Senator Luis Alberto Sanchez, first vice president of the Republic, will travel in his place.

Garcia's decision was announced by Leonel Figueroa, president of the National Reserve Bank, who said that Garcia canceled his trip because he is worried about the developments concerning the national economy.

GOVERNMENT EXTENDS STATE OF EMERGENCY IN LIMA

[Text] Lima, 1 Aug (AFP) -- The Peruvian Government has issued a decree extending the state of emergency, with the suspension of constitutional guarantees for 30 days, in Lima and in the province of Callao which have been affected by terrorist acts, it was disclosed. The extention is in effect as of today.

As a result the government continues to suspend individual rights, including the right to be protected against trespass, the freedom to choose where to reside, the freedom of assembly, and the right to be detained only through a court order.

This extension was approved by the Council of Ministers subject to a previous report to Congress. According to the Supreme Decree published today by the Official Gazette, the Armed Forces will continue to control internal order in Lima and the neighboring Port of Callao on the Pacific coast.

The measure, which includes a curfew between 0100 and 0500 local time, was decreed by President Alan Garcia on 7 February in view of the wave of attacks, fires, abductions, and power outages that were affecting Lima.

A state of emergency remains in force in 20 provinces of the Departments of Ayacucho, stronghold of the Andean guerrillas, and in Huancavelica, Apurimac, Huanuco, and Pasco, where the Armed Forces are in military and political control.

Emergency Extended in Ayacucho

[Excerpt] Lima, 3 Aug (EFE) -- The Peruvian Government has announced that it will extend the state of emergency for another 2-month period in the 19 provinces that encompass the Departments of Ayacucho, Huancavelica, Apurimac and Huanuco, which are considered to be the center of activities of the Maoist group, the Shining Path.

The government measures notes that the state of emergency has been extended because "the reasons which led to the enforcement of the state of emergency continue," and it adds that its objective is "to restore public order."

Ayacucho and nearby departments have been under a state of emergency since the beginning of 1983, when the government of Fernando Belaunde Terry charged the Armed Forces with the struggle against terrorism in the area.

Since that time, the state of emergency has been extended every 2 months, because the Peruvian Constitution establishes that the state of emergency can be established for only 60 days.

The declaration of state of emergency implies the suspension of individual rights and the control of the entire area by a political-military command. At present the Armed Forces are headed by General Gil Jara. The state of emergency is also enforced in two provinces of the Cerro de Pasco Department, located in the main mountainous area of the country, and in Lima and the port of Callao. [passage omitted]

ESCALATION OF ATTACKS ON APRA OFFICES CONTINUES

[Text] Lima, 1 Aug (EFE) -- The terrorist escalation that began in Peru after the massacre of some 300 prison inmates on 19 June in Lima has increased over the past few days with several attacks on offices of the ruling party American Popular Revolutionary Alliance [APRA]. Since the events at the prisons, seven APRA militants have been murdered by Shining Path.

The attacks carried out yesterday in Lima against four APRA offices and eating establishments as well as against the house of an APRA councilman have marked the preparations of the acts that begin today in Peru to celebrate the 7th anniversary of the death of Victor Haya de la Torre, leader and founder of APRA.

Similar attacks were perpetrated last night in Lima against two stores of a well-known chain, a brick factory, and a bank agency.

The most serious attack took place in the city of Huanuco, capital of the Huanuco Department, north of Lima. There, 50 dynamite sticks were placed in the main APRA office, where several local officials and approximately 100 members were meeting.

Last night, as reported today by the newspaper LA REPUBLICA, a woman infiltrated a group of the participants and left a briefcase containing dynamite in the bathroom. The suitcase was discovered before it could explode. According to the report, the woman was detained and identified as Teresa Huallca. She said she belonged to a "death squad" of the Shining Path Maoists.

The Shining Path terrorists also attacked four APRA offices in Huanuco, throwing explosives and causing some property damage.

In the city of Huancayo, 415 km southeast of Lima, several incendiary bombs left the movie theater "Central" in ashes. Police managed to deactivate other incendiary bombs in three other movie theaters in that city.

A car bomb also exploded yesterday in this city. The explosion caused serious injuries to one person and damaged several houses. The car bomb, which was placed in a stolen truck, was apparently intended to explode in front of the police headquarters. So far the police have detained some 100 suspects in Huancayo.

Meanwhile, the APRA members today began several political and religious acts to celebrate the 7th anniversary of the death of Haya de la Torre, president of the Constituent Assembly that gave Peru its current Constitution.

POLICE ARREST 400 IN LIMA, NEIGHBORING AREAS

[Text] Lima, 29 Jul (TELAM) -- About 400 people have been arrested in the last few hours in exhaustive preventive police operations in Lima, neighboring districts, and the nearby Callao Port.

Spokesmen from the Civil Guard 2d Region public relations department have reported that 220 people, suspected of carrying out activities outside the law, were arrested in operations carried out in the Carmen de la Legua and Callao jurisdictions. A similar number of people were also arrested in Lima.

In many cases the people who were arrested because they lacked identification papers were investigated by the police and later released and placed at the disposal of the proper authorities.

BANK OFFICIAL ON 'ALTERNATIVES,' IMF DISCUSSIONS

[Text] Lima, 2 Aug (AFP) -- Central Reserve Bank (BCR) President Leonel Figueroa has stated in Lima that Peru will propose several alternatives to the IMF before 15 August, the date on which a $180-million payment on interest to the IMF falls due. Figueroa, who left early this morning for Mexico to seek agreements concerning the drop in the international price of silver, said last night that from Mexico City he will go to Washington to attend IMF meetings. Some Peruvian payments to the IMF will fall due on 15 August.

Regarding the possibility that the IMF might declare Peru ineligible for IMF loans if it fails to honor its debt commitments, Figueroa said that we still have a few days to study what could happen. Figueroa said: Until then, there are many things to do... to this end, the government is studying several algernatives. He was thus indicating that Peru might hold some sort of dialogue with the IMF.

The IMF board normally meets at its Washington headquarters. I will probably go there for the meeting, Figueroa said.

Figueroa reiterated, however, that Peru cannot possibly make the payments. A few days ago Economy Vice Minister Gustavo Saberbein said Peru would make a goodwill payment, but in keeping with the Peruvian decision to limit its payments on its public foreign debt -- which totals $12 billion -- to 10 percent of its export revenues.

Saberbein said that the Peruvian foreign debt totals more than $14 billion, including a $2-billion private debt, and that the Peruvian debt to the IMF -- totaling $800 million -- would be paid, but he did not give any figures.

Commenting on his trip to Mexico, Figueroa said he will discuss the possibility of reaching some agreements on the world silver market, in which Peru and Mexico play a leading role.

This commission will be made up of representatives from the Agriculture; Economy and Finance; Industry, Commerce, Tourism and Integration Ministries. This commission will implement the necessary measures to safeguard the normal collection of fresh milk, guarantee prices for fresh milk producers in the southern basin, and control the volume of production in order to ensure a normal supply of evaporated milk to the local market.

TUPAMAROS' COMMUNIQUE HINTS AT VIOLENCE

[Text] Montevideo, 1 Aug (AFPO -- The unexpected reappearance on the political arena of the National Liberation Movement-Tupamaros (MLN-T) has caused a great stir in local political circles, who uneasily noted recent comments by the former guerrillas. On 29 July the MLN-T Executive Board issued a communique, warning that if the government and the people are the hostages of the Armed Forces then everything changes and a new position will have to be adopted based on this situation.

The political parties this week held final discussions on negotiations seeking a solution for the trial of alleged human rights violators under the military regime, forseeing a possible refusal by the military to testify before the civil courts. The comments contained in the communique were viewed by governmental circles as a threat that the Tupamaros, if they deem it necessary, are willing again to resort to armed struggle in Uruguay.

Sources from the ruling Colorado (Liberal) Party have stated that the comments by the former guerrillas are serious and impertinent, stating that the former guerrillas seem to be seeking new confrontations, which no one wants. The Colorado morning newspaper EL DIA, whose associate publisher is Vice President Enrique Tarigo, today editorialized on this issue, stating that the threats and excuses of those who brought pain and mourning to the Uruguayan democracy and coexistence are out of place. Tarigo stated that those of us who never believed in the recovery and repentance of the Tupamaros in their general behavior cannot be surprised at reading their current threats, which are more or less similar to their past threats.

The newspaper denied that the government is being blackmailed by the military men and warned that the vast majority of Uruguayans are not willing to again walk the path of confrontation, destablization, and utter violence which is being hinted at.

Reports broadcast today by Montevideo radio stations have stated that the U.S. Department of State has charged the Tupamaros with preparing to return to guerrilla methods and seeking to extend political violence throughout Latin America. In this regard, MLN-T leader Luis Rosadilla has said that the United States has no moral authority to level charges against any organization in the world of cooperating with terrorism, because terrorism originates in the United States. The United States would have to take a look at its conscience and say why it is giving $100 million to the Nicaraguan contras to execute Nicaraguan people, Rosadilla stated.

Jose Mujica, one of the top historical MLN-T leaders, has stated that the MLN-T will contribute to upholding the country's political freedom. Mujica said that the reactionaries and fascists are waiting for any guerrilla action to serve them as an excuse to again block things and repress people, but they will be disappointed.

PRC AMBASSADOR ON POSITIVE TRADE BALANCE

[Text] Mexico City, 1 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Chinese Ambassador to Mexico Li Chao has said Mexico achieved a positive trade balance of $70 million last year with the PRC.

During the ceremony commemorating the 49th anniversary of the founding of the Chinese People's [Liberation] Army, Li Chao said that the two countries are currently analyzing the possibility of increasing bilateral trade. As of last year the total trade volume of the two countries has recovered, and a total of $100 million was registered. However, he indicated that Chinese exports barely reached $30 million.

The official also indicated that the PRC categorically supports all the peace initiatives of the Mexican Government. China is a peaceful country, he said, and, like the rest of the people of the world it needs peace for its maximum development.

In reference to the upcoming meeting in Ixtapa, Guerrero, the Chinese ambassador said that the meeting of the Group of Six is an effort that should be praised by everyone, and because of this China expresses its good wishes for the success of the meeting.

SOVIET CHARGE D'AFFAIRES ON GROUP OF 6 MEETING

[Text] Mexico City, 1 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Victor Krapov, charge d'affaires of the Soviet embassy in Mexico, has said the Group of Six is serious, independent, and supports Soviet disarmament proposals. The Soviet Union, he said, has never considered the Group of Six -- Argentina, Mexico, Tanzania, India, Greece, and Sweden -- to be a game or a dream. Krapov said the Soviet Union will support the concrete and realistic proposals that will result from the meeting which will be held in Ixtapa. The group can play a positive and influential role for the Soviet Union, he stressed, but it will never place pressure on his country. The Soviet Union does not need pressure since it has a clear and honest policy on nuclear weapons which corresponds with the interest of the peoples.

Gorbachev will praise the efforts of the Group of Six leaders since they support the initiatives proposed by the Soviet Union to prohibit nuclear testing and weapons from space, he added. Krapov stressed that thepolicy of the Soviet party is intended to destroy nuclear weapons because these weapons are terrible and threaten humanity with holocaust.

He stressed that even though its policy is based on disarmament, the Soviet Union has achieved a thermonuclear balance with the United States and will not allow that nation to destroy it. Krapov said his country expects the meeting in Ixtapa to determine the future of the Soviet Union and the United States.

LEGISLATOR ON MEETINGS WITH U.S. OFFICIALS

PA021356 Panama City LA PRENSA in Spanish 30 Jul 86 p 18a

[Article by Legislator Guillermo A. Cochez, Jr.: "Democracy vs. Peace and Security"]

[Text] As we sat in a large room on the sixth floor of the huge U.S. State Department building where we would meet with Elliott Abrams, I would have never imagined how clear his position regarding the Panamanian military leaders would be. If I was surprised, just imagine the reaction of my colleagues, -- the progovernment legislators -- when we heard the assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs say that the role played by the military in Panama goes beyond the powers they should have in a democracy, and that this is why the Panamanian democracy has become stagnant.

After his categorical introduction, Abrams went on speaking frankly about our type of government in Panama. According to Abrams, the democratic development of any Latin American country will depend to a large extent on a less active role by the military in public affairs. Abrams' position was totally opposite to the one we had heard from Nestor D. Sanchez, deputy assistant secretary of defense for inter-American affairs, a U.S. citizen of Mexican ancestry who has been in that important position for the past 6 years. The first thing Sanchez told us was that one of Latin America's main problems in its relations with the United States is that it does not have enough "lobbying" [preceding word in English] in Washington to "sell itself" adequately to the U.S. circles of power. What I understood from this is that even if everything that is said is a lie -- as it happens today -- we must sell our best image to the U.S. public, so that they will "give us" everything we need.

Abrams considered Panama's democratization the main priority, while for Sanchez the priority was the Panama Canal's security, for which it is necessary to maintain the most cordial relations with the current chiefs of the Panamanian Defense Forces. He then stressed his close friendship with General Noriega. Sanchez' only concern was preventing any sabotage actions against the Canal which, he said, have never occurred. With the excellent cooperation provided by the Panamanian military chiefs, he hoped that there will be no sabotage actions against the Canal in the future. I do not now why, but it sounded like blackmail to me: If you do not do anything against us, we will not touch the Canal. Then, in replying to one of my many questions, Sanchez said that anything else, including when a military chief decides to get involved in politics, as in the case of Torrijos, Paredes, and Noriega, it was our problem. As I told him, the United States promotes the participation of the commanders in politics by mistaking its relations with the armed institution with the circumstantial relations it maintains with whomever happens to be the military chief at the time. However, from there on the problem is ours, because according to Sanchez, they respect us and do not meddle in our domestic affairs.

The experience at the two meetings was extremely positive. The positions expressed by the progovernment legislators were as opposite and contradictory as those expressed by Legislator Jorge Ruben Rosas and myself, clearly showing the profound fissures that exist within the Panamanian family. The viewpoints expressed by the ranking U.S. Government officials also unveiled the conceptual differences that exist between the U.S. State and Defense Departments in analyzing our problems.

It was then that I understood that part of the legislative resolution in which Roberto Eisenmann [LA PRENSA director] was condemned as a traitor and the reports published in THE NEW YORK TIMES about Gen Noriega were described as "a string of lies," and in which the publications were attributed to the differences that exist between the various U.S. Government agencies. It was evident that while Abrams talked about democracy, stating that the power should be held by elected civilians and that military intervention in politics is harmful, his words did not find an echo in Sanchez. For Sanchez, the only thing important in the relations between our two countries was peace, security, and the professionalism of the Panamanian military men, for which it is necessary to maintain excellent relations with the heads of the institution. I now wonder if the slogan "Year of Peace, Security Without War" was created by the public relations office of the famous U.S. Department of Defense as part of their contribution to improve the image of the Panamanian military chiefs.

However, the idea that there will never be peace and security without democracies was not only expressed by Elliott Abrams. During our stay in Lincoln, Nebraska, a 15-minute courtesy visit to state Governor Robert Kerry ended in a heated 3-hour debate about the Panamanian democracy. In concluding, the young Democratic politician said that although the role played by the military is considered very important in his country, it was decided from the beginning that they would not participate in politics.

In this sense, the 21-day U.S. tour has been a good lesson. Although there were moments of great tension when the debates got heated, it was also an opportunity for those of us representing the opposition to be better understood regarding the noble intentions behind our intense and permanent struggle for democracy. It became clear that what we want, in addition to the necessary change of individuals, is something that is more profound. We seek a change in the system, in order to establish a real democracy, which is an indispensable condition to live in peace and in a country that is responsible for its actions and its destiny, without so much U.S. intervention.

ABADIA DISCUSSES CONTADORA REACTIVATION

PA010347 Panama City ACAN in Spanish 0130 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Panama City, 31 Jul (ACAN-EFE) -- Foreign Minister Jorge Abadia Arias said that today Guatemalan President Vinicio Cerezo has asked the Contadora Group to renew its regional peace negotiations.

In statements made to ACAN-EFE, Abadia noted that the Contadora Group has delivered its final version of the peace and cooperation treaty, and that the countries in the region must now voice their stand on this document in order to resume negotiations. "They (the Central American presidents) have to take some initiative concerning this document in order for Contadora to deem it wise, advisable, and reasonable to call for a new meeting," Abadia said. Guatemalan President Vinicio Cerezo said last night that his country will call for a new meeting of the Contadora Group -- composed of Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia, and Panama -- to hold a new "summit," even though "an atmosphere of pessimism prevails."

Abadia said that Contadora "cannot impose the solutions of them (the Central Americans). The solutions must come from them, and if they say this is not the final version of the treaty, then they should say what it should be and we will help them" in the dialogue.

He explained that the Contadora Group has received recommendations from the Salvadoran and Costa Rican Governments concerning the document delivered on 6 June to the countries in the region. "These were very positive recommendations that could lead to a peace mechanism because they tell us Contadora is the only alternative and they ask us not to abandon the negotiations table and to continue supporting the peace process." Abadia added.

However, the Panamanian foreign minister said: "It is necessary that they take up the historical commitment of deciding for themselves what they want, and then we will support that line with our efforts."

ABADIA ON CANAL TOLLS, POSSIBLE DETERIORATION

PA010250 Panama City Televisora Nacional in Spanish 0000 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Panama does not agree with the possibility of increasing Canal tolls. We interviewed Foreign Minister Jorge Abadia Arias on this subject:

[Begin recording] Panama will try, as much as possible, to see that the Canal tolls are not increased. However, Panama will be on the lookout for anything that might benefit Canal revenue that will help in preventive maintenance of the Canal which should revert to Panama in the year 2000. We are very much concerned, and we have already notified the respective authorities of this, over the deterioration of some of the Panama Canal properties and the possibility that the Canal might not operate in an efficient manner when it is returned to Panama in the year 2000. We are very much aware of this, and we are very worried about it. We are exerting respectful pressure so that the corresponding authorities can adequately maintain the Panama Canal so that it will not be junk when returned to Panama in the year 2000. COSTA RICA

COMMUNIQUE REJECTS NICARAGUAN CHARGES AT ICJ

PA021608 Panama City MATUTINO in Spanish 2 Aug 86 p 4 A

[Communique issued by the Foreign Ministry; no date given]

[Text] On 28 July Claudia Chamorro the Nicaraguan ambassador in San Jose, delivered to the government of the Republic an undated note in which the Nicaraguan Government announced its decision, full of bad faith, to bring suit against Costa Rica for its alleged complicity in the activities of the U.S. Government against Nicaragua.

Costa Rica categorically rejects, in all its extremes, the groundless Nicaraguan accusation, because it has proclaimed and practices a policy of strict neutrality in the internal conflicts of Nicaragua and in any of the armed conflicts of other states. The preservation of this neutrality demands large resources and dauntless efforts from the government of the Republic, which feels that this neutrality is one of the cornerstones of its foreign policy.

Costa Rica, as a state that abides by the law and respects judicial and national as well as international institutions, will go to the International Court of Justice [ICJ] or any other organization to uphold its right. Costa Rica reserves itself the right to use the mechanisms, organizations, and legal grounds it deems opportune to prove the false nature of the charges that the Nicaraguan Government has so rashly presented.

The Costa Rican Government feels that, in addition to legally confirming to the international community the groundless nature of Nicaragua's accusation, the suit before the court will provide an excellent opportunity to show the aggressiveness with which Nicaragua has treated Costa Rica in the past few years.

NARANJO ANNOUNCES AUSTERITY BUDGET FOR 1987

[Excerpt] A drastic fiscal plan for 1987 has been announced. New taxes will be levied to compensate for lower tax rates on some activities. An austere budget has been announced. Treasury Minister Fernando Naranjo said that due to diverse tax laws, the rates were lowered for certain activities and the only alternative is to compensate elsewhere. The minister said that taxes cannot be lowered because this would lead to an even higher deficit.

Finance Minister Naranjo has taken some internal measures to lower public expenditures, such as a 15 percent budget [word indistinct], equivalent to 4.5 billion colones. He stressed that several actions were taken to improve tax collection by the Directorate of Direct Taxation and Customs.

He noted that a careful policy on public expenditures will be implemented in the next few days, not only for the central government but also for decentralized institutions. The treasury minister said a number of measures under consideration will be disclosed soon, such as the policy on wages for the public sector, adding that the IMF agreed that the adjustment should be lower due to the fiscal deterioration. He noted that previous legislation has resulted in greater expenditures in wage adjustments, pensions, and transfers.

The Legislative Assembly will be asked to amend some laws. The Treasury Ministry had to absorb the debts of some decentralized institutions, Naranjo said. He remarked that the IMF agrees that a strong adjustment should take place in 1987 because the Legislative Assembly has to amend several laws. [passage omitted]

DUARTE WELCOMES HONDURAN PRESIDENT AZCONA

PA010307 San Salvador Domestic Service in Spanish 0305 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Speech by President Jose Napoleon Duarte at the Presidential Palace in San Salvador -- live]

[Text] Your Excellency, constitutional president of the sister Republic of Honduras, and distinguished Mrs Azcona Hoyo; distinguished retinue accompanying President Azcona Hoyo; Your Excellencies, members of the diplomatic corps accredited in our country; Mr President and members of the National Legislative Assembly; Mr President of the Supreme Court of Justice; members of the state Cabinet; distinguished special guests; Salvadoran people; Honduran people; and people of Central America who listen to me through the Central American television network:

We are very honored on this occasion to receive here, in this home of the Salvadoran people, the distinguished president of the sister Republic of Honduras, Jose Azcona Hoyo, his wife, and his distinguished retinue in a most important visit for the fate of the two brother nations and, undoubtedly, for the future of the entire Central American region.

As president of the Republic of El Salvador and elected by my people, I am very pleased to receive a constitutional president who represents the sovereign will of his people to hold a positive exchange of ideas that will also strengthen our brotherly ties. I must also state that the Salvadoran people, and I am loyally interpreting their will, are more than pleased to receive in this noble land the illustrious ruler of a country with which we have so many ties and common goals. We have a common fate determined by the way in which we remain united, understanding the value of joint action, cooperation, achievement, progress, and change for improving the living conditions of both countries.

Mr President: We are happy to have you here, and I must insist that our people are very pleased to receive you as a brother and hope your visit will be positive for Honduran-Salvadoran relations and for peace and democracy.

Our countries have a common history, the same roots, identical traditions, and similar wishes. Both people have followed similar paths. Both peoples are facing similar challenges. El Salvador and Honduras are currently seeking the consolidation of authentic democratic programs and are confronting all sorts of difficulties that threaten their stability and tranquillity. We are both suffering from a plot against the progress of our citizens. We have both gone through negative conditions in the economic and social areas. We are both victims of the ideological terrorist expansionism of the totalitarians.

We are geographic neighbors; brothers of the same race, religion, culture, and hopes. One of the restrictions hindering our development and the consolidation of pluralist democracy is the weakness of our economies. The most elementary logic tells us that in view of all the characteristics we mentioned earlier and with the tremendous advantage of being neighbors, we should seek a common economic scheme that will result in a beneficial exchange based on justice and mutual respect, a scheme that might and should produce a strengthening of our economies.

Our bilateral economic relations are essential for strengthening our political programs, for the progress of our peoples, and for achieving that common future that will be much easier to attain if we face it together. The Spanish-American countries have continually had border problems. We have had them between our two countries. We now have the greatest willingness to solve them and to seek the juridical means based on respect and honesty to solve the border problem. It is our duty, and we have done so, to maintain a calm, prudent, and constructive attitude. We must plant seeds of peace and harmony among our peoples and we are doing this.

Mr President: Together, we must persuade Hondurans and Salvadorans that regardless of any differences, they are and will continue to be brothers, and it is very important to solve these differences based on the rights that will eliminate forever any shadow of doubt. Our participation at the highest tribunal of international law should serve as an example to other nations, it should serve as a model so that all will understand that when one acts in good faith, abiding by the law and respecting a neighbor, and above all, speaking with the language of peace and harmony, one can always overcome any differences and one can always find satisfactory solutions.

Mr President: I reiterate the willingness of the Salvadoran people of all sectors, as well as my own willingness to make all efforts necessary to find a just, firm, and lasting solution that will guarantee peace, brotherhood, stability, and which will allow us to maintain a positive unit for two brotherly and neighboring countries. This is a good opportunity for us, as presidents of Honduras and El Salvador, and as personal friends throughout our lives, to agree on and plan a dialogue between the various political and social groups of our nations. In this manner, the representatives of both countries will meet on a planned schedule so that the legislative assemblies, Armed Forces, labor unions, workers, businessmen, technicians -- in other words, so that all of us who want to seek together a clear and definite support for a balanced solution to the conflict -- which will allow us to create a suitable atmosphere in all spheres of society in both Honduras and El Salvador -- can go together to the honorable International Court of Justice under conditions of mutual understanding. That court will then promptly issue a ruling tc solve the border conflict and thus open the path for better understanding between our peoples.

I avail myself of this happy opportunity to tell you, Mr President, that we must do everything possible to remain united. For our part, be assured of our best wishes of solidarity and the firm and sincere willingness of the Salvadoran people to intensify Honduran-Salvadoran relations as much as possible by the most noble means.

Even if only briefly, it is very necessary to stress that meeting here tonight are presidents of two countries that fortunately have taken the same path toward real democracy, based on a legitimate expression and not a whimsical interpretation of the people's authentic will. Democracy is a dynamic process, the implementation of which is not easy. It emerges from the people's will and is then expressed through the exercise of fundamental rights. Improvement of the democratic institutions offers to human beings the best possibilities for personal development as well as new opportunities.

We cannot deny, however, that it is not an easy path. There are enemies inside and outside of all democracies constantly conspiring to destroy them. It is important to stress that building a democracy requires a continuous effort, an iron-clad will; it means that one must be constantly exposed to the domestic and international public opinion; that each one of the actions carried out on behalf of the government will be judged in history, and that it is necessary to adjust to the norms that limit and define power in a democracy.

This is what makes the pluralist democratic system great: To realize that our mandate is limited in power, and for a definite period; to realize that peoples have a right to change, to express themselves, to disagree and to participate in debates; to realize that institutions and individuals have the inalienable right to question the actions carried out by the government and government leaders. It is not easy for those who defend totalitarianism to understand this, nor do they want democracy to bloom, to grow stronger or to consolidate. That is why they are constantly trying to discredit it, that is why they conspire against it in every field, and why they maintain an endless struggle or war which is conducted in countless ways.

True democracy -- which includes economic, social, and political issues, and which affects all our actions in life -- has intrinsic limitations that are hard to overcome. There are cultural gaps that make it difficult in young democracies to understand clearly the essence of democracy. That is our case, Mr President. Feeble or frail economies are also dangerous for democracies, and thus it is important to strengthen them. Therefore, it is urgently necessary to wage the economic struggle together, by strengthening the trade exchange, through cooperation, and by being active and flexible.

Some people believe that it is easy to maintain a fictitious order through artificial means. They contend that it is easy to maintain relative security and tranquillity by force. Those defending this theory imply -- because they do not understand this political and social phenomenon -- that democracy has caused all the social disturbances: strikes, stoppages, and certain excesses in exercising liberty. Here I must insist that the legitimate labor struggle, the free confrontation of ideas, the right to express oneself in any field, the total freedom of preaching and religion, of traffic and association, and so forth are essential democratic principles, and that we must make an effort to make rational and adequate use of these rights. We must differentiate between incorrectly using a right and the right itself. Democracies are not at fault if by making inadequate use of their rights or ignoring their true dimensions, citizens do not take advantage of the opportunities offered which, I repeat, are the best and the most adequate for an individual's full development.

We are not overly worried about the domestic limitations, because we have faith in our democracy and believe that it is strong enough to withstand them.

Mr President: You and I have heard definitions of democracy that are based on force, and on ignoring the citizens' will. It is for that reason that the extraneous limitations are dangerous. They can only be successfully countered when states sharing true democratic aspirations jointly face these extraneous limitations. International terrorism cannot be dealt with successfully by small democracies acting separately.

The injustice in international relations tremendously affects young democracies. There is only one way to shun this injustice and obtain just treatment in our relations. We must act together and struggle in a common front to achieve just and profitable prices for our products, equitable treatment in our financial transactions, and the respect we deserve as a sovereign state.

We previously referred to the limitations that conspire against and place restrictions on real democracies. The terrorists who call themselves revolutionaries aspire to achieve total power through violence, without showing any respect for the minimum ethical rules. The ultraleftists say that they represent the peoples; however, they have never bothered to ask the people to ratify that right. They talk about popular democracy, about the people in arms; however, they exert absolute control over all the essential liberties and profess a single ideological line that excludes any differing.

Mr President: You and I, I repeat, have heard the Nicaraguan president's concept of democracy, of the use of power, of the expression of the people's will, hegemony, and the distribution of power, of neutrality, and of a number of concepts that reflect the unquestionable totalitarian nature of the Nicaraguan Government. The language used by the Nicaraguan president is a totalitarian, warmongering language, which reflects a restless persecution mania and an expansion that seeks to destablize the Central America area without respite, as well as disrespect for international laws and for the good relations among neightbors that the Nicaraguan Government brags so much about. They are an irrefutable evidence of its support and adherence to international terrorism.

Mr President: Our concept of authentic democracy is essentially different and opposed to the Nicaraguan Government's totalitarian concept. You and I and two other democratic presidents are witnesses of that profound difference. They can talk about democracy, but they do not practice it. They accept the elimination of the basic democratic liberties; they disrespect the free determination of peoples and the right of self-determination when they promote, foment, and help the terrorists that operate in countries like ours, bringing sorrow and destruction to the Salvadoran people.

They persecute political parties, the church, social forces, and all those who do not accept their totalitarian authoritarianism. This Sandinist government concept is not democracy. This concept is light years away from our own point of view, and it works against the stability of our countries.

Likewise, they speak of a historical determinism, which is nothing but sophistry. Human beings have a natural need for freedom, and we do not think that to overcome underdevelopment it is necessary to subdue our peoples, or any people. On the contrary, there is a historical evidence that the kind of totalitarism that tries to function under the cover of a pseudo-peoples' democracy turns into something totally inefficient, economically and administratively speaking. Politically and culturally speaking, it becomes an abominable slavery. Ideologically speaking, it turns into a concept that eliminates all possibilities for dissent. No system exalts police control, warmongering, and extreme militarism more than the Marxist-Leninist system. No system betrays human nature more than the terrorists' totalitarian plan.

Mr President, we cannot pretend not to know that there are sectors and people who thoughtlessly or irrationally become enemies of any form of change. In their blindness, some of them also resort to criminal and terrorist actions to maintain their privileges and to show that democracy is weak. Those people are unable to see that their attitude is an unconscious ally of ultraleftist terrorist plots, and their policy of hanging on to the past opens a door for pseudorevolutionaries to get involved in the criminal plan of a prolonged peoples war. In reality, that war continues to be a pretext to lead deceived and frustrated youths to take up weapons.

I am not talking about those who, with a conservative way of thinking, accept and follow the rules and the plan of democracy. They, as well as others who have leftist tendencies, also have their place in a democratic, pluralist society, as long as they respect the rules of the game -- as is their duty -- which are equal for everybody. That is democracy.

Mr President, this visit is the best example of a sincere dialogue to fervently seek stable peace among our peoples. I must say that in this same spirit of conviction and sincere dialogue, I have worked hard for a permanent solution permitting internal peace in our country, El Salvador.

Our country continues to suffer the attacks produced by irrational hatred, and the violence unleashed by those who still do not, or cannot interpret the peaceful feelings of our people.

Mr President, I believe in and insist upon dialogue, because that will respond to the ethical and humanistic principles when we have defended all our lives; and also because that is the mandate the Salvadoran people have given us. Many times and in various ways the Salvadoran people have expressed their desire for a worthy, consistent peace, framed by the Constitution and in accordance with the specific characteristic and spirit of our tradition of freedom.

In this regard, a new effort for a dialogue with the people in arms is about to take place. That effort, which is at our initiative and has the support of the international community, will continue so as to achieve peace in El Salvador, and thus contribute to the pacification of the entire region.

Mr President, we view the entire spectrum of cooperation between El Salvador and Honduras as an ongoing project that must cover all levels of human activity, from facilities that must cover all levels of human activity, from facilities for the countries [corrects himself] for the peoples of our countries to communicate as much as possible, to the complex outlines of the increasing commerical exchanges, the formation of general programs in the energy, health, transportation, and security sectors, as well as in the delicate area of diplomatic coordination.

Mr President, the work ahead of us is immense, and the times augur well for it. The climate of friendship, the atmosphere of solidarity, and the scope of pragmatism in which our relations function today, acquire with your visit, Mr President, a dimension that we acknowledge and praise.

We fully share your ideas on systematic cooperation, in accordance with the challenges of our times. Faced with the acceleration of the history of our times, our countries, which are small, but filled with creative vitality, will recover all their human and productive potential.

If we use all of our national determination and capacity, together we should and can overcome the situation [regazo] imposed on us by the vissicitudes of history.

We should continue forward, regardless of the obstacles we have to overcome. In view of the recent experiences, it is clear that we can overcome any obstacle if we are supported by that real and spontaneous unity, which the subregional crisis itself makes us understand in its full magnitude.

The new, united nation of the future has its foundation in the spirit that we share today, in the renewed brotherhood which encourages us, and in the conviction that the institutions, which we defend day by day, are increasingly perfect and invulnerable.

The Central American tragedy gave us a more mature and broad perspective of reality. The satisfactory outcome of that tragedy will undoubtedly give us a more humane perception of the fate we have to share. We are heading toward that humanism, and democracy is the vehicle that will take us to it.

Mr President, your visit is the best occasion to establish guidelines, outline mechanism, and order priorities in this new relationship that we are strengthening through our personal contact today. This relationship is very useful and necessary at this time to resolve all conflict.

As president, and also as a man of unyielding democratic ideals and convictions, I express the profound gratitude of the people and the Government of El Salvador for your visit, the fruits of which will be seen shortly. We receive you in friendship and, with a brotherly embrace. We want you and your retinue to feel you are surrounded by the warm, fraternal feelings of all Salvadorans. Today is a day of celebration for El Salvador, and it will be recorded in the history of our two nations.

Thus, let us enjoy this mutual friendship and hope for the peaceful and progressive prosperity of our peoples.

A short time ago, as a Grand Master [gran maestro] of the Order of Jose Matias Delgado, and on behalf of the country, I had the honor of presenting you with that order, in the class of Grand Cross, Gold Plaque. I did so with pleasure and the certainty that you honor, and will continue to honor our highest award, and that you will always wear it with your characteristic dignity.

Mr President, the representatives of all the sectors of our country, without religious, political, or social distinction, have come here today to honor you. I ask them, on behalf of our homeland, to join me in a toast to the honor of one who honors us. Mr President, on behalf of the people of El Salvador, a toast to your homeland, Honduras; to you, your distinguished wife, and your retinue. May God give us strength and allow us to walk together along the path of peace. [applause]

Azcona Speaks

[Speech by Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo at the Presidential House in San Salvador -- live]

[Text] Mr President of El Salvador, Jose Napoleon Duarte, First Lady of El Salvador Ines de Duarte:

We were not planning on speaking at this time, but we fully identified with the Salvadoran president's speech. We fully identify democratically because we have found that we share the principles of pure republicanism with President Duarte, and because we have both implemented democracy in our system of government. We met him in an international youth club 34 years ago, and we feel he has kept his heart pure, despite all the difficulties. Therefore he deserves the high honor of being president of El Salvador. I want to congratulate him tonight from the bottom of my heart, because he is the same Napoleon Duarte we met many years ago. He is without a doubt a man of ideals, actions, and enthusiasm. In Honduras we also want to walk the path of democracy. We feel that if democratic principles are respected, our peoples will make progress, and thr roads for collective welfare will be paved.

Democracy belongs to us all. Democracy cannot be used to close down newspapers or to expel priests. It also must not be used to block the road to progress for workers and peasants when they demand a better distribution of wealth and of the country's riches. That is why we democrats must walk the center line. We must work hard day and night, and we must respect democratic principles. By respecting the doctrines of political parties, no matter what they be, we will be increasing the possibilities for peace for our peoples and decreasing the possibilities of them being exploited.

As president of the Honduran people, I want to say that we are exerting ourselves to achieve that objective.

We are being internationally criticized for not siding with the Nicaraguan Government. We cannot do that, because what we preached for 20 years as politicians in our countries -- that we had to respect freedom of speech, freedom of the press, and freedom to form associations -- cannot be forgotten by us now. We cannot side with a government that did not fulfill the promise it made to the OAS.

We have said many times that we will not invade Nicaragua and that we will never allow our land to be used to invade Nicaragua. However, we will not be the gendarme of that government so they can continue to oppress the Nicaraguan people. It is not our fault that there are counterrevolutionaries and refugees in our land. We feel it is the fault of the Nicaraguan Government, which was not able to interpret the support they received from the American continent, which thought Nicaragua would form a government that would respect the liberties of its citizens.

Again I congratulate the Salvadoran president, and I feel that the Salvadoran people will come out ahead because they have been able to interpret democracy. Those who are more affluent must prevent those on the bottom from falling prey to violence and to international totalitarianism as it has occurred in parts of El Salvador. I congratulate the president of El Salvador and all Salvadorans because they have been able to find the road to democracy, social justice, and popular vindications by respecting the interest of all sectors. That is what democracy is all about. Democracy is respecting private property, but at the same time it is fighting for a common goal without undermining the interests of any group. That is what we are doing. I am completely sure that El Salvador will succeed over violence and that I will continue to walk the path of democracy. In Honduras we will protect the people from that whirlpool of violence because we will be just with all sectors of our society. Thank you very much. [applause]

VICE PRESIDENT VIEWS HONDURAN RELATIONS

PA301353 San Salvador Canal Doce Television in Spanish 1900 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Text] The foreign ministers of Central America, with the exception of Nicaragua, who recently met in our country, intend to draft a peace document which will be presented to the Contadora Group. This was stated today by Dr Rodolfo Antonio Castillo Claramount, who also referred to the upcoming meeting between President Duarte and his Honduran counterpart, [Jose] Azcona Hoyo. The following is a report by Roxana Lemus:

[Begin recording] [Lemus] Vice President and Foreign Minister Rodolfo Antonio Castillo Claramount revealed some of the topics that will be discussed by President Duarte on 30 and 31 July, when Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo visits our country. The topics include the reactiviation of our trade, and analysis of Central America's foreign debt, and Salvadoran refugees in Honduras; he emphasized that Honduras must solve that problem but that El Salvador might help.

[Castillo] We have achieved progress in this sector, and you are aware of this. A tripartite commission has been formed that is comprised of the Honduran and Salvadoran Governments, as well as the UNHCR [UN High Commissioner for Refugees]; also participating are other organizations -- for example, the SIN [not further identified]. We are already working on a repatriation plan that will undoubtedly respect the people's desire -- this is a condition demanded by the United Nations. El Salvador has outlined and begun to prepare the logistical and internal aspects of the matter to receive the refugees and subsequently relocate them in our country. We could say that this is simply a practical problem concerning their transfer and things of that nature. This, obviously, does not have to be done according to a timetable or with specific groups; these people must be treated as human beings, there is no question about that.

Anyway, Honduras has to solve this problem, and we must contribute to solving it because Honduras should not bear the burden of a human problem that represents a political, economic, and social complication for its own internal situation.

[Lemus] In addition, Castillo Claramount said that Central America needs an authentic pluralist democracy and freedom of the press that permits internal dialogue, thus guaranteeing a process in which governments are appointed through free elections. Referring to this topic, he said that the Central American countries -- except Nicaragua -- are working on a proposal. We are working on a historical document, because there has never been evidence of an expression of this nature, for a dialogue among the five Central American countries; as soon as we have prepared the plan for an organized dialogue we will invite Nicaragua to help prepare a peace document, the vice president stated.

[Castillo] The democratic Central American countries have been organizing and analyzing the preparation of a document that defines the concepts of what, in our opinion, Central America needs. We believe that Central America needs an authentic and pluralist democracy; a realistic internal policy which advocates and defends human rights, and -- above all -- the document will state what we want for Central America in the future. Such a document has never existed before in the Central American area. Consequently, we are not adopting a position that leaves anyone out.

Furthermore, we believe that a dialogue should be held by the five Central American countries. However, this dialogue should be based on some kind of agenda so that it proves fruitful. It should be an organized dialogue; we cannot just sit at a table and see what comes out of that meeting.

[Lemus] He also questioned how anyone can demand that El Salvador not be dependent if countries with the potential of Mexico and Venezuela are clearly dependent. Furthermore, if Europe is not entirely free of this scheme, why is Nicaragua praised when it depends to a significant degree of the Soviet Union? At any rate, our situation with the United States is entirely different. He also said that Deputy Communications Minister Roberto Viera's proposal to hold a public debate in Nicaragua was only an unofficial statement, an example, an alternative, and that the government does not have to reconsider anything. RIVERA Y DAMAS CONCLUDES 3-DAY VISIT TO MORAZAN

[Text] Radio Venceremos now brings you a report on Msgr Arturo Rivera y Damas' 3-day visit to the northern area of Morazan Department. On Saturday afternoon Msgr Rivera y Damas concluded his visit to northern Morazan Department in his capacity as mediator in the process of dialogue and talks between the FMLN-FDR and Napoleon Duarte.

Msgr Rivera y Damas remained in this northern area of Morazan Department for 3 days and carried out many activities that included meetings with the residents of various municipalities in the department. Likewise, he was taken in a vehicle to briefly visit San Fernando, where he met with area residents.

Friday morning Msgr Rivera y Damas returned to Perquin where he was received by approximately 400 students of the local school. Later he met with residents of Morazan Department, from whom he received various petitions and testimonies on the situation of the civilians in this area. Later, Msgr Rivera y Damas met with Colonel Omar Napoleon Avalos, who is a prisoner of the FMLN.

On Saturday morning a mass was held in the Perquin public square that was attended by hundreds of residents of the area. The mass was officiated by Msgr Rivera y Damas, by [words indistinct] of San Francisco Gotera, and Father Miguel Ventura, who is conducting religious activities in this eastern part of the country. Later, Msgr Rivera y Damas met with Commanders Roberto Roca and Joaquin Villalobos, members of the FMLN General Command, and discussed the third round of dialogue and negotiations, for which Msgr Rivera y Damas is the mediator.

For 3 days Msgr Rivera y Damas remained in Morazan Department. His activities were all held in a normal manner. In our previous broadcasts, we reported that on Thursday and at noon on Saturday, the Army broke its promise of observing full guarantees so that Msgr Rivera y Damas could conduct his official mission in Morazan. Troops from Military Detachment No 4, commanded by Colonel Vargas, conducted some raids in the area of Meanguera, north of the Torola River. The Army raid in this area included artillery fire. Radio Venceremos reported this action at 1230 today and requested International Red Cross officials and the diplomatic corps urge the Army High Command and the Napoleon Duarte government to pull those troops out of there and stop the artillery fire so Msgr Rivera y Damas could leave [words indistinct] as Msgr Rivera y Damas would have to cross there.

As an interesting footnote to Msgr Rivera y Damas' visit, we would like to report that following this morning's mass at the Perquin plaza, Msgr Rivera y Damas visited a home in town where a woman who went to greet him had just given birth to a baby, who was baptized by Msgr Rivera y Damas. He also baptized many persons at the Perquin church.

On Saturday afternoon Msgr Rivera y Damas boarded his vehicle and left Perquin for San Francisco Gotera, and later for San Salvador. In this manner, he concluded his 3-day visit to the northern area of Morazan Department and his official mission as mediator in the possible third round of (?talks).

This has been a preliminary report by Radio Venceremos for our people on this visit by Msgr Rivera y Damas. We will give more details about this visit in our forthcoming broadcasts.

Briefs Duarte on FMLN Proposal

[Excerpts] San Salvador, 3 Aug (AFP) -- San Salvador Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas met with President Napoleon Duarte today to present a counterproposal from the guerrilla about the third national dialogue. This counterproposal has not been disclosed to the public yet.

Rivera y Damas made a 3-day trip to Perquin and San Fernando, towns in northern Morazan Department, to meet with top FMLN leaders. Upon his return to the capital, the archbishop met with Duarte to inform him of the result of his negotiations, which included long talks with Commanders Joaquin Villalobos and Roberto Roca and a visit to Colonel Omar Avalos, who was kidnapped by the guerrillas in October 1985 [passage omitted]

In principle, on 6 August, Rivera should announce the date and place for the third dialogue between the government and the Salvadoran guerrillas, which theoretically should be held this month, but it is not known if the rebels' counterproposal falls within this schedule. [passage omitted]

PA021424 San Salvador Radio Cadena YSU in Spanish 1800 GMT 1 Aug 86

[By Carlos Mario Marquez]

[Text] Colonel Mauricio Ernesto Vargas, commander of Military Detachment No 4, headquartered in San Francisco Gotera, today reported that the archbishop of San Salvador is in the northern area of Morazan Department.

[Begin recording] [Vargas] I learned that Msgr Rivera y Damas had arrived in the capital of this district. I have no further information on this. I was told that it was a pastoral visit to the capital of this department. I have not been in contact with the archbishop. I was only told that he was here.

In the past 48 hours we have continued with the "Heroes of Joateca" operation. This is a permanent operation and the largest operation under way in the department. It is a protection operation. Yesterday, between 0630 and 0700, a clash with terrorists was reported north of Chilanga, south of Delicias de Yoloaiquin. As a result of the clash, three people were killed and three rifles were recovered.

This morning, between 0100 and 0200, another clash was reported in San Felipe and El Tablon, Sociedad jurisdiction. We have no details on this clash, but we did suffer the loss of three men. We are waiting for a report on this clash.

[Reporter] Do you have reports on casualties among the leftist forces?

[Vargas] The terrorists have suffered four casualties. These casualties were inflicted yesterday. We have no information regarding last night's clash.

[Reporter] Colonel, we have heard that Msgr Rivera y Damas will probably visit Colonel Avalos north of Perquin. Have you suspended military operations in that area because of the archbishop's visit?

[Vargas] The military operations are still going on. We do not have information about this visit to Perquin, but if it should become necessary to halt the operation so as to not endanger the talks, then we are willing to do it. We do not wish to hinder the talks between the two parties regarding Col Avalos.

[Reporter] Colonel, the guerrillas reported yesterday that after Msgr Rivera y Damas crossed the Torola River, your units clashed with a rebel column. Is this true?

[Vargas] As you know, the leftist versions are based on Marxist dialectics and disinformation. From the moment that Msgr Rivera y Damas crossed the river, our units have been on a permanent protection operation; to protect private property against the FMLN social destabilizers. At no moment... [changes thought] it is a way of propaganda to create confusion. They should have said that the clash in the areas of Chilanga and Yoloaiquin that resulted in the deaths of three terrorists and the recovery of three rifles occurred because they had been planning an ambush in that area. That was the road that Msgr Rivera y Damas was going to use. This is what they should be saying, because this is the truth. They should not create confusion for the people, international confusion. With their Marxist dialectics and with their propaganda, they are always trying to take advantage of situations that do not exist. [end recording]

Col Maurico Ernesto Vargas added that the counterinsurgency operation continues in the northern areas of Morazan Department. However, an exception will be made in the area where Msgr Rivera y Damas is visiting.

FMLN CLAIMS 124 ARMY CASUALTIES IN PAST 3 MONTHS

PA011926 (Clandestine) Radio Venceremos in Spanish to El Salvador 0000 GMT 29 Jul 86

[Text] Here we have a report from San Agustin Tres Calles on 3 months of the war of attrition against the criminal troops:

We inflicted 124 casualties on the puppet Army over the past 3 months. This occurred during the second phase of the Army operation in the San Agustin Tres Calles area in Usulutan Department. The FMLN [word indistinct] fighters continue to fight and wear out the demoralized special troops of the Army [words indistinct].

The report notes that we have inflicted 124 casualties on the enemy troops in the San Agustin Tres Calles area over the past 3 months. In July alone we have inflicted 40 casualties on the army [words indistinct] a sergeant and a radio operator. Most of the casualties were inflicted by the people's weapons and the revolutionary mines.

CEREZO VIEWS STRIKES, GAM CHARGES, CONTADORA

PA020157 Guatemala City Cadena de Emisoras Unidas in Spanish 0050 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] During a news conference today at the National Palace, President Vinicio Cerezo told reporters that striking doctors have strayed from the democratic path, because they are striking and not participating in the talks that are called for in this kind of conflict. Cerezo Arevalo invited the doctors to discuss their situation and that of the government to solve the problem. He told reporters that the decision by doctors from national hospitals to stage a general work stoppage beginning next Friday, should they not receive a favorable answer to wage increase demands, is an incorrect position. The doctors' actions will move the government to implement definite and vigorous measures that could lead to hiring other doctors as replacements, Cerezo Arevalo added.

The government today rejected the attitude of national hospital doctors, because it constitutes a kind of blackmail aimed at preventing negotiations in which practical and immediate solutions would abound. The president of the Republic said that although doctors do not belong to a professional field in which great salaries are earned, they do earn good salaries. I will not threaten or punish people because this would create problems and not contribute to the dialogue that the government wants to hold with the doctors.

Naturally however, Vinicio Cerezo said, we would implement measures to benefit the masses that are suffering the effects of the stoppages and that would suffer the feects of a general national hospital strike.

The president of the Republic mentioned the strikes of transporters and doctors at national hospitals as aprt of an effort to destablize the government, however, it is not possible to destablize this government, Vinicio Cerezo said.

He focused his suspicions on the efforts of a political party; namely, the MLN [National Liberation Movement]. The government will try to confirm reports and rumors in this regard.

The government will carry out an in-depth investigation of the charges made by the Mutual Support Group [GAM], in particular by Mrs Nineth de Garcia on alleged abuses of rural families, and the threats, coercion, and other punishable actions that the peasants have been suffering. The government has learned about the most recent charges by Mrs Garcia, whom I respect very much; however, she makes so many accusations each day that they do not seem consistent to the government, President Cerezo said.

Regarding the GAM statements, President Cerezo told reporters that he is surprised that the GAM has said the Guatemalan Army is threatening GAM members and its followers. Cerezo promised to present a detailed report to the GAM on the results of his investigations on the charges. The government's response will be given directly to the representative and leader, Mrs Nineth de Garcia, the president said.

President Vinicio Cerezo said there currently exists an atmosphere of pessimism in the Contadora Group in the area of diplomacy. This is due to several reasons, among them the military aid to the Nicaraguan contras and the arms race that has recently been increased by the Nicaraguan Government, Cerezo added. Moreover, he said, a Central American parliament will be a new resource or initiative to strengthen the Contadora Group in its efforts to achieve the peace and cooperation of the Central American countries.

CEREZO ANNOUNCES WILLINGNESS TO TALK WITH BELIZE

[By Mario Rolando Sierra]

[Text] Guatemala City, 31 Jul (ACAN-EFE) -- President Vinicio Cerezo announced today that Guatemala will hold a direct dialogue with the prime minister of Belize for the first time since the former British colony gained its independence in 1981. In statements made at the Government Palace, Cerezo confirmed that Belizean Prime Minister Manuel Esquivel will arrive in Guatemala sometime in August at the head of a Belizean delegation.

The Guatemalan president said: "We will begin a dialogue and a discussion to seek solutions to the problem, which has two aspects that are very important for us: realism and honor." He added that during this meeting, they will discuss "realism as far as the situation of the (Belizean) people is concerned now, and honor as far as guaranteeing Guatemala's basic rights."

Belize, a territory measuring 22,000 sq km to the west of Guatemala, and which Guatemala claims, declared its independence from the British crown in 1981, but Guatemala has yet to recognize the new nation. Belize has approximately 150,000 inhabitants. Since 1963, Guatemala and Great Britain have not had diplomatic or consular relations in view of this conflict.

According to a recent broadcast by the official Radio Belize, Esquivel plans to request of Cerezo that Guatemala give up its claim to the former British colony and recognize its independence. However, the Christian Democratic leader said that "the Swiss diplomat representing Great Britian's interests in Guatemala will attend the dialogue with the Belizean mission." Cerezo emphasized that "in this manner there will not be a de facto recognition that is taken into consideration in international law."

The president added that "we will try to establish negotiations by means of the dialogue and discussion that will lead us -- the Belizean community and Guatemala -- to an agreement benefiting the region, which is what interests us." Cerezo emphasized that although the new constitution has abolished an article that terms Belize Guatemalan territory, Guatemala remains firm in its claim. The president also pointed out that his government decided to resume consular relations with the United Kingdom on 15 August.

Great Britain and Guatemala concluded an exchange of "notes," and "consular relations will be established, according to a decision that we adopted by sending a draft communique," the Guatemalan Christian Democratic president said. Guatemala accepted the diplomatic rapprochement requested by Great Britain last 8 May because there is a marked interest in receiving the benefits of the EEC, to which the United Kingdom belongs.

CEREZO REITERATES TRUST IN FOREIGN MINISTER

PA020302 Guatemala City Radio Nuevo Mundo in Spanish 1200 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] President Vinicio Cerezo Arevalo has said that Foreign Minister Mario Quinonez Amezquita is not only one of his main assistants, but is among those who have given the least number of problems. Therefore, he said, I see no reason to remove him from his post. This was President Cerezo's reply to those sectors that have been demanding Quinonez' dismissal, accusing him of lacking the ability to handle the country's international relations. As an example, they cited his handling of the vice presidents' meeting, in which the creation of a Central American parliament was to be discussed; however, the meeting could not be held.

FOREIGN MINISTER ON AREA MEETING, U.S. EMBASSY

PA020426 Guatemala City Radio-Television Guatemala in Spanish 0400 GMT 29 Jul 86

[Passages within quotation marks recorded]

[Text] On returning from attending a meeting of Central American foreign ministers in San Salvador, Foreign Minister Mario Quinonez Amezquita said today that Guatemala will not form any bloc to isolate any country of the region.

The San Salvador meeting was held over the weekend behind closed doors and without any access to the press, something that led to reports about the possible organization of a bloc against Nicaragua, whose government was not represented in the talks. Nevertheless, both Salvadoran Foreign Minister Rodolfo Castillo Claramount and Guatemalan Foreign Minister Quinonez Amezquita confirmed that in the ministerial meeting they discussed drafting a joint document on the Central American situation.

[Quinonez Amezquita] "First of all I want to clarify once and for all that Guatemala will not form part of any bloc against any Central American country, whether that country is El Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, or Honduras. Guatemala will not form part of any bloc that seeks to isolate any country. However, this does not mean that Guatemala wants to be isolated from the rest of the Central American countries with which we have historically been united from the time of our independence and even before that. Now then, the basic reason why we went to talk with the Central American foreign ministers was that Guatemala is seeking a way to again promote discussions within Contadora about the problems still pending in the act and because we know that several Central American countries do not accept the latest text of the Contadora act."

The Guatemalan and Salvadoran presidents will meet in early August or possibly even sooner [as heard], the Guatemalan foreign minister said.

[Quinonez Amezquita] "One of the things I discussed with the Salvadoran foreign minister was that the Salvadoran president has invited the Guatemalan president to visit El Salvador, and the Guatemalan president has accepted the invitation. We will be making the visit and the only thing pending is the date. We might make the visit at end of August or at the beginning of September. We are just waiting to see whether the two presidents can change some previous commitments. If they can, then the Guatemalan president can go to El Salvador either at end of this month or early next month."

The foreign minister said that the U.S. Embassy has a right to carry out measures to protect its installations. Guinonez Amezquita was asked about protests by residents of Zone 10 over the barricades established by personnel of that embassy.

[Quinonez Amezquita] "Well, I am unaware of the details of what you are mentioning. When I have the opportunity I will speak with the U.S. ambassador. We will officially ask that he explain through a note what it was they did. Now then, regarding the security measures that the embassy might adopt, it has a right to do so. Otherwise, this would result in a very serious situation. Due to the Vienna Convention, Guatemala has the obligation to provide security to the embassies and not just to the United States. This is established by the Vienna Convention on diplomatic immunities that Guatemala has signed. Therefore, as long as the measures are adopted to safeguard the interests of each embassy and the neighbors and the public order situation are not affected, all the measures will be welcomed. Now then, I have heard that some neighbors have been complaining. They were complaining on last night's newscast. I will ask for a report to see if this is true. However, if the embassy adopts security measures, it has a right to do so. This also helps Guatemala because Guatemala has the obligation to protect the diplomatic missions."

VICE PRESIDENT LEAVES FOR BARCO INAUGURATION

[Text] Guatemala City, 3 Aug (ACAN-EFEO -- Guatemalan Vice President Roberto Carpio Nicole left for Bogota today to attend the inauguration of new Colombian President Virgilio Barco Vargas. Carpio Nicole and Foreign Minister Mario Quinonez Amezquita are members of an official Guatemalan Government delegation to Barco Vargas' inauguration, scheduled for tomorrow, Monday. [as received]

The Foreign Ministry reiterated today that President Vinicio Cerezo was unable to attend "because of prior commitments. However, he would have liked to attend because of the good relations existing between the two peoples and governments."

HELICOPTER REPORTEDLY CARRYING AMERICANS CRASHES

PA222019 Paris AFP in Spanish 1927 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Tegucigalpa, 2 Aug (AFP) -- A helicopter, supposedly of the Nicaraguan contras with two North Americans and four Miskitos aboard, crashed today near Tegucigalpa.

The Blackhawk helicopter, which can carry eight people, fell in a horizontal position on an empty lot near the Toncontin Airport from where the aircraft had taken off seconds earlier on a flight to Mosquitia.

According to the initial reports, a Miskito was gravely injured, but the other crew members were just slightly injured. The wounded were taken to an unidentified Tegucigalpa hospital.

The helicopter, painted with green camouflage paint and white blades, does not have a registration number of the Honduran Air Force, and an investigation agent said that it might belong to the FDN or to the Unity of the Nicaraguan Atlantic Coast Indigenous Peoples (KISAN).

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said that he does not know if the helicopter belongs to the United States, and he added that for the time being he does not have "any information."

On his part, Frank Arana, FDN spokesman in Tegucigalpa, said that his organization does not have helicopters of that type and only has smaller units.

AZCONA COMMENTS ON ECONOMIC CABINET

PA012351 Tegucigalpa Voz de Honduras Network in Spanish 1530 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Telephone interview given by President Jose Azcona to unidentified reporter; place not given -- live]

[Excerpts] [Reporter] Mr President, go ahead. We are listening.

[Azcona] Regarding the devaluation, our policy was defined as soon as we assumed the Presidency of the Republic. As a result of speculation caused by statements by the Congress president, the government issued a categorical statement approximately 10 days ago. In other words, the president does not have to speak on the radio to discuss his policy.

As for the other planning policies, I wish to tell Engineer Flores Facusse [Congress member] that even the COHEP [Honduran Council for Private Enterprise] was consulted on the economic development program. The COHEP and the U.S. Government approved it. We need not consult with the U.S. Government, but this is necessary to fulfill economic aid requirements for our recovery. [passage omitted]

We have serious problems in Honduras. We have an open economy, and problems with the prices of our export products ruin government plans and specific programs. That was the case with coffee. Everyone thought that coffee would solve all of Honduras' problems this year, but instead we faced a rude awakening when the price plummeted from $280 to $160 [unit of measurement not specified] in 1 and 1/2 months. Things like that would immediately change the plans of any government. Our economy is open and frail. That is why planning alone is not enough -- we must also implement daily measures. We need an agile administration, which I think this government is. We are not sluggish. [passage omitted]

Honduras must remain calm. The economic cabinet is handling all aspects of the economy. The president is briefed on a daily basis on the economic situation. After this month we will, for the first time in Honduras, issue a report on the status of the national budget, how much was spent in the past 7 months, how much our revenues were vis-a-vis the budget, the status of fiscal matters, and the balance of payments.

We do have goals and government plans. Of course, they will never satisfy my friend Carlos Flores Facusse [Azcona chuckles] because he did not draft them. Therefore, they would never meet his standards.

I appreciate his respect for me. I also respect him. He is an excellent parliamentarian, an intelligent politician, and a good professional, but that does not give him the right to think that others are not doing things right or that they are incapable. He thrives on criticizing our government's economic cabinet. I believe that the cabinet is made up by capable individuals who can find solutions to Honduran problems.

[Reporter] Mr President, we are really pleased that our station is the means to discuss these problems. The two of you are highly visible persons, especially you, due to your current position. However, the discussion of your differences amid an atmosphere of mutual respect contitutes a great civil lessons for all Hondurans.

Mr President, in the portion of the program during which we receive phone calls, we have noticed great respect and appreciation for you, especially now, early in your term. However, that is not the case with people surrounding you and especially the members of your economic cabinet. From your statements, we get the impression that you claim to have 100-percent support. Expectations of a Cabinet change, especially for those involved in economic matters, seem to be dissipating. Mr President, we would like to hear a confirmation of that. We want to know whether they deserve your full confidence. We want to know if there will be future changes to meet expectations and ease the anxiety regarding economic matters.

Economic cabinet changes in December would serve as the release valve expected by the Honduran people. This would help maintain the support, appreciation, and respect for you and your position. Appropriate changes in the Presidency, Finance, Economy, Health, and Education Ministries, which are the ones receiving the most complaints, would ensure this. This has a bearing on our nation's political and economic life. What can you say about this, Mr President?

[Azcona] Look, people insist on changes. I will tell you one thing: The ministers are working. I do not work alone; I also make others work. They are working, and the team is doing well, there are no problems or clashes. Of course, there are differences, and they are vented in lengthy discussions. I can say that I am not planning to make Cabinet changes in December.

[Reporter] Mr President, the issue is not the respect and the solidarity that you mentioned and that are part of a president's relationship with his Cabinet. At this radio station we have detected a dissatisfaction of the Honduran people with ministers who are not talented and intelligent, which is what is needed to solve Honduran problems.

[Azcona] But why do you say that they lack talent and intelligence?

[Reporter] Well, ah...

[Azcona, interrupting] [Words indistinct] minister who is brilliant and talented. There is no doubt that she is Honduras' most capable woman in the education field. She is working. She has shortcomings; everyone has shortcomings. We will not find ministers without any shortcomings and faults. There is no school where you can learn how to be a minister. They have university degrees, but I do not know of any school offering a master's degree in becoming a minister.

[Reporter] Mr President, what about the deputy education minister who admitted on our program to being a goldbrick?

[Azcona] The deputy education minister had a lapse; a dumb mental lapse, if you will. He is an economist who wanted to be facetious by saying that he seldom goes to his office. However, there have been important Honduran politicians who earned salaries at the Central District's Metropolitan Council without even having an office there. That official does have an officer there and works there. Perhaps what he meant is that he has been too active in politics and has not complied with his 8-hour workday. I would not blame him, but rather his boss for permitting this. I will not allow that in my government. People must work at least 8 hours in my government. There are ministers who work 12-14 hours. When there are meetings they work nonstop for 16-18 hours. You can be completely sure that I will not allow goldbricks in my government, much less in top positions. In sum, too much emphasis has been placed on those issues that are really not as important as some people think.

JUSTICE MINISTER ON NICARAGUAN ICJ SUIT

PA021730 Tegucigalpa EL HERALDO in Spanish 30 Jul 86 p 3

[Text] Government and Justice Minister Raul Elvir Colindres has said that by filing a suit against Honduras at the International Court of Justice [ICJ] in The Hague, Nicaragua is seeking to internationally discredit Honduras. He added that this action "is just propaganda for the current Nicaraguan regime, which is trying to resolve its domestic problems this way."

The Honduran official said that the Sandinist government should summon the dissidents as is customary in these cases to resolve its domestic problems, since by accusing Honduras it is only worsening the situation.

Elvir Colindres said that as long as the Nicaraguan problem continues, we must continue enduring the Nicaraguan's "flight" into our country, since it has been proven that the Catholic Church and the people are being persecuted as can be seen with the closing of the newspaper LA PRENSA.

Regarding the fact that Honduras will have to face two suits in the ICJ, one filed by the El Salvador Government and the other by the Nicaraguan Government, the official remarked that these suits will have to be treated separately because they involve two different problems.

Afterward, he noted that it is highly unlikely that the two suits will be handled at the same time because one must ask for a hearing on each problem.

NICARAGUA

ORTEGA HOLDS NEWS CONFERENCE AFTER U.S. TRIP

PA040257 Managua Domestic Service in Spanish 0141 GMT 4 Aug 86

[News conference given by President Daniel Ortega at the offices of BARRICADA newspaper in Managua on 3 August -- live or recorded]

[Text] [Ortega] We saw how BARRICADA's machinery works; we have seen it in operation. Well, I first wanted to greet the Nicaraguan people upon our return from the United Nations and a brief but thorough tour of some cities in the United States. Our basic goal on this occasion was to bring Nicaragua's message to the UN Security Council and to seek a resolution.

We think that the results, the efforts in support of international legal norms and in favor of respect for the laws attained positive results, and this was proved by the votes cast at the Security Council and the unanimity that prevailed at the United Nations about the clear, serene, and constructive manner in which Nicaragua's statement was presented.

Following our activities at the United Nations, which -- as we said -- were our main goal, we received some invitations, and we had the opportunity to hold a number of meetings right there in New York with church groups; editorial councils from the most important U.S. news media -- newspapers, magazines, and television stations -- and solidarity groups. We also received an invitation from the solidarity group in Denver, and we also had the opportunity to meet with the National Bar Association, which is mainly comprised of black lawyers, because the association was formed at a time when there was discrimination in the United States, and the black lawyers were forced to form their own group.

The meeting in Denver, Colorado, was very important, given that National Guard has departed from there -- under the people's protests -- for Honduras, where they have been participating in all the military plans the United States has been carrying out against Nicaragua. Likewise, a zone exists where the FDN mercenary troops are trained; this is well known and has been reported on many occasions.

While in Denver we met with the Bar Association, and we learned about a resolution issued by the association, supporting the ruling issued by the International Court of Justice and demanding that the U.S. Government abide by that ruling. We had the opportunity to address the lawyers there and, of course, to exchange viewpoints with them. We also had the opportunity to clarify certain things that are viewed differently from abroad because they have been manipulated by the campaigns of news media which want to damage our country's image and create confusion.

We also had the opportunity to hold a very confrontational meeting at the University of Colorado at Denver -- where the premises were filled to overflowing -- because there was a minority group present of U.S. citizens who support the U.S. Administration's policy, while the great majority of those attending the meeting were against the U.S. Administration's policy. FDN members also attended; the Nicaraguans who act as instruments of the aggression. Many of them are former Somozists who fled after the victory of the revolution. They all participated in what could be described as a very lively "Face the People." Different viewpoints were discussed there, of course; some were totally opposed to others. We had the opportunity to defend the just positions of the Nicaraguan revolution.

However, the most interesting of all the meetings I held with the U.S. people was held right there in Denver, precisely because these FDN groups were there, along with U.S. groups that have fundamentalist positions against the Nicaraguan revolution and support the U.S. Administration's policy against Nicaragua. This was a minority group, to be honest -- some 30 to 40 persons, adding together the Americans and the FDN members who attended the event -- and following a strong, clear, very strong exchange with the FDN members -- who mostly issued insults, instead of statements -- I asked all those gathered there which of them oppose the U.S. invasion of Nicaragua.

I explained to them that there has been a tendency toward a direct involvement of U.S. troops in Nicaragua and an (?escalation) of the conflict since the $100 million was approved. Then I asked who of those gathered there oppose this invasion. The majority of those present raised their hands. At my next question -- who favors this invasion? -- I expected the FDN members and the U.S. people who have assumed a violent stance against the revolution to raise their hands.

I made my calculations and estimated that if the majority of those present raised their hands against the invasion, perhaps 30 or 40 would raise their hands in favor of the invasion. But when I asked who agrees with an invasion, a surprising thing occurred: Nobody raised his hand. Everybody looked to see who would raise his hand, but no one did.

I feel this was the most important event of that meeting with the U.S. people, which included various Hispanic community members, FDN members, and those Americans who advocate fundamentalist, black and white solutions. It is interesting to note that an agreement occurred there. Although our stances were even antagonistic, when we mentioned the invasion a convergence occurred. Nobody agreed with an invasion against Nicaragua. The FDN people dared not raise their hands. [Words indistinct] they dared not because this would irritate the U.S. people. According to the latest survey in the United States, a majority of the people oppose the current U.S. Administration's policy toward Central America. I was really impressed by this fact, namely that, despite the great conflicts, we share a common view: We oppose an intervention by U.S. troops in Nicaragua. We all must prevent this.

This was recorded by television stations. [Words indistinct] will be broadcast over the television due to the strong verbal confrontation and the insults voiced by the FDN people. We tried to answer in the context of what the experience of the "Face the People" programs have taught us.

Then we moved on to Chicago. (?Some days prior to that), we had been visited in New York by the Reverend Jesse Jackson, who had invited me to visit Chicago. An important meeting was held there. I share the moral struggle promoted by the Reverend Jackson against apartheid, drugs, injustice, and aggression in Central America. So we moved to Chicago. Ours was a very exceptional meeting there, including songs, music, and the Christian spirit of those gathered there. Solidarity with the Nicaraguan people was again expressed during this meeting. [Words indistinct] this tour with what is known as the Chicago proposal. We mentioned the eight points that have already been reported here. It is now up to the parties involved to respond to this proposal made by Nicaragua. This is a constructive initiative. This is an initiative for peace, as are all the initiatives that Nicaragua has presented during all these years. In other words, we went to the United States with a constructive stance to try to make the United States understand that a negotiated solution is necessary. [1-minute break in reception]

We can say that this trip to the United Nations and the tour through U.S. cities -- such as New York, Denver, Colorado, and Chicago -- has been very positive because we have had the opportunity to have direct contact with the U.S. people. In Denver, the lawyers issued a statement demanding that the U.S. Government abide by the decision of the The Hague International Court of Justice. This was unanimously approved by the lawyers during their meeting.

I noticed a very interesting occurrence for the first time. I have visited New York and the United Nations practically every year. At one time, I toured (?several) U.S. cities. In general, I have observed the U.S. people's sympathy during the events organized by those who identify with us, namely, religious and intellectual people, etc. In the streets, however, I have always observed hostility or indifference. For instance, if we attended a meeting of the editorial staff of a newspaper, the police would stop the pedestrian traffic for security reasons. The people would stay and look on, but they made no comments. This was our past experience. Now, we have experienced an entirely different situation. Wherever we arrived, both the people who identify with us and those who are not ideologically identified with the Nicaraguan revolution openly expressed their sympathy toward Nicaragua. We are really impressed by this.

In New York, wherever we visited, when we walked through the streets, the people greeted us and expressed love for Nicaragua by saying: We are friends of Nicaragua, we want to be friends of Nicaragua. This was the kind of greeting that the U.S. people repeated often.

I cannot tell you how many people greeted us while we were there or how many signs of affection we received, because these were daily occurrences. I can, however, tell you the number of hostile attitudes we encountered. I would say there were approximately four to six people in New York who expressed hostility and voiced insults. They stood in contrast to the feelings of the majority, which expressed affection toward Nicaragua and which was also concerned over the [word indistinct] and risk of becoming directly involved in a war that would lead to the deaths of Americans in Nicaragua. This attitude was repeated in Denver and Chicago, because besides our activities, we walked the streets, and this is where we found the affection of the American people. People in cars would stop to greet us, to [word indistinct] Nicaragua, to identify with Nicaragua. For us it was new to see the ordinary American citizens expressing themselves in favor of Nicaragua, sympathizing with Nicaragua.

It is undeniable that there are very controversial topics in the U.S. press, such as the LA PRENSA case, the Bishop Vega case, which are among the most debated issues. [Passage indistinct] an issue the American people are interested in, and Reverend Jesse Jackson made the following point: We are looking at the situation through a single lens. At this time we are stressing one issue and forgetting about the other issues. We are looking at one issue, through one lens; it is the issue of South Africa. This is correct and fair, but we cannot forget that only a few kilometers from here there are already 100,000 victims; 60,000 in El Salvador and more than 30,000 in Nicaragua. Therefore, we must look at the situation through bifocals. We must look at South Africa, and we must look at Central America.

We feel that Reverend Jackson's call is very important because we must struggle for the South African people's liberation, but we must also avoid a new Vietnam in Central America, which is what the current U.S. Government policy is leading up to.

We took advantage of the occasion to acknowledge the gesture made by the U.S. Government and President Reagan in not imposing any restrictions whatsoever on us. We thanked him for this. [Words indistinct] this program did not exist for Denver or for Chicago. [Passage indistinct] along the way we visited these other cities, and there were no restrictions. While there, we met with the people and discussed various subjects with them. We consider this a positive gesture on the part of the U.S. Government and President Reagan for this. We also invited him to Nicaragua and told him that while here he would also be allowed to meet with all of the sectors he cared to meet with, to talk with the Nicaraguan people, and to find out about Nicaragua's reality.

Some sectors emphasized that we were using the U.S. media with a certain freedom. I explained that the meetings we held were very important, [words indistinct] the liberty to report on them. However, the reports published depended on the journalists. [Words indistinct] if President Reagan accepts our invitation to come to Nicaragua, he would have one advantage over our situation during our visit to the United States, because in Nicaragua he would have a direct broadcast of his talks with the people on television and radio. This would be broadcast much faster than reports come to Nicaragua when I hold meetings in the United States. Nevertheless, during the days that we were there, there was a great deal of coverage of the debates, of the topics discussed at the meetings. The American television networks and radio stations offered good coverage, and we must admit this.

[Reporter] Could you explain to the people what happened at the UN Security Council? The United States [words indistinct] resolution to explain what step would be adopted? Could you explain?

[Ortega] That is a juridical and moral battle. The fact that the United States cast a veto, exposes the government before the international opinion, and before its own people, because it is rejecting an international court. However, the United States has not officially rejected the International Court of Justice [ICJ] decision. This is why we did not make any demands. We supported the court's decision. This will serve as a base if we should again appeal to the Security Council or to the General Assembly, which is the highest UN body to discuss this type of situation.

HELICOPTER CRASH REPORTEDLY INJURES 3 U.S. SOLDIERS

[Text] [Reporter] We have established contact with Tegucigalpa, Honduras, to provide information about a helicopter that, according to initial reports, has crashed in the Miraflores neighborhood of Tegucigalpa. We have Antonia Martinez, information chief of the newspaper LA TRIBUNA of Honduras, who will tell us where and when the helicopter crashed and how many casualties it caused. Go ahead, Companera Antonia Martinez in Tegucigalpa:

[Begin relay] [Martinez] It was about 0800 when the helicopter had the accident [words indistinct] the rains.

[Reporter] Does the helicopter belong to the Honduran Army or to another organization, or does it belong to another government?

[Martinez] It is of the United States, of (?Big Pine) [words indistinct].

[Reporter] Did it fall on some house?

[Martinez] It fell on a field [words indistinct].

[Reporter] How many soldiers were injured?

[Martinez] Three.

[Reporter] Are they Hondurans? What nationality were the soldiers in the helicopter?

[Martinez] They were foreigners.

[Reporter] Were they Latin American? Brown, white, maybe you know something about that?

[Martinez] They were [words indistinct].

[Reporter] At what time was it? Repeat the hour.

[Martinez] At (?0800).

[Reporter] At 0800. Well, companera, what type of injuries were there, and what is the condition of the helicopter?

[Martinez] The helicopter supposedly suffered a mechanical malfunction. One of the passengers had the right arm injured. Another suffered fractures in the left leg and the back. The other [words indistinct].

[Reporter] In what mission of the "Big Pine" maneuvers were these U.S. soldiers who were aboard this helicopter, which is not Honduran?

[Martinez] It is said that the helicopter was coming from San Pedro to Tegucigalpa.

[Reporter] Were they carrying some type of weapons? What were they carrying?

[Martinez] (?It was a) routine operation.

[Reporter] Is the helicopter big or small?

[Martinez] It is small.

[Reporter] In what hospital are those North Americans?

[Martinez] They were taken to the Escuela Hospital.

[Reporter] Do you have the names of the North Americans involved in the accident?

[Martinez] No, we do not.

[Reporter] Well, can we get in touch with you again? What does the government say? Is there any official communique?

[Martinez] No, not yet.

[Reporter] Haven't they announced any official communique?

[Martinez] Net yet. [end relay]

[Reporter] This has been a quick and brief report by Voz de Nicaragua in a direct contact with Tegucigalpa regarding a U.S. Air Force helicopter that crashed near or in Miraflores neighborhood in Tegucigalpa, Honduras. We will continue to give further details about this aircraft accident in the Honduran capital, about the U.S. Air Force helicopter accident that injured three people who were hospitalized in the Escuela Hospital in Tegucigalpa.

TORRES: MARINES TO 'HANG' IF U.S. INVADES

PA012310 Managua Radio Sandino in Spanish 0000 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] There will not be enough trees in Nicaragua from which to hang any Marines [preceding word in English] who dare to invade us, Brigade Commander Hugo Torres, chief of the EPS Political Directorate, said today in Apanas, Region 6, where he presided over a ceremony to demobilize youths of the Julio Buitrago unit.

In addressing the recently demobilized troops, who served in various Battalions for Unconventional Warfare, BLI's, Commander Torres discussed the crushing defeat that the counterrevolution is sustaining on all fronts.

[Begin Torres recording] The Yankees still do not understand why we are so proud. The Yankees still do not understand why we are willing to sell our lives at a very high price when it comes to defending our country and revolution. The Yankees will come if, defying the International Court of Justice's ruling, the UN Securiy Council, nonaligned countries in Latin America and Europe, and the sensible peoples and governments of the world, they decide to launch their invasion. They will still not understand when their Marines begin to fall; or perhaps they will understand after it is too late and after having to pay a high price politically, morally, and in terms of human lives.

There will not be enough trees or lampposts in Nicaragua from which to hang the Marines if they dare enter our country. [end recording]

CUADRA SAYS CONTRAS 'STRATEGICALLY DEFEATED'

PA030430 Managua Radio Sandino in Spanish 1930 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Deputy Defense Minister Joaquin Cuadra Lacayo has said that the counterrevolution is strategically and irreversibly defeated due to the strengthening of the people's revolution and the EPS actions. He added that not only has the enemy been unable to develop offensive plans in the countryside, but it has also been unable to recover from the blows it has received or to stop its disadvantageous withdrawl to more inhospitable regions.

The chief of the EPS High Command appeared on television and said that during the first 6 months of this year 2,745 counterrevolutionaries were killed in fighting, and 300 were captured. Cuadra Lacayo said that since they have lost to a great extent their social base because of these casualties, they were only able to replace 251 men, many of them recruited by force after violent kidnappings. Commander Cuadra Lacayo commented that in view of this circumstance, the U.S. Congress decision to grant another $110 million to the contras means a greater commitment by Washington in the aggression against Nicaragua. Undoubtedly, he said, the counterrevolution will now have new weapons and military communications equipment, but nothing will stop their defeat.

USSR DONATES LARGE QUANTITY OF WHEAT, RICE

PA021949 Managua Radio Sandino in Spanish 1200 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Large food donations are coming from the Soviet Union to support Nicaragua in view of the crisis of the lack of staple products such as rice and wheat. The Soviet Union Government donated 1.1 million quintals of wheat and over 500,000 quintals of rice. (Yuriy Rosentov), charge d'affaires of the Soviet Embassy in Managua, said that the USSR workers made this effort so that Nicaraguan workers will not go without staple products, although there is a war raging in this country's most productive zones.

For that reason, since May Soviet vessels have often been seen entering our Pacific coast to unload foodstuffs and agricultural machinery, which serve to reinforce our economy's primary activity.

AMBASSADORS TO BRASILIA, HAVANA APPROVED

PA030439 Havana International Service in Spanish 2300 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] The Brazilian Government has confirmed its approval of the appointment of Jorge Bolanos, Cuban deputy foreign minister, as the new Cuban ambassador to Brazil. At the same time, the Brazilian Foreign Ministry has reported that Cuba has approved the appointment of Italo Zappa as new Brazilian ambassador to Cuba.

Zappa, current Brazilian ambassador to the PRC, has been described as the architect of Brazil's policy of friendship with Portuguese-speaking African countries. He is also one of the most prominent Brazilian diplomats. Cuba and Brazil renewed their diplomatic relations in June. These relations had been broken off in 1964 by the military regime that overthrew President Joao Guoulart.

RODRIGUEZ MEETS WITH FRG GREEN PARTY DELEGATION

FL011336 Havana Radio Progreso Network in Spanish 1100 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Carlos Rafael Rodriguez, Politburo member and Vice President of the Councils of State and Ministers, has received a delegation from the FRG Green Party composed of Mrs Jutta Ditfurth, party president, and Mr (Manfred Chiaerans).

The meeting was held in a fraternal atmosphere. Subjects related to politics in Latin America, problems caused by the foreign debt, and the Green Party's struggles in the FRG were discussed.

MORE ON NEW SATELLITE TELEVISION TRANSMISSIONS

PA020415 Havana International Service in Spanish 2300 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Report by Ezequiel Perez Martin]

[Text] Cuban television has begun to transmit via satellite. Since 26 July at 1800, on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, Cuba has been transmitting its best movies and television programs in the fields of culture, sports, and news. Recently Danilo Cirio, director of the new Cuban television channel, discussed this new undertaking aimed at guaranteeing better quality transmissions. This is possible thanks to an agreement with the Intersputnik International System. Cuba is a member of this system.

[Begin Cirio recording] In this early phase, and through late December, we will transmit only on weekends. We will transmit on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday beginning at 1800. When the time changes we will transmit at 1700 instead of 1800. We change because GMT does not. Thus, we will change our transmitting times. So instead of transmitting at 1800 we will transmit at 1700. We will be on the air for no less than 3 hours. The channel may be able to transmit a little over 3 hours, but in this early phase it will be approximately 3 hours. [end recording]

The new Cuban television signal can be picked up along the North American Atlantic coast, in Central and South America, and in Mexico -- especially on the eastern coast -- and it will also be picked up in Europe and Africa.

In the beginning the channel will transmit 3 hours a day on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. In a few months this will change.

[Begin Cirio recording] Next year, beginning in January, we will expand our hours of transmission. Little by little we will expand until we are transmitting every day of the week. This will be done slowly. We will expand until we are transmitting 8 hours a day. [end recording]

Other than improving the quality of Cuban television -- the reason Cuba took this important step -- we now have the opportunity to reach Cuban internationalists, students, and diplomats abroad, and they will have the opportunity to enjoy the best programs of the two Cuban television channels. This new channel's programs will be based on a selection of the best of Cuba's national production. This will also allow all of Cuba's friends abroad and those interested in viewing our programs to tune in. The channel transmits on 3.775 ghz, video channel, and 7.5 mhz for audio. To tune in you will need a satellite receiver with variable audio tuning.

FOREIGN SECRETARIAT DENIES LIBYAN CONNECTION

FL021328 Santo Domingo Radio Antillas Network in Spanish 1000 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] The Dominican Republic has no diplomatic representatives to the Libyan Government. The clarification was made in response to a U.S. Department of State report which indicated that Libya was supplying financial aid to Dominican guerrilla groups through its diplomatic delegations. (?This) week the Protocol Department of the Foreign Secretariat reported that General [as heard] Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi has no Libyan representatives in the Dominican Republic.

In a press release yesterday, the Dominican Republic was listed as 1 of 32 countries where Libya has trained or armed guerrilla groups or used diplomatic delegations to spread its influence. The Foreign Secretariat's statement denies the U.S. accusaiton that there are Libyan representatives in the country.

The press release issued in Washington accused Libya of using religious (?and Islamic) temples as fronts to hide its ties with guerrillas.

JORGE NAMES DELEGATION FOR BARCO INAUGURATION

PA021416 Hamburg DPA in Spanish 0237 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Santo Domingo, 21 Jul (DPA) -- Manuel Beres Chupani, president of the Supreme Court of Justice, will head the Dominican delegation attending the inauguration of the new Colombian president, Virgilio Barco Vargas.

The other members of the delegation will be Homero Hernandez Almanzar, deputy foreign minister, and Rafael Valera Benitez, ambassador extraordinaire and plenipotentiary to Colombia.

President Salvador Jorge Blanco announced the appointment of the delegation in an executive decree. Barco Vargas will be sworn in on 19 August [date as received], 3 days after Dominican President-elect Joaquin Balaguer assumes power.

It has been announced that the various events on the occasion of Balaguer's swearing in will begin on 14 August and end on 17 August.

BARBADOS

GUATEMALAN AMBASSADOR CONCLUDES TRADE TALKS

FL011633 Bridgetown CANA in English 1527 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Bridgetown, Barbados, July 31, CANA -- Guatemala and Barbados rounded off three days of talks here today, designed to explore possibilities of commerical and diplomatic relations.

Guatemalan ambassador to Venezuela, Miriam Cabrera Passarelli, left for Caracas today after talks with Foreign Minister J Cameron Tudo about the prospects for such ties.

Ms. Cabrera Passarelli said afterwards no final agreement had been reached, and that her exploratory talks will be followed up in Guatemala City in September when Senator Tudor leads the Barbados delegation to the Organisation of American States (OAS) General Assembly being held there.

The Guatemalan envoy disclosed that Caribbean Air Cargo (Caricargo) and Guatemala's national airline Aviateca, have begun discussions about possible collaboration. We are interested in opening commerical relations. Caricargo company is having contacts with Aviateca...so they can get together covering North America, South America and the Caribbean, she said.

Caricargo is an all-cargo airline company, owned jointly by Barbados and Trinidad and Tobago. The airline operates long-haul Boeing 707 jets between points in the Caribbean and U.S. cities, including Miami. Caricargo also operates smaller aircraft in its services to the neighbouring islands of the area.

Ms Cabrera Passarelli described her visit to Barbados as purely exploratory. I came just to make an approach...to open relations with Barbados. We are interested in commerical relations. She said no firm agreements were reached, but Barbados can recognise Guatemala's interest in opening relations both with Barbados and other countries of the caribbean region. She indicated this was one of the results of the changeover to civil, democratic rule in Guatemala earlier this year, after nearly 30 years of military rule.

...Now that we have a democratic, popular government...the elections were clean...we are now open to the world, Ms Cabrera Passareilli added.

GRENADA

CUBAN-TRAINED PROFESSIONALS RETURN TO SERVE

FL011641 Bridgetown CANA in English 1515 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Bridgetown, Barbados, July 31, CANA -- The first batch of Grenadians, who went to Cuba to be trained as doctors, has returned home after studying in Havana for the past seven years.

Ten of the medics, among them Bowen Louison, younger brother of former People's Revolutionary Government [PRG] agriculture minister George Louison, passed through Barbados yesterday when they arrived here on the fortnightly Cubana Airlines flight to the Caribbean.

Mr Bowen told CANA that we are all anxious about going back home and to be of service to our country. We are grateful to the government and people of Cuba for their assistance in making it possible for us to be professionally qualified in various fields of study...

Altogether, some forty Grenadians, including the ten doctors, graduated last month in various disciplines and they should all be back home, according to Louison, within the next two weeks.

Among the graduates are three dentists, civil and industrial engineers, and a veterinary surgeon.

This most recent batch of Grenadians to have graduated in Cuba, were among the early students sent by the then PRG of Prime Minister Maurice Bishop to Cuban universities and medium-level institutions.

Following the election in December 1984 of the new national party government of Prime Minister Herbert Blaize, a decision was taken to approach the university of West Indies (UWI) for an evaluation and ratification of the syllabuses of the Grenadians who studied in Cuba and who wished to be employed at home.

The UWI has since informed the Blaize government of its evaluation, concluding that the degree courses offered by Cuban universities were even more intensive than courses offered by the UWI.

The UWI's report also commended the medium level courses and, in a general observation, said that the Cuban universities are highly admissable, both by North American and European universities...

Mr Bowen said that in view of the need for skilled Grenadians in Grenada, he and his colleagues were hoping that with the clearance from the UWI, there will be no obstacles placed in our way by the Grenada Government to be usefully employed in our own country.

JAMAICA

MANLEY TAKES MEASURES TO AVOID VIOLENCE

FL011624 Bridgetown CANA in English 1559 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Kingston, Jamaica, August 1, CANA -- Leader of Jamaica's main opposition People's National Party, Michael Manley, has ordered a cancellation of victory celebrations in a bid to put the lid on scattered political violence which followed the PNP's landslide win in Tuesday's municipal elections.

He also announced postponement of a strategy session planned for today involving elected councillors and senior party officials so that local party officials could remain in their ridings and encourage supporters to avoid political conflict.

Both Manley and Prime Minister Edward Seaga have made national appeals for peace and said reports of violence were hurting the country's image abroad.

I ...call on Jamaicans to put aside all divisive thoughts and provocative action, Seaga said in a television broadcast last night.

Earlier, Manley had called on Jamaicans to accept victory with humility and accept defeat with grace.

Police said there were no reports of disturbances today. However, they reported that at least four persons had died in the sporadic violence that broke out during Tuesday's elections.

At least six persons were injured by gunshots.

Six houses were burnt in the south central parish of Clarendon and in St Catherine, west of the capital, where there were disturbances yesterday.

Police said in the St Catherine capital, Spanish Town, a woman, branded a PNP supporter, was taken from her home, stoned to death and her house burnt.

There were also skirmishes between rival factions and a number of families were reported to have moved on the threat of being burnt out.

Police said up to last night, 38 persons had been detained and a number of others arrested since Tuesday in connection with the disturbances, confined mainly to a few historically polarised and volatile communities.

Tuesday's poll fanned passions unusual for a municipal election because it spanned national issues.

The PNP turned the poll into a referendum on the Seaga government which has held power since 1980, implementing International Monetary Fund-inspired austerity programmes.

In a news broadcast last night, Seaga warned that the government would not hesitate to take all the necessary steps within the law to maintain peace and order.

Both he and Manley stressed the economic damage that could be done to Jamaica by violence.

This can only hurt our tourist industry and frighten new investors, Manley declared.

The PNP is estimated to have won 57 per cent of the 60 per cent voter turnout and appeared set to control at least 11 of the 13 local government authorities.

BOUTERSE DISCLOSES FOILED 'INVASION' PLAN

PA011631 Paris AFP in Spanish 2330 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] Paramaribo, Suriname, 31 Jul (AFP) -- Surinamese chief of state Desi Bouterse today disclosed the details of an invasion plan against Suriname which was prepared "by foreign forces." The plan was thwarted with the detention of 14 mercenaries who were leaving the United States.

Bouterse analyzed the current political situation before the 25 February Movement, which under his leadership seized power on that date in 1980 by overthrowing the government of Henck Arron.

Bouterse, who 2 weeks ago began a period of democratic transition with the appointment of an executive Cabinet made up of civilians from political parties, unions, and the business sector, said that the invasion plan began with an attack on the Albina military camp located on the border with French Guyana.

The FBI arrested 14 mercenaries in New Orleans who were en route to Suriname to overthrow the government.

Bouterse said that according to the initial plan, the mercenaries were to arrive at the Zanderij International Airport on 21 July, meanwhile an attack would be staged at the Albina military camp to distract the Armed Forces' attention.

According to the official sources, the mercenaries were not going to arrive in Suriname as an armed group. They would pretend to be businessmen who would sign a $300-million loan previously agreed to with Finance Minister Wim Udenhout and other senior officials. The contract was to be signed by Tom Lynn Denley (arrested in the United States under charges of trying to overthrow a foreign government by force) and by Bouterse in the Presidential Palace.

However, Bouterse decided that the contract would be signed on 28 July and not 21 July as orignally planned.

Bouterse said that those who tried to occupy the Albina camp would try to declare the district of Marowijne a "liberated territory," with its own flag. He said that Albina airport would be used as an airbridge by the invaders, who according to a communique issued by Brunswijk and broadcast on television, are struggling "against Bouterse's criminal regime."

Bouterse added that this invasion system is always used against the countries that experience a revolutionary process. In addition, he mentioned the role played by the Netherlands Embassy in helping Brunswijk escape to the Netherlands Antilles last June. He added that the explusion of Netherlands journalist Erick Klipp on 8 July should also be considered in that sense.

According to the investigations, Klipp got a false passport for Brunswijk, with which he was able to escape to the Netherlands Antilles. He was then expelled by the government to French Guyana, from where he began an attack against the Albina camp.

[Text] Caracas, 31 Jul (AFP) -- Ten Latin American governments today created in Caracas a Committee of Action for Latin American Cooperation and Coordination in Computer Science and Electronics (Comite de Accion Para la Cooperation y Concertacion Latinoamericana en Informatica y Electronica -- Caciel]. The group's headquarters will initially be in Lima.

The committee was created under the auspices of SELA, which organized three meetings this year attended by experts or government representatives to evaluate the needs and hopes of the region in computer science and electronics.

The following countries are in Caciel: Argentina, Brazil, Costa Rica, Chile, Mexico, Nicaragua, Peru, the Dominican Republic, Uruguay, and Venezuela. The remaining 15 members of SELA may join the committee when they so desire.

CHRISTIAN DEMOCRATS MEET ON DEMOCRATIZATION

[Text] Montevideo, 31 Jul (EFE) -- A meeting of South American Christian Democratic parties which started tonight in Uruguay is studying the democratization processes in the region and their participation in these processes.

The meeting, which ispresided over by former Chilean Senator Renan Fuentealba and Hilarion Cardozo, the current vice president of the Venezuelan Senate, opened with a protocol ceremony at the Montevideo Parque Hotel. Present at the meeting were representatives from Argentina, Bolivia, Ecuador, Chile, Paraguay, Venezuela, and Uruguay.

During the seminar they will discuss the democratization processes of several countries in South America, and the various party leaders will submit reports. The Christian Democrats will also study the consolidation of representative systems and social changes in the region.

Those attending the meeting, which will close on 2 August, held a meeting today with Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti, with whom they talked about democratic transitions and the Uruguayan democratization process. After the meeting with Sanguinetti, Fuentealba held a press conference during which he criticized the government of General Augusto Pinochet and said that "the Chilean regime is constantly changing and is becoming increasingly personalized toward the dictator."

GOVERNMENT SCORES U.S. SUBSIDIZED GRAIN SALES

PY050242 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish 0028 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 4 Aug (TELAM) -- The Economy Ministry today condemned the sale of U.S. cereal grains at subsidized prices and charged that this unfair competition violates, if not the letter then the spirit of, the international trade system and the principle of economic coexistence among nations.

In a note released tonight at the Finance Palace, the Economy Ministry calls on developed countries to act responsibly and warns them of the consequences that the lack of income for agricultural countries, caused by this decision, will have on the foreign debt issue.

Herewith the statement:

We have time and again said that in conducting economic affairs the developed countries must act as responsibly as we the developing debtor countries, and especially our country, have acted. All our efforts to balance our domestic and foreign accounts will be to no avail if the prices of our export products continue to decline. Should this problem persist, it will be necessary to find solutions that are even more advantageous to the debtor countries than those granted to them thus far regarding payment of their foreign debt. Furthermore, one perceives a serious injustice when these price drops, as in the case of cereal grains, are not prompted by the normal play of the market forces, but by the deliberate initiatives of some governments.

The United States has decided to extend its system of subsidized grain exports to its sales to the Soviet Union, India, and China. The effects of mechanisms instituted by the most prosperous countries to promote their foreign sales are thus being expanded to the detriment of others, especially those like Argentina and other cereal grain-producing countries that lack the resources, that is, the billions of dollars that are spent on this type of unfair competition. This unfair competition violates, if not the letter, then the spirit of the international trade system and the principle of economic coexistence among nations.

We reiterate our concern about those conflictive ways of addressing international trade matters, which can only worsen the crisis, and we propose that the most adequate policies be coordinated in the appropriate forums to ensure steady economic growth for developing and developed countries and an equitable international distribution of the cost of the international economic adjustment.

GOVERNMENT SENDS NOTE TO EEC ON FALKLANDS

[Text] Buenos Aires, 4 Aug (TELAM) -- The Argentine mission accredited to the EEC has reasserted Argentina's sovereignty rights over the Malvinas Islands following a resolution by the EC Council of Ministers granting financial assistance to these islands, which are described in the resolution as overseas territories of an EEC member country.

According to Foreign Ministry sources, the Argentine mission sent a note to the EEC citing UN General Assembly resolutions recognizing that there is a sovereignty dispute over the Malvinas, including Resolution 31/49, which recommended that the Governments of Argentina and Great Britain refrain from making unilateral changes in the disputed zone.

FRG MINISTER KIECHLE ARRIVES FOR VISIT

PY042233 Buenos Aires DYN in Spanish 2228 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Excerpt] Buenos Aires, 2 Aug (DYN) — FRG Minister for Food, Agriculture and Forestry Ignaz Kiechle today arrived in Argentina for an 8-day visit during which he will participate in the opening of the rural show and will meet with high-ranking government officials and leaders of rural organizations.

The FRG minister arrived at the Aeroparque Metropolitan Airport this afternoon and was welcomed by the FRG ambassador to Argentina, Hans Werner von Finckenstein.

During his visit Kiechle will pay a courtesy visit to President Raul Alfonsin and will hold talks with Economy Minister Juan Sourrouille; Secretary for Livestock, Agriculture and Fishing Lucio Reca; and members of congressional committees on agriculture.

The FRG minister will also hold talks with Argentine Rural Society President Guillermo Alchouron and with the leaders of other rural organizations in order to discuss issues of interest.

Kiechle's agenda includes visits to meatpacking plants, port facilities, the Liniers cattle market, and the grain board, and meetings with executives of German corporations operating in Argentina. [passage omitted]

CIRO HUMBOLDT BARRERO ELECTED SENATE PRESIDENT

PY050144 La Paz Cadena Panamericana in Spanish 0000 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Excerpt] Ciro Humboldt Barrero has been elected president of the Senate. There were no problems in the election of Humboldt, because he had the unanimous support of all members of the political parties that were elected in the 1985 elections. Thus, the MNR [Nationalist Revolutionary Movement] now assumes responsibility for running the Senate. [passage omitted]

INTERIOR MINISTRY REPORTS JOINT ANTIDRUG DRIVE

PY311620 La Paz La Red Panamericana in Spanish 1130 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] The Public Relations Department of the Interior Ministry has reported that the antidrug operations in the eastern part of the country continue. According to a communique actions were recently conducted in Santa Cruz and Chimore. The following is official communique No 5: [number as heard]

Bulletin No 5: A medium-sized cocaine factory, which had been abandoned by drug traffickers, was discovered today in Beni Department during a patrol operation conducted by the Mobil Units for Rural Areas, Umopar, with the logistical support from three U.S. helicopters.

According to preliminary information relayed from the helicopters the patrols conducted operations north of Beni. The operations encompassed an area of about 200 km, almost reaching the Itenes River at the Brazilian border. The information indicates that a cocaine factory was found. However, the factory had recently been abandoned and destroyed in a manner used by the drug traffickers.

Santa Cruz: According to information received from Santa Cruz the personnel of the Regional Office for the Control of Dangerous Substances conducted an operation on 12th Street, seizing two containers with drugs. One of the containers held 7 bags with 7.5 kg [words indistinct].

In another operation, regional office personnel found 6 kg of cocaine base in a Nissan truck license No 215062, abandoned on Grigota Avenue. Gilda Corboda Escobar was arrested, but another person, Orlando Corboda, escaped.

Chimore: After overflying the Mariposa, Ivirganzama, Hacienda Tres, and (Sinahota) areas in the Chapare, another patrol located and destroyed three large cocaine factories made up of 25 pits for macerating coca and 200 liters of enriched water.

Drugs, Factories in Cochabamba

[Text] Interior Ministry officials reported today that Umpdar troops have presented a total of 128,500 grams of basic cocaine sulphate to the Cochabamba Departmental Federation for Control of Dangerous Drugs.

The sources added that as aresult of an operation carried out in Valle Alto, Cochabamba Department, four persons were detained and 21,300 grams of drugs were seized, which were also sent to the Departmental Federation for Control of Dangerous Drugs.

Later, 40 packages of coca were seized at a private home and eight drug factories still in operation were discovered.

Further Details on Results

PY021559 La Paz La Red Panamericana in Spanish 1130 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] The Interior Ministry's bulletin No 7 on the antidrug operation states that 22 cocaine manufacturing installations have been found. It states that during operations carried out in the past 48 hours by the Umopar of the national police with the support of the U.S. helicopters one operating cocaine factory and another ready to be installed were found.

The first operation was conducted after a lengthy flight that took Umopar troops 270 km north of Trinidad. There they found a complex of 22 buildings, the 2 largest of which were used for crystalization of the drug. Two others housed the drying system for cocaine hydrochloride.

The Umopar patrols also conducted another operation in southern El Beni, 130 km away, between Caimanes and Rio Grande. There they found a semicovered 1,000-meter landing strip, which was almost complete. This place has no contact with any inhabitated locality, and the installation apparently meets modern standards for a jungle airstrip.

SARNEY CONDUCTS ROUTINE MEETINGS 4 AUGUST

PY050058 Brasilia Domestic Service in Portuguese 2200 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] The financial situation of the states and their capitals was the subject of the first meeting to be held this week at Planalto Palace. It was a routine meeting conducted by President Sarney with the ministers from the economic sectors and with the special participation of Deni Schwartz, minister of housing and urban affairs. His participation in the meeting was explained by Frota Netto, press under secretary of the Presidency.

The government has discovered that the debts of the municipalities are concentrated with the National Housing Bank. The foreign debt of the states, and the negotiations between the National Housing Bank and its clients were two other topics discussed during the meeting.

HEAVY WEAPONS WILL BE SOLD TO LIBYA

[Text] Sao Paulo, 4 Aug (AFP) -- VEJA, the most important Brazilian weekly magazine, reports in this week's issue that the Brazilian Government has authorized the sale of weapons to Libya, but only the type of weapon that cannot be used for terrorist purposes.

The magazine states that Libya can purchase heavy weapons, especially armored vehicles and missiles, from the Brazilian weapons industry, but it will not be able to purchase light weapons.

ENGESA [Specialized Engineers Inc.] is Brazil's main manufacturer and exporter of weapons and is Libya's main supplier. It has been told that it cannot supply Libya with antitank mines because they can be used for terrorist actions.

In June 1986 the newspaper FOLHA DE SAO PAULO, one of Brazil's most influential newspapers, reported that Libya had signed a contract with Brazil for the purchase of $1 billion worth of weapons, mainly armored cars. Two days later, on 17 June, the Brazilian Foreign Minstry denied that report, which had also been published by the U.S. newspaper THE WASHINGTON POST.

During an exclusive interview granted to the Brazilian television network Bandeirantes, Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the Libyan revolution, stated last night that he considers relations with Brazil very important, and he hopes they continue to improve.

CUBA BEGINS DIRECT SHIPPING IN SEPTEMBER

PY311833 Sao Paulo FOLHA DE SAO PAULO in Portuguese 24 Jul 86 p 36

[Text] Beginning in September, vessels from the Cuban shipping company Mambisa will be arriving in Brazil. This announcement was made by Antonio Balbino, manager of the regular lines of the Barlavento Maritime Agency [Barlavento Agenciamientos Maritimos]. Balbino, who was named general agent of Mambisa in Brazil last October, believes that freight charges should be cheaper than those of other companies which operate in the region, as Mambisa is not a profit-seeking firm and the charges will "just cover costs."

The argument used by the Barlavento manager to explain the time needed for the implementation of the service is the same one used to explain the lower costs: It is a state-owned company. "For that reason, changes are slower."

Balbino says that the ships are already booked until the first half of August. For that reason they cannot arrive in Brazil until September.

The ships, which are conventional vessels (carrying containers and general cargo), will dock twice a month in Brazilian ports, according to the program worked out by the Barlavento Agency. Paranagua is the preferred port "because it is closer to some industries that export to Cuba," says Balbino, who admits that docking charges are 40 to 50 percent cheaper in Paranagua than in Santos.

Balbino explains that goods were already being exported to Cuba before relations were resumed. The operations were indirect, that is, goods were shipped to Panama or Argentina, and from there to Cuba. The most important Brazilian goods imported by the Cuban Government are paper rolls, machines for distilleries, and general machinery, according to Balbino.

He does not think that Cuba will be a disappointment in trade, even though he is aware that the country has little to offer to Brazil and does not have hard currencies on hand. Balbino understands that the payments will be made through financing and lines of credit that the Brazilian Government will extend to Cuba. Balbino says that Barlavento has received daily calls about freight rates. "Exporters are eager to get information."

Mutillo Rubens Habbema, head of the National Superintendency of the Merchant Marine (Sunaman), has not received any request yet from Brazilian shipowners to operate in the Brazilian-Cuban shipping lane.

FRANCE WANTS TO INCREASE TRADE, INCLUDING ARMS

PY041633 Rio de Janeiro O GLOBO in Portuguese 31 Jul 86 p 27

[Text] Brasilia -- France wants to increase trade, including arms deals, with Brazil because it believes that the current trade level is extremely low. This is the opinion of French Assistant Foreign Secretary of State Didier Bariani, who yesterday concluded a 2-day visit to Brasilia.

While meeting with Itamaraty Secretary General Paulo Tarso Flecha de Lima, Bariani arranged a meeting for late August with French Foreign Trade Minister Michel Noir, when the Itamaraty secretary general will be in Paris to discuss the informatics law with U.S. Government representatives.

Despite the good political climate that exists between Brazil and France, the 1985 bilateral trade level was less than $780 million (10.8 billion cruzados), showing a $480-million (6.65 billion cruzados) surplus for Brazil. The French want Brazil to increase cooperation in the energy, high technology, and even in the arms fields. According to Bariani, "France and Brazil are producing arms and if there are any possibilities of trade in that field, there are no reasons for overlooking them."

DEL VALLE SEES NO TALKS AT COLOMBIAN INAUGURATION

[Text] Before leaving for Colombia to attend the presidential inauguration, Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle made several comments. The foreign minister stated that this is just a protocol visit, thus ruling out a scheduled meeting with the Bolivian foreign minister to review bilateral issues.

[Begin Del Valle recording] [in progress] ... but there is no plan to hold talks with him. This is absolutely firm. This has also been stated by the Bolivian Foreign Ministry. Thus, it is not planned to hold talks directly linked to our bilateral relations. We will hold talks when we meet at the United Nations, where there is more time and a better opportunity for this type of meeting. [end recording]

Nevertheless, Del Valle said that Chile will continue its policy of seeking rapprochement with the neighboring country, in an effort to resume diplomatic relations.

Elsewhere, Foreign Minister del Valle said that he will meet with the special envoy that the FRG will send to Colombia and, perhaps, if the Peruvian foreign minister attends the inauguration, he will discuss pending issues with him.

Asked about a report from abroad that the United States will stop importing grapes from our country, Del Valle said:

[Begin recording in progress] ... every time economic or other type of sanctions, either by the private sector or by the port workers, were mentioned. There are other cases, involving [words indistinct] and businessmen who are coming and have overcome this situation.

Thus, I want to be optimistic and believe that these things will be overcome. Let us not forget that we have experienced this quite often and last year, we set a record in fruit exports. At any rate, I hope that [words indistinct] the difficulties (?that may crop up) will be overcome. [end recording]

Foreign Minister del Valle will return to Chile on 9 August.

Discusses Helms Charges, EEC Note

PY042345 Santiago Radio Chilena in Spanish 1700 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Relay from Santiago International Airport by Jose Francisco Contreras]

[Excerpt] Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle has said that the charges made in the United States against Republican Senator Jesse Helms are completely groundless. According to news agency reports, the FBI is carrying out an investigation regarding the alleged delivery of secret U.S. Government information to Chilean authorities by Helms during his recent visit to Chile. Helms reportedly gave information to the Chilean Government regarding an alleged secret U.S. intelligence-gathering operation. Regarding this report, Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle said that the charges are completely groundless. He said: I hope that the investigations into this matter prove the obvious, which is that Jesse Helms never supplied such information.

Regarding the declaration that was submitted on 1 August by the British ambassador to Chile in representation of the EEC, in which the EEC urged the Chilean Government to take prompt steps leading to democracy and to engage in dialogue with the opposition, Jaime del Valle reported that the Chilean Foreign Ministry has sent a note to the Chilean Embassy in London. In this note the Chilean Government states that the EEC's declaration contains some mistakes, particularly regarding the democratic transition period.

Foreign Minister Del Valle made this statement today at Padahuel International Airport minutes before his departure for Bogota, Colombia, where he will attend presidential inaugural ceremonies. [passage omitted]

OFFICIAL DESCRIBES ABRAMS' STATEMENT AS 'OUTBURST'

PY050137 Santiago Domestic Service in Spanish 2300 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Excerpt] Interior Ministry Under Secretary Alberto Cardemil has described remarks by Elliott Abrams, U.S. assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, regarding Chile as the outburst of a bureaucrat. The U.S. official last week made serious comments regarding Chile, as a result of which the Chilean Government has submitted a note of objection.

Asked about this issue, Alberto Cardemil categorically described Abrams' statement as an outburst.

[Begin Cardemil recording] I believe that...[changes thought] I have been pondering Abrams' remarks. My personal opinion is that they are the outburst of a bureaucrat. We should recommend that he be more careful with the handling of carrots and sticks because they can be used in many different ways. They have a lot of uses, but you cannot sit on them. [as heard] One must always keep in mind this possibility. [end recording]

Cardemil reasserted his annoyance over Abrams' statements, which constituted interference in domestic affairs. [passage omitted]

NEGOTIATIONS WITH ROMANIA TERMED 'HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL'

PY050247 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0113 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, 4 Aug (EFE) -- Foreign Affairs Under Secretary Colonel Ramon Valdes today termed as "highly succesful" the recent meeting of the Joint Chilean-Romanian Commission for Cooperation and Scientific and Technological Exchange. Valdes returned today to Santiago from Bucharest, where he headed the Chilean delegation that participated in the meetings of the joint commission.

He stated that during his stay in Romania he had the occasion to meet with government officials, including the ministers of chemical industries, machinery and heavy industry, foreign trade, and foreign affairs. He indicated that during his talks with Romanian officials various political and economic topics were discussed and he stressed that the results of the Bucharest meeting "must lead to fairly concrete agreements." The next meeting of the Joint Chilean-Romanian Commission will be held in Santiago during 1987.

HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION WORK DEEMED 'POSITIVE'

[Relay from Government House by Eliana Henriquez]

[Text] The government's Human Rights Commission tonight submitted to Interior Minister Ricardo Garcia the first report on the work it has carried out since its establishment almost 1 and 1/2 months ago. This was reported by Ricardo Martans, president of the government's Human Rights Commission, at the end of a 1-and-1/2-hour meeting he held with the interior minister.

Martans noted that the report dealt with about 20 of the 40 cases that have been submitted for the consideration of the commission. He added that this report includes several proposals regarding the issues discussed, but he declined to disclose them.

Asked if there is an investigation under way of the case of the relatives of Chilean folk singer Benedicto Salinas, who according to the police report committed collective suicide, Martans said that no case currently before the courts can be studied by the commission. The lawyers described as very positive the results that the Human Rights Commission has obtained so far.

SUPREME COURT RATIFIES JIMENEZ CASE CLOSED

[Text] Santiago, 2 Aug (AFP) -- According to a Supreme Court ruling, the Chilean courts consider closed the investigations into the murder which was committed on 25 February 1982. They have thus ended inconclusively, the attorney for the Jimenez family today reported. Jimenez, who was of Social Democratic leanings, had his throat slit and was shot by a unit that kidnapped him on a Santiago street a few days after he made a call for an organized opposition movement to the military regime of President Augusto Pinochet.

Three National Intelligence Center, CNI, (the secret police) agents and three pro-government labor union leaders appeared to be involved in the homicide, but the trial judge filed no indictments, and finally in 1985 the case was closed.

An appeal to annul the judge's ruling was then rejected by a higher court, and now the Supreme Court has ratified that the case is closed, said Jorge Saavedra, the attorney representing the Jimenez family. In his petition, attorney Saavedra requested that 10 inquiries be made. The inquiries would provide evidence to reopen the case.

During the now-closed investigations, information that implicated several supporters of the Chilean military regime was supplied by an official who deserted from the government's security services and took refuge in France.

POWERFUL BOMB EXPLODES NEAR ARMY BARRACKS

[Relay by Mobile Unit No. 06]

[Text] We continue on the site [word indistinct] a car bomb that exploded at about 0730 near the intersection of Figueroa and Coquimbo Streets, destroying a vehicle. We have also been informed that a person inside the vehicle was reportedly blown to pieces.

We have seen the vehicle's license plate, IJ5123. The vehicle was a Peugeot 504. According to other reports gathered at the scene, however, this license plate reportedly belongs to a Chevrolet "Opala" car whose owner is Mr Florencio Norberto Adams Cortes. This is the information we have here where the police forces who have cordoned off the entire sector, continue to arrive. The people in their houses have covered their windows because the windows of the houses located within a 1-block range were shattered.

At this moment the Carabineros have shown up and (?BOPE) personnel are gathering information to assess the magnitude of the explosion and the explosive used.

This was Mobile Unit No 6. [end relay] [Paris AFP in Spanish at 1232 GMT on 4 August in a similar report adds: "One person died and two were injured by the explosion of a powerful bomb planted today near a military barracks in Santiago, police sources have reported. The attack occurred near the barracks of the 2d Armored Vehicle Regiment."]

Another Explosion in Valparaiso

[Text] Valparaiso, Chile, 4 Aug (AFP) -- Regional authorities in Valparaiso have reported that a bomb exploded last night at an administrative office of the Chilean Carabineros in downtown Valparaiso. No victims have been reported. However, the shock wave caused substantial damage to the office's facade and to the windows of a large number of neighboring banks and government offices.

MIR DENIES INVOLVEMENT IN 25 JULY BOMB ATTACK

[Text] Santiago, 20 Jul (EFE) -- The Movement of the Revolutionary Left (MIR) today denied rumors that it is responsible for the bomb attack in front of Government House on 25 July which injured 36 people. An individual, who identified himself as Antonio and as the security chief of the MIR Secretariat, called the EFE office in Santiago to deny the rumors. The MIR spokesman added that even though the MIR strategy is based on the "people's war," its objective is "to oust the dictatorship and lay the groundwork for a new social order," but "by no means to stage actions that may hurt innocent people." Antonio said that the bomb in front of Government House "seems to be an action by those who want to discredit the people's offensive against the regime and to overshadow the uproar that the case of the two burned youths has caused at home and abroad." He was alluding to the case of Rodrigo Rojas and Carmen Gloria Quintana.

According to relatives and eyewitnesses, the two youths were arrested, beaten, and burned by an Army patrol on 2 July during the first day of a general stoppage decreed by the Chilean opposition.

The MIR is the second armed opposition group to deny responsibility for the bombing in front of Government House. The first to do so was the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front (FPMR), which called EFE and other media the evening of the day of the attack to deny its involvement and to denounce the bombing as "a criminal maneuver aimed at concealing the burned students' case behind a smokescreen."

The FPMR and the MIR, two Marxist political-military organizations, have in the past few years claimed hundreds of terrorist attacks against electric power lines, multinational companies, banks, bridges, railways, police and military barracks, and public buildings.

The bombing in front of Government House, in which 36 people were injured, has given the military government a chance to demand "a national and international uproar" against "terrorist violence," clearly alluding to the local and international reaction to the torching case. While visiting 4 of the 36 victims at a hospital, General Augusto Pinochet himself asked reporters to demand that he take strong action against terrorism, because if he does so on his own initiative, "the Vicariate of Solidarity, the priests, and everyone else will begin to protest. I then feel hamstrung and unable to do anything."

On the same occasion, Lucia Hiriart, the wife of the president, said that while so many groups "cry for terrorists, I bring my affection, my love, and my help to the victims of terrorists."

TERRORISTS ARRESTED, HANDED OVER TO MILITARY COURT

3 FPMR Members

PY282046 Santiago Domestic Service in Spanish 1700 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Relay by RSN of Rancagua]

[Text] The intendant of the 6th Region hereby reports the following:

1) On 25 July 1986, the National Intelligence Center placed three individuals at the disposal of the Cachapoal military prosecutor. The individuals, who are members of the self-styled Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front [FPMR], the armed branch of the Communist Party, perpetrated attacks against Endesa [National Electric Power, Inc.], pylons and held up a farm in the area. The terrorists had several bombs and homemade hand grenades.

2) The terrorists are: A. Name: O.O.G.T. [initials], age 17, alias Jorge Lalo; political affiliation: deputy chief of the FPMR (Galvarino) cell. This individual participated in the destruction of a pylon of the (Charrua) line in April 1986, the blowing up of a pylon in Totihue on 2 July 1986, and an attack against a farm on 21 July 1986 in search of weapons.

B. Name: M.A.E.P. [initials], age 16, alias Miguel; political affiliation: member of the FPMR (Galvarino) cell. This individual participated in an attack on a farm on 21 July 1986 when terrorists tried to steal weapons that the farm owner had in storage.

C. Name: Juan Carlos Gallardo Lazo, age 20, alias (Gile); political affiliation: member of the FPMR (Galvarino) cell. This individual participated in a bomb attack against a pylon on 2 July 1986 in Totihue.

3) This terrorist group stored explosives and materials for manufacturing bombs in a deserted area northeast of Rosario, not far from the city. The explosives were buried in an area of dense vegetation. The following materiel was found: 14 kg of ammonia gelatin, 23 meters of detonating cord, 8 homemade hand grenades, a large number of detonators, primers, quickmatches, safety fuses, a P25 submachinegun clip, and 9-mm ammunition.

4) It should be pointed out that before being arrested, one of the terrorists abandoned one of his weapons in a rural area. It was a Czech-made, (sec) P25, 9-mm submachinegun, serial number 114458, with a clip and 16 rounds.

5) The intendant of the 6th Region informs the people that security agencies are actively working in the area to preserve the tranquillity that the people have the right to enjoy, and the authorities have the duty to preserve.

Another 'Extremist' Arrested

[Text] An extremist who participated in attacks against bank buildings and electricity poles has been arrested. Washington Gallardo, 35, the arrested terrorist, took part in a dynamite attack on electricity poles and transformers in front of the house at 4700 Salvador Gutierrez Street on 15 June 1983. This was practically his initiation test for joining the Chilean Communist Party [PCCh]. He and 29 other Chileans were subsequently sent to training camps in Cuba to receive paramilitary instruction.

Gallardo and the other terrorists left the country secretly and stayed at the guerrilla camps financed by the Cuban Communist Party between July 1983 and February 1984. After sneaking back into Chile, Gallardo took charge of the logistical support department of the PCCh military branch in northwestern Santiago.

On 12 June 1984 Gallardo played a key role in a bomb attack against the branch office of the Quinta Normal state bank. The attack, which was staged after 2300, destroyed the building's doors and windows. On 27 July 1984 Gallardo and other criminals detonated a bomb planted at a pole carrying a transformer in front of the house at 5089 Carrascal Avenue. On 30 August 1984 Gallardo and his extremist partners once again attacked the branch office of the Quinta Normal state bank, shattering 17 glasses.

According to the information gathered by the investigative police, Gallardo had just been designated military training chief in the northwestern sector of greater Santiago. The terrorist has been placed at the disposal of the 1st Military Court in Santiago.

TERRORIST GROUPS WILLING TO CEASE ACTIVITIES

[By Juan Jorge Faundes]

[Text] Santiago, Chile, 28 Jul (EFE) -- The Chilean Marxist left, particularly the Chilean Communist Party [PCCh], and the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front (FPMR), have accepted that a Chilean military officer could head a provisional government that would lead to the reinstatement of full democracy in the country.

However, they demand that this military officer -- who could be anyone except General August Pinochet, the present Chilean president -- must "immediately implement" those measures that have been proposed by the National Accord [AN] to achieve a transition to full democracy. Although the Chilean Marxist left is not a member of the accord, it does "respect it."

They demand that this military officer must adopt the goals established by the recently created National Civic Assembly [ANC]; the largest coalition of social, union, and opposition organizations that has been established in Chile since the military coup which installed Pinochet in power in September 1973. The main objective of the ANC, 14 of whose leaders have been in jail for the past 15 days for having called the 2-3 July general strike, is precisely to pressure the government through civil disobedience so that it will be forced to lead the country to democracy. This possibility of appointing a military officer to achieve a transition to democracy has been proposed in the last few days by both the PCC and by the FPMR in exclusive clandestine interviews, according to the opposition magazine CAUCE in the issue that appeared today, 28 July.

A military transition, which has been accepted by even the left, is one of the alternatives to achieve a peaceful solution to the Chilean crisis and apparently the most feasible because the Marxist left, which traditionally comprises one third of the electorate who existed in Chile until the 1973 military coup, agrees with the idea. According to the Constitution enforced by the present regime, a plebiscite should be held in 1989 to elect or reject a single candidate, who must be proposed by the Armed Forces. This new Chilean president will start on 8-year presidential term which ends in 1997.

Members of all opposition parties believe that the holding of a plebiscite with General Augusto Pinochet in power, perhaps participating as the single candidate, does not offer them any guarantees that the country will truly head toward democracy. However, at present there is no absolute certainty that Pinochet will be the single candidate because in the last few weeks the three Armed Forces commanders (Navy, Air Force and Carabineros) have declined to comment on this issue, saying that "anyone could be the candidate" and that 1989 "is too far away."

In view of the opinions of the members of the Government Junta, Pinochet himself, who in the last few days indirectly announced that he could be the candidate in 1989, had to categorically say that "I am not the candidate. There is no such candidacy."

Among the proposals to resolve the Chilean crisis before 1989 are the so-called "immediate measures" proposed by the AN and signed in August 1985 by a large part of the opposition, but not by the Marxists. These measures include an end to the enforced exceptional measures; the full reestablishment of all public freedoms; an end to exile; the legalization of political parties (which at present are de facto); and -- the most important of all -- the holding of free, secret, and publicized elections for pre of the Republic and Congress.

According to the clandestine interviews that are published today by the magazine CAUCE, if this peaceful solution to the Chilean crisis is achieved and "if Chile is a truly sovereign country, the FPMR will cease its activities." Although it has expressed its willingness to accept a military transition to achieve the democratization of the country, the FPMR "is skeptical that a solution of this nature can be achieved." The armed group has said that "if a military officer does fulfill the objectives established in the document Chile Demands, along with the immediate measures proposed by the National Accord, and if the officer truly fulfills the democratization process, we would welcome him."

HONDURAN PRESIDENT VISITS, SIGNS TREATY

Azcona Comments on Joint Treaty

PA032346 Bogota Cadena Radial Super in Spanish 1730 GMT 3 Aug 86

[Text] San Andres -- Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo, who arrived in Colombia yesterday, will stay here until 7 August. The Honduran president will attend the inauguration of Colombian President-elect Virgilio Barco Vargas. Azcona Hoyo arrived on this island to sign a treaty with President Belisario Betancur committing the two countries to delimit their marine and submarine areas in the Caribbean.

Referring to the document signed last night, Azcona said it permits the creation of a new mechanism for the development of the two nations. Azcona said there is a marine and [words indistinct] wealth that will be recovered by the two countries to prevent fishing vessels from third countries from exploiting a resource that belongs to Colombia and Honduras exclusively.

Today Azcona and Betancur agreed that unity and peace is the slogan of Latin America. The two heads of state reiterated their determination to continue their efforts to reinforce the process of dialogue and political negotiation in Central America. Azcona and Betancur met in private today, after signing a marine areas delimitation treaty yesterday, Saturday, to put an end to long but friendly bilateral negotiations. Colombia and Honduras will share Serranilla Cay on the marine border between the two nations. They will also protect marine fauna and step up environmental conservation programs. The Honduran president noted that legalization of these measures is good, to acknowledge nations' rights.

Presidents Urge Union, Peace

[By Guillermo Tovar]

[Excerpts] San Andres (Colombia) -- The presidents of Colombia, Belisario Betancur, and Honduras, Jose Azcona Hoyo, said today that "union and peace" are the most important aspects for the future of Latin America. They met today on this Colombian island in the Caribbean, beginning their talks with a private "working breakfast," in which they reiterated their willingness to continue promoting negotiations for a political agreement in Central America.

Although Betancur and Azcona held private talks, Colombian Government spokesman noted that during their 2d day of meetings, the presidents reaffirmed their conviction that political negotiation is the only path for a definite solution among the Central American countries.

Betancur maintained that "today, more than ever before, it is necessary to work for the democratization of the region," and considered that the "only path" is the Contadora Group, founded by Colombia, Mexico, Venezuela, and Panama in 1983. [passage omitted]

"It is always advisable to leave everything legalized in order to know how far our rights go and where the rights of the others begin," Azcona insisted. Azcona will go to Bogota next Thursday in order to attend the inauguration of President-elect Virgilio Barco, Betancur's successor.

The Honduran president stated that by defining the Colombian-Honduran borders "a new mechanism of development is created, because there is marine wealth in Serranilla that will be recovered by both nations in order to prevent fishing vessels from other countries from enjoying it."

Meanwhile, President Betancur said that the border agreement signed with Azcona's government "will allow our two countries to strengthen together their international relations."

Meanwhile, Honduran Foreign Minister Lopez Contreras ruled out any possible international problems in the future due to the "shared" sovereignty of Colombia and Honduras on Serranilla Cay. [passage omitted]

MARTIAL LAW DECLARED IN 4 SOUTHWEST TOWNS

[Text] Bogota, 3 Aug (AFP) -- Martial law was imposed tonight in four small towns in Southwest Colombia to facilitate the Army's antiguerrilla operations. The measure includes Belalcazar, Toex, Huila, and Mosoco, located in the central mountain range which divides the Huila and Cauca Departments located 450 km from Bogota.

A column of the National Guerrilla Coordinating Board, which consists of units from the M-19, the Indian Quintin Lame group, and other extremist organizations, has been operating in the mountainous region. Yesterday, the guerrillas killed an Army NCO and injured three soldiers during an ambush.

Today, in La Argentina, Huila Department, two rebels apparently belonging to the communist Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC), which attacked a 10th Brigade Detachment, were killed. Army troops, who suffered no casualties, seized weapons, ammunition, grenades, and uniforms; military sources added. Troops of the 9th and 10th Brigades are pursuing the rebels on the mountain slopes, with the help of gunship helicopters.

PACT WITHIN LIBERAL PARTY SEEKS LAINO'S RETURN

PY042028 Asuncion LA TARDE in Spanish 2 Aug 86 p 7

[Text] Usually reliable sources have been mentioning the possibility of the impending return of Domingo Laino, vice president of the Authentic Radical Liberal Party [PLRA] to Paraguay.

The return of this politician seems to be related to a possible agreement that the PLRA and the PLR [Radical Liberal Party] have been negotiating so that the PLRA will be able to rejoin the Liberal Party and participate in the 1988 presidential elections.

Among other things the agreement provides for Carlos Alberto Gonzales, one of the PLRA leaders, to be nominated for president of the nation, and Domingo Laino would become chairman of the executive board of the reunited PLR and PLRA. This group would share congressional seats with the so-called "geniolito" faction of the Liberal Party.

On the whole it is believed that the "geniolito" faction led by Emilio Forestieri and Ramon Lezcano Torres has won a remarkable political victory by getting the "authentic" sector currently led by Juan Carlos Zaldivar to rejoin the Radical Liberal Party.

It appears that this development is meeting with some opposition from the Popular Mobilization Movement of the PLRA led by Miguel Abdon Saguier who believes that the party should abstain from participating in the elections as a means of struggle. It seems that this position has considerable popular support, especially in the Central and Cordillera Departments.

The "Saguier" faction led by Juan Masi Guggiari, Felino Amarilla, Julio Cesar Franco, Hermes Saguier, Herminio Ruiz Diaz, and others is getting ready for an all-out campaign in favor of a hard attitude toward the government in keeping with true liberal traditions, according to the spokesmen.

All these developments will no doubt fall into place once Laino returns to the country in the wake of the agreement between the "geniolito" and "authentic" factions of the Liberal Party.

[Asuncion EL DIARIO in Spanish on 3 August carries on page 9 a 450-word report of a telephone conversation with Domingo Laino in Buenos Aires. Laino is quoted as saying: "I know nothing about the rumors that the government may allow me to return, but being a Paraguayan citizen I am still hopeful." Laino added that the rumors about his alleged return "could well be mere news media speculations."]

MORATORIUM DECLARED ON PUBLIC SECTOR DEBT

[By Marisol Marin]

[Excerpts] Lima, 3 Aug (EFE) -- The Peruvian Government has decreed a unilateral moratorium until 4 November on the part of the public sector debt that is owed to private international banks. Meanwhile, the date on which the IMF can declare Peru "ineligible" to receive new loans is approaching. The unilateral moratorium, which was announced today, involves some $4.4 billion. This figure corresponds to the public debt's principal, which has not been amortized since March 1983.

This is the fourth time in a year that the APRA [American Popular Revolutionary Alliance] government, which follows the policy adopted by the Belaunde administration, has postponed the amortization. This decision was not unexpected within financial circles. It will, however, worsen the conflict between Peru and its creditors because it is not an isolated action.

The Peruvian foreign debt totals some $14 billion, of which $12 billion is owed by the public sector. [passage omitted]

On 15 August Peru is due to pay $180 million in overdue obligations to the IMF. Peru owes approximately $800 million to the IMF. If the country does not repay these obligations, it can be declared "ineligible" to receive new loans. Even though Central Reserve Bank President Lionel Figueroa a few days ago said that such a decision will have no major effect on the country, economist Ismael Leon today wrote in the newspaper LA REPUBLICA that loans totaling $1 billion are at stake. These loans could be granted by the IDB and the World Bank over the next 5 years.

Deputy Economy Minister Gustavo Saberbein and other government officials have reiterated that Peru will only pay within its capabilities, but did not mention the amount that will be repaid. Everything seems to indicate that negotiations are under way to prevent the IMF from declaring the country ineligible to receive new loans and to prevent Peru from becoming isolated from the international financial system.

In April Alan Garcia's government convinced the IMF to accept $35 million instead of the total overdue amount. This was the first time that a country whose reserves stood at approximately $1.4 billion was granted such a concession by the IMF.

Financial circles believe that the decision by the IMF will set the pace for the other creditors, and there are fears that if the country is declared "ineligible," not only will it lose the IDB and World Bank loans, but also the short-term loans to which it still has access. In September Peru is expected to propose a repayment schedule to its private creditors at the Paris Club, to whom it owes some $3.2 billion.

It has been learned that Peru will ask for at least 20 years to repay its debt, with a grace period of at least 5 years starting in 1987, and a substantial reduction to approximately 3 percent of the interest. The main problem involved in restrictions on the repayment of the debt and on the remittance of currency abroad is that they can cut both ways: during an initial phase they will reactivate industry, but industry is in turn totally dependent on foreign equipment and technology, which require the investment of many dollars.

FRG ECONOMIC COOPERATION MINISTER ARRIVES

[Text] Lima, 3 Aug (AFP) -- FRG Economic Cooperation Minister Jurgen Warnke today arrived in Lima from Caracas on an official 3-day visit. In Lima the FRG minister will end the tour that he is making through some South American countries.

Warnke's agenda includes a courtesy visit to President Alan Garcia and meetings with Justice Minister Carlos Blancas, Labor Minister Orestes Rodriguez, and other authorities.

An FRG Embassy source has stated that Warnke will discuss issues involving bilateral cooperation, the foreign debt, and trade, among other issues, with Peruvian officials within the framework of the very cordial relations between the two nations.

It has also been announced that next Wednesday the FRG minister will visit the city of Trujillo, the capital of La Libertad Department, 542 km north of Lima, where the FRG is cooperating in an irrigation project.

Announces More Cooperation

[Text] Lima, 4 Aug (AFP) -- President Alan Garcia today met with Juergen Warnke, the FRG's minister for economic cooperation, who arrived in Lima on 3 August as part of a tour of several Latin American countries.

Javier Tantalean, chief of the National Planning Institute, who participated in the meeting, stated that Warnke announced that the FRG will continue to grant Peru economic cooperation amounting to approximately DM70 million every year.

Tantalean also stated that of this sum, DM50 million is in the form of loans that will have a (?30)-year deadline, with an 8- or 10-year grace period and an interest rate of 3 percent. The rest will be nonreimbursable aid in the form of technical cooperation.

Tantalean also stressed that the cooperation that has been announced demonstrates the FRG's confidence in President Alan Garcia's government and he indicated that part of the cooperation will be used to continue with the Jequetepeque-Zana hydroelectric project in northern Peru.

ROK MINISTER ARRIVES FOR 2-DAY OFFICIAL VISIT

[Text] Lima, 31 Jul (AFP) -- ROK Deputy Prime Minister and Planning Minister Kim Man-je today arrived in Lima for an official visit that will last until 2 August.

During his stay, and in his position as special envoy of the ROK president, Kim will hold meetings with government officials and congressmen.

UPDATE OF TERRORIST ACTIONS IN HIGHLANDS

[Text] Lima, 4 Aug (AFP) -- The police reported today that Shining Path columns have beheaded four vigilantes and murdered a provincial governor, a member of the ruling APRA Party [American Popular Revolutionary Alliance], and that two members of the Army were wounded by alleged subversives on the outskirts of Lima.

Meanwhile, in Puno, in the southeastern Andes, terrorists blew up the 90-meter antenna of the Catholic radio Onda Azul. The region was without electricity or telephone service for some hours on 3 August because the antenna fell on the main electricity and telephone lines. Arturo Bernal, APRA's candidate for mayor of San Roman, and four of his companions have now been missing for 4 days.

Approximately 60 guerrillas, armed with submachineguns and explosives, on 2 August attacked the community of Gentabamba, in the Ayacucho province of La Mar, and surprised four members of the campesinos' vigilante organization, a self-defense group, tying them up against tree trunks. They then tortured them with machetes and beheaded them.

The provincial governor of the community of Juli Egusquiza has reported that the heads of the victims were hung from trees. Egusquiza has demanded the capture and punishment of the criminals, who fled to higher parts of the Andes.

On 3 August another five subversives murdered Gregorio Guispe, 36 provincial governor of Vischongo (Ayacucho). He was shot three times, according to the source.

Sergeant Hugo Urbano, of the Army's Air Transport Division, and soldier Estanislao Maximo, of the artillery, on 3 August received bullet wounds during an alleged confrontation with a terrorist group in the shantytown of Tablada de Lurin, located on the outskirts of Lima.

Despite the strict secrecy regarding this incident, it has been learned that the soldiers are in the military hospital. Meanwhile, three alleged members of the PIP [Peruvian Investigative Police] on 3 August shot Civil Guard Sergeant Antonio Montoya during a confusing incident that took place during the hours of the curfew. This case is also being investigated.

Reports from Arequipa, 1,000 km south of here, indicate that during the past 3 days approximately 70 campesino families have arrived in this city from Puno, 1,314 km southeast of Lima. They arrived in seven trucks and sought security from the continuous subversive actions.

Mariano Mamani Sutira, the group's spokesman, stated that the exodus of campesinos from Puno will continue, especially from the regions of Melgar and Azangaro, where armed groups destroy the crops and steal the cattle, leaving the campesinos in absolute poverty.

An official from Arequipa has indicated that the social problem is extending, and he recalled that more than 80 percent of the population of the shantytowns that encircle the country's second most important city have come from Puno.

EX-COLONELS ARRESTED FOR CRITICIZING COMMAND

[Text] Montevideo, 4 August (AFP) -- Defense Minister Juan Chiraino today confirmed the arrest of two retired colonels who were promoting a public declaration to reaffirm military honor.

According to the minister, the two officers will receive appropriate punishment for 15 days by order of Army Commander in Chief Lieutenant General Hugo Medina.

According to Chiarino, the colonels' initiative implied a veiled accusation against the commanders, who, in their opinion, failed to defend military honor.

The minister also said that the Army commander is now studying the situation of a magazine published by the Military Center, the largest social institution of the military.

The publication called EL SOLDADO, in its latest issue, criticized Uruguayan communists and stated that the military should speak up and call attention to topics related to national defense.

EL SOLDADO also said that the former members of the military junta that governed Argentina, Jorge Videla and Emilio Massera, were victims of Marxist revenge when they were sentenced last December to life imprisonment by the civilian courts of that country.

The magazine accused Argentine President Raul Alfonsin and public prosecutor Julio Strassera of acting in a spirit of revenge on that occasion.

Chiarino said that the malicious and absurd mentioning of Alfonsin was most unfortunate.

He added that, in his opinion, the statement was made by some ill-humored military newspaperman, who just decided to say things that are absolutely unnecessary and unsuitable.

The minister added that the Armed Forces feel cornered because there is an effort to annoy them and pass adverse judgment on the military.

In view of this situation many military men react in a way they should not, instead of understanding the difficult times we are going through, the minister said.

At the present time the political forces in Uruguay are trying to find a solution to end the controversy over human rights violations during the last military regime. The minister said that all measures that bring a little peace, calm judgment, and even justice will be welcome.

Chiarino did not say what procedures would be used, but stressed the need for consensus to find a solution which, if it is not satisfactory to all, would at least cause the least possible resistance.

LEADERS ARRIVE FOR GROUP OF 6 MEETING

Greek PM Arrives, Greets Castro

NC041945 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1800 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou held his first meeting with Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid this afternoon, opening his official visit to Mexico. He arrived in the country today after making a stopover in the Azores.

Upon leaving the Azores, Papandreou expressed his thanks to the Portuguese Government and to President Mario Soares. He reiterated his wish for continued close and firm cooperation between the two countries to consolidate regional peace and security. As his plane flew toward Mexico, Papandreou sent a message to Cuban leader Fidel Castro offering warm greetings and sincere wishes to the Cuban leader and the friendly Cuban people for happiness, prosperity, and progress.

Papandreou, De la Madrid Talk

[Excerpts] Mexico City, 4 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou met today in the national palace with Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid.

Papandreou arrived in Mexico City yesterday for an official 3-day visit prior to the Group of 6 meeting on peace and disarmament which will be held on Wednesday and Thursday [6 and 7 August] in Ixtapa, Guanajuato.

The Greek Prime Minister arrived at the national palace at 1000 accompanied by a 14-member delegation and his wife (Margarita). There he met with the Mexican chief of state.

The meeting between the two statesmen was friendly and without ceremonies or speeches. They immediately moved to the presidential office to exchange gifts and begin the first round of private conversations.

During the approximately 45-minute meeting, De la Madrid and Papandreou discussed bilateral relations. [passage omitted]

The Mexican president will bestow the Order of the Aztec Eagle on the Greek prime minister, and Papandreou will respond with the Great Cross of the Order of the Savior (Orden del Salvador).

PETRICIOLI ON IMF AGREEMENTS, WORLD BANK CREDITS

FL311530 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 1326 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Mexico City, 31 Jul (NOTIMEX) -- Finance and Public Credit Secretary Gustavo Petricioli said yesterday [30 July] there will be a substantial increase of public and private investments and assured that the agreements reached with the IMF in no way will cause greater budgetary cuts.

Interviewed at the end of a ceremony marking the 49th anniversary of the Finance Secretariat's National Workers Union, Petricioli said the IMF agreements will not bring about a recession because they are part of the presidential program.

Shortly after, while heading a meeting of the National Bank of Rural Credit Consultation Council, Petricioli reported that Mexico will ask the World Bank for a $500-million credit line, which will mainly be used for rural development. [passage omitted]

WORKERS' UNION SEES REVOLUTION IN DANGER

PA020104 Mexico City EL DIA in Spanish 25 Jul 86 p 7

[Text] CTM [Confederation of Mexican Workers] leader Fidel Velasquez demanded yesterday that democracy be perfected without making concessions to the right. He also warned that the revolution is in danger, due to the efforts to create a local congress; turn the Federal District into another state, and increase the number of legislators in the Chamber of Deputies and Senate.

At a news conference, Velasquez said that if the minorities' presence in the legislative bodies is augmented, the doors will be opened to the reactionary party (PAN) [National Action Party], whose leaders are allied with the political clergy, the business sector, and the most retrogressive forces in the United States.

Shortly before presenting reporters with a document defining the CTM position on electoral reform, which will be submitted to Government secretary Manuel Bartlett, Velasquez asked the leftist parties to join the CTM in preventing the advance of the right as the PAN is in position to take advantage of the reform.

He said that given the current economic situation, it is not possible to spend more to support the legislative branch when the government has insufficient funds to meet its commitments. He said it is feared that the PRI might lose its majority position by granting concessions to its enemies. He also noted that although differences exist within the PRI, it is possible to disagree. He then said that the CTM will try to bring about the necessary reforms so the PRI can consolidate its role as a spokesman for the revolution and its position as the majority party.

Velasquez states in the CTM document that it is essential to perfect our constitutional separation of powers, to strengthen the legislative branch since a vigorous executive branch is completely compatible with a legislative branch that fully carries out its functions.

The CTM wants the Federal District to remain the seat of the government, as the citizens who live in the capital of the republic have at their disposal the instruments required to express their actions and viewpoints. The Consultative Council should become a body for consultation and be given greater responsibilities, its members should be elected directly by the citizens, and they should be empowered to propose bills and regulations for the best administration of the Federal District.

BRIEFS

DRUG TRAFFICKERS ARRESTED -- Interpol agents have arrested two local municipal police agents who were involved in cocaine trafficking and offered protection to well-known traffickers in Culiacan. Alfredo Feliz Chaidez and Eduardo Lopez Nunez were arrested while carrying the drugs and three automatic machineguns, which were confiscated along with a 1985 Bronco station wagon and a new Volkswagen; the vehicles had been reported stolen. COLUMNIST TERMS HELMS' RECORD 'ABERRATION'

PA041641 Panama City LA ESTRELLA DE PANAMA in Spanish 2 Aug 86 p A 2

[By Luis Manuel Martinez]

[Excerpts] The political record of Republican Senator for North Carolina Jesse Helms is a most overwhelming aberration in Washington's political circles. Helms finances his campaigns with donations from the country's most important tobacco firms. In exchange for that support he has dedicated himself to struggling to include huge subsidies for tobacco farmers in the U.S. budget. [passage omitted]

Helms' behavior is disturbing and highly combative because he provokes crises between Washington and the governments of Latin America. [passage omitted]

What initially appeared as a concern by Helms for democracy in Panama soon began to take another shape with the beginning of debates that provoked intemperate statements from him. On one occasion he said that "the United States must recover control of the Canal." Later he acknowledged that his attacks on General Manuel Antonio Noriega concern United States' retention of the canal.

Multi-faceted which includes disinformation, economic aggression aimed at eliminating banking system secrecy, and systematic attacks that have included the questioning of respect shown for human rights in Panama has, without a doubt, its most important spokesman in Jesse Helms.

The State Department has repeatedly deprived Helms of authority, but he must serve big consortiums by attacking Panama, proudly supporting apartheid, and supporting the repression imposed by Pinochet as basic elements of U.S. foreign policy.

The virulent anti-Panamaian campaign apparently has become a generalized activity among some Washington sectors. In the meantime, there is no sign of a prompt solution to the Salvadoran crisis or of a negotiated solution in Nicaragua.

The Reagan administration has been paralyzed by an ambivalent position that delays and complicates problems. [passage omitted]

ASSEMBLY PRESIDENT ACCUSES OFFICIALS, BARLETTA

PA010018 Panama City LA PRENSA in Spanish 29 Jul 86 p 1

[Text] In a news conference, Camilo Gozaine, president of the Legislative Assembly, has made serious charges against former President Nicolas Ardito Barletta. "Former President Nicky Barletta is one of the biggest sponsors of anti-patriotic Panamanians. Those things which he did not defend as a man here in Panama, he is bemoaning like a woman in U.S. lobbies," Gozaine said.

Gozaine made these claims in the Blue Room of the Legislative Assembly yesterday morning where he invited the national and foreign news media to hear details of his tour to several states in the United States.

Adding further bitter accusations against former President Barletta, Camilo Gozaine said that Barletta was selling out the country and plotting against the government, the fatherland, the Defense Forces, and General Manuel Antonio Noriega. To back up his accusations, Gozaine said that former President Barletta sends letters monthly to U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz regarding the situation in Panama. They all contain adverse and unfavorable remarks. It seems he had other ideas when he was elected president." "He forgot that he is a Panamanian, but luckily, we found out about it in time," Gozaine said. Gozaine said that in those letters, Barletta reported a series of wrongdoings within the government of Eric Arturo Delvalle and the Panama Defense Forces. He added that by using this method of misinformation, former President Ardito Barletta was showing his bitterness and his desire to become a political leader. Gozaine said that the misinformation campaign against Noriega, which was being conducted through U.S. newspapers, was financed by Panamanian opposition sectors headed by Roberto Eisenmann. He said that Eisenmann's famous remarks that they want to kill him give the government a new responsibility. He must be protected from the mafia to which he is tied, so they do not kill him and so the opposition does not go around saying that the Defense Forces killed him. "I am more concerned about that fact because Eisenmann is not afraid of being sentenced here; he is more afraid of the people he joined to accuse Noriega. He is afraid of those who have him by the neck, and if he takes a step backward he knows what will happen to him. We have to take care of this man...we have to take care of him so nothing happens to him!"

He also accused Legislator Mayin Correa of the Labor Party of using the radio and press media of Florida to plot against the fatherland and to distort the actual Panamanian situation. As an example of this, he mentioned the false report about the alleged visit to Panama of Cuban President Fidel Castro. "We also know that millions of dollars have been spent for the continuation of a campaign to destroy General Manuel Antonio Noriega's image as commander-in-chief of Panama's Defense Forces," Gozaine said.

The assembly president condemned the "ostrich" attitude assumed by David Samudio, Panamanian ambassador to the United Nations. "When problems began to appear, Samudio went to Switzerland, and Leonardo Kam had to take care of the Panamanian delegation," Gozaine said.

"The Foreign Ministry is to blame," Gozaine said. He also disagreed with the fact that the Foreign Ministry did not translate the resolution which supported General Noriega, defended Panama's sovereignty, and condemned bad Panamanians. He disagreed, as well, that the Foreign Ministry did not distribute it in the United States and throughout the world so people could know about the position of the Legislative Assembly and of the Panamanian people.

He later said that bad Panamanians had offered to let the United States establish military bases throughout the country and retain control of the Panama Canal after 31 December 1999 if the United States helps them win the elections in 1989.

Asked by LA PRENSA if he felt that General Manuel Antonio Noriega could be a presidential candidate in 1989, Camilo Gozaine said he believed Noriega could be a presidential candidate because General Noriega could strengthen the democratic process in Panama. Gozaine said that he would not think twice about supporting Noriega as a presidential candidate.

"General Noriega has all the necessary qualities to lead this country. He has been the equilibrium here, because as a military man he has told the United States that there will not be any additional U.S. bases in Panama; the current bases will be gone by the year 2000," Gozaine said.

DELVALLE ON BANKING SECRECY, CURRENCY SYSTEM

PA020028 Panama City LA ESTRELLA DE PANAMA in Spanish 31 Jul 86 pp a-1, a-16

[Text] His Excellency President Eric Arturo Delvalle said last night during a dinner which the National Banking Commission offered in his honor to celebrate the commission's 16th anniversary that "the banking center which is now an integral part of our economic system has a fundamental role to play in the safeguarding of the peace, liberty, and progress necessary for increasingly efficient and growth-oriented banking activities."

The president said that Panama's banking system is composed of financial institutions recognized both nationally and internationally. He noted that the institutions of 30 countries in addition to a growing group of banks with Panamanian capital are represented in the banking system of Panama.

One important aspect cited by the president was that of the monetary system, which has particular characteristics significant for our economic development. The utilization of the dollar as a legal currency in Panama, the facilities for carrying out operations in any other currency -- without restrictions on exchange or on the transferring of money abroad -- and the certainty that foreign deposits will not be affected by political measures or by the freezings of assets, further strengthen our development as a services country, the president said.

Delvalle affirmed: "We Panamanians have always agreed that the traditional conditions and facilities provided by our monetary system should be safeguarded. Because of this, and based on what is established in our Constitution, my government has never considered issuing paper currency." Delvalle noted, in front of the large and distinguished audience, that bank confidentiality is intrinsic to our legal institutions and was not just born out of a simple article included in some legal text. "Confidentiality," he said, "was born out of and grows with the republic and is intrinsic to all our institutions." He noted that confidentiality implies the obligation of proper utilization; otherwise limits would have to be placed on it by applying the special mechanisms provided in our laws for the investigation and prosecution of illegal conduct.

The president knows very well that the talks his government has held with representatives of the United States on strengthening the ties of mutual cooperation to curb financial activities related to the illegal drug traffic have created concern in banking and legal sectors and in the community in general. But those conversations were the most suitable opportunity to "reiterate our firm decision to maintain and protect the institutions of our legal and banking systems," he said. He also stated: "The illegal traffic of drugs is shameful, and all its manifestations deserve our condemnation and rejection. My government is struggling to forcefully curb this damnable scourge. We are struggling tirelessly, and we will continue doing all that is necessary to strengthen our struggle against that activity."

Delvalle told his audience that a draft on the National Banking Commission rules has been prepared and is being studied by the commission members. He said that many initiatives from the banking sector have received official support and have become a reality as a result of a united effort. Now they are no longer just studies and plans, but are national laws and regulations that day by day accomplish the task for which they were created. Some of these laws are: the Trust Law, the Decree for the Exercise of Trusteeship Business, the Joint Accounts Law, the Elimination of the Tax on Heirs, the Liberalization of Banking Hours, and the Increase of Interest on Small-Account Deposits.

The president said that the Panamanian banking center has been the object of a smear campaign which does not at all portray the behavior of the bankers or our legal situation.

Delvalle called "for united efforts by the government and the banking community to safeguard the image of professionalism, integrity, seriousness, and efficiency for which we have made efforts for so many years. [quotation marks as published]

LAWYERS SEE USAID AS VIOLATING SOVEREIGNTY

PA032334 Panama City LA REPUBLICA in Spanish 3 Aug 86 pp 1, 8-a [Text] Panamanian lawyers are greatly concerned over the manner in which USAID, directed by Ronald Levin, has attempted to involve itself in Panama's administration of justice, in open violation of Panamanian sovereignty.

After the first warning given by Robledo Landero, a student of law and political science, who reported that USAID had offended the country by attempting to establish guidelines for the administration of justice in Panama, all of the legal sectors and groups expressed their dissatisfaction over this attack on the country's self-determination and on the management of its laws.

After in-depth consultations with lawyers in Colon, Rafael Solano said that Ronald Levin's attitude has been totally rejected by the lawyers because it interferes with the judicial branch's sovereignty and jurisdiction.

Meanwhile, lawyer Pedro Brin Martinez, a legislator from Darien, said that USAID's unscientific policy has degraded his province.

Likewise, Drs Dilio Arcia, Romulo Escobar Bethancourt, and Luis de Leon Arias, as well as Luis Carlos Cabeza and Vicente Arosemena Chang, have publicly rejected USAID, which has specific functions to fulfill in Panama.

COSTA RICA

FOREIGN MINISTER MADRIGAL SPEAKS AT OAS

PA311600 San Jose Domestic Service in Spanish 2100 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Speech by Foreign Minister Rodrigo Madrigal Nieto to the OAS General Assembly in Washington, D.C. -- live; broadcast in progress]

[Text] ...for the opportunity that the OAS Permanent Council gives me to address you.

Representing Costa Rica as foreign minister for the first time has given me the opportunity to see for myself that you live under that fraternal spirit that gave birth to the OAS. In the present circumstances it is appropriate to consolidate and strengthen this institution destined to fulfill high-level functions in favor of the protection of peace and security in the Latin American nations.

Mr President, Ambassadors, Mr General Secretary, I bring special and respectful greetings from Cost Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez to this distinguished organization and its illustrious representatives.

I come to the OAS with a message of hope. I am here convinced that with the fraternal cooperation of democracies it is still possible for freedom to triumph over the threats of tyranny. It is still possible for justice to triumph over sinister illegality.

Costa Rica comes to this forum with the sincere humility of a nation where freedom, justice, and democracy become intermingled to form a long course of historic harmony. Costa Rica, a small country located between two large continents, will soon celebrate 100 years of pluralist democracy. This event has a special meaning, because Latin America is living a time of democratic revival. We are very pleased to see the political achievements and stability that characterize most of the Caribbean sister nations and the return of democracy throughout America, particularly because these events will lead to happier days for the peoples of the continent.

We, the inheritors of Bolivar's heroic liberation deeds, the sons of these lands, cannot help but be pleased with the political advances made by Argentina, Brazil, Guatemala, and Uruguay, whose splendid victories in the field of human rights and electoral sovereignty, will hopefully bear fruits in those countries where the splendor of freedom does not glow yet.

However, we are very concerned over and firmly reject the recurrent attacks that a well-organized international campaign promotes against the enormous efforts aimed at consolidating pluralist, representative democracy in the entire hemisphere. We are also extremely concerned about the increase in social and economic problems in this part of the world, because they augur even more difficult times for the stability of democracy and the maintenance of freedom. The economic crisis in the Latin American countries has no equivalent in history. [Words indistinct] once we talk about the problem of the foreign debt, which overwhelms us.

During the days of dollar abundance and high interest rates, the climate was suitable for international banks to facilitate large amounts of money and for governments to be ready to spend them, rightly or wrongly, each of them following the dictates of its conscience.

Today, the payment of those debts cannot lead the debtors to bankruptcy or sink them in the chaos of [words indistinct], not only because a human sense of economy rejects such a possibility, but also because -- to mention the most obvious and important reason -- that disaster would also strike the creditors.

In Latin America, the difficult fulfillment of those financial obligations is linked to the very firm struggle that we should carry out against traditional structures of injustice and oppression, the seriousness of which has provoked a socially explosive situation.

At the present time, to those serious problems, which are already tragic in our countries, we must add the [words indistinct] of drug trafficking, the source of immorality and social problems.

Regarding this particular topic, Costa Rica wants to urge the American governments to join efforts within the OAS framework to wage an effective and overall battle against the production and commercial sale of (?hallucinatory) drugs. I also avail myself of this opportunity to reassert Costa Rica's absolute and unconditional support for the work being carried out by the OAS against drug trafficking.

The latest conference in Rio de Janeiro unequivocally proved the willingness of the member-states to jointly participate in the struggle, which should be waged by all those who are proud of their honesty and possessed with the highest values of Christian morality. Furthermore, we also think it is necessary to urgently form a democratic alliance to develop democracy. It is quite true that [words indistinct]. We believe that since nuclear power has been unleashed on the battlefield, modern man has no other choice but to form an ecumenical world government which is the result of an agreement, reflects the free will of nations, and has the intention of safeguarding our cultural values.

Mr President, distinguished representatives, without delving too far into our ideals we must state that we are firmly convinced that peace will be effectively attained only if it is based on the structure of a pluralist democracy. This general rule takes on dramatic significance within the Central American context. These five small nations -- intimately united by their geography and history and currently engaged in technological and economic efforts to achieve development -- would see all their possibilities of achieving peace and development destroyed if a Marxist regime that defies history, attacks the church, sacrifices freedoms, and hinders all types of efficient and positive work is established in their midst.

We insistently continue to advocate Costa Rica's example, because it is a country that does not suffer the scourge of starvation precisely because it is not affected by national crime, much less by the scourge of a civil war.

Mr President, please allow us to add -- at a time when the refugee problem has created an anguishing situation that will have grave consequences -- that not one single Costa Rican is part of the legions that wander the area searching for peace, employment, and justice. However, we have had to receive hundreds of thousands of these refugees who migrate to our country, sick, hungry, and horrified by the future that awaits them if they remain in their homeland -- which is far from being the worker and peasant paradise that is described by the propaganda and [words indistinct].

Consequently, we believe that peace cannot be achieved without social justice because it would involve the installation of regimes that violate human rights in the broadest sense. This was generously stated by the OAS in the American Declaration of Human Rights and Duties. Costa Rica's peace and its pluralist democracy are the result of a national consensus concerning social justice and liberty.

Mr President, we believe that national harmony is only possible if it takes place in an atmosphere that favors people and societies alike. Thus, in the last century we developed social institutions with the state's participation. These were based on a general education system that has been free and mandatory since 1879.

Cost Rica does not refute the argument of those who insist that violence should become a sine qua non condition to the progress of majorities, simply because it is not aware of the ire of the deprived sectors — whom His Holiness Pope John Paul II called "my dearest sons" during his recent visit to Colombia. No, quite the contrary, we do it precisely because we believe in the dignity of human beings, in the unwaivable responsibility to defend this dignity, and we strongly reject those who, in the name of peace, call for arms; who in the name of reconciliation, promote distrust among brethen; who in the name of international harmony insult their neighbors and lie to the world.

Mr President, Costa Rica does not brag when it strongly defends what it believes is evidence. This is not a propagandistic trick. For the sake of pluralist democracy, Costa Rica has honestly embraced the highest and most cherised values of peace and liberty [words indistinct] respect for sovereignty, as stated at the ballot boxes. Given the external conflicts, if we turn our neutrality into our strength and alter ego, and the pen and the plow into our arsenal, it is done by conviction, not because someone has imposed this decision on us.

Back in 1955, the illustrious president of Costa Rica, Juan Rafael Mora -- who is very dear in the memory of this orgnaization in view of the presence of [words indistinct] in the galleries [words indistinct] of the OAS -- said: Peace is our glory, I want nothing else for Coast Rica. It is more solid than brilliant. Glory preserves everything and destroys nothing. Glory ensures to the fatherland all of its arms, and all of its support for the family, and all of its resources for the government.

Perhaps that authentic and sincere observance of democracy is the reason why Cost Rica has been respected among all nations, and why it can look in all directions without any resentment. Perhaps an analysis of the relations of our nations with the United States should be made in these organizations, and sometimes it entails strong arguments. However, that is not the case with us because we have received only respect and consideration throughout many years. With the United States, we maintain sincere friendship, similar to the one we have with all the nations with which we share the principles of democracy and freedom.

We are allies in the cause of democracy with the [word indistinct] and the dignity that is proper of friends who are respectful of each other. It is not that differences do not arise among our governments, but we solve these through dialogue, as is proper for those who have identified themselves in the struggle for the (?main) cause of man. Mssrs Representatives, it is with this purpose in mind, free of prejudice and rancor, that Costa Rica is here before you to advocate all the most noble causes that were the goals of Bolivar, Jefferson, and Marti; of [name indistinct], San Martin, and our Central American forefathers.

In a very simple manner, in the most pure Latin American tradition, we reiterate our faith in the ideals that have made this continent a great one and that now become very valid in view of the threatening problems. We ratify our commitments to unity and harmony, to peace and pluralism, to justice and to human and overall development, all of which are the results of a tradition of freedom that resulted from the never-ending sources of knowledge.

These pillars nourish this magnificent democratic revolution in Latin America, which has some of its most illustrious men ruling its countries in an extraordinary manner [words indistinct].

Within this framework of ideas, for 3 long years we have supported the efforts of the Contadora Group. We believe in Latin America, and we recognize the brave and worthy efforts that the four brother countries of this group have devoted to the cause of peace and cooperation in Central America, as well as the valuable support that the Lima Group has given at all times. As we have said in another document, the validity of the Contadora Document would not represent any change for Costa Rican life. [Words indistinct] has been a natural way of living for many years in our country. However, we are aware that as long as democracy is not guaranteed throughout the entire area, we would not see even the faintest light of the peace that we want for all of Central America and [words indistinct] the active participation of [words indistinct] promoted by that group of brotherly nations.

However, we have recently [words indistinct] with frankness not to endorse -- not even in a tacit manner -- that double language of those who promise something in a document and then act in an opposite manner. We have also called your attention in a friendly manner to the fact that it is not permitted to tolerate negotiations for an indefinite period of time to give true context to the document. It would be like the potter who becomes a slave to his clay [words indistinct].

Messrs Ambassadors, at this moment, the [words indistinct] the work of democracy in Central America is truly urgent. Faithfully interpreting the history of the continent that is rich in positive examples of cooperation with other regions of the world, Costa Rica has led a movement that is recognized by the European democracies, nations with which Latin America shares, not only cultural ties of great wealth, but also a common destiny that loves freedom.

There have been many achievements during the conquest [of the hemisphere]. Let us recall only one, an example. When answering a note from the Colombian Government in which [words indistinct] he explained how his pages from the constitution of Rio Negro that abolished capital punishment back in 1863 had exerted an influence and said: I have devoted my life to progress and the starting point of progress in earth is the inviolability of human life. This principle [word indistinct] the end of war and the abolition of [words indistinct]. The end of war and the abolition of [words indistinct] are the elimination of the sword. Once the word is eliminated, [words indistinct] are eliminated, as then there is no reason for being or means of [words indistinct].

The Republic of Colombia, he added, by abolishing capital punishment gives a very good example. This will give a [words indistinct] and will move as fast to glory and happiness.

The great path has been opened. Let America march, and Europe will follow.

These were the words of the great [words indistinct]. Inspired by such lofty thoughts, Costa Rica -- which also constitutionally outlawed the death penalty in 1872 and the Army in 1949 -- continued cultivating Europe's friendship, which was based upon our cultures. [Passage indistinct] the advantages of greater European participation in Central American problems, a more realistic participation, closer to the scene of the events, so that with its keen perception it could contribute to broadening the path suggested in the beatiful epistolary exchange cited earlier, and to implementing democracy on the isthmus.

Following this concept, in 1984 the Central American, EEC, and Contadora Group foreign ministers met in our capital for an open dialogue known as San Jose I.

This was a new and promising phase of cooperation between Western countries. Later meetings in Europe have reaffirmed this tendency toward brotherly rapprochement by contributing new ideas, new speakers, new perspectives, and broadening the relatively close limits of the negotiations that have taken place so far. Thus, the importance that Costa Rica attributes to this forum's third political and economic meeting to be held in Guatemala.

It is imperative to vividly revive the common underlying interest of the democracies of America and Europe in achieving total democratization in all Central American countries, and thus to create a big alliance that will exert fraternal pressure on those governments that, forswearing their initial promises, abuse democracy and violate the political and social rights of their people.

The economic and political dialogue is not sufficient by itself. We have insisted that dialogue is positive, but it should not be an endless dialogue in which no specific agreements are reached. Each extraordinary session of the assembly on cooperation for development extends traditional space and allows us to have a thorough discussion of this subject. The nations that have achieved greater scientific and technological development have an obligation to meet, not only through ideas, but also in the political and diplomatic fields. It is precisely due to their privileged economic positions that they should increase their contributions at the various levels of the international cooperation. Nevertheless, independently from that, we would like to listen to the voice of Europe -- as warm as Lafayette's response to Washington at the crucial moment -- turning the diplomatic negotiations and the economic and political cooperation into a source of fraternal unity for the benefit of democracy.

Mr President, Ambassadors, Secretary General, we have presented all these facts to you as a testimony of the deep interest of Costa Rica in propitiating another fruitful stage in the relations of the Western democracies. We have also done this because we believe that this democratic alliance would provide a cooperation that is full of [words indistinct] which would be supported by the wise warning of Juarez on respect for other people's rights and the peace.

We could say here that within this favorable scheme, Costa Rica forsees for all our people the destiny that they deserve as sons of this continent, called to be great in history because it knew how to forge the indissoluble alliance of freedom and justice, which are the only foundations of peace.

BISMARCK CARBALLO ON FSLN ACTIONS AGAINST PRIESTS

PA021852 San Jose Radio Reloj in Spanish 0100 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] A priest expelled from Nicaragua has charged that that government is conducting a campaign to legalize abortion. Msgr Bismarck Carballo charged that FSLN officials are conducting a campaign to legalize abortion. Msgr Carballo was expelled from Nicaragua together with Msgr Pablo Antonio Vega. At a press conference held this afternoon in the San Jose archbishop's palace, he said that regrettably the church in Nicaragua has no news media to guide the public against this policy, which assails human life.

Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo has received threats. Although he has a private telephone, Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo has received threats and insults through anonymous telephone calls, Msgr Bismarck Carballo said. He said that his expulsion and that of Bishop Vega from Nicaragua are seen as actions by the Sandinist government to try to eliminate Mgsr Obando y Bravo. Since he feels that he is entitled to return to his fatherland, he said that he has continued asking the FSLN to allow him to.

Msgr Carballo said: I do not think that I have to retract my statements as the Sandinist government officials are demanding to let me return to my country. He reiterated that the FSLN charges are false because he as well as Bishop Vega have never campaigned in favor of the Reagan administration's $100 million in aid to the counterrevolution. Msgr Carballo said that they have spoken clearly and concisely on the Catholic Church's hardships in Nicaragua and in defense of human rights. Bishop Vega did not come because he is taking care of duties assigned by the pope. Bishop Pablo Antonio Vega did not come to San Jose for the 2 August religious feast because he has to take care of some matters regarding Central America in Rome, at the order of His Holiness John Paul II. Meanwhile, as was reported yesterday, Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo did not accept an invitation by the San Jose Episcopal Conference lest the Sandinist government not allow him to return. However, Msgr Carballo said that the head of the Catholic Church in Nicaragua has scheduled a visit to El Salvador in August.

Nicaraguan exiles in Costa Rica participated in a pilgrimmage to Cartago. Msgr Carballo is in the country to participate in the pilgrimmage to Cartago by Nicaraguan exiles to pray to the Los Angeles Virgin for peace and liberty in Nicaragua. Nicaraguan Catholics said that his is not a political but rather a deeply religious activity. Meanwhile, as a precaution, the Costa Rican Government reinforced police protection outside the Nicaraguan Embassy in San Jose.

VARGAS DISCUSSES BLANDON REMARKS ON UNIVERSITY

PA042300 San Salvador Radio Cadena YSKL in Spanish 1730 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] We visited San Francisco Gotera in Morazan Department this past weekend and interviewed Colonel Mauricico Ernesto Vargas. We asked him about General Adolfo Blandon's remarks to a San Salvador newspaper to the effect that the university in San Salvador can become a refuge for terrorists again. Col Vargas said the following:

[Begin recording] I would like Gen Blandon's remarks to be interpreted objectively. He has not said that the university is communist or terrorist. Infiltration is the general strategy used with the masses. Infiltration occurs not only at the university but in the Armed Forces as well. Any possible controls should be put into operation. I do not think Gen Blandon meant that the university is defenseless. If order is not established, confusion and anarchy can prevail in the university. I have said a number of times that organizations, institutions, and people can be used. As I see it, Gen Blandon said that infiltration has occurred and continues to occur in the university, and that a general mass strategy is used there. [end recording]

Later, we moved on to a refugee camp in San Francisco Gotera. A resident told us that the Salvadoran Red Cross had departed. He asked us to appeal to this service institution to visit the reguee camps at San Francisco Gotera, which suffer many hardships.

COL VARGAS ON MORAZAN SITUATION, DIALOGUE

PA042237 San Salvador EL MUNDO in Spanish 2 Aug 86 p 1

[Excerpt] Colonel Mauricio Vargas, chief of Military Detachment No 4, which is headquartered at Morazan, today confirmed that the FMLN attacked Army positions at San Felipe, in Sociedad jurisdiction, yesterday.

The rebels killed three and wounded one member of the Cacahuatique Battalion. He also said that Army members killed two guerrillas and wounded several others.

In the latest transmission of the clandestine station Radio Venceremos, the guerrillas reported that they had killed 13 soldiers and wounded 6 and seized a .50-cal machine gun, 3 rifles, 8 grenades, knapsacks, and other military supplies.

Col Vargas said that the FMLN reports are Marxist propaganda. He also said that the "Heroes of Joateca" Operation has been successful and must be measured, not by the number of guerrillas killed, but by the benefits that this operation provides for the residents by protecting them properly so that they can develop their productive activities in peace. He said that the Army controls 26 Morazan municipalities, while the extremists temporarily control the rest.

Col Vargas said that as a result of this operation, peace and security are in the process of being achieved in Morazan and that the cultivation of the land and economic activities have increased during the past few weeks. Toward this purpose, problems related to cattle raising are being solved, among other things.

He denied that the FMLN has been successful, militarily speaking, and said that the FMLN's only ability is to terrorize the people indiscriminantly.

Regarding dialogue, Col Vargas said: "If we must speak of dialogue, we must say that for two people to understand each other as reasonable beings they must talk to each other. As a result of this, we will hold a dialogue. Then we only have to consider with whom we will talk. We must be very careful about the nature of our discussions because the FMLN is Marxist-Leninist oriented. They have acknowledged this themselves. This is their nature and not our own description of them. Shafik Handal ahs admitted to his communist ideology." Col Vargas also said: When two ideas oppose each other, they cancel each other out. We uphold democracy, while they uphold Marxism. This is why I think very little can be achieved by talking to these people. Political willingness must be demonstrated and a true path must be followed until every possible effort has been made. [passage omitted]

BLANDON SAYS ARMS FLOW FROM NICARAGUA CHECKED

PA050206 San Salvador EL DIARIO DE HOY in Spanish 3 Aug 86 pp 1, 45

[Text] General Adolfo Blandon, chairman of Salvadoran Armed Forces Joint Chiefs of Staff, has said that the Armed Forces have succeeded in substantially checking the flow of arms from Nicaragua for terrorist groups. He made these remarks during a breakfast briefing at EL DIARIO DE HOY on Friday morning.

Gen Blandon was accompanied by Colonels Rene Emilio Ponce and Carlos Araujo, both of the staff. Gen Blandon's briefing was attended by the newspaper's editors and executives. He said that the flow of arms for subversives has been controlled but not eliminated. He added that the subversives initially used aircraft. This system, however, was abandoned when the Costa Rican mercenary Julio Romero Talavera was captured after he crash landed in La Paz Department. Later, the subversives used boats that sailed through the Gulf of Fonseca. This has also been checked thanks to the U.S. Government cooperation. In view of this situation, Nicaragua sends weapons via Honduras, in trailers and other vehicles, but on a smaller scale.

Subversives also use the refugee camps in Honduran territory near the border with El Salvador, particularly Colomoncagua and Mesa Grande, for this purpose.

Blandon also said that the Armed Forces can defeat the terrorists, yet he added that the current war is more than military in nature. For this reason, the "United To Rebuild" plan has been put into operation. In this plan, the participation of all the productive sectors is very important. He pointed out that in view of the subversives' inability to confront the Army, the former have declared war on the people, and this is why they bring down pylons and destroy bridges, etc.

Blandon said further that this is why the unity of all Salvadorans, regardless of their political leanings, is important. He asserted that not even the world's largest armies can win a war with a stomachache. He recalled the cases of the shah of Iran and of Vietnam.

As for dialogue, Col Blandon said that the Armed Forces will never accept the integration of the terrorist groups into this institution. In addition, he said that military commanders have carte blanche to do what must be done at the front. As for the subversives' actions in the western part of the country, where the ERP [People's Revolutionary Army] has deployed some units, Blandon said it is more difficult for the terrorists to penetrate this area because the priests have not poisoned the people's minds there like they have in Guazapa and surrounding areas.

COPREFA NOTES ARMED FORCES PROMOTIONS, TRANSFERS

PA042259 San Salvador LA PRENSA GRAFICA in Spanish 2 Aug 86 pp 5, 29

[Text] Coprefa announced yesterday that Colonel Reinaldo Golcher has been promoted to the rank of general, while Colonel Gustavo Atilio Hernandez has been replaced as chief of the General Traffic Department. According to a Coprefa spokesman, Col Golcher, director of the Treasury Police, has been promoted according to the respective regulations. Although the orders from the High Command were announced this afternoon, it was learned last night from official sources that his promotion was the only one confirmed from the various promotions that have been rumored since early this week.

The other changes included in the orders are: Lieutenant Colonel Jose David Batres, promoted to colonel; Colonel Carlos Alfredo Rivas, appointed commander of the Armed Forces Military Training Center; Colonel Galileo Conde Vasquez, appointed commander of the Air Force base at El Salvador International Airport.

Lieutenant Colonel Francisco Elena Fuentes has been appointed chief of psychological operations, Lieutenant Colonel Joaquin Arnoldo Cerna Flores has been appointed commander of the Armed Forces Transmissions Training Center, replacing Colonel Ciro Roque Lopez, who has been named commander of Military Detachment No 3, with headquarters in La Union.

Lieutenant Colonel Guillermo Alfredo Benavides Moreno has been transferred to the Scholarship Corps [Cuerpo de Becarios] of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Lieutenant Colonel Julio Cesar Benavides has been appointed chief of the General Traffic Department to replace Col Gustavo Atilio Hernandez.

OPPOSITION PARTIES JOIN PDC IN SEARCH FOR PEACE

PA050327 Hamburg DPA in Spanish 2036 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] San Salvador, 4 Aug (DPA) -- Political party leaders announced today at a hotel in San Salvador that the most right-wing sector in El Salvador has joined the ruling Christian Democratic Party [PDC] in the search for a national peace plan.

The announcement was made by party delegates, to wit: Roberto D'Aubuisson, on behalf of the Nationalist Republican Alliance [ARENA]; Julio Rey Prendes, Fidel Chavez Mena, and Roberto Viera on behalf of the PDC; and Ernesto Alwood on behalf of Democratic Action Party.

"This is our first meeting, and its purpose is to work out a national peace plan that may be presented to the government or to the rebels," D'Aubuisson told reporters. He added that the aim is to strengthen the position at the dialogue with the guerrillas so the government will not be taken as an entity representing the opinion of the entire nation. According to D'Aubuisson, there are disagreements regarding some aspects of the government's approach to the process of dialogue, and this may cause problems in the future if they are settled before the third round of talks. [sentence as received]

Rey Prendes, who holds the post of culture and communications minister in the administration, said: "This is the realization of an idea that had been developing for some time. We will try to look for rallying points, not differences."

The National Conciliation Party, PCN, which is one of the largest parties along with ARENA and the PDC, was not represented at the noon meeting. However, it was explained that its participation could not be coordinated because a sector of the country is on holiday due to the celebration of El Salvador's national patron saint festivities, but that the PCN agrees with these meetings.

The party delegates said that even though the purpose of this alliance is not to draw up a peace plan before the third dialogue, they will meet today with President Jose Napoleon Duarte to learn about the peace counterproposal the rebels delivered to San Salvador Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas.

President Duarte met with the archbishop on Sunday to learn about this proposal and certain aspects regarding a possible exchange of political prisoners for Colonel Omar Napoleon Avalos, whom the guerrillas have held captive since 26 October 1985.

The party leaders said today that the fact that no union leaders were invited to the meeting does not mean that they are being ignored. They said that, in principle, they thought of holding this meeting at the level of legally registered political parties.

This is the second time that an alliance has been formed in the country by radical and moderate conservative groups. The first time was in 1969, when the National Union, including leftist forces, was formed in the wake of the "100-hour war with Honduras."

Venceremos Comments on 'Pact'

PA050301 (Clandestine) Radio Venceremos in Spanish to El Salvador 0000 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Today at noon, the detestable faces of Roberto D'Aubuisson and Julio Adolfo Rey Prendes were seen on television.

They were announcing to the country that a new pact between the PDC and ARENA had been made: In other words, a pact between Duarte's followers and the death squads.

Who will have any doubts from now on? None other than Rey Prendes himself, representing the PDC, and Maj Roberto D'Aubuisson, representing ARENA, were seen on television announcing the new pact. In this manner, the puppet and (?buffoon) were shown holding hands.

Has Roberto D'Aubuisson forgotten the many times that he has called the PDC communists, terrorists, etc? Has Rey Prendes forgotten the many times that the PDC has accused Roberto D'Aubuisson of being Msgr Romero's assassin and leader of the death squads?

Who will have any doubts from now on? They are two of a kind. They are part of the same plan and project. Jose Napoleon Duarte and the PDC's isolation and exhaustion is such that they had to look to allies for reinforce merit. They know that they are much too weak to confront the ideas and proposals offered by the FMLN and the FDR.

The puppets and [words indistinct] formed an alliance planned by the Yankee embassy. This was done to prevent the participation of other national sectors in the dialogue process. They have said that they will present a peace proposal. However, the trade unions, associations, and professionals, or anyone else, may not participate. Only the puppets and the assassins -- the eternal enemies of the people -- will be allowed to participate.

Some time ago, the Yankees spent millions of dollars in propaganda to present Duarte as a person who had nothing to do with others those that have been described as extremists. Today the North Americans publicly and openly united Duarte with the representatives of the criminals.

Who will have any doubts from now on? Like our people say, they are birds of a feather. What will the rank and file of the PDC have to say about this? Aside from selling their souls to the Yankees and the Army gorillas, they have now decided to make a pact with the man they have accused of being Msgr Romero's assassin.

What will ARENA's ultrarightist members say? They hate the (?fish) and [word indistinct] communists. Who will have any doubts from now on? In this manner, Rey Prendes has unashameldly called D'Aubuisson a friend. This is proof of (?pragmatism) and opportunism.

In March 1980, Rey Prendes himself said: D'Aubuisson goes or we go. Today, they have shown themselves in public as if they were reaching an agreement among parties. However, the U.S. plan; and they are also enemies of the people. Using their own words: the extremists, [word indistinct] and antipopular [word indistinct] have united once again.

FMLN REPORTS 407 ARMY CASUALTIES IN JULY

[Text] San Jose, 4 Aug (AFP) -- The FMLN reported today in San Jose that the Salvadoran guerrillas inflicted 407 casualties on the Army during the month of July.

In a communique, the FMLN also reported that 57 of the Army casualties occurred during ambushes by rebels, while 249 were inflicted with rifle fire. According to the report, the guerrillas' "most important" actions in July include one in Usulutan in the country's southeast against an Atonal battalion company. In addition, an energy substation and a train in La Libertad in the country's southwest and another train in San Salvador department were sabotaged.

In addition, the FMLN today denounced "a new scorched earth operation" by the Salvadoran Army in Cabanas and Cuscatlan Departments in the country's northern central sector between 13 and 25 July. According to the rebel source, several infantry battalions, supported by Armed Forces planes and helicopters, participated in the operation. The report said: "Troops and aircraft of the High Command destroyed homes and crops and persecuted and detained peasants." The report also said that 13 people have been detained. The report appealed to humanitarian organizations to denounce "this inhuman act against civilians."

FMLN ANALYZES PRESIDENT AZCONA'S VISIT

PA022352 (Clandestine) Radio Farabundo Marti in Spanish to El Salvador 2300 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] Why did Azcona come to El Salvador? As we said yesterday, Azcona came following orders from his master Ronald Reagan, who wants to implement his warmongering strategy in Central America more effectively, seeking the military defeat of the FMLN and the ouster of the Sandinist government.

What did Azcona and Duarte talk about? In between sumptuous cocktail parties, banquets, and merrymaking, this pair of puppets talked about political and military coordination to defeat the FMLN, about cooperation with the CIA mercenaries to continue attacking Nicaragua, and about the forceful repatriation of thousands of Salvadorans who have sought refuge in Honduras. They also discussed ways to make the Contadora Group's peace efforts fail, and the need to revive the putrefied corpse of the Central American Defense Council, Condeca, as a useful instrument for imperialism's counterinsurgency war in Central America. Azcona and Duarte hypocritically talked about national sovereignty, about the peoples' right to self-determination, and about peace, human rights, and democracy. They did not discuss these topics [words indistinct] their criminal machinations against Nicaragua and the FMLN. In conclusion, the two puppets talked and agreed on how they can better serve their imperialist masters.

What does Azcona's visit mean for our peoples? For El Salvador and Honduras, the meeting between these two [word indistinct] servants of Reagan will mean more repression, more violations of human rights, more military operations in the border areas, the eviction of more peasants, a further prolongation of the war, and more suffering for our peoples.

How was the atmosphere during Azcona's visit? No one could hide the hypocrisy that prevailed during the entire encounter. Insincere laughter, forced handshakes and hugs, unexplainable decorations, and cheap praise. It seemed like a show in the eyes of a stranger, but for our people it was clear that behind all that farce were the U.S. Government's warmongering plans.

What conclusion can we reach from this visit? Azcona Hoyo's forced visit to El Salvador is a clear symptom of the quick defeat that the U.S. plans in the region have suffered. It also shows the total weakness of Duarte's regime and its (?imminent) and definitive defeat.

It is also symptomatic of the (?process) and strategic defeat that the CIA mercenaries who attack Nicaragua are experiencing. Azcona came because Duarte needs his [word indistinct], because the mercenaries and former Somozist guards need moral and material support to survive, and because imperialism's plans in the region demand that kind of collaboration from all puppet governments.

FMLN DERAILS SAN MIGUEL-USULUTAN TRAIN

[Text] While the gorillas of the High Command, the gorillas of the garrisons, and the make-believe elite battalions talk garbage, the FMLN carries out guerrilla victories. At 0730 on 1 August, an FMLN unit placed explosives on the railroad tracks in the area of San Carlos (de la Napo), San Miguel Jurisdiction. The train was coming from San Miguel to Usulutan.

The train derailed as a result of the explosion. The locomotive and several cars were badly damaged. Our companeros withdrew with no problems. The High Command and its puppet Army are unable to halt the sabotage actions that our guerrilla fighters are courageously carrying out. There have been trains derailed in the San Salvador area and in the eastern area. Electicity sabotage is frequent throughout the national territory. How about the High Command? They are just fine, thank you.

DEFENSE MINISTER ON EFFECTS OF U.S. CONTRA AID

PA050359 Guatemala City Radio-Television Guatemala in Spanish 0400 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Defense Minister Jaime Hernandez Mendez said yesterday that aid granted by the United States to Nicaraguan rebel groups will have repercussions on Central American subversive groups in general.

[Begin recording] [Hernandez] There is no doubt about that. The current situation in Nicaragua [words indistinct] target of the subversive situation in Central America and makes it want to extend its influence to Central American countries. We also see a certain influence on their part, particularly the Republic of Guatemala, as they are now receiving some logistical aid from neighboring countries.

[Reporter] There have been several armed clashes with the guerrillas in the past few weeks. Could you comment on this?

[Hernandez] That is the result of our search for the various operational commandos that are active here in the area (?under my jurisdiction). There were some [word indistinct] clashes, because that is what the soldiers fighting the subversives need: some luck to find the subversion and then prolonged engagement to physically eliminate the subversive groups affecting our country.

[Reporter] Are the guerrillas continuing to provoke the Guatemalan Army?

[Hernandez] Yes, the subversives have made some attempts against a military detachment, specifically in northern Guatemala. Detachment members are on alert.

We have maintained a peaceful attitude toward this kind of activity, because we believe that they are provoking us to involve us in actions against the population, which we are avoiding at all costs. [end recording]

HERNANDEZ SAYS U.S., FRANCE TO GIVE AID

PA050335 Panama City ACAN in Spanish 2310 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Guatemala City, 4 Aug (ACAN-EFE) -- Defense Minister General Jaime Hernandez Mendez said today: "Guatemala will get $35 million in military aid from the United States and France." The chief of the Guatemalan Army said that "France may grant $20 million in aid for repairs and military equipment" according to the offer made recently and in private by a French Government adviser, whom he did not identify.

Gen Hernandez Mendez told the press that the Defense Ministry "will make the necessary contacts with the French Government to conclude the negotiations for this assistance." The Army chief also said that the Christian Democratic government of President Vinicio Cerezo "is awaiting $15 million in military aid from the United States." According to Gen Hernandez Mendez, this money will be spent by the Guatemalan Army "to purchase spare parts for the helicopters used to help civilians."

He also said: "We will purchase vehicles and bulldozing equipment to build roads in the country's interior. We will not purchase armament." The defense minister feels that, with the aid from the United States and France, the military program for spare parts for helicopters can be accomplished. He asserted: "Not a single cent of the aid from the two countries will be used to purchase lethal weapons."

The United States suspended military aid to Guatemala in 1977 "due to human rights violations." This aid, however, has been resumed since Christian Democrat President Cerezo assumed office. According to the defense minister, this is the "first time that France has offered military aid to the Guatemalan Army."

HONDURAS

FOREIGN MINISTER DISCUSSES U.S. TIES, ICJ

PA030215 Tegucigalpa Voz de Honduras Network in Spanish 1812 GMT 1 Aug 86

[News conference given by Foreign Minister Carlos Lopez Contreras after he and President Jose Azcona Hoyo met with Elliott Abrams, U.S. assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question indistinct]

[Lopex Contreras] In the economic aspect, we discussed the possibility of increasing the U.S. Government economic assistance to strengthen our country's economic capabilities and our security.

[Question indistinct]

[Lopez Contreras] This has not been decided yet; it is being studied. It is closely associated with the resolution recently approved by the U.S. Congress.

The House of Representatives approved it, but the Senate has not approved it yet [words indistinct] $300 million for helping the Central American democratic countries.

[Question indistinct]

[Lopez Contreras] No, not the terrorism problems. We have not talked about terrorism.

[Question indistinct]

[Lopez Contreras] Well, the possibility of increasing U.S. assistance for continuing the training and [words indistinct] of the Armed Forces.

[Question indistinct]

[Lopez Contreras] Honduras is not participating in an arms race. You know perfectly well that the Honduran Armed Forces do not even have 20,000 soldiers. However, for both our internal security as well as for protecting our borders -- which are very long, as we border three countries -- we need to have the Armed Forces.

[Question indistinct]

[Lopez Contreras] We have always done so.

[Reporter] Does this mean that Honduras will (?request) assistance from the International Court of Justice [ICJ] in the suit filed by Nicaragua? Could this not favor, in a certain way, El Salvador, in view of the case we have pending with El Salvador at The Hague?

[Lopez Contreras] I have already explained that, but I will gladly explain it again. In the first place, Honduras is making use of a right granted by the ICJ statute and has therefore modified its (?stand) through a resolution approved in May by the Congress of the Republic. This is a modification of the jurisdiction of the ICJ concerning Honduras. That is an affirmative action, that is, a unilateral action by Honduras allowed by international law. Now, concerning the suit filed by the Nicaraguan Government against Honduras, we -- the government, the Foreign Ministry -- have not voiced a definite stand yet. In other words, we have not given any answer. We have not received the official documents from the ICJ. First we have to study them carefully, and then we will issue a pronouncement once we have adopted a stand that is in the best interests of Honduras. Therefore, it is much too early to say that Honduras has (?disavowed) the jurisdiction of the ICJ. We have not done that, we have merely (?challenged) the competence of the court. We will eventually issue a pronouncement on our stand. One thing is the compulsory jurisdiction of the court, and that is what we have modified. Another thing is the voluntary jurisdiction of the court. In other words, if we have modified the compulsory jurisdiction, this does not necessarily mean that we will not appear in court, answer charges and participate in a trial. That is not the direct consequence. We are going to study that, and we are going to make the decision that best suits the interests of Honduras.

[Question indistinct]

[Lopez Contreras] [Words indistinct] modifications. That is one part, there are many other aspects that we have modified.

[Question indistinct]

[Lopez Contreras] That is one of them, and the others are equally important.

[Question indistinct]

[Lopez Contreras] Another basic reason for modifying the jurisdiction of the court is closely associated with the advisability of Honduras participating in those trials having to do with border issues [words indistinct]. Right now, we have opened the possibility of participating in a hearing with the Republic of El Salvador for solving our border problem, as you have heard [words indistinct]. However, in no way does this modification have any influence on the competence of the court to solve the Honduran-Salvadoran problem. The competence of the court is specifically for this case in enforcing the 1980 Peace Treaty.

[Question indistinct]

[Lopez Contreras] We have been concerned, and we do not want Honduran territory to be used as a platform for [words indistinct] forceful measures against neighboring countries and [words indistinct] a rebellion movement against the Nicaraguan government should operate in their territory and not in Honduran territory.

[Question indistinct]

[Lopez Contreras] Look, here in Honduras they are not operating with the authorization of the Government of Honduras. Thus, I cannot tell you what they said, that was a [words indistinct].

[Reporter] Is this the first time that Honduras has made such a statement to the gringos?

[Lopez Contreras] What statement?

[Reporter] The one to the effect that Honduras will not serve as a platform for...

[Lopez Contreras, interrupting] No, you heard it being officially said by the Honduran Government in international meetings, as well as beofre the countries of the area.

[Reporter] Mr Foreign Minister, what could be done if the contras prefer to continue with their armed struggle form [words indistinct] to Tegucigalpa?

[Lopez Contreras] This is a public order issue. It is up to the public order authorities to protect the people and the cities.

[Reporter] When will the Foreign Ministry issue a pronouncement to the Honduran people?

[Lopez Contreras] As soon as it is ready and the court is notified.

[Reporter] Couldn't Honduras also sue Nicaragua at The Hague, inasmuch as that conflict has always caused us much damage?

[Lopez Contreras] Perfectly well.

[Reporter] Has the Foreign Ministry or the government thought about that?

[Lopez Contreras] That is just a possibility. I do not want to make any advance statements, I repeat, because this is being studied. However, there is a wide range of possibilities.

[Reporter] Is the problem with Nicaragua as important as the problem with El Salvador, [words indistinct] the Hondurans?

[Lopez] No, the problem with El Salvador is as important as the [words indistinct] the Honduran foreign policy, and has been for many years. The government wants to solve the border problem once and for all, and we have found that the Salvadoran Government is also very much interested in this.

[Reporter] [Words indistinct] the Contadora Group?

[Lopez Contreras] It depends on how the peace negotiations go.

JOINT COMMISSION WITH EL SALVADOR MARKS BORDER

PA031428 Tegucigalpa EL HERALDO in Spanish 1 Aug 86 p 3

[Text] Honduran and Salvadoran border commissions have virtually concluded measuring Border Section 7, in the Goascoran region, which covers a 73-km strip. This was announced yesterday by the office of the foreign relations secretary. The two commissions worked in that region last week and established a definite border between the two states.

According to the announcement, officials and technicians in charge of establishing the border will begin working in Section 2 in the next few days. That section is 10 km long and is located in the Zapotal-Cayahuanea area. The General Peace Treaty signed in October 1980 divided 66 percent of the border into 7 sections. The border limits in each of these sections were to be marked while the two countries discussed the boundary for the remainder of the border area, but it was not possible to establish any limits then. According to reports, the delegations from the two countries will be going to the border area to verify markings of Border Section 7.

It has been reported that the work carried out by the former Mixed Commission on Limits has been acknowledged. That commission marked border areas during the 5 years it functioned. Border markings in the areas that have been mentioned have been possible mainly because the Salvadoran guerrillas do not operate in those sectors, a fact that facilitates the work of the technicians. Border marking in other areas, especially in the country's west, is a serious problem, because nearby Salvadoran areas are operations centers of the Salvadoran rebels.

CONTENTS OF TREATY WITH COLOMBIA DISCLOSED

PA030345 Panama City ACAN in Spanish 0130 GMT 3 Aug 86

[Text] Tegucigalpa, 2 Aug (ACAN-EFE) -- Honduran Foreign Minister Carlos Lopez Contreras and Colombian Foreign Minister Augusto Ramirez Ocampo today signed a treaty delimiting their maritime borders on the Colombian island of San Andres, it was officially reported here.

The text of the treaty, which was dislosed in Tegucigalpa tonight, states: "The maritime border between the Republic of Honduras and the Republic of Colombia is determined by the following coordinates:

"Point 1: Latitude 14 degrees 59 minutes 8 seconds north; longitude 82 degrees west

"Point 2: Latitude 14 degrees 59 minutes 8 seconds north; longitude 79 degrees 56 minutes west.

"Point 3: Latitude 15 degrees 30 minutes 10 seconds north; longitude 79 degrees 56 minutes west

"Point 4: Latitude 15 degrees 46 minutes north; longitude 80 degrees 3 minutes 55 seconds west

"Point 5: Latitude 15 degrees 58 minutes 40 seconds north; longitude 79 degrees 56 minutes 40 seconds west.

"The maritime border between points 4 and 5 will be determined by the arc of a circle, the radius of which is measured from a point located in coordinates 15 degrees 47 minutes 50 seconds north and 79 degrees 51 minutes 20 seconds west.

"Point 6: Latitude 16 degrees 4 minutes 15 seconds north and longitude 79 degrees 50 minutes 32 seconds west.

"From the last point mentioned, the maritime border will continue east, passing through parallel 16 degrees 4 minutes 15 seconds north, up to the point where the border must be delimited with a third state.

"The maritime border agreed upon is outlined, for illustrative purposes only, in Nautical Map No 28000, published by the 'Defense Mapping Agency Hydrographic/ Topographic Center, Washington, D.C., [name and address given in English] 74th edition of 28 February 1985.' The map, which was signed by the plenipotentiaries, is annexed to this treaty with the uderstanding that in every case, its specifications will prevail.

"The delimitation announced in the preceding article will not affect the demarcation of maritime borders established or to be established in the future between the contractors and third states, as long as that demarcation does not affect the jurisdiction recognized as belonging to the other contracting party through this treaty.

"The beds or deposits of hydrocarbons or natural gas located on either side of the established line will be exploited in such a way that the distribution of the volume of resources obtained from that bed or deposit will be proportional to the volume of found on each side of the line, respectively.

"Any difference between the contracting parties over the interpretation of this treaty will be resolved by seeking a peaceful solution based on international law.

"This treaty will be subject to approval following the constitutional requirements in each of the signatory countries and will become effective upon the exchange of the respective instruments of ratification."

The treaty was signed in duplicate.

BOMB DAMAGES RADIO NEWS DIRECTOR'S HOUSE

PA041442 Tegucigalpa Cadena Audio Video in Spanish 1130 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] A powerful bomb exploded at the house of Rodrigo Wong Arevalo, director of the newscasts of Radio America. The explosion took place at approximately 0400 in the garage at his residence. It destroyed Wong Arevalo's car, broke windows, and damaged part of the house.

Fortunately, the bedrooms are far from the garage and there were no casualties.

At this time several patrol cars are at Wong Arevalo's residence to make the appropriate investigations.

FDN, UNO Condemn Attack

PA050305 Panama City ACAN in Spanish 0027 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Tegucigalpa, 4 Aug (ACAN-EFE) -- The rebel organizations FDN and Nicaraguan Opposition Unity (UNO), condemned the terrorist attack here today on reporter Rodrigo Wong Arevalo, deputy director of Tegucigalpa's Radio America.

"We strongly condemn the wave of violence, terrorism, and subversion that the Sandino-communist tyranny has unleashed against the sister nations of Central America, especially against the Republic of Honduras." This statement is included in a communique the rebels released today.

According to the rebels, this morning's attack on Wong Arevalo and the attack carried out on 24 July in a residential area in Tegucigalpa "are nothing more than links in a chain of violence implemented in the region by terror international, which has its general headquarters for Central America in Managua."

"Just as the Central American dignitaries and analysts have said, the Nicaraguan communist regime is the destabilizing factor in Central America, and there will be no peace in this region while that regime continues to exist," the communique adds.

According to the "counterrevolutionary" directorate, the Sandinist government has undertaken a campaign to discredit "the freedom fighters."

"Our struggle," the communique states, " is precisely against the terrorists who, like the nine Marxist commanders, from very beginning were known for their attacking banks, planting bombs in homes and airports, creating innocent victims, and violating the basic rules of international law."

FDN-UNO reiterated that their struggle is "against the nine terrorists of Managua who today misgovern our homeland."

Wong Arevalo and his family were the targets of a terrorist attack this morning at 0400 when a bomg, placed under the seat of his car, exploded.

The explosion did not cause casualties because at that hour the Wong Arevalo family was asleep. However, it did destroy the car and the entrance of the house located in La Primavera neighborhood, in the southeastern sector of Tegucigalpa.

NICARAGUA

COSTA RICAN PAPER INTERVIEWS DANIEL ORTEGA

PA012153 San Jose RUMBO in Spanish 25-31 Jul 86 pp 12, 15

["Exculsive" interview with President Daniel Ortega by Ignacio Santos Pasamontes at the Government House in Managua on 17 July]

[Text] [Santos] A few days ago you said the Governments of Costa Rica, Honduras, and El Salvador should "act with more seriousness," that they are "accomplices" in the U.S. policy toward Central America, and that they "were playing with fire." What do you mean when you say they have acted with "little seriousness?"

[Ortega] They have acted with little seriousness and with little responsibility not only regarding Nicaragua but also regarding their own peoples, because the first responsibility those presidents have is to their own peoples. During the Esquipulas meeting I felt that all the leaders of the region shared an authentic concern about the Central American situation; however, at the same time one immediately noted the lack of willingness on the part of some rulers to resolve the crisis.

[Santos] To what do you attribute that lack of willingness?

[Ortega] To U.S. pressure. It was left very clear that U.S. pressure is a decisive element among those governments. I told them that to achieve peace in Central America we must necessarily pass through a time of strong disagreement with U.S. policy but that this can be overcome in the medium term, while a war would have an insurmountable long-term cost. Therefore, it is better to pay the price of a momentary difference with U.S. policy to achieve peace than to accept the U.S. Government's constant blackmail about withdrawing financial support from Governments such as Costa Rica, Honduras, and El Salvador. That will only lead to a confrontation among Central American countries, to U.S. military intervention, and to total war in Central America.

[Santos] In the case of the Costa Rican Government, why do you accuse it of acting that way when just a few months ago President Oscar Arias Sanchez said in the United States that he was against aid to the Nicaraguan contras?

[Ortega] I think President Arias was following a very consistent position when he made those statements, but later all that was placed in doubt when he tried to draw up a foreign policy based on the type of domestic regime Nicaragua has. We differentiate between the attitude of the Costa Rican Government, the Monge administration, and the Arias administration and the attitude of other Governments such as those of Honduras and El Salvador. President Arias' attitude of expressing opposition to the $100 million in aid is very important...

[Santos] But on the other hand you [and President Arias] had a confrontation in Esquipulas.

[Ortega] Well, one can engage in an argument about the concept of democracy. However, I want to appeal to the dignity and firmness of the Costa Rican people and President Arias so we can overcome this crisis in the region. I am not asking President Arias to sympathize with the Nicaraguan regime. We have our points of view. Just as he can criticize the Nicaraguan Government, I can criticize the Costa Rican regime. However, the problem is that there is a foreign power called the United States that is affecting the stability of Central America and that pressures the governments of the region so they become instruments to deepen the crisis.

The way things are going, a Central American war will break out and, as I have said, it will involve all of us; no one will be saved from it.

[Santos] In Costa Rica, there is an atmosphere that is hostile to Sandinism. There is even the idea that a regime like that in Nicaraguan can affect the Costa Rican democracy. To what do you attribute that feeling among the Costa Rican people?

[Ortega] To a fierce anti-Nicaraguan campaign in Costa Rica. Through the CIA the United States has invested many resources in Costa Rica and has created feelings against the Sandinist revolution.

[Santos] But Commander, how do you respond to that feeling among the Costa Rican public?

[Ortega] In the face of such campaigns I have always replied that the best thing is to visit Nicaragua. Nicaragua does not close its doors to anyone. Whoever wants to can enter or leave Nicaragua. This is not a closed society. In the face of the slanderous campaigns against Nicaragua, the best thing one can do is to invite the Costa Ricans to come see the reality of the Nicaraguan revolution.

[Santos] After the approval of the $100 million, the government closed the newspaper LA PRENSA for an indefinite period and expelled two priests. In addition, political sectors of the opposition reported that their actions were greatly limited in Nicaragua. What is the meaning of these measures taken by the Sandinist government?

[Ortega] These are normal measures in view of the war that the country is facing. These are defensive measures. We do not oppose political pluralism. We do not oppose bishops' getting involved in politics and making speeches against the revolution. This does not worry us because it is a right earned by Nicaraguans. However, when the owners of LA PRENSA, for example, and certain members of the church go beyond the institutional framework to get involved in politics and become allies of the United States, which is making war against Nicaragua, then that is tantamount to an act of treason. In the United States, for example, the U.S. Government just sentenced a spy to two life-prison terms plus 50 years. In Nicaragua, the maximum sentence is 30 years, and these gentlemen who are defending the $100 million in Washington and who were brought there by the CIA deserve 30 years in prison. Therefore, we chose the lesser of the two sanctions.

[Santos] In the case of LA PRENSA, how did the censorship system fail?

[Ortega] The sanction was against the LA PRENSA owners. The newspaper is just a means of communication that is put out by the reporters, but the policy is established by the owners. The owners of that newspaper are the ones who went to the United States to defend the mercenary forces and Reagan's policy against Nicaragua. What else could we do with these people who were violating the law and betraying the country? We would be justified in sending them to jail for 30 years, but instead we opted for a less costly sanction and perhaps less painful, and thus we suspended the newspaper's circulation for an indefinite period. Taking into account that it is a newspaper financed by the CIA, we are not afraid of it. Within the framework of freedom of expression in this country, we are not afraid of any statement that the CIA may want to make through a newspaper it finances. If we did not have a war and an aggression under way here, LA PRENSA could continue to operate without any problem, even without censorship, regardless of the fact that it is financed by the CIA. However, in a war situation, this cannot be tolerated.

[Santos] In this war situation you mention, could Sandinism impose stronger sanctions against those who endanger the revolution? For example, could execution by a firing squad be implemented in Nicaragua?

[Ortega] No. We have signed international agreements. We did not establish the death penalty when the revolution succeeded, and we are not going to establish it now. It is not within our plans to establish a death penalty.

[Santos] Opponents of Sandinism in Nicaragua have told me about the great limitations under which they live in the country. What is your opinion?

[Ortega] We are interested in the political opposition, and we promote that opposition. Despite the state of emergency, the political groups that are members of the Constituent Assembly, as well as those who are not, continue to meet and maintain their offices. Their offices have not been seized. They hold meetings, issue communiques, and hold news conferences. It is true that they have certain restrictions, but is the Nicaraguan Government responsible for this? If those political parties want us to lift these restrictions, they should act more decidedly to put an end to the U.S. aggression so that we can have normalcy again. Normalcy and stability are needed for democracy to work. If efforts were made to destabilize Costa Rica thorugh violent actions, that country would adopt several measures that would affect their people's free movement, and freedom of the press would also be affected. This has occurred in the United States. It happened during World War II. I have been watching U.S. television recently, and they have been talking about the fact that there is a guilty feeling among the U.S. people because of the actions that were carried out against people of Japanese descent back then.

[Santos] Sectors that oppose Sandinism are saying that with the draft constitution that is being discussed, an effort is being made to institutionalize Sandinism and close every possibility for political pluralism to exist. Among other aspects, they mentioned the control on the economy and the centralization of power in the hands of the president. What is your opinion?

[Ortega] All the political parties have the right to voice their opinions. Each political party wants a constitution, but in its own way. This is very natural and human. In addition, it is within the framework of the free play of political pluralism in Nicaragua. This is one more expression of political pluralism because if it did not exist, they would not be talking that way. A similar polemic would appear in the process to draft a constitution in any other country. I would say that it is a necessary polemic that increases when a situation of political tension is under way...

[Santos] But the polemic you mentioned became nonexistent when the political parties that were participating in the process stopped participating.

[Ortega] Well, not all of them because some of them are still participating. In addition, some come and go. This is part of the parliamentary system.

[Santos] In recent months, Sandinism has been strongly criticized by organizations that defend human rights such as Amnesty International.

[Ortega] That is true...

[Santos] And the International Human Rights League.

[Ortega] That is true. However, on the topic of human rights, one must always refer to those who have an attitude that could be described as impartial. The opposition parties can accuse us of human rights violations, and the government will defend itself. The U.S. Government can accuse us of the same, and the government will defend itself, but the ruling of the organizations favors Nicaragua regarding the systematic violations of human rights. They say that there is no systematic violation of these rights in Nicaragua. It is true that they mentioned certain violations but only as isolated actions, and they also mentioned the efforts made by the government to solve this problem. However, these reports also point to human rights violations in other countries in the area, in Costa Rica, Honduras, El Salvador, and Guatemala. I would say that Costa Rica and Nicaragua were the countries least affected by these reports.

[Santos] But several human rights violations were mentioned in Amnesty International's most recent report...

[Ortega] Yes...

[Santos] In fact, the Human Rights International League recently reported in New York that there were between 3,500 and 4,000 political prisoners in Nicaragua...

[Ortega] That is completely false. It is untrue that there are 3,500 political prisoners here, and that can be verified. There are not 3,500 political prisoners. In other words, there are 3,500 prisoners here, but we would have to see how many of them were Somozist guardsmen, how many of them have been under arrest since 19 July [1979], how many of them were taken prisoner for involvement in armed counterrevolutionary activities, and how many thousands of prisoners who have been in jail have been favored by the yearly pardon that the government is granting. We recently pardoned more than 400 prisoners, which included a man who was a National Guard sergeant and a Somoza aide.

[Santos] A few days ago, during an interview granted to LA NACION, [Nicaragua's LA PRENSA publisher] Pablo Antonio Cuadra said that after the approval of the $100 million, the Sandinist government, in order to hit Reagan, should have restored public freedoms and individual guarantees. Don't the latest measures (closing LA PRENSA, expelling two priests, and putting more limitations on political parties) give President Reagan the right to say that there are no public freedoms nor individual guarantees in Nicaragua?

[Oretega] I think that instead this has shown that there are public freedoms and individual guarantees in Nicaragua. Because if, as Reagan said, there were not public freedoms in Nicaragua, then, why make such a fuss over closing LA PRENSA? Why make such a fuss over the expulsion of a few clergymen? If none of this existed, it would not be possible to adopt measures of this kind. This has shown that those freedoms do exist in Nicaragua and, because they exist certain sanctions are sometimes applied to those who violate the laws. But, as we have said, these are temporary measures. They do not represent a radicalization of the process.

[Santos] You have said that Nicaragua's main problem is the war, but you have also referred to problems like the shortages and deficiencies in production and in health services.

[Oretega] Nicaragua has not escaped from all the problems currently experienced by Central America and all Latin American countries. Without a war, Nicaragua would still face the same problems faced by the other regional countries: the big economic problem, the prices on the international market, and the debt problem. This situation is seriously aggravated by the war. Our biggest efforts are geared at producing, but production means big tensions because there is an entire action aimed at destroying it. Production, however, has been maintained.

[Santos] But it has declined notoriously in recent years.

[Ortega] It has declined in some areas; in others it has not. For instance, in recent years we have had historic coffee crops; this year we had a smaller crop. In the case of cotton, we also had problems with the agrochemical products, there were plagues, there were weather problems. In the case of rice, we obtained a bigger production than normal, and we have increased our rice production as well as that of staples like corn and beans. We are suspending our staple imports and are engaged in a domestic production effort. We cannot speak of a general production decline. It is true, however, that as a whole, production has been seriously affected. The social programs have been the most affected, as we have had to transfer foreign exchange from that sector to the productive sector; we cannot satisfy the needs of all sectors.

[Santos] Do you feel that a strong feeling of dissatisfaction with the government might develop as a result of the shortages of food products and basic grains and the disproportion between wages and prices?

[Ortega] I would say no. Here you will find a general "cry" ["grita"] (clamor by the people) because everyone here has been given the right to demand food, and that is an obligation that the government has assumed. If we go to some other Central American country, we find that the government does not have that obligation to the people. There it is a matter of who can buy, who can survive with his or her wages. The government does not have an obligation. Here, however, we have the obligation to make staples available to all Nicaraguans. When these items are in short supply, there is protest. Hypothetically speaking, the simplest way to confront the crisis would be to implement the IMF measures, to not acquire any obligation with the people, and to let each person look after himself. The stores would then be filled with products, only a few would be able to buy those products, and the prices would level off. However, since we have a revolution here, and this revolution has told the people that everyone has the right to eat...there are peasants here who in the past did not know about oil, beans, meat, or eggs. Today they have the right to demand that.

[Santos] When you refer to Central America's problems, you exclude Guatemala, as when you talk about the shortage problems, the political problems.

[Ortega] No, I do not exclude Guatemala...

[Santos] But you only speak about Costa Rica, Honduras, and El Salvador.

[Ortega] I am speaking about the countries that constantly question Nicaragua. We do not have that problem with Guatemala. Guatemala is respectful of Nicaragua's regime. However, we are constantly being questioned by El Salvador, Honduras, and Costa Rica regarding Nicaragua's domestic situation. So we draw these comparisons with those countries that are more involved in the controversy about Nicaragua's regime.

[Santos] In short, Commander, how do you view Nicaragua's future?

[Ortega] I view it with optimism, because despite the war and the difficulties, we have always been aware that a revolution goes through difficult moments, and because it experiences difficult moments there is true change, a profound change. The difficult moments will be overcome. All the great developments of mankind, all the great protagonists of humanity, Christ himself and Christianity, experienced difficult moments, terrible moments. Nicaragua is going through a "calvary," but it, too, will come back to life.

[Santos] Finally, Commander, a difficult question: How does Daniel Ortega view himself as an individual, what are his major flaws and his major virtues?

[Ortega] How difficult that is. The truth is that have I not subjected myself to an in-depth analysis in search of either virtues or flaws. I have always tried, more or less as I go along, to remain watchful of my own actions, that is, of whether or not I am acting in accordance with my principles. I think the important thing is to remain constantly watchful of oneself and not to fall into a state of self-satisfaction with one's performance so that when one does something, one is satisfied, but not filled with vanity. I think it is important for a man to always remember that in the final analysis, when it comes to certain public duties, he is not accountable to himself but to society as a whole, because in the end he is merely an expression of that society to which he is accountable.

PRESIDENT ORTEGA'S 'CHICAGO PROPOSAL' PRESENTED

PA042020 Managua Radio Noticias in Spanish 1200 GMT 4 Aug 86

["Chicago Proposal" made by President Daniel Ortega on 3 August; read by William Montiel y Pena]

[Text] 1. The Nicaraguan Government is willing to immediately start a constructive, open, and systematic dialogue to resolve the problem between the church and the state.

2. To resume dialogue with the Nicaraguan Episcopal Conference, the Nicaraguan Government hereby invites the Episcopal Conference to hold a meeting this month to propose the creation of an ecumenical arbitration, if necessary.

3. Nicaragua hereby makes an urgent appeal to the Central American nations to immediately return to the negotiations within the framework of the Contadora Group, so that on 15 September, anniversary of independence in Central America, the Contadora Document for Peace and Cooperation in Central America is signed.

4. The Nicaraguan Government invites the owners of the daily LA PRENSA to adjust their behavior within the legal institutional framework and to break their bonds with those who have decided to join the war of aggression against Nicaragua. The temporary measure that has been applied to LA PRENSA would be reconsidered under these conditions [words indistinct].

5. The Nicaraguan Government hereby invites the U.S. Government to comply with international law and to abide by the International Court of Justice ruling.

6. The Nicaraguan Government makes an urgent appeal to the U.S. Government to start the corresponding negotiations that would conclude in the prompt signing of a new treaty of peace and friendship.

7. The Nicaraguan Government urges the Central American countries to turn Central America into a demilitarized area and a region of peace, under the auspices of the Contadora Group and the Lima Group [words indistinct].

8. The Nicaraguan Government hereby invites U.S. President Ronald Reagan to visit Nicaragua.

ORTEGA REPORTEDLY TO VISIT PRC IN SEPTEMBER

PA021330 Mexico City THE NEWS in English 30 Jul 86 p 8

[By Upendra Nath Mishra]

[Excerpts] Managua -- Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega will pay an official visit in September to the People's Republic of China (PRC), where he will ask for economic, political and military support, according to diplomatic sources here.

Last year in December, the Communist Party of China had invited Nicaraguan Foreign Minister, Miguel D'Escoto, and a senior Sandinista leader, Henry Ruiz, to Peking, where D'Escoto and his Chinese counterpart, Wu Xueqian, had held detailed talks about the possibilities of economic and political cooperation.

After the talks, the Sandinista officials said that China was willing to offer economic aid and that both sides were negotiating an agreement on economic cooperation.

During Ortega's proposed visit to Peking, a number of bilateral agreements between China and Nicaragua are likely to be formally announced, according to Sandinista officials.

The diplomats and foreign political analysts term Ortega's visit to China as a very significant event in Sino-Nicaraguan relations, and say that it has materialized after nine months of hectic efforts by the two sides.

Nicaragua's shift to China has also dealt a severe diplomatic blow to Taiwan's interests in Central America. In December, the leftist Sandinista government established full diplomatic ties with Peking and broke with Taipei. As a result, now Nicaragua is the only Central American country (except Mexico) which does not have an accredited representative to Taiwan instead of China.

Sandinista officials say that Nicaragua's relations with Taiwan were a legacy of the former Somoza regime. Now, however, the Sandinista regime recognizes the government of the People's Republic of China as the sole legal government of China and regards Taiwan as an inalienable part of the territory of the PRC.

Why did the Sandinista regime wait for about six-and-a-half years to sever diplomatic ties with Taiwan and establish diplomatic relations with the PRC?

It is held that the two most important reasons that delayed the establishment of diplomatic ties between Nicaragua and the PRC were: first, China's initial reluctance to wholeheartedly support the Sandinista regime because of its too pro-Moscow leanings, and secondly, the much-needed Taiwanese economic aid.

During the period 1981-85, Taiwan's economic aid to the leftist Nicaragua was substantial. It included two low-interest loans, totaling 9 million dollars, and small projects in fisheries and agriculture. Bilateral trade between Nicaragua and Taiwan amounted to about 20 million dollars in 1984 alone. [passage omitted]

It is widely held in diplomatic and political circles that Sino-Nicaraguan relations have been strengthened after Ortega met with Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang during the United Nations session in New York last October.

CASTRO TOURS SANCTI SPIRITUS CONSTRUCTION SITES

FL022013 [Editorial Report] Havana Tele-Rebelde Network in Spanish at 1730 GMT begins recorded coverage of a 27 July tour by President Fidel Castro of Sancti Spiritus construction projects. The opening shot shows a building with the words "Camilo Cienfuegos Provincial Hospital" superimposed. Castro is then shown entering the building and shaking hands with the staff, who are waiting to receive him. Castro asks about prenatal testing and is told it will be done here, and these tests are done in 3 or 4 days in Santa Clara.

The announcer reports that Castro asks about the area previously occupied by the provincial hospital. The camera shows Castro and the hospital staff, who are all talking simultaneously, looking at pictures on the bulletin board. They point out the remodeling projects that have been completed. Castro then is shown outside uncovering the sign for Camilo Cienfuegos Hospital.

The announcer continues, reporting that Castro then visited the Sancti Spiritus Medical Sciences faculty, which was completed in honor of the Moncada anniversary. The camera shows an unidentified man using a pointer on a scale model of the school to point out the buildings to Castro. Castro takes the pointer away from the speaker and asks questions about specific areas and buildings. He asks about the construction of apartments for nurses and medical students.

The camera then shows Castro entering a room full of people who are standing, applauding, and chanting, "Fidel, Fidel!" Castro asks, "Are you all students?" An unidentified speaker indicates that some of them are workers. The camera is then behind Castro, and some of the workers describe their tasks in their separate brigades. A student indicates that there are 80 1st-year medical students enrolled. Castro briefly turns toward the camera and then returns to face the students. After speaking with the students, says the announcer, Castro signs the visitors' book. The camera shows a closeup of Castro as he writes, "The building is excellent. We hope that the professors, students, and workers will be superior."

During his tour, Castro also visited the Sports Initiation School, which became partially operational last year, reports the announcer. The camera shows Castro entering the school. Speaking with a group of people about the students enrolled there, Castro says, "They have to study. They have to make a greater effort. It is clear they no longer have production work. Their productive work is a sport." Castro asks about exercises, swimming, soccer, and baseball. When Castro asks when the school will be finished, an unidentified speaker says they expect it to be completed by 1 September.

Castro's tour also included a visit to the new water complex and the new Sancti Spiritus Airport, says the announcer. The camera shows Castro speaking to personnel at both these locations as the announcer continues reporting. Castro is then shown crossing the bridge over the Yayabo River. Castro is seen leading a crowd of people while he asks questions. The camera pans the riverbanks and shows people crowded together clapping and chanting, "Fidel, Fidel." Castro is then shown standing on steps and surrounded by unidentified men in fatigues as he speaks to the people. He asks the people how long they have lived there, how many children they have, if they are students, and what they do.

As he descends the steps, the men in fatigues, presumably Castro's bodyguards, escort him. Two bodyguards can be seen in front of him, one behind him, and one to his right. Castro continues waving, and the report ends at 1757 GMT with a still shot of Castro as he gets into his jeep. The camera then returns to regular programming.

BRAVO SENDS MESSAGE TO DISARMAMENT MEETING

FL042340 Havana Radio Rebelde Network in Spanish 2300 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Flavio Bravo, president of Cuba's National Assembly of the People's Government, has sent a message to the world conference against A- and H-bombs in Tokyo, Japan. In the message, the Cuban leader says the solution to the world's current economic and social problems is incompatible with the arms race and the idea of military superiority.

DELEGATION ATTENDS NONALIGNED SEMINAR IN INDIA

FL042109 Havana Radio Reloj Network in Spanish 1818 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] The Cuban delegation attending a seminar in New Delhi on the Nonaligned Movement has reaffirmed that the struggle for peace and against nuclear holocaust are the basic principals of that movement. In a document presented to approximately 100 delegates attending the International, Retrospective, and Perspective Seminar on the Nonaligned Movement, the Cuban delegation said opposition to war, as well as the struggle against its development, is the movement's priority.

Cuban Foreign Ministry representative Pelegrin Torras, who is heading the delegation, said the next meeting, in Harare, Zimbabwe, will be an exceptional forum and will strengthen that organization. The document says the meeting will confront the totally new situation of the attempts by highly industrialized capitalist countries to [word indistinct] the international instruments of developing countries.

CHILEAN BISHOP'S SPOKESMAN EXPLAINS DOCUMENT

[Telephone interview with Roberto Urbina, director of the Chilean Episcopal Conference's press office, in Santiago, by PRENSA LATINA reporter Javier Rodriguez, in Buenos Aires; date not given — recorded]

[Text] [Rodriguez] Mr Urbina, we are calling you because here in Buenos Aires we are very interested in what is happening in Chile, including the latest position expressed by the Chilean Episcopal Conference, the documents that the conference released requesting the reinstatement of civilian power in the country, and the government's reaction to this request.

[Urbina] There has been no official government reaction. [Words indistinct] no statement has been made, and he even said that he has not studied the document released by the bishops. We have heard only opinions expressed by some government officials. However, these are not official statements. Therefore, there is nothing to add regarding this matter.

Some sectors of the Chilean political opposition have thanked the bishops for their statement and for the document approved by the bishops' plenary session. The bishops wrote a letter to Dr Gonzales, president of the National Civic Assembly [ANC], who is currently in prison. In their letter the bishops express their solidarity and support and recognize that the actions of the ANC are legitimate, because these are peaceful actions.

[Rodriguez] Are the Chilean Episcopal Conference's main statements based on the need to reinstate civilian power in the country?

[Urbina] No. The letter and the document do not mention this. The document mentions the five main causes of violence in the country. These causes are: the suffering of Chileans due to hunger, cold, and unemployment; the lack of participation at all levels and the lack of integrity of the authorities; the militarization of civilian life -- military opinions are imposed on organizations that are strictly civilian; the use of war methods against the civilian population -- this causes terror, anguish, and discontent; and political terrorism on the part of those who are bent on imposing their will by force.

'OUR AMERICA' REMEMBERS PANAMA'S TORRIJOS

["Our America" commentary]

[Text] Under the ominous name "Injure the Falcon in Flight," the CIA organized the plot to kill General Omar Torrijos on 31 July 1981. Torrijos' relatives have said that his death occurred after the explosion of a bomb that was placed inside the Panamanian leader's plane. In order to carry out this action, the CIA had the support of its agents in Panama, they said. Recent revelations bring to mind the events that surrounded the mysterious death of Torrijos, a defender of Panamanian sovereignty and an opponent of U.S. presence in the strategic Canal Zone.

During his visit to Cuba in January 1976, Torrijos said: We belong to a group of new officers that took over power. It is true. But we must analyze the contents of every coup d'etat. Sometimes a coup takes place because it is the only solution to a prevailing situation. In our case, we decided to work in favor of the people, who had been oppressed for so long.

After he rose to power, Gen Torrijos tried to prove to the Panamanian people that the National Guard was no longer a repressive body and that it was there to defend national rights. Following this policy, Torrijos got U.S. President James Carter's signature on the Canal Treaties in 1977, following the 1964 events in which U.S. policemen from the Panama Canal fired on a group of Panamanian demonstrators, killing more than 20 people. After that, the decolonization of the Panama Canal became Torrijos' main concern as head of state. His nationalist and anticolonialist principles prevailed in every one of his government actions. His words: I do not want to enter into history, I want to enter the Canal Zone, became a slogan in 1979.

The CIA and the U.S. Government sentenced Torrijos to death, but his ideas still prevail. In 1976 he said: We are a small country, we are an occupied country, but no colonialism can last 100 years, and no Panamanian will ever withstand it.

JAMAICA

SEAGA MARKS INDEPENDENCE, CALLS FOR UNITY

FL050015 Bridgetown CANA in English 1935 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Kingston, Jamaica, Aug 4, CANA -- Jamaica was today marking its 24th anniversary of political independence from Britain in the shadow of a hard-fought municipal elections a week ago and with political leaders stressing the need for national unity.

But Prime Minister Edward Seaga, whose party received a drubbing in the elections and who is under pressure to call a national poll, also used the occasion to point to what he considers to be some of the successes of his administration since taking office in 1980.

The unity calls came against the backdrop of pockets of violence during the election, won by the opposition Peoples' National Party (PNP).

Seaga said his government in the past six years carefully nurtured for Jamaica a climate and image of stability which had contributed to investor confidence and growth in tourism.

That atmosphere had been characterised by the calm leading to the municipal elections, the prime minister said.

The local government elections are now behind us and the entire community must now settle down once more to the normal rhythm of everyday life, the prime minister said.

We must ensure that the outpouring of goodwill from the international community and from the Jamaican community overseas,which was experienced during the recent flood disaster, is not in any way jeopardised by the temptation in pockets of the community to disturb the atmosphere of peace and stability which has been so careful constructed, he added.

PNP leader and former Prime Minister Michael Manley said Jamaica was celebrating the independence anniversary in an unnecessarily and unfortunately tense political atmosphere.

Added Manley: We must stop behaving as there are two warring factions. We must be mature enough to recognise that those who lose today in the political tussle may be victorious tomorrow -- as has been the case on previous occasions.

He said that men and women who played, socialised, and worked together need not fight and harm each other because they favour different political parties.

... I cannot but feel sad that we have allowed political difference to drive a wedge of hate and anger between peoples in our communities, Manley added.

Last Tuesday's election was seen as a confidence vote on the Seaga government and the austerity policies of the past three years.

But Seaga insisted that his programmes were working and that the benefits were beginning to appear.

The past year, he said, had witnessed the revitalisation of the Jamaican economy in all its major sectors and...the rekindling of hope in all Jamaican hearts.

Today we are beginning to repeat [as received] the fruits of the sacrifices which the nation has been called upon to make over the past five years and the increasing success in tourism, agriculture, industry, commerce, and mining, are there for all to see.

SEAGA IN LONDON, FAVORS FINANCIAL SANCTIONS

[Text] Kingston, Jamaica, Aug 2, CANA -- On the eve of tomorrow's mini-summit in London of Commonwealth leaders on sanctions against South Africa, Jamaica Prime Minister Edward Seaga has called for financial rather than trade measures to pressure the Pretoria regime to end its policy of apartheid.

The government's JAMPRESS news agency report of a letter by Seaga to Commonwealth secretary general, Shridath Ramphal, did not outline specifically what measures the prime minister proposed.

According to JAMPRESS, however, Seaga told Ramphal that financial sanctions would have much quicker effect and would be less painful to the majority black population in the short term than trade measures.

This position has been taken as well by Britain and the United States which oppose effective economic sanctions against South Africa.

No government that I am aware of wants to see the South African economy destroyed, Seaga said. ...what we are all seeking to achieve is to put pressure on the South African Government that will oblige them to undertake real changes and bring an end to apartheid.

The Jamaican leader dismissed the argument that sanctions would hurt those in South Africa they were being promoted to help, pointing to the fact both black South Africa and the Frontline States had indicated a willingness to make the sacrifice because the alternative was no longer tolerable.

Seaga said that attempts at compromise with Pretoria had not worked, only buying time during which there was an escalation of violence and confrontation within South Africa and a debate among those already agreed that the system of apartheid should end.

The prime minister warned that if there was no change of position at the summit the need to find another compromise would run the clear risk of a rapid worsening of the situation.

ST VINCENT AND THE GRENADINES

OPPOSITION PAPER BACKS MITCHELL ON SECURITY

FL041835 Bridgetown CANA in English 2042 GMT 3 Aug 86

[Text] Kingston, St Vincent, Aug 3, CANA -- The newspaper published by the opposition United Peoples Movement (UPM) here has supported the stand taken by Prime Minister Mitchell of St Vincent and the Grenadines and his Barbadian counter part Errol Barrow on the question of regional security.

During last Tuesday's talks in Bridgetown on matters of mutual interest, the two regional heads of government agreed to maintain the Regional Security System (RSS) and to work within the framework of the memorandum of understanding, but pledged to hold the proposed treaty in abeyance and to work with the other signatory countries to arrive at a concensus.

In a front page editorial in its weekend issue the JUSTICE newspaper said the approach by Prime Ministers Mitchell and Barrow was a step in the right direction.

It welcomed what it described as the more realistic and sober approach of both prime ministers to this sensitive question.

The two leaders took power after the RSS had been set up by a group of English-speaking Caribbean countries including St. Lucia and Dominica. Both expressed reservations about the system.

Mitchell said he was opposed to any militarisation of the region.

Mitchell said he was particularly concerned about the opportunties for his country's policemen, as well as for their training and conditions of service.

Mitchell felt any funds made available for security purposes should be put to use in this regard, but reiterated his opposition to the militarisation of the region.

Shortly after returning home from the Bridgetown talks Mitchell said he and Barrow shared the common preoccupation for social and economic development, and believed that priority must be given to those areas.

We feel that once the economic and social development of the region is in order, security problems would be considerably reduced, Mitchell said in a radio and television statement here.

Mitchell said he and his Barbadian counterpart had agreed that they should pay particular attention to controlling illegal drugs and have their Coast Guard services work together in search and rescue operations and in patrolling their territorial waters to prevent fishing violations.

ALFONSIN, SANGUINETTI LEAVE FOR COLOMBIA, MEXICO

PY051255 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish 1039 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 5 Aug (TELAM) -- Argentine President Raul Alfonin today said that meetings like those of the "Group of Six," which he will attend in Mexico City, are always positive because they bring out arguments against the arms race and make it possible for the people all around the world to get to know the risks that mankind faces and to learn that the arms race must be stopped once and for all.

The Argentine chief executive this morning spoke at Ezeiza International Airport shortly before departing for Mexico with Uruguay President Julio Maria Sanguinetti, who will accompany Alfonsin to his first stopover in Bogota, Colombia. The plane departed Ezeiza at 0707.

Alfonsin also said that in Bogota we will embrace the president (Belisario Betancur) and later hold talks with the president-elect (Virgilio Barco), just as we do with all new presidents in Latin America.

He added that the heads of government of Mexico, Miguel de la Madrid; of Greece, Andreas Papandreou; of Sweden, Ingvar Carlsson; and of India, Rajiv Gandhi; and former President of Tanzania Julius Nyerere; and he will seek to strengthen their joint position, which is in favor of peace and worldwide disarmament and against the threat of nuclear war.

As to the conclusions that the "Group of Six" is expected to reach, Alfonsin said: We have already agreed on practically everything; therefore, we will issue a declaration signed by all of us.

Meanwhile, the Uruguayan president said that after his visit to Colombia with Alfonsin, he will travel to Brazil on an official visit. He added that this visit is part of a new phase of the protocol on the expansion of trade that was reactivated last year. This protocol will undoubtedly represent an important step forward in the quest for integration in which all the Atlantic states are involved.

CAPUTO DISCUSSES WESTERN TRADE POLICY, DETENTE

[Text] Bogota, 5 Aug (TELAM) -- Foreign Minister Dante Caputo has said that Argentina has been unreasonably punished by the policy of subsidized prices of agricultural products adopted by the developed countries, adding that the Cartagena Consensus should meet to assess the influence of this situation in the region.

Uruguayan Foreign Minister Enrique Iglesias, meanwhile, said that he agrees with Caputo and that he is convinced that the Cartagena Consensus should meet before the end of the year. The two foreign ministers made these remarks in separate talks with reporters who are accompanying the presidential entourage. Caputo is heading the Argentine delegation to the inauguration of the new Colombian president, Virgilio Barco Vargas.

Referring to the meeting of the Group of Six that will open in Mexico tomorrow, the foreign minister stated that it will be held within a propitious setting of clear signs of detente among the great powers.

He stated that the Soviet Union as well as the United States seem to be showing a will for peace. Caputo added that even though we must study the proposal carefully, we cannot help but rejoice in this.

Caputo said that it is significant that this meeting of the Group of Six will be held a few days after the U.S. President made a proposal regarding defense in outer space. It is also important that the Soviet and U.S. Governments have decided that U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze will meet on 19 and 20 September, he said.

Caputo ended by stating that the Group of Six is setting a precedent in international policy, noting that this has great merit because it is very difficult to exert pressure without force. However, we are managing to do so.

U.S. GRAIN MEASURE TO AFFECT DEBT PAYMENT

[By Alberto Francisco Arebalos]

[Text] Buenos Aires, 5 Aug (EFE) -- The U.S. decision to subsidize its grain sales to the Soviet Union and China presupposes a new and serious stumbling block for the payment of Argentina's foreign debt, which totals $50 billion. Argentina's economy minister last night officially announced that Argentina will ask its creditors for better terms for the payment of interest on its foreign debt to compensate for losses of export revenues due to the fall of grain prices.

The measure adopted on 1 August by the United States seriously affects the Argentine economy, 80 percent of which is based on exports of primary products, and it has caused immediate reactions by the Argentine Government and political parties, which have denounced "the disloyal U.S. attitude."

With exports totaling almost $9 billion and imports totaling $5 billion, Argentina is allotting almost $3 billion to the payment of interest on its massive foreign debt, the third largest in Latin America. As a first measure, the government of Raul Alfonsin will lift taxes on wheat exports to compensate for the prices that producers will receive for the grain. This decision means an $18-million loss for the government treasury, just as officials are fervently seeking to alleviate the financial and trade deficits.

In addition to the fall in prices -- Argentine wheat experienced a fall in 1 week from $80 to $70 per ton -- Argentina must also face the loss of markets since it is in no condition to sell subsidized wheat as the United States is doing.

An Argentine Agriculture Secretariat official told EFE today that "furthermore, the United States can finance its sales while Argentina, because of the need for currency, must carry out all its operations in cash, which further contributes to the loss of markets."

It has been noted that the Soviet Union, the main purchaser of Argentine grain in the last few years, bought less than 1 million tons of Argentine wheat in 1986 in comparison with a total of 17.5 million tons of grain it purchased in other parts of the world. The USSR has not complied with an agreement it made to purchase 5 million tons of grain from Argentina because for every 100 tons of wheat it purchases from the United States, it will receive "free" another 20 tons.

On his recent tour of Japan, President Raul Alfonsin was able to get Japan to buy over 3 million tons of grain, but the "new client" only replaces the Soviet Union; it does not mean an order for new grain shipments.

Concern over this matter has increased in Argentina in recent hours because of rumors that the EEC might adopt measures similar to those adopted by the United States so as not to lose clients and that this measure might also extend to other grains.

At any rate, the U.S. position has again shown the structural deficit of the Argentine economy which, only 15 years from the 21st century, continues to depend on the sale of grain and meat, just as it did in the last century.

Suspension Under Consideration

PY052047 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish 1841 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 5 Aug (TELAM) -- Labor Minister Hugo Barrionuevo admitted here today that some government sectors are analyzing several measures to be adopted in view of the lower influx of currency caused by the subsidized price of U.S. grain. Among the measures is the suspension of some foreign debt payments.

The minister made this statement after a socioeconomic cabinet meeting at the Labor Ministry. The meeting was also attended by the economy, public works, and health ministers.

Deputies Urge Nonpayment

PY052316 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish 2251 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 5 Aug (TELAM) -- National Deputies Antonio Cafiero and Jose Manzano today urged the National Executive Branch to suspend service payments of the part of the foreign debt that pertains to U.S. banks. The deputies, who belong to the Justicialist Renewal Faction, have submitted a draft resolution to the Chamber of Deputies in which they express their indignation regarding the position that the United States has taken with its international agricultural policy, which has negative effects on Argentina's development possibilities.

GOVERNMENT DENIES SUSPENSION OF CREDITS TO CUBA

[Text] Buenos Aires, 5 Aug (TELAM) -- The Economy Minister today called inaccurate a report published by several morning newspapers about the suspension by Argentina of all commerical credit lines to Cuba. The ministry noted that, on the contrary, because of Cuba's difficulties meeting its foreign commitments, the two governments are conducting negotiations aimed at rescheduling Cuba's debt and allowing it to make additional use of existing credit lines.

DETAILS GIVEN ON FISHING ACCORD WITH USSR

[Text] Buenos Aires, 4 Aug (TELAM) -- Agriculture, Livestock, and Fishing Secretary Lucio Reca today announced that the cooperation agreement on fishing which was signed in late July with the Soviet Union and Bulgaria will allow ships flying Soviet and Bulgarian flags access to Argentine waters. The agreement establishes that Argentina will grant port facilities to USSR and Bulgarian ships and facilities that include crew changes, repairs, and the supply of provisions.

Argentina will determine annually -- through the appropriate authorities -- the permitted catches of each species and the total Argentine fleet catch of each species, the authorized catch surplus of each species not fished by the Argentine fleet, the authorized catch surplus of each species, and the total catch that ships flying the USSR and Bulgarian flags will be authorized.

Argentina will also determine the areas in which fishing will be authorized; the size, type, and number of ships; and the number of days which each ship and the entire fleet may operate in a given area.

In turn, Reca stated that the Soviet and Bulgarian fishing fleets will be authorized to fish only within the territorial zone through fishing licenses issued by the appropriate authorities, and that, once they receive that license, they will have to comply with the terms of the agreement signed, the supplementary agreements, the laws and regulations of the Argentine Republic, and the instructions of the appropriate authorities.

CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES SCORES U.S. AID TO CONTRAS

PY012315 Buenos Aires DYN in Spanish 1305 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Buenos Aires, 1 Aug (DYN) -- [passage omitted] At the end of its deliberations, the Chamber of Deputies approved a statement "repudiating" the intervention in territories of Latin American countries "of any foreign power" and expressing "concern" over the U.S. Congress decision to support economic aid of $100 million to the so-called Nicaraguan contras.

The statement, which was supported by deputies of the Radical, Justicialist, Intransigent, Christian Democrat, and the UCD [Democratic Centrist Union] blocks, as well as by the provincial blocs, also supports the negotiations being conducted by the Contadora Group for a peaceful solution of the Central American conflict. WALDNER URGES SENATE TO APPROVE SECURITY LAW

PY052257 Buenos Aires CLARIN in Spanish 1 Aug 86 p 7

[Text] During a meeting with legislators called by the Senate committee headed by Radical Civic Union [UCR] Senator Antonio Berhongaray, Brigadier General Teodoro Walnder, chief of the Armed Forces Joint Staff, yesterday stressed to the Senate the "urgent need" to approve the National Defense Bill which is being studied by the Senate.

Twenty-one senators listened to Waldner's impressions of this bill, which has already been approved by the Chamber of Deputies. He referred to the importance that the law will have for the current military structure, which must be regulated by a law like this bill. The Chamber of Deputies approved the bill in August 1985, and the possibility of the Senate making substantial changes in it has been ruled out.

On successive Thursdays, the chiefs of staff of the Navy, Admiral Ramon Arosa; the Air Force, Brigadier General Julio Crespo; and the Army, General Hector Rios Erenu, will report on the bill to the Senate.

In all these reports, special attention will be paid to the role of the Armed Forces in the event of a resurgence of subversion.

Waldner said that in such circumstances, military action would be essential should the security forces be overwhelmed, citing Spanish legislation to support his contention.

On the same issue, Senator Berhongaray emphasized the term "firepower" in the bill, which refers to the capability of an internal enemy. If this "firepower" exceeds that of the security organizations (police, border police, etc), the Armed Forces would intervene. He cited as an example the Nicaraguan contras. Can Commander Ortega fight them with the police alone?" he asked.

Corrientes Senator Ricardo Leconte stated that "this must be regarded very seriously."

He argued that this is the situation "because Argentina has gone through a difficult experience and is living in the world of today, which is experiencing the aggression of international terrorism."

Peronist Horacio Bravo Herrera stated that "the national security doctrine must not be abolished." He is thus opposed to the position of the Renewal Faction in the Chamber of Deputies. Yesterday the leader of the bloc, Humberto Martiarena, asked most of the questions at the meeting held with Waldner in the Pink Hall. Martiarena disagrees with Bravo Herrera's position, just as UCR Senator Ricardo Lafferriere is not absolutely in agreement with Berhongaray's position. UCR Deputy Balbino Zubiri, chairman of the Chamber of Deputies Defense Committee, also disagrees with Berhongaray's position.

Peronist Senator Liliana Gurdulich de Correa agrees that the military cannot be indifferent to interior security. She is a member of the bloc headed by Senator Vicente L. Saadi. The Peronist Renewal Faction has received a petition for a meeting from the Human Rights Permanent Assembly, which is interested in responding to Bravo Herrera's position. It may do so next week.

Senators from the various blocs who seem to be committed to debating the bill by the beginning of September were present at the meeting yesterday. The Chamber of Deputies must also approve it in September before the end of the regular session [as published].

MOSSO REPLACES ROSSI AS DEFENSE SECRETARY

PY052240 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish 2159 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 5 Aug (TELAM) -- Defense Minister Jose Horacio Jaunarena today accepted the resignation tendered by Defense Secretary Hector Rossi, who had been installed on 6 June. Upon making the announcement, a Defense Ministry spokesman said that National Deputy Alfredo Miguel Mosso (Radical Civic Union, Mendoza Province) will be appointed as new defense secretary.

PUBLIC EMPLOYEES RECEIVE SALARY INCREASES

PY021214 Buenos Aires NOTICIAS ARGENTINAS in Spanish 2110 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 1 Aug (NA) -- The government announced today that it has granted a "selective" salary increase to public employees for the July-September quarter. This increase will be 29 percent for those in the lower salary grades, which includes the majority of public employees. Those in the upper grades will receive an increase of between 16.6 and 20 percent. This report was released this afternoon through Decree No 1282.

STUDENTS STAGE DEMONSTRATION OUTSIDE U.S. EMBASSY

PY052359 Paris AFP is Spanish 2345 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] La Paz, 5 Aug (AFP) -- Nearly 200 students of the Greater University of San Andres, Bolivia's most important university, today held a meeting at the door of the U.S. Embassy to protest the presence of 170 U.S. soldiers in Bolivian territory. The students shouted slogans against the government of President Victor Paz Estenssoro and rejected what they regard as foreign intervention and the violation of the national sovereignty under the pretext of fighting the drug trade.

The number of policemen charged with guarding the U.S. Embassy was doubled to prevent any act of violence and U.S. officials prevented strangers from entering the embassy offices, located on a downtown street of La Paz.

LETTER TO SEVERAL COUNTRIES ASKS FOR ANTIDRUG AID

PY041629 Paris AFP in Spanish 1352 GMT 3 Jul 86

[Text] In a note signed by Foreign Minister Guillermo Bedregal Gutierrez, Bolivia has asked the international community for cooperation similar to that now being given by the United States, in helping to eradicate drug trafficking, it was officially reported today in La Paz.

The letter is addressed to the Vatican, the FRG, Italy, Spain, Great Britain, the United States, France, Belgium, and to some specialized international organizations.

According to the note, the logistical support now being received from the United States, with the arrival of 170 soldiers, 6 helicopters, and communication equipment, is only the beginning of a responsible and permanent policy against drug trafficking. Unfortunately, the letter says, economic and technical limitations make it necessary for such help, in donations, equipment, training of specialized personnel, soft credits or supply of materials, be granted by other developed countries.

The news of the foreign minister's letter was released just when there are growing protests over the presence of U.S. troops in Bolivia without congressional authorization. It was recalled that 48 hours ago, the Council for the Defense of National Sovereignty was constituted to demand the immediate withdrawal of the U.S. soldiers. This council comprises 30 labor organizations from all over the country, 25 political parties, 30 peasant, womens, civic and university institutions, and some 300 individuals.

MINEWORKERS SUSPEND STRIKE UNTIL 12 AUGUST

[Text] La Paz, 4 Aug (EFE) -- A national mineworkers strike that began on 30 July has been suspended until 12 August by decision of the mineworkers union because the government has partially met the miners' demands. The indefinite mineworkers strike, which last week was extended nationwide, was decreed in demand of a salary increase, the supply of food, the provision of equipment and tools, and the supply of medicines. With this measure, the mineworkers want the authorities to define clearly the future of the State Mining Corporation of Bolivia [Comibol], which is currently experiencing critical financial difficulties, and all the mining sectors that depend on it.

Simon Reyes, leader of the Trade Union Federation of Bolivian Mineworkers [FSTMB], has stated that the strike has been temporarily suspended in view of the government's commitment to solve the salary conflict "as soon as possible and in the best manner possible."

Mining and Metallurgy Minister Jaime Villalobos has sent a note to the FSTMB announcing the immediate dispatch of supplies to the mines and an increase in salaries.

Reyes Rivera stated, however, that the note makes no reference to the request for restructuring Comibol in the districts of Oruro and Potosi, the biggest mining centers.

For this reason, he stated, the strike has been "suspended" until 12 August, with the threat of resuming it if the executive branch does not pay attention to Comibol.

SARNEY TO MEET SANGUINETTI IN MARANHAO 8 AUGUST

PY041648 Sao Paulo O ESTADO DE SAO PAULO in Portuguese 31 Jul 86 p 7

[Text] Brasilia -- The Planalto Palace yesterday began preparations for a meeting between Brazilian President Jose Sarney and Uruguayan President Julio Sanguinetti in Sao Luis do Maranhao on 8 August. Sarney will meet the Uruguayan president at 1500 at Tirirical airport. Sanguinetti will spend the night there and, after a luncheon on 9 August, travel to Salvador, in Bahia State.

Sarney will take advantage of his visit to Maranhao to participate in the local political campaign. Since he last visited Maranhao in June, Sarney has participated in a rally and introduced PMDB [Brazilian Democratic Movement Party] Deputy Epitacio Cafeteira as his candidate for governor. This time, the president will be supporting PFL [Liberal Front Party] Deputy Joao Alberto, the candidate for vice governor on Cafeteirs's ticket. Sarney will go to Teresina, Piaui State, on the afternoon of 9 August. From Teresina, Sarney will travel 70 km by bus to Caxias, Maranhao State, where Alberto's constituent stronghold is located. A big rally is being prepared. The president's arrival time has yet to be confirmed by Planalto Palace.

FUNARO, ARGENTINE MINISTER DISCUSS FOREIGN DEBT

PY051639 Sao Paulo O ESTADO DE SAO PAULO in Portuguese 31 Jul 86 p 7

[Excerpt] Buenos Aires -- Brazilian Finance Minister Dilson Funaro and Argentine Economy Minister Juan Sourrouille yesterday held a secret meeting and, according to a government source, discussed details of mutual interest concerning the foreign debt issue. The two ministers have been discussing this matter for a few months. So far, they have agreed on the negotiations they are conducting with the foreign creditors, although both believe that the Cartagena Consensus is the most appropriate political forum for a comprehensive discussion of their foreign debts.

In the Brazilian and Argentine cases, there is a firm belief that neither of the two economies should suffer a recession because they continue honoring their debt commitments. Likewise, there is an understanding that Brazil now has more leeway concerning the trade balance, something which permits Brazil to make up-to-date payments on the interest and the principal. This is not yet the case, however, with Argentina. Insofar as there was agreement on economic coordination of the economic programs, the next step of the Brazilian and Argentine Governments concerning this point will be to hold discussions to demonstrate to the IMF -- in the Argentine case -- and the creditors -- in the Brazilian case -- what funds they are able to allocate to paying the debts.

In an exclusive interview with O ESTADO DE SAO PAULO, Argentine Economy Minister Juan Sourrouille did not rule out the possibility of creating a new group of countries that will operate the same way as the Group of Seven is operating. He noted, however, that "for the time being we are just two."

In the opinion of the Argentine minister, the "foreign debt is a brake on the development potential of the two countries. The decision to make bilateral adjustments on the economic programs is a milestone. The two countries believe that the service payments to the debt represent an insupportable burden."

Sourrouille reasserted that the government assigns top priority to economic growth, but that the unfavorable conditions of the balance of payments compel Argentina to take special steps to service the foreign debt. [passage omitted]

DETAILS OF GOVERNMENT 'PLAN OF GOALS'

PY011850 Rio de Janeiro O GLOBO in Portuguese 24 Jul 86 p 28

[Text] Brasilia -- The Plan of Goals foresees a total investment of 1.392 trillion cruzados up to the year 1989. About 37 percent of the funds needed to implement the plan will be provided yearly by the National Development Fund. Under the Plan of Goals, the government intends to invest, in a joint effort with the private sector in infrastructure projects and in the social area, raising the percentage of investments in the country from the present 17.6 percent of the gross national product (GNP) to 21 percent in the next 3 years.

The Plan of Goals, using half of its funds (695.2 billion cruzados) in the social area, hopes to achieve the following objectives, among others, by 1989: the eradication of illiteracy; the creation of 1.65 million jobs per year; the eradication of poliomyelitis and rabies; the installation of 4.6 million telephones in urban areas; and guaranteed food production of 71.6 million tons. The plan also makes the following proposals:

Social Area -- The programs of supplementary nourishment should assist 15.9 million pregnant women, wetnurses, and children. It is the beginning of the investment in the country's future labor force, followed by the National Program of Milk Distribution for Needy Children (10 million children up to 6 years old with a liter of milk for each one), and the National Program of School Nourishment, which will help pupils from 7 to 14 and their brothers and sisters of 4 to 6, totaling 34 million children.

In order to eradicate illiteracy, the government intends to offer public education to all children from 7 to 14 years of age, involving 25.4 million children. Housing conditions need to be improved and, with that purpose in mind, the government intends to expand the National Housing Plan, giving priority to the low-income population with the construction of 1.7 million low-cost houses.

These measures have to be complemented by creating jobs in order to later overcome the present stage of social welfare policy, as defined by Planning Minister Joao Sayad. With the investments in the economy, the government intends to create 6.6 million new jobs from 1986 to 1989. This should generate enough work to assimilate 5.6 million new workers in the job market, as well as 1 million people who now are unemployed. The investments for the next 3 years in the social area should reach 695.2 billion cruzados.

The Economy -- One of the main problems that surfaced after the price freeze, which resulted in the improvement of the purchasing power of the population, was an immediate increase in consumption not accompanied by growth in the supply of goods and services.

To correct this distortion, the government wants to expand the capacity of sectors that produce essential consumer goods at a minimum rate of 6 percent a year, meeting the normal demand and that generated by the social programs.

One of the bottlenecks on the road to industrial growth is the low production of the metallurgic industry. The plan considers the necessity to expand annual steel production capacity from the present 13.2 million tons to 17.3 tons in 1989. In addition to the adequate supply of steel plate to the domestic market, the expanded capacity will mean the continued participation of the country in the international market and the generation of an annual flow of $1.5 billion.

The present state of agriculture is also not adequate to satisfy the growing demand for food, as determined by the higher buying power and by the access to the market, through the social programs, of formerly marginal individuals. For the government to be able to implement these social programs and rid itself of the need for food imports, it will be necessary for Brazilian agriculture to be able to produce by 1989 a minimum of 71.6 million tons of grain.

To reach that goal, the offer of credit for new investments will have to grow from the 1984 figure of 4 percent of agricultural production and the 8 percent of this year until it reaches 15 percent of agricultural production by 1989. Besides the easier credits, the adopted policy of establishing minimum prices for agricultural products aims to guarantee income stability for the producers, by which it will be possible to collect again strategic stocks of food and increase productivity.

All measures to assist the agricultural sector, including the increase of 27 percent in storage capacity, will have to be accompanied by the improvement and opening of roads and the remodelling of rail and port facilities. The government will have to invest 638.2 billion cruzados in the infrastructure of the productive sector.

Infrastructures -- In order to maintain the proposed 7-percent annual growth, the government will need to restructure the public sector, in which it intends to invest 59,2 billion cruzados. The first service to be dealt with will be electricity, increasing the generating capacity by 32.5 percent, and extending the transmission network with the addition of 6.382 million km of new lines.

The docking capacity of ports also will have to be increased by 22.5 percent, and the cargo capacity of the railway system by 28 percent. Access to the telecommunication system also needs to be extended to a broader stratum of society. The improvement of this service will be obtained by increasing the number of existing rural telephones by 65 percent and urban telephones by 40 percent.

During this period the government also wants the Ferro-Carajas project to reach full capacity, with the production of 35 million tons a year totally menat for exports, and to increase gold production from 8.3 tons a year to 42 tons a year in 1989.

WORKERS ORGANIZATION RECEIVED FOREIGN MONEY

[Text] The Federal Police have seized a cash book that was kept by Maria Tereza Aguiar Notari, a Sole Central Organization of Workers (CUT) employee.

The cash book registerers, from June to November 1983, five receipts of money from abroad, totaling 66,453,102.35 cruzeiros (the equivalent of 1.37 million cruzados now), which has been used to finance trade union activities in Brazil, among them 14 "workers meetings" in several states. The cash book was seized on 22 April at Aguiar Notari's apartment in the Liberdade district (in downtown Sao Paulo). The Federal Police traced Aguiar Notari after they established a connection between the holdup perpetrated in April by PCBR (Brazilian Revolutionary Communist Party) members of a Bank of Brazil branch in Salvador (Bahia State) and the clandestine activities of former Air Force Sergeant Antonio Prestes de Paula. Aguiar Notari, who is now in Rio de Janeiro participating in a CUT meeting, appears on the Federal Police records as Prestes de Paula's concubine.

The cash book entries show that from 6 June 1983 (the date the account was opened) to 30 November 1983 (the date the last expense was posted), six foreign institutions furnished or served as a channel for sending money to Brazil. They are: the "St. Interk Coordinate"; the "Int'D Conf. of Free Herbys Potageres"; the "Comm. Ortwikkellings" (which the authorities believe is Dutch); and the well-known "Lloyd's Bank Int. Limited" (English). FOLHA DE SAO PAULO has investigated the institutions recorded by Aguiar Notari and, with the exception of the "Lloyd's Bank," they are unknown to the military intelligence services that keep up with the arrival of foreign capital for Brazilian political parties, clandestine organizations, and trade union organizations. Yesterday in Rio de Janeiro, CUT President Jair Meneguelli did not wish to comment on the problem, while Aguiar Notari said that she will only speak if authorized by the CUT.

GOVERNMENT SEEKS JOINT ANTIDRUG EFFORTS

[By Adalid Cabrera Lemuz]

[Excerpt] Brasilia, 30 Jul (EFE) -- Federal Police Director General Romeu Tuma today confirmed that Brazil will ask Bolivia and Paraguay to sign a joint accord to fight international drug gangs along their borders. Tuma explained that the objective of the accord, which will be negotiated by the Brazilian Foreign Ministry, will be to strengthen antidrug actions, to make them more efficient, and to prevent Brazil from becoming an alternative drug trafficking base. Tuma who observed the Brazilian-Bolivian border over the weekend, termed positive the operations that Bolivian and U.S. military troops are jointly conducting against cocaine traffickers in Bolivian territory. [Text] The Federal Police are investigating the alleged existence of supply depots for Bolivian drug trafficking in Brazilian territory. The police are also investigating charges made in Rondonia about the operation of new gangs in areas bordering Bolivia. These gangs work with stolen cars and in drug trafficking. The Federal Police have also reported that there are signs indicating that clandestine roads might have been constructed in Bolivia to facilitate the trafficking of cars stolen in Brazil.

GOVERNMENT REJECTS CHARGES AGAINST SENATOR HELMS

[Passages within quotation marks recorded]

[Text] The Chilean Government rejects all charges that have been made against U.S. Senator Jesse Helms about the alleged passing of U.S. secret information to Chile. This is what Francisco Javier Cuadra, the minister secretary general of government, said today after a regular session of the Government Junta.

The secretary general of government said that at no time were these issues discussed in the few contacts that the U.S. senator had with Chilean authorities.

[Cuadra] "Everyone has some notion of the sort of operations that are carried out by the so-called CIA, and this is not the first time we have heard that this kind of operation is being carried out outside the United Staes. Therefore, we are not surprised by this. But we reject all charges that have been raised against Senator Jesse Helms because at no time were these issues discussed in the few contacts he held with Chilean authorities, despite reports by some ill-intentioned members of the U.S. media."

Asked about the comment by Carabineros Commander Rodolfo Stange regarding a dialogue with representatives of different opinion groups, Cuadra said he agreed with Stange.

[Cuadra] "Since 11 September 1973, the Armed Forces government has always called upon all national sectors of goodwill to cooperate with the authorities and to look beyond present issues because this is the duty of everyone who is interested in serving the people through the approval of those measures that must regulate the national social, political, and economic coexistence. From this point of view, all the efforts made by the authorities aim to achieve an understanding among all persons who make up the Chilean nation."

Francisco Cuadra also agreed with Gen Stange regarding a possible amendment of the 1980 Constitution.

[Cuadra] "I would say that in theory all laws, not just constitutional laws, are subject to amendments. In practice, constitutional amendments are generally effective only if they respond to certain political, economic, and social requirements within the framework of the respective political processes. Let us note, for instance, that one of the most important constitutional amendments to the 1925 Constitution was the so-called statute of guarantees, which was requested by the Christian Democratic party and the Popular Unity Party [UP]. We realize that, although it was very important at the time, it did not fulfill any real function because the UP did not respect it."

Regarding the two attacks against Osorno Bishop Miguel Cavieres, Cuadra said that these actions must be categorically repudiated because they violate human rights.

[Cuadra] "All terrorist attacks must be repudiated because they represent an ideological position based on violence as a political method. The Chilean Constitution, which is the basis of institutionality, establishes that terrorism is categorically opposed to human rights. On this basis the government rejects all these actions, no matter who is affected, no matter his post, his duty, or his function within society, because the essential thing is that a human being is affected by these incidents.

"Moreover, the government appeals to all citizens to truly reject terrorist actions by going beyond words and acting against the true causes of violence, that is, against those persons and groups that adopt violence as a social ideal, as a method of political action that is rejected from any point of view, and fundamentally from a moral point of view."

During its meeting, the Government Junta approved four draft bills, one of which calls for the establishemnt of ministerial secretaries at the regional level.

Garcia Discusses Charges

PY052354 Santiago Radio Chilena in Spanish 1700 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Interior Minister Ricardo Garcia, referring to rumors that Republican Senator Jesse Helms has allegedly supplied Chilean authorities with secret U.S. information, said that every country has a right to make the remarks it desires, no matter how absurd they may be, but I think that the United States should reconsider what it says.

The minister went to the Diego Portales Building, where he attended the opening of the first national meeting of kindergarten teachers. On this occasion he referred to terrorist attacks during the past few days.

[Begin recording] [Garcia] The entire citizenry shares the feeling of disgust and sadness over the fact that there are people in Chile capable of these crimes that affect innocent people who happened to be near the terrorists' bombs. They [word indistinct] sadness and disgust.

[Reporter] Is there any chance that the government will strengthen security measures in the country and in the capital because of these attacks?

[Garcia] No. As I have said before, circumstances are constantly evaluated and the government adopts the measures necessary according to each case. [end recording]

Minister Garcia was also asked about rumors that a U.S. Senate committee has demanded an investigation to determine whether Senator Jesse Helms warned the Chilean Government about an intelligence operation being carried out by the United States.

[Begin recording] [Reporter] What do you have to say about the charges against Senator Helms for allegedly having spied for Chile?

[Garcia] I believe that each country is entitled to make the remarks it desires. I believe that the United States should reconsider what it is saying. We do not interfere in the domestic affairs of other countries. [end recording]

It was learned that the investigation of this case was turned over to the FBI. Republican Senator Jesse Helms of North Carolina visited Chile recently. During his stay in our country he criticized U.S. Ambassador Harry Barnes, especially the fact that Barnes attended the funeral of Rodrigo Rojas.

DEL VALLE EXPRESSES INTEREST IN JOINING NEW GROUP

PY051917 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0121 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, 4 Aug (EFE) -- Chilean Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle today described as "extremely interesting" the possibility that his country may join the integration agreements recently signed between Brazil and Argentina.

Del Valle said this in reply to remarks by Brazilian business leader Ruy Barreto, who praised the Brazilian-Argentine policy of integration and added that after Uruguay, "Chile must be the next country to join this initiative."

Barreto, who presides over the Brazilian Foundation for Foreign Trade Studies, added that the agreement signed in Buenos Aires between Presidents Sarney and Alfonsin must be considered an important step toward the creation of a Latin American common market.

Interviewed just before leaving for Bogota to attend the inauguration of the new Colombian president, Del Valle said that he finds the possibility presented by Barreto "extremely interesting."

He added: "We are in favor of integration, provided the framework of that integration is equally convenient and advantageous for all countries."

OSORNO BISHOP SUSPECTS SECOND ATTEMPT

PY052338 Madrid EFE in Spanish 1529 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, Chile 5 Aug (EFE) -- According to Osorno Bishop Miguel Caviedes he has been the victim of two attacks in recent days. In addition to the shot that was fired at his house on the evening of 2 August, which passed centimeters away from where he was sitting, his car was intentionally damaged the following day when he was visiting a town in his diocese, 800 km south of Santiago.

To investigate the first attack the courts have appointed a special judge who requested the advice of ballistic experts, who were able to determine where the shot was fired. They also found a Colt 45 revolver shell casing. During the investigations of the first attack, the bishop was the victim of the second attack, which occurred when he was driving his car back to Osorno from the town of Rio Negro. The car caught fire.

According to a local mechanic, one of the hoses of the car's engine was cut with a sharp tool. As a result of this, fuel leaked onto the electrical system. During his pastoral visit to Rio Negro the bishop left his car parked for over 2 hours.

AZCONA ON DELIMITATION TREATY, POTENTIAL FRICTION

PA051423 San Pedro Sula TIEMPO in Spanish 4 Aug 86 p 3

[Text] Minutes after he signed the maritime delimitation treaty with Colombia on San Andres Island, Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo said: "The delimitation of borders between two states constitutes a potential source of frictions or disputes."

This is the text of President Azcona's speech on 2 August:

Mr President: First of all, I want to express my great satisfaction for being on this piece of Colombian soil, enjoying your country's traditional hospitality, warm friendship, and democratic identification.

Since our two nations became independent, their peoples and governments have been aware that they shared borders on this Caribbean Sea. Over the years, the sense of proximity has been expressed in various forms of positive cooperation, either by sharing certain maritime areas for fishing activities by citizens of the two countries or exchanging experiences between their respective naval forces.

Nevertheless, history shows and international law acknowledges that the delimitation of borders between two states is a potential source of friction or disputes even between those countries that, like Honduras and Colombia, happily keep the friendliest of relations.

The maritime delimitation treaty that we, the presidents of Colombia and Honduras, have signed today constitutes another landmark in this old friendship, because this treaty puts a peaceful and civilized end to a controversial situation regarding the delimitation of maritime borders.

We have concluded this treaty via negotiations, a procedure described as the golden rule of diplomacy, because solutions have been agreed upon, not imposed. This guarantees that the situation has been fully accepted by the two sides, because the interest of each has been equitably taken into consideration.

I always believed that internationally delimited borders, whether terrestrial or maritime, must constitute links of unity, not dividing lines. Now that the jurisdictions of Colombia and Honduras have been legally set in the Caribbean Sea, new agreements for zones of common exploitation, protection of marine species, vigilance against drug trafficking, and protection of the democratic system that our peoples have chosen freely can be negotiated.

Regarding fishing activities, in which our two countries are developing an efficient industry, perspectives for effective cooperation also appear very promising, considering in particular that the Serranilla Cay area has been a traditional fishing ground for Hondurans whose efforts and devotion must be duly preserved and encouraged.

I feel that this treaty is a very important step in the relations between our two countries and an undeniable example of the solidarity that will serve as the basis for what we expect to be permanent and democratic peace in the Caribbean.

I also feel that this act becomes more important because it has occurred on the day before you, Mr President, will hand over command to your legitimate successor.

Finally, I want to express my admiration and deep sympathy for your having concluded your constitutional term guaranteeing free and honest elections in which the Colombian people expressed their will. In the convulsed world in which we live, this is the best proof of a deep democratic conviction that the Honduran people and government share with our hearts.

I am sure that on 7 August, with the same and justified citizen's pride, you will also be able to say the most beautiful words that a president can utter: I have done my duty.

ALFONSIN, SANGUINETTI ARRIVE FOR INAUGURATION

[Text] Argentine President Raul Alfonsin has met with Colombian President-elect Virgilio Barco Vargas at the latter's residence. Alfonsin arrived at the Catam Military Airport this morning accompanied by Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti. Mari Villalobos reports their arrival.

[Begin recording] [Villalobos] Scarcely 50 hours before the presidential inauguration, Presidents Raul Alfonsin and Julio Maria Sanguinetti arrived in Colombia as special guests to the president-elect's inauguration. President Alfonsin is meeting now with President-elect Barco. This afternoon he will meet with President Betancur to discuss the general situation on the continent. The main topics on their agenda are the Contadora Group's peace efforts and the results of the Cartagena Consensus. Here are Alfonsin's comments concerning the Support Group's future:

[Alfonsin] Unfortunately, there has been a retrogression, but I still feel that we should not become less enthusiastic about the actions that we must carry out in order to find solutions. Of course, President Betancur has set the example in this task.

[Villalobos] The Argentine president also said that in order to solve the difficult problem of Latin America's foreign debt, our countries should struggle for a new international economic order. Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti spoke of the problems shared by the nations in the southern part of the continent.

[Sanguinetti] We all share the phenomena of protectionism by the industrialized countries, foreign debt, and the consequences of drug trafficking. Fortunately for us, we do not share the phenomenon of terrorism. [end recording]

The two visiting presidents are now having lunch at the Narino Palace with President Betancur and President-elect Barco.

RAMIREZ OCAMPO ON GOVERNMENT'S FOREIGN POLICY

[Text] Here in Colombia, Foreign Minister Augusto Ramirez Ocampo has spoken to newsmen from "24 Hours" [name of newscast] about President Betancur's government's foreign policy.

[Begin recording] [Reporter] The first decision made by Betancur's government in the area of foreign affairs was the integration of Colombia into the Nonaligned Movement.

This group, formed by 121 nations, appears in political matters to act independently of the United States and the Soviet Union.

[Ramirez] Our membership in the Nonaligned Movement is fully justified, because we believe that Colombia should not follow the policy of joining blocs; we think that Colombia needs to get into the world and needs to work harder with the developing world.

[Reporter] After that, the Contadora Group was formed. Colombia, Mexico, Venezuela, and Panama became interested in a peace project for Central America. With the exception of El Salvador and Guatemala, Colombia has borders with the rest of the Central American nations.

[Ramirez] In these 4 years, we indeed prevented the conflict from exploding with all the violence that exists in each of those countries. It is true that the peace document has not been signed yet. The signing of the document is still up in the air. Really, as you point out, the signing of the document has been disturbed by certain actions of the various countries. The thing we cannot do is replace the will of the countries. They are the ones that have to decide on their destinies, without pressure, and I want to be very clear on that.

[Reporter] To what extent did the United States interfere with that measure to put out the fire in Central America? Second, you are referring to a very well made document. Is it equal to having a check for $1 million without the issuer's signature?

[Ramirez] It is a check with enough funds. You can draw against it. Another thing is that, indeed, it has not been signed yet. The important part is that we found a Latin American solution to the crisis. It is now up to the will of the five countries to join that solution or not.

I would not like to point out those countries which have not fulfilled their compromises by name. Generally, it is understood that people speak only of the U.S. support for the contras. However, we are also talking about the support given to the subversive force in El Salvador, for them to try to overthrow a government legally established. Thus, in that regard, we have to be clear, because regarding the peace agreement, interference has come from the two sides.

[Reporter] During Betancur's government, Colombia expanded its maritime territory by 1 million sq km. However, it did not make any progress in the delimination of marine and submarine areas with Venezuela. The limits with Jamaica and Nicaragua are still pending as well.

[Ramirez] We have had talks with Venezuelan authorities in order to establish a modus operandi for the negotiations, for them to be completed sometime. It is impossible to maintain endless negotiations.

[Reporter] If negotiations cannot be indefinite, how could they be limited in time, and when?

[Ramirez] That is precisely what we have been negotiating. A mutual agreement should find a way to replace direct negotiations in case they are not completed within a definite period of time. [end recording]

ARMED INDIVIDUALS BUY ENTIRE NEWS EDITIONS

PA060052 Bogota EL TIEMPO in Spanish 2 Aug 86 pp 1-a, 2-a [Text] EL TIEMPO and EL ESPECTADOR did not circulate in Cali Friday because unidentified individuals armed with machine guns purchased thousands of copies sent there by the two newspapers. The same thing occured to EL ESPECTADOR on Thursday. At 0230, Friday, armed individuals in four jeeps arrived at the EL TIEMPO bureau in Cali and saying they wanted to buy all the copies sent by airplane from Bogota. "We have orders to purchase all of them," they said. One of the drivers who brought the packages of newspapers from the Cali airport to the bureau said that he sold a newspaper to some men. He said they glanced at it and said: "That is it." They then headed toward the city in a jeep.

The EL TIEMPO employees told the armed individuals that they could not sell them the entire edition because company policy is to sell the newspapers in the streets and to the subscribers. In view of this, the unidentified individuals waited until the newsboys went out to the streets and paid them 100 to 200 pesos for each newspaper without any explanation.

Something similar occurred to EL ESPECTADOR on Thursday and Friday. Unidentified individuals purchased the entire edition of 31 July and tried to pay in advance for the 1 August edition. Friday's operation took place simultaneously at the offices of both newspapers. In Friday's issues, the two newspapers carried reports on the assassination of Judge Hernando Baquero Borda and a translation of the book, "The Underground Empire," which makes disclosures about cocaine traffic in the United States and mentions the names of the main Colombian drug traffickers. They also carried sports, cultural, and economic news. EL ESPECTADOR published the first reports on the book Thursday, with photographs of Jose Santacruz Londono, Gilberto Rodriguez Orejuela, and Santiago Ocampo, citizens of Cali whom the author of the book considers to be the main Colombian drug traffickers. The authorities have not issued any official statement on what took place in Cali. They only expressed surprise about not finding the newspapers on their desks. Meanwhile in Bogota, the newspapers received many calls from Cali readers complaining about the lack of newspapers. A spokesman for EL ESPECTADOR said that "the same thing occurred in Medellin some time ago when we published reports involving Pablo Escobar Gaviria with drug trafficking." It is the first time that thousands of newspaper copies have been purchased in Cali for more than the established prices.

SEVERAL HUNDRED DEAD IN GUERRILLA INTERNAL PURGE

[All numbers as heard]

[Excerpt] In all the sad history of the violence in Colombia, there is no more macabre and bloodcurdling case than that of the murders in Tacueyo. After exclusive investigations at the site by this newscast's special correspondents, we can provide information that makes this black chapter in the contemporary history of the country even more bloodcurdling. Here is a report by Raul Benoit:

[Begin recording] [Benoit] With the discovery of new common graves in the mountainous region of northern Cuaca, interest in the slaughter of Tacueyo has been renewed. According to official reports, 264 bodies were found in these common graves. Fifteen days ago, peasants of the higher areas of Toribillo, between Loma Redonda and San Francisco, discovered 8 graves with 70 more bodies, victims of the internal purge in the Ricardo Franco Front, a dissident group of the FARC.

This genocide was begun shortly before Christmas by leader Javier Delgado, who said that he had discovered among his ranks a large number of infiltrators from the Colombian military intelligence. In a clandestine book that is circulating among the news media, Delgado said that he only executed 167.

[Cauca Attorney General Leonor Amezquita] Well, initially we reported 196 bodies but we have to add the latest discovery of 70 bodies.

[Benoit] But could it be that graves which were previously opened are being reopened?

[Amezquita] No, that is not possible, because the Attorney General's Office, the Medical-Legal Office, and the Public Order Office have been very careful about marking the graves.

[Benoit] The versions of the relatives are diverse, Some say that they were unaware of the fate of their brothers or sons and that they only learned of their deaths from the press reports. [end recording] [passage omitted]

FURTHER ON FOILED M-19 SABOTAGE PLAN

[Report by Mario Arboleda]

[Text] The Intelligence Section of the 3d Brigade has foiled an M-19 plan which was to be carried out Thursday in Cali. The M-19 forces in Cali are without communications after an action by the military authorities appointed to the 3d Brigade. According to Armed Forces sources, they foiled a terrorist plan to produce a boycott of President Barco's inauguration on 7 August.

According to the brigade, the guerrillas planned to leave Cali without communications and invade poorer areas like the Agua Blanca District, where some 300,000 live in subhuman conditions. The guerrillas, with their communication equipment seized by the Army, abandoned their plan, which included taking over the city, destroying public and private enterprises, as well as the main access bridges to Cali, reported by 3d Brigade Commander Hernan Jose Guzman.

[Begin Guzman recording] We found the radio equipment which they used to communicate throughout the country and abroad. They were in contact with various Central American and South American countries. Furthermore, we found all the messages exchanged with Cali, Medellin, and Bucaramanga. We found a 40 m band [as heard] radio. We also seized a computer used to code and decode communiques among the various columns. [end recording]

Some 20 members of the M-19 urban militia were captured and are at the disposition of the military judges. These men were in charge of recruiting people and training them for terrorist actions. According to El Valle authorities, there is a defense strategy capable of foiling any subversive attack to disrupt the peace in Cali.

BRAZILIAN MINISTER SIGNS COOPERATION AGREEMENTS

PA051340 Quito Voz de los Andes in Spanish 1130 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Excerpts] The Ecuadoran and Brazilian Governments on Monday signed two agreements adjusting basic technical cooperation agreements. The agreements concern technical assistance in postal services as well as eliminating bureaucratization. The ceremony was held at the vice presidency of the Republic and was attended by Ecuadoran Vice President Blasco Penaherrera Padilla, who acted as a witness, and Ecuadoran Foreign Minister Edgar Teran and Brazilian Foreign Minister Roberto de Abreu Sodre. During the ceremony, Vice President Penaherrera Padilla stressed the two countries' desire to cooperate with each other as shown by the signing of the agreements. [passage omitted]

The Ecuadoran and Brazilian foreign ministers also on Monday presided over the meeting of the Eduadoran-Brazilian technical and economic cooperation commission at the Foreign Ministry. [passage omitted]

Brazilian Foreign Minister Roberto de Abreu Sodre said that the Ecuadoran-Brazilian meeting will make possible a further strengthening of the ties between the two countries through a frank and constructive dialogue.

COLORADO, OPPOSITION LEADERS RAP GOVERNMENT

PY060232 Asuncion HOY in Spanish 3 Aug 86 p 8

[Text] State Counselor Carlos Romero Arza, member of the Colorado Party Executive Board, yesterday made a speech on the topic "Is democracy possible in the current sociopolitical and economic moment?" at a panel discussion sponsored by the Archiocese Social Pastoral Mission, the National Laymen's Group, the National Laymen's Board, and the Prodemos [combination of Latin and Greek words meaning: for the people]. In his speech, delivered during a panel discussion at the Metropolitan Seminary, Romero Arza said: "The people who have taken the thankless responsibility of being the spokesmen for this allegedly democratic regime have done nothing but convert it into a daily "demos gracias" [giving thanks -- Romero is making pun with the word democracy] whose litanies remind us citizens that we must be thankful and always ready to be faithful and obedient to those who have given us everything."

Romero Arza continued: "The term 'giving thanks' well suits the panegyrists of this model because they must be thankful. However, the Paraguayan people, the stern and long-suffering citizens, the people who have participated in the great epic achievements that our nation has experienced politically, economically, and socially, have no reason whatsoever to give thanks."

Romero Arza also said that "based on rules applicable to crisis situations, we may say that in extreme situations, when tyrannies perpetuate themselves in office and prevent the people from having any possibility of peaceful free expression, the people have the right to resort to force to oust the tyrants."

He also said that "no exceptional measure should become permanent. This is abnormal and, consequently, illegal, and that which is illegal cannot be enforced indefinitely."

Romero Arza also referred to the Colorado majority of voters in the national electorate. This reference to the number of voters was commented on by Fernando Vera, president of the Febrerista Revolutionary Party, who spoke after Romero.

Vera said: "From the civic point of view, what a cowardly majority it is that fears to give equal conditions to the opposition so that it can express itself in the elections." He added: "What a cowardly majority that can only stay in power by declaring a permanent state of siege. How cowardly is the majority that cannot allow any other political party to act freely; which does not even permit intermediate social sectors, such as the labor unions, or peasants organizations, to freely organize themselves."

Reporter Humberto Rubin yesterday afternoon opened the panel discussion and said that "we will have democracy when we start to listen to all Paraguayans, and not just to the same old ones, like ourselves, who are asked to speak at a forum, or who have become famous for something done to us, and not for what we have done." He added that "many Paraguayans who, like ourselves, are trying to find the way, are very untruthful. Therefore, once we find out that each one of us has freed himself of the vanity of seeking a position of power, and seeks a country beyond his party and beyond his name, things will be easier."

DEPUTY ECONOMY MINISTER DISCUSSES DEBT PAYMENT

PY042111 Lima Panamericana Television Network in Spanish 0215 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Interview given by Deputy Economy Minister Gustavo Saberbein to Fernando Vasquez; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Excerpts] [Vasquez] Good evening, Dr Saberbein.

[Saberbein] Good evening.

[Vasquez] What is the aim of the recent measures ordered by the government regarding the money market?

[Saberbein] Several. First, to make the best use of foreign currency; second, to make sure that the development already attained continues in the future; and third, to conduct these measures without upsetting or disturbing anyone.

[Vasquez] Would you say that this is a control of exchange?

[Saberbein] I would say it is a regulation, a regulation which is necessary because there is a desire to overcome the crisis and not only to grow but also to improve.

[Vasquez] What will happen to the people who must buy dollars? Will it be easy for them to buy dollars?

[Saberbein] Yes, defintely yes. It will continue to be the same as in the past. The person will have to go to a money changer's establishment or a bank and request the currency he or she needs to travel abroad.

[Vasquez] President Garcia on 28 July announced in his message to the country that there would be no devaluation, did he not?

[Saberbein] That is correct.

[Vasquez] The reality, however, is the following: before the presidential speech there were two foreign currency exchange rates: the single exchange market [Mercado Unico de Cambio -- MUC] of 13.90 intis and the free exchange market, the black market dollar, at 17.50 intis.

Now according to the new exchange policy, the Economy Ministry has created a new market. The MUC remains at 13.90 intis; the money market, which is another official dollar, at 17.50 intis; and the new unrestricted money market [Mercado financiero de libre disponibilidad] where any citizen can buy dollars at a price which may go up, and which some people believe will reach 19 or 20 intis. Meanwhile, many products which were exported at the MUC rate of 13.90, are now being sold at the money-market rate of 17.50. So there has been an increase of 25 percent. Among these products are liquor, marble, photography film, newspapers and other printed materials, calculating and copying machines, watches, sound equipment, and others. And this, Mr Minister, in the eyes of any person who knows a little about economics, is a disguised devaluation. Why then was a devaluation not announced?

[Saberbein] Let us analyze the different parts of the topic. First, there are not three new markets, but the same two: The MUC which has not been modified; and the money market which has also not been modified in its foreign trade department, while its other department continues to fluctuate as before.

There is no intention among the economic advisory group or in the government to devaluate or to implement an increase in this type of market, and I will explain why. Until now the Central Reserve Bank has had to intervene to prevent the dollar from declining, because there are more dollars being offered than before, and fewer people or enterprises to buy then. Nowadays only private individuals will be able to buy these dollars, and companies will have to buy dollars from the Central Reserve Bank, so we fear that the dollar rate will decline rather than increase. [passage omitted]

[Vasquez] During his 28 July speech, the president also said that in terms of profits and royalties, and payments of the private debt, there has been a capital flight of $1 billion. The first question is: According to the estimate of some experts, this capital flight was only $700 million. Do you know about that?

[Saberbein] First of all it is not capital flight. It is a normal movement of payments of private debt, and of remittances which are both based on national legislation, although some could be considered dubious. What we now have to struggle for is growth which includes the use of currency existing in the country.

[Vasquez] What I was going to ask is how was this calculation done? The president himself reported capital flight.

[Saberbein] This calculation was done at the Economic Institute, and it included reports by the Central Reserve Bank and the Economy and Finance Ministry. Anyone can consult the data released by the sector during the last few years.

[Vasquez] Could it not have been reported earlier before such a large flight had taken place?

[Saberbein] I repeat that these remittances were not exactly capital flight, but remittances, payments made on a legal basis. Part of these remittances might have had a dubious character. [passage omitted]

[Vasquez] On the foreign debt. Friday, 15 August, is a key day for us because on that day Peru must pay $180 million to the international banks. Will Peru make this payment?

[Saberbein] As has been announced by the economy minister, Peru will make a partial payment because our economy has been affected this year by the decrease in the oil price.

[Vasquez] How much does partial mean? Thirty million dollars, for example?

[Saberbein] It will be a symbolic amount, but even so it is a great effort for us. Taking into consideration that we have lost $500 million because of the decrease in the price of oil and other minerals, we now have fewer dollars available than in the past.

[Vasquez] Is this symbolic amount enough to make the IMF desist from declaring us ineligible for further loans?

[Saberbein] Well, this does not depend on us. It depends on the IMF itself. We do not want to be deemed ineligible, but on the other hand...

[Vasquez, interrupting] And what would occur if we were deemed ineligible?

[Saberbein, continuing] ...on the other hand we cannot prevent it. Well, in reality most of what could have happened has already happened, as in the case of the previous administration. Why? The banks, for example, have not granted any loan to Peru for 24 months, since 12 months before 28 July, 1985. Since then we have, fortunately, been granted loans by friendly governments, such as FRG and Canada, among many others, and some agencies such as the Inter-American Agency for Development.

[Vasquez] What is the Peruvian strategy regarding the IMF?

[Saberbein] The Peruvian strategy regarding the IMF, which is an important creditor, as are many others, is first of all to tell the truth: Peru recognizes its debt and wishes to pay it, but it has great difficulty paying it and is therefore paying the debt according to priorities. The number one priority is domestic development. It is also very important to be able to say that all workers, political parties, and businessmen support this priority. [passage omitted]

FOREIGN MINISTER COMMENTS ON UPCOMING GATT TALKS

PY050255 Madrid EFE in Spanish 2233 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Montevideo, 4 Aug (EFE) -- Foreign Minister Enrique Iglesias has stressed that if the upcoming round of GATT talks that will start in September fail, then "we can expect a real trade war throughout the world."

Iglesias also stated that "the agricultural problem will be the most complicated one, because there is a confrontation between the United States and the EEC and the producing countries."

Iglesias will preside over the GATT meeting that is to start on 15 September at the Uruguayan seaside resort of Punta del Este, 150 km from Montevideo.

The Uruguayan minister has also stated that there will be a prior meeting in Australia of the main agricultural-producing countries to set a common position with which to face the EEC and the United States regarding protectionism and agricultural subsidies.

Iglesias has warned that "we will be the victims" of an eventual trade war.

At the end of June representatives from Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Hungary, Indonesia, Malaysia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Thailand, and Uruguay came to the conclusion in Bangkok that the upcoming round of GATT talks will lack any sense if agricultural products are not included in the agenda of negotiations.

MINISTER NOTES MARKED ECONOMIC IMPROVEMENT

PY020233 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0156 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Montevideo, 31 Jul (EFE) -- Economy and Finance Minister Ricardo Zerbino has said that Uruguay's financial situation has shown a "marked improvement" in relation to the situation that prevailed in March 1985 when the democratic government took power.

The economy minister noted that at the international relations level "Uruguay has been able to resolve its foreign debt problems in a favorable manner" and that at the domestic level "economic reactivation is quite evident."

Zerbino noted that in view of a new agreement with the international banking sector, Uruguay has been allowed to omit a payment which in interest rates and capital alone totals between $800 or 900 million per year until 1989. Uruguay has replaced the payment of these installations with "much smaller" payments that are virtually "only on interest rates" until 1989.

At the domestic level, "economic reactivation is quite evident as seen through several indicators" said Zerbino.

According to the economy minister "there is also an improvement" in the public financial sector, and "there has been a gradual reduction in the budget deficit."

The Uruguayan economy and finance minister noted that "these improvements will result in achievements in the economic and social fields."

Nevertheless, 70 percent of the inhabitants of Montevideo, where half of Uruguay's 2.9 million inhabitants live, complain about the present economic situation and say that it "undermines" the social situation.

A recent poll carried out by the U.S. company "Gallup" disclosed that the majority of Montevideo residents and those of nearby areas are "concerned" about the high cost of living, low salaries, low retirement pensions and unemployment.

SUPREME COURT GIVES CONTESTED CASE TO CIVIL COURT

PY301900 Montevideo Radio El Espectador Network in Spanish 1000 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Text] The Supreme Court has ruled that the civil court has jurisdiction in a case which the military court said is under its jurisdiction.

The five members of the Supreme Court ruled that the case should be under the jurisdiction of the 1st Civil Court. The military judges, Brigadier General Jorge Borad, retired, and Colonel Manuel (Pagola), retired, the ad hoc members of the Supreme Court dissented.

This case involves a sailor, Jose Antonio (Clavelo) Iglesias, who fired a shot at Alfonso Martin Torrcz, an employee of UTE [State Power and Telephone Administration], when he tried to enter the Montevideo port.

Two days after this incident the case was taken to the 9th Criminal Court to try the sailor for causing serious injury. The 4th Military Court immediately said that this case was under its jurisdiction. The case was then passed to the Supreme Court on 4 July 1984. The Supreme Court based its ruling on Article 253 of the Constitution. The ruling also mentions the opinions of well-known jurists such as Education and Culture Minister Adela Reta, lawyers Ofelia (Gretti), Enrique (Bescovi), [name indistinct], and others.

GDR'S GERLACH VISITS, MEETS SEVERAL LEADERS

PA060001 Caracas Television Service in Spanish 1600 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] The strengthening and maintenance of world peace was the main topic discussed by Venezuelan President Jaime Lusinchi and Manfred Gerlach, deputy chairman of the GDR Council of State in a Miraflores Palace meeting.

The high-ranking GDR official is touring the country to meet with various national sectors. The meeting was also attended by Foreign Minister Simon Alberto Consalvi and Finance Minister Manuel Azpurua. They emphasized the implementation of policies that will lead to disarmament and prevention of war, mainly in Central America. President Lusinchi and Gerlach stated that great efforts must be undertaken for detente. Both nations have supported this position in various international forums. They also discussed cooperation in various fields and speeding up new agreements. A technical cooperation project is being drawn up that will bring excellent benefits to the two countries.

PRC PETROLEUM OFFICIALS VISIT MARAVEN

PA051859 Caracas EL UNIVERSAL in Spanish 25 Jul 86 p 2-11

[Text] A delegation from the PRC's Petroleum Industry Ministry is visiting Venezuela to continue the dialogue that will make it possible to reach cooperation agreements. The delegation is comprised of seven representatives, who will hold meetings for 2 weeks at Maraven [a subsidiary of Venezuelan Petroleum, Inc.] on heavy crudes and thermal recovery.

The Chinese delegation is composed of Dou Bingwen, director of the International Cooperation Department [as published] of the PRC's Petroleum Ministry (MPC); Jia Jinhui, vice president of the MPC's Petroleum Exploration and Exploitation Institute; Wang Qimin, deputy chief of engineers of the Daqing Field Institute; Lui Baohe, production superintendent of the Shengli Field; Shu Zhanghua, production superintendent of the Shu Guan Field, Liao He region; Liu Pignan, deputy director of the MPC's office for scientific and technical cooperation; and Wang Shaoxian, Spanish interpreter. The exchange between the two nations began in March 1985 when a delegation of the National Petroleum and Petrochemical Industry visited China for preliminary identification of the possible areas of cooperation. In September of the same year, a new Venezuelan delegation traveled to the PRC to do a technical analysis of those areas of cooperation. During that visit, the MPC requested Maraven's technical assistance with a feasibility study of the Linfanjia field. This study was performed and sent to the MPC. In November 1985, an agreement for scientific and technical cooperation in the petroleum field was signed between the energy and Mines Ministry and the MPC.

As part of the series of exchanges and of preliminary agreements, the Chinese delegation currently visiting Maraven has recently received several presentations, including talks on alternate steam injection, secondary recovery through continuous injection, computing systems for geological exploration, and study of deposits by interactive simulation. Visits have been also scheduled to the heavy crude fields of Pedevesa [Petroleos the Venezuela, S.A.] on the east coast of the lake, which also includes visits to the M-6 and 4-3 steam plants. These series of technical talks, together with the visits to the production fields and the talks and expositions that have been programmed by Lagoven, Corpoven [subsidiaries of Venezuelan Petroleum, Inc], and the Intevep [Institute of Venezuelan Petroleum Technology], will allow the Chinese and Maraven representatives to identify the technical points and the projects which will be included in future cooperation agreements. These agreements will encompass, on the part of Maraven, technical assistance in petroleum engineering, deposits engineering, steam injection, and production and management of heavy crudes. Regarding the agreements to be signed, the MPC will contribute their experience and technology in water injection and fractured deposits to the national petroleum and petrochemical industry.

GIL NOTES VOLUNTARY OIL PRODUCTION DECREASE

[Excerpt] [passage omitted] Today, in statements to the press, Acting Energy and Mines Minister Julio Cesar Gil said that our country will reduce its oil production volume by 145,000 or 150,000 barrels per day in an effort to adjust its production level to the quota it was assigned in October 1974, which was 1,555,000 barrels per day. This of course will be for 2 months. The market's behavior will be observed until another [OPEC] meeting is called, probably in September. Will the [OPEC] agreement be respected? The answer is given by acting Energy Minister Gil:

[Begin recording] We must assume that all of the countries are acting in good faith and that this is the beginning of a medium- to long-term agreement. I believe that as the benefits of OPEC's goodwill are proven with the strengthening of peace, the countries that are not OPEC members will contribute to the effort. It is important to note this because they also contribute to the strengthening of prices. [end recording] [passage omitted]

3 AIR FORCE PLANES COLLIDE; 2 DEAD

PA051819 Hamburg DPA in Spanish 1722 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Caracas, 5 Aug (DPA) — Three Venezuelan Air Force (FAV) "Mirage" aircraft crashed today, killing at least two crew members. A brief Defense Ministry report issued in Caracas at noon reports that the triple accident occurred at approximately 1000. It states that the three planes were part of a squadron on its way to central Venezuela for firing drills. The craft crashed as they were flying back to their home base (in Maracay, approximately 120 km southeast of Caracas). The bulletin does not detail inquiries or casualties, but unofficial reports obtained by DPA indicated that two pilots were killed, while the third survived by ejecting from his aircraft. Venezuelan President Jaime Lusinchi was immediately informed of the situation. He ordered the opening of an investigation after which the details of the triple accident will be disclosed.

GROUP OF SIX LEADERS ARRIVE, DISCUSS ISSUES

De La Madrid, Papandreou Talk

FL051024 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 0504 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Mexico City, 4 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Mexico and Greece have stressed the need for revitalizing international cooperation, seeking with greater vigor a new world order and focusing on the more urgent problems such as the economic crisis, the developing countries' debt, and peace.

President Miguel de la Madrid and Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou asserted the urgency for promoting a dialogue between industrialized and developing countries to seek solutions which will make it possible to deal successfully with the economic crisis.

At a dinner held in honor of Papandreou, the Mexican President said today, more than ever, we have to intensify international cooperation and renew with greater vigor and determination the struggle for the establishment of a just, friendly, and equitable world order. [passage omitted].

Miguel de la Madrid warned that Latin America is demanding political attention for its economic security, removed from military preoccupations, and because of that the Latin American governments will increase their efforts and initiate reforms concerning wrongs and resentments. In the face of a warlike escalation, we will respond with renewed arguments of harmony and more solid reasons for peace. [passage omitted]

We will insist on our commitment for a world free of nuclear arms and will promote an international system which will guarantee our people's development with peace and security, De la Madrid said. The chief of state defended democracy as a system of political tolerance and reciprocal respect and also defended independence and self-determination. In addition, he condemned any type of interventionism. [passage omitted]

Andreas Papandreou affirmed it is of vital importance for humankind to preserve liberty, independence respect for human rights, and democracy.

We have the right to want to be owners of ourselves and our destiny, and that is why it is absolutely reasonable to play an active role in safekeeping peace and shaping the society of the future. In this sense, he acknowledged that the economic crisis affecting Third World countries, especially Latin America, is threatened with social order and peace.

He noted that the high level of foreign indebtedness and its grave consequences generate desperation among Latin American peoples, and he demanded that a meaningful dialogue between North and South begin as soon as possible to confront the problem comprehensively.

Papandreou proposed carrying out necessary structural changes and undertaking social reforms so that indebted countries may emerge from the socioeconomic swamp to which they were led by today's asphyxiating reality. [passage omitted]

Papandreou referred to the situation existing between Greece and Turkey and said that, unfortunately, Turkey has undertaken provocative actions that jeopardize inter-Balkan cooperation and peace. Greece, he added, loves peace, but future Greek-Turkish relations depend on the application of principles and norms established in international law and the United Nations Charter. [passage omitted]

Issue Joint Communique

FL052038 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 1920 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Mexico City, 5 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- The presidents of Mexico and Greece today agreed that it is urgent to unite the efforts of countries committed to peace, independent development, international cooperation based on equality, and the peoples' sovereign right to self-determination.

In a joint communique issued by Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid and Greek Prime

It was also agreed to promote higher education on Latin American and Greek topics in the two countries and Neo-Hellenic studies in Mexico. De la Madrid and Papandreou agreed to study cooperation possibilities in the areas of construction, maritime transportation, agriculture, and industry. They also stressed establishing cooperation mechanisms in Greek and Mexican economic and trade organizations and in the public and private sectors to develop economic bilateral realtions.

At the conclusion of the Greek prime minister's official visit with the Mexican president, the two heads of state stressed the importance of this first bilateral meeting to strengthen the ties between the two countries to promote cooperation and understanding in all areas.

Athens Radio on Meeting

NC051628 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Greece feels that the talks between Prime Minister Papandreou and Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid, as well as those between Greek ministers and their Mexican counterparts, have been productive in both political and economic terms. [passage omitted]

Foreign Minister Karolos Papoulias briefed a number of political correspondents, saying that the discussions with Mexican political leaders took place in a very friendly and cordial atmosphere. He added that other countries, specifically Brazil and Australia, have asked to join the peace initiative of the Group of Six. Papoulias noted that the Greek prime minister agreed with the Mexican president's belief that their two countries should play a special role through bilateral intervention in such areas of tension as Afghanistan, Namibia, Cyprus, and the Aegean. The next steps for the implementation of this proposal are still to be determined.

Papoulias also highlighted the significance that Mexico and Sweden attach to the initiative of the Group of Six and expressed his opinion that many people have changed their minds about the initiative's ability to get results. The talks between Papandreou and Miguel de la Madrid included an analysis of the message of Chernobyl. The prime minister said this incident proves that fate alone determines who will suffer only one such accident. In addition, the Greek prime minister noted that the Mexican president had relayed his country's interest in the democratization of Latin America. Miguel de la Madrid also voiced his fear that any intervention in Nicaragua would bring an upsurge of anti-Americanism in Central America and in Latin America as a whole, and would create a new situation. Finally, Papoulias said that Prime Minister Papandreou told the Mexican president that he hoped bilateral economic relations would develop further, and that cooperation with Mexico would be closer and permanent. [passage omitted]

Speaking at a dinner last night in honor of the Greek prime minister, De la Madrid praised the role played by Papandreou. He described him as dedicated to the promotion of friendship and cooperation between Greece and Mexico. The Mexican president went on to say that Greece and his country participate in such peaceful undertakings as the initiative of the Group of Six. He also referred to Central America and to the efforts of the Contadora Group, which the Greek Government backs, to resolve the crisis in Central America and Latin America in general.

In reply to the Mexican president's toast, Prime Minister Papandreou emphasized that this visit confirms the close relations between the two countries. He said it was a firm point of reference that would allow a foundation to be laid for an even stronger form of cooperation. Papandreou touched on the common struggle for peace and on Greece's work on behalf of Balkan cooperation. He declared: We are trying to make our region, the Balkans, a zone of peace and cooperation free of nuclear weapons. We want it to be a place where relations among states are governed by the principle of good neighborliness. Despite the different political and social systems of our northern neighbors, the prime minister stressed, we continue to strengthen our ties of friendship and close cooperation. Unfortunately, Turkey's policy does not permit a complete form of inter-Balkan cooperation. As far as our country is concerned, Turkey's continual provocations and threats are its way of questioning the internationally recognized status of the Aegean and, in the final analysis, our inalienable sovereign rights.

Regarding the Cyprus issue, Papandreou said it was a cause of special concern, as it constitutes a danger to peace in the region, and is a question of great national importance to Greece. We believe, he added, that the withdrawal of all Turkish occupation troops from the Republic of Cyprus is an essential precondition for a just and viable solution under UN auspices.

Concerning the problems of Latin America, Papandreou explained the Greek Government attaches special significance to them. He noted that Greece is working inside the EEC to strengthen relations and narrow the differences between Europe and Latin America. Papandreou highlighted the fact that Greece, in close cooperation with its partners in the European Community, has supported the Contadora process from the outset. He said that the Contadora Group is trying to reach a peaceful, comprehensive solution that stems from the region itself, and is based on the principles of territorial integrity, self-determination, noninterference, and respect for human rights and democratic freedoms. Greece To Purchase Mexican Oil

PA052315 Mexico City Red Nacional 13 Imevision Television in Spanish 1955 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Greek Foreign Minister Karolos Papoulias has announced that as a result of Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou's meeting with Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid, Greece will purchase oil from Mexico. The Greek foreign minister made this statement during a news conference, adding that the meeting between President De la Madrid and Prime Minister Papandreou was very positive.

He also said President De la Madrid had accepted an invitation to visit Greece. Mexican Foreign Secretary Bernardo Sepulveda was also invited to visit Greece to prepare for De la Madrid's trip. The date for the two trips will be announced through the usual diplomatic channels.

Foreign Minister Papoulias announced that a bilateral commission will be appointed in the next 3 months. The commission will be responsible for studying matters related to trade exchange and coinvestment between Mexico and Greece. Earlier today, Prime Minister Papandreou attended a reception at the embassy, to which Greek citizens in Mexico were invited.

Sweden's Carlsson on Arms

[By Rossana Fuentes Berain, special correspondent]

[Text] Ixtapa-Zihuatanejo, 4 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson said today that the disarmament dialogue is not exclusively limited to the superpowers of the world who have weapons.

In an exclusive NOTIMEX interview, the Swedish prime minister said that a nuclear war today would destroy all civilization, proving why countries representing the five continents can do more in reference to nuclear disarmament.

Carlsson arrived in Mexico City today and immediately departed for Ixtapa-zihuatanejo to attend the Group of Six conference which will be held 6 and 7 August and which is expected to launch a new initiative for nuclear disarmament. In addition to Carlsson, other leaders attending the meeting will be Miguel de la Madrid and Raul Alfonsin, presidents of Mexico and Argentina, respectively; Andreas Papandreou and Rajiv Gandhi, prime ministers of Greece and India, respectively; and Julius Nyerere, former president of Tanzania.

Carlsson said the Group of Six is not trying to replace the United Nations, instead, he said, we are trying to work with the United Nations even though there are times when a group is needed to work in a less bureaucratic manner and more directly with U.S. President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

He said the Group of Six has demonstrated it can function in this manner and inform and offer its services to the Soviet Union and the United States. After affirming that the Group of Six has greatly influenced international public opinion, Carlsson said that we have to be strong and demonstrate that it is impossible, even for superpowers and for political leaders like Gorbachev and Reagan, to disregard the opinion of the rest of the world. When asked how a nongovernmental organization can help achieve the acceptance of public opinion, he said this is achieved by organizing the sentiments of men, people, in towns and cities. It seems that people are becoming more aware of the dangers of militarization, not only the nuclear arms race but also the militarization of space, he said. The people, he said, are afraid and want to do something in this respect and we should try to organize the protests. Nongovernmental organizations can do much in this area, he added.

Carlsson said that by calling for an end to nuclear testing and a treaty prohibiting complete tests we have made it possible, in a certain way, for Gorbachev and Reagan to meet and at least begin a treaty prohibiting testing. He added that the relationship between the United States and the Soviet Union has been very tense over the past few years, and the international community would like to have a disarmament process without simultaneously having a political clash between the superpowers. Nevertheless, this is not likely to occur as soon as we would like, he said. The Swedish prime minister also said the people of the United States and the Soviet Union are afraid of a third world war.

During the Reagan-Gorbachev meeting in Geneva, he said, they agreed that there should not be another war where nuclear weapons are used; what remains to be seen are constructive decisions in this area.

In reference to military spending in developing countries, Carlsson said military spending reduces the financial resources that can be utilized in a better manner. These expenditures, he said, can be used to pay a part of the foreign debt of poor countries and for research in the technical, medical, and peaceful development of weapons. For our part, concluded Carlsson, we dedicate 5 percent of the GNP to the countries of Asia, Africa, and Latin America. I believe that industrialized countries could spend more in foreign aid, especially if they reduce the defense budget, said Carlsson.

Tanzania's Nyerere Arrives

DELVALLE ON LATIN AMERICAN SUMMIT, DUVALIER

PA052321 Panama City Circuito RPC Television in Spanish 1730 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] President Eric Arturo Delvalle says it is necessary for the Latin American presidents to meet to seek solutions to area-wide problems.

[Begin recording] [Delvalle] I think, and I have said so before, that the Latin American presidents should meet. We have many things to discuss, particularly the foreign debt, which is hindering the development of our countries. This is the vital topic for discussion. However, there are other matters to be discussed, such as control of terrorism, limiting expenditures in arms, drugs, etc. I think we have a great number of things that justify a meeting of the presidents. In the framework of its diplomatic tradition, Panama is again willing to offer its capital, the American oasis of peace, as the site for that meeting.

[Reporter] Could this meeting be affected by the country's deteriorating international image?

[Delvalle] I do not think the country has suffered internationally as much as has been locally reported. I think that the anonymous lies are merely falsities. It has been established that there is no proof. On the contrary, there is irrefutable proof that all that has been said is false. Now the one who is in question is Mr Helms, the accuser. [end recording]

In regard to asylum for former Haitian President Jean-Claude Duvalier, Delvalle said:

[Begin recording] That news is doubly false. He has not requested asylum from us, and Panama will not offer it to him. [end recording]

PRESIDENT MEETS WITH VENEZUELAN MINISTER

PA051841 Panama City LA REPUBLICA in Spanish 4 Aug 86 pp 2, 10

[Text] President Eric Delvalle has received Venezuelan Investment Fund Minister Hector Hurtado in his Palace of the Herons office where the two analyzed Venezuelan investments in Panama and agreements for the signing of a bilateral treaty that calls for the duty-free introduction in the Venezuelan market of Panamanian products.

Minister Hurtado, who on Saturday concluded a 2-day official visit to Panama, was accompanied by Aquiles Vilora, technical director of the Venezuelan Investment Fund, and Ambassador Enrique Peinado Barrios. The minister recalled that the current negotiations for reaching a bilateral trade agreement were initiated in February. The president said he is very much in favor of closer trade relations with Venezuela and of Panama opening its doors to Venezuelan products which would not represent competition for products made locally.

Minister Hurtado also discussed the current status of the project for the construction of the Simon Bolivar Bridge over the Canal and the conclusion of the Panama-Arraijan highway, a project that has a cost of $100 million balboas and is to be financed by the Venezuelan Government.

The Panamanian president ordered Planning and Economic Policy Minister Ricarte Vasquez to hold discussions on the technical aspect, and Minister Vasquez later met with the Venezuela minister and his retinue. To the surprise of the Venezuelan delegation, Minister Vasquez appeared reluctant to go into details regarding Venezuelan investments and adopted a casual attitude even on trade and export agreements with Venezuela.

Before returning to Venezuela, after having visited Guatemala, El Salvador, and Honduras, Minister Hurtado told Panamanian newsmen that he had found Minister Vasquez' attitude strange because it contrasted with the encouraging meeting that he had held with President Delvalle. The issues surfaced in the context of the signing of a bilateral agreement between Panama and Venezuela that calls for the duty-free introduction of Panamanian products in the Venezuelan market.

In addition to the Venezuelan delegation, the meeting with Minister Vasquez was attended by Panama's ambassador to Venezuela, Marcel Salamin; members of the board of directors of the Panamanian Foreign trade Institute, the National Bank of Panama, and the National Investment Council; and by Deputy Public Works Minister Rogelio Dumanoir.

Minister Hurtado's visit to Panama has created much expectation about the possibility of reactivating the project for the construction of the Simon Bolivar Bridge and the Arraijan-Panama City highway. Articles published recently in the Venezuealan media have noted that the interruption of work in these projects is an unfortunate episode that must be corrected because it represents a grave problem for Venezuelan investors. In statements to Caracas' DIARIO, the Panamanian ambassador, Marcel Salamin, said that the suspension of the contract was due to economic matters, Salamin noted that the construction of the Simon Bolivar Bridge is important for Panama's economic development and communication.

LEGISLATOR SAYS FDP TRAFFICS ARMS FOR GUERRILLAS

PA051721 Panama City LA PRENSA in Spanish 5 Aug 86 p 1-A

[By Flor Quintero]

[Text] Christian Democratic Party (PDC) legislator Guillermo Cochez in statements to LA PRENSA charged that the Defense Forces of Panama [FDP] are directly participating in the traffic of arms for Peru's leftist guerrilla movement known as Shining Path and that the best evidence of this is the seizure of the Danish ship Pia Vesta. Cochez predicted that it is very probable this case will be "unveiled" in the next few days and that the participation of the government and the FDP in guerrilla-related activites would be finally demonstrated.

The legislator said that the FDP is "totally involved" in a process that involves corruption, drug-trafficking, and arms-trafficking, a process that will gradually debilitate it. "The specific charge by the ultraconservative daily THE WASHINGTON TIMES that our country has become a refuge for Bolivian drug-traffickers confirms charges we have filed with completely deaf authorities."

The legislator told LA PRENSA that what Justice Camilo Perez told this paper yesterday concerning the justice situation in Panama reveals that changes are necessary in our country. He added: "We can see that we are facing a government group that will do everything possible to continue discrediting our country at the international level."

Later he told LA PRENSA that THE NEW YORK TIMES' charges, in particular against Gen Manuel Antonio Noriega, are a hotter issue than the Torrijos-Carter Treaties in the United States because they have to do with something very important for the North Americans: drugs. He noted: "I have noticed that those charges have not stopped other undesirable activities that do not contribute to our country's reputation on the handling of international affairs."

Cochez said that "there is a group of people which accuses the opposition of making trips to the United States to speak badly about the government and of not being nationalist when we all know that it is the government's representatives who are paying juicy amounts for contracts not only with U.S. firms that specialize in lobbying, but also public relations companies that know nothing about our true situation, that it is they who continue leaning on the U.S. Government to remain in power." Cochez said that while it is true that the Panamanian people are not reacting to this situation at all levels, there is an outcry demanding a democratic system in Panama. He warned that if the government and the FDP insist on carrying out illegal activities, "those who know what is happening will have no other choice but to continue reporting on this situation, which really brings to Panama more discredit than whatever any Panamanian could say here or there about the situation.

He noted: "Panama, making a little effort, can still get out of the hole and the international discredit for which our rulers are responsible."

PRESIDENT NOT TO ATTEND BARCO INAUGURATION

PA010209 Panama City ACAN in Spanish 0148 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Panama City, 31 Jul (ACAN-EFE) -- Without giving any official explanation, President Eric Arturo Delvalle today [1 August] cancelled his visit to Colombia to attend the 7 August inauguration of President-elect Virgilio Barco. Foreign Minister Jorge Abadia Arias announced today that Vice President Roderick Esquivel will, in turn, attend the inauguration. [passage ommitted]

The foreign minister said today that "we are planning to hold a meeting in Colombia of the Contadora foreign ministers (Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela, and Panama) along with the Support Group ministers (Argentina, Brazil, Peru, and Uruguay)." The foreign minister added that President Delvalle "has entrusted us (along with Esquivel) to make the contacts in Bogota, as well as to sound out the possibilities for a meeting, because the Central Americans are anxious for us to take some initiative."

COSTA RICA

MINISTERS COMMENT ON RESULTS OF U.S. TRIP

PA052247 San Jose Radio Reloj in Spanish 1200 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Presidency Minister Rodrigo Arias has said that during a visit to Washington by a Costa Rican mission the participants found understanding of the country's economic problems. Arias added that the need to count on aid from friendly governments such as the United States was also understood. It was an opportunity to discuss the social problems currently affecting the country and the need for more flexibility concerning areas requiring economic adjustments.

Rodrigo Arias said that the mission that traveled to Washington informed the U.S. authorities about Costa Rica's efforts to counter drug trafficking. He added that the possibility of improving future coordination between the antidrug institutions was also discussed. He noted that during the next few months, the Security Council might take measures to coordinate those actions. Apparently, the United States may support Costa Rica in its struggle to control the consumption and trafficking of drugs.

So far, no official invitation has been received for President Oscar Arias to visit the United States and meet with President Ronald Reagan, Presidency Minister Rodrigo Arias, said, upon returning from Washington together with Foreign Minister Rodrigo Madrigal Nieto and Vice President Jorge Manuel Dengo. Dengo added that there were indications suggesting a desire for Arias to visit the United States, which can be considered a preliminary invitation.

Presidency Minister Rodrigo Arias said that based on talks held with State Department officials, it is possible that President Arias may travel to the United States before December. However, Rodrigo Arias said that it all depends on the two presidents' -- Oscar Arias and Ronald Reagan -- agendas.

Vice President Jorge Manuel Dengo said that the talks held in Washington focused on three points. Vice President Dengo, together with the foreign and presidency ministers met with the U.S. secretary of state and several under secretaries and mid-level technical and political officials. During their visit, the Costa Rican Government officials discussed problems concerning international policy, as well as Costa Rica's economic policy and U.S. economic policy and its effects on U.S. aid to our country.

Vice President Dengo said that Costa Rica's foreign trade problems were also analyzed in Washington. He added that the conversations focused mainly on the Caribbean Basin initiative and on the protectionistic U.S. regulations that affect our country. According to Dengo, the Costa Rican mission received great understanding from the U.S. officials concerning the three basic topics discussed.

Dengo stressed that the Costa Rican mission did not carry out any negotiations while in Washington, adding that negotiations on economic matters are handled by the Finance and Planning Ministries, and by the Central Bank. He said that they explained the two phases of the country's economic recovery, which are the recovery of stability, and reactivation and growth, the latter of which is the current government's main goal.

Dengo reported that in the meeting with U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz, U.S. policy concerning economic aid for Costa Rica was reviewed. Costa Rica's efforts to reduce its dependency on U.S. aid were also discussed. According to Dengo, those issues were analyzed based on two prospects: those referring to short-term requirements, in other words for 1986, and the medium-term requirements, in other words for 1986, and the medium-term requirements, in relation to future years. He added that in this respect, foreign aid requirements and the expected effects on the country's system of production were reviewed. Dengo said that short-term U.S. economic aid depends on two factors. The first refers to domestic U.S. political problems, and the second to the effects of that aid on our economy.

In his reference to short-term aid, Dengo was talking about the still pending $80-million disbursement from the USAID, which has already disbursed $40 million.

AMBASSADORIAL APPOINTMENTS -- The government has announced the appointment of Guillermo Villalobos Arce as ambassador to the OAS. The appointments of ambassadors to Canada, Panama, Colombia, Argentina, Peru, and Bolivia have not been decided yet. In Uruguay, the post of Ana Ramos, the minister-counselor, will be raised to the ambassadorial level. In Paraguay the post was eliminated a year ago, and relations are being maintained at a lower level. [Summary] [San Jose LA NACION in Spanish 21 Jul 86 p 4 [A PA]

BLANDON DISCUSSES CONDECA, PEACE TALKS

PM051528 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 2 Aug 86 p 4

[Interview with head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff General Adolfo Blandon by Jose Comas in San Salvador; date not given]

[Text] San Salvador -- Head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff of the Salvadoran Armed Forces General Adolfo Blandon held the following conversation with EL PAIS' special correspondent.

Question: What is your opinion, General, of the attempts to revitalize Condeca (the Central American Defense Council, a military grouping including Honduras, El Salvador, Guatemala, and Nicaragua?

Answer: Personally, I believe that this is the right moment to revive Condeca. We are experiencing an extremely crucial moment, not only for the Central American region, and I believe that the harmonization of viewpoints of the various Armed Forces in the region could help consolidate democracy in the Central American countries.

Question: Formally, at least, Nicaragua is a member of Condeca. What role would Nicaragua play in this revitalization?

Answer: This is precisely the problem under study, because the current legal basis includes Nicaragua, and this means that if it is revived just now, they would have the right to have their representative. We believe that with the current Marxist-Leninist government in Nicaragua it would make no sense to revive Condeca with their presence.

Question: Would that revival of Condeca be a way of preparing an intervention in Nicaragua?

Answer: No.

Question: Concerning the dialogue with the guerrillas in El Salvador, what is the Armed Forces' stance? It is said that the Armed Forces disagree.

Answer: We have always supported the president of the Republic in the peace talks. We have done so from the outset, and we will continue to do so.

Question: Would you take part?

Answer: If the president so decides, we will take part.

Question: One of the things that you feel when talking with military personnel in El Salvador is the feeling that they believe that "the politicians destroy what we military achieve." What is your opinion?

Answer: All that can be said is that in our country, at this crucial moment when we need national unity, there are such conflicting tendencies that they have polarized the atmosphere, and this only helps subversive activity.

Quesion: I talked by chance with three displaced persons whom I found in taking refuge here in teh capital. They had relatives who had been killed by the Army, they said. How do you believe the Army can gain these people's confidence?

Answer: We certainly cannot deny that such cases have occurred in the fighting in the countryside, but it is because of the method the terrorists use of taking peasants to accompany them in their movements. When a clash occurs, there is no doubt that there must be many people killed who have nothing to do with them.

UNGO 'PESSIMISTIC' ABOUT CONTINUING DIALOGUE

PA051912 Panama City ACAN in Spanish 1728 GMT 5 Aug 86

[By Agustin De Gracia]

[Text] Panama City, 5 Aug (ACAN-EFE) -- The civilian leader of the Salvadoran guerrillas feels the resumption of peace negotiations with the government is "difficult" because Jose Napoleon Duarte is playing out a "game of appearances."

Last 1 June, Duarte proposed to the rebels continuing with the conversations that were initiated in October 1984 and suspended a month later. Last week, Duarte proposed a date and place for the third meeting.

"I am not so sure of the seriousness of Duarte's proposal, unless it is a provocation for us to answer no," FDR President Guillermo Ungo said today. The FDR is a group of political parties allied with the rebels.

"We are pessimistic about the continuation of the dialogue," said the rebel leader to foreign reporters in his Panama City apartment, where he lives in exile.

Ungo accused Duarte of proposing the meeting be held in places "that are not serious" and of establishing an "agenda of surrender" of the rebels. He is playing as if to hold a dialogue, but he is not doing it seriously," he added.

The FDR president did not wish to give details on the proposals, because the preliminary negotiations are being conducted in very strict secrecy, with the mediation of the archbishop of San Salvador, Mogr Arturo Rivera y Damas.

He did, however, specify that the government wants to hold the third meeting in a place other than San Salvador, which is where the guerrillas proposed holding the meeting late in August.

Guillermo Ungo, the leader of the only Salvadoran political party that is a member of Socialist International, the National Revolutionary Movement (MNR), shared the presidential nomination with Duarte in the 1972 elections.

The guerrilla leader said that the resumption of conversations to end the war that has been going on for nearly 7 years is "difficult" due to "Duarte's weakness" and the refusal by the United States and the Salvadoran military high command to put a peaceful end to the conflict.

"Duarte's situation is very limited," he added.

According to Ungo, the FDR and its military ally, the FMLN, are pursuing two goals: the resumption of the dialogue and "modest results" from the next meeting.

The government-guerrilla talks in 1984 were the first after 5 years of war, but were suspended without either of the two parties making any firm commitments to end the conflict.

Both groups accuse each other of not respecting even the minimum agreements reached after the first round of talks, particularly an agreement to "humanize" the war.

HONDURAS

MINISTRY ON ACCEPTANCE OF ICJ JURISDICTION

PA060316 Tegucigalpa Voz de Honduras Network in Spanish 1130 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] At the behest of the executive branch, and in accordance with Article 36, Section 2 of the bylaws of the International Court of Justice [ICJ], on 21 June of this year the sovereign National Congress modified the declaration issued by the Honduran Government on 20 February 1960 regarding Honduras' acceptance of the ICJ's jurisdiction. To this end, the National Congress issued Decrees No 75-86 and 79-86, which were published in the Official Gazette on 4 and 6 June, respectively.

The decrees stipulate the matters on which Honduras accepts the jurisdiction of the ICJ and also identify the controversies to which the declaration under reference shall not apply.

With due authority from the Congress, on 22 May the Foreign Affairs Ministry issued the respective notices to the UN and OAS secretaries general, receipt of which has been acknowledged. At the same time, the UN and OAS secretariats relayed the Honduran notices to the member-states of those organizations as well as to the bodies that should hear of them as far as the ICJ itself is concerned.

Regarding the border controversy between Honduras and El Salvador, it is common knowledge that the two parties have pledged under both the 1980 peace treaty and the commitment recently signed by the two countries to submit the controversy to the ICJ.

The Foreign Relations Ministry makes this information public in view of the various comments that have arisen as a result of the introductory petition of the action filed by the Sandinist government before the ICJ.

The Foreign Relations Ministry reiterates to the public that this situation is being handled with the prudence and discretion that best suit the high interests of our country.

DESIGNATION OF ENVOY TO MANAGUA REPORTEDLY CHANGED

PA052217 Teguciglapa Voz de Honduras Network in Spanish 1130 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] For unknown reasons, Colonel Rigoberto Regalado Lara, the brother of the current chief of the Honduran Armed Forces, is no longer scheduled to be sent as Honduran ambassador to Nicaragua by the government, several sources have reported.

The Honduran Ministry of Foreign Affairs had decided to transfer Colonel Regalado Lara from his position of military attache in Guatemala to that of ambassador in Managua. The Sandinist authorities had already given their consent.

Regalado Lara was to replace Colonel Isidro Tapia; however, it was reported yesterday that the brother of General Humberto Regalado Hernandez will continue in his position as military attache in Guatemala.

The reasons for the change by the Honduran Foreign Ministry were not revealed, nor was the name of the person who will be sent as Honduran ambassador to Nicaragua.

LA PRENSA OFFICIAL REJECTS ORTEGA PROPOSAL

PA052155 Panama City ACAN in Spanish 2126 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Managua, 5 Aug (ACAN-EFE) — The Sandinist proposal to reopen the opposition newspaper LA PRENSA in Managua is "a provocation" that does not deserve an answer, the newspaper's chairman, Violeta Chamorro, has said.

"I will not answer Commander Ortega's allusions to LA PRENSA because they are only a provocation, and I will not fall for them. Ortega's allusions are a provocation based upon false and slanderous statements that wrest seriousness and dignity from them," she added.

Last week, during a speech before a group of black leaders in Chicago, the Nicaraguan president invited the owners of the opposition newspaper to "adjust to the legal framework" offered by the Sandinist government.

Ortega said that the owners of the newspaper should break their ties with those who "direct and finance the war of aggression" against Nicaragua, so that the sanctions imposed on LA PRENSA can be reconsidered. [passage omitted]

Regarding Ortega's statements, Violeta Chamorro pointed out that "the president insists on repeating lies against the Nicaraguans' newspaper."

Violeta Barrios de Chamorro added that the closing of LA PRENSA, which was founded 60 years ago, "has caused a terrible curtain of silence to fall over Nicaragua." [passage omitted]

OPPOSITION SEES 'POSITIVE POINTS' IN ORTEGA PLAN

PA051624 Managua EL NUEVO DIARIO in Spanish 4 Aug 86 pp 1, 8

[Excerpts] The leaders of various opposition political parties feel that the "Chicago Proposal" presented by President Daniel Ortega in that U.S. city contains important and positive points for achieving peace in Central America.

Dr Eduardo Molina of the Conservative Party feels that the most important aspect of this proposal are disarmament in Central America, immediate dialogue between the church and the state, and the possibility of reopening LA PRENSA. [passage omitted]

Meanwhile, the leader of the Popular Social Christian Party, Cesar Delgadillo, said that the Nicaraguan Government's position is very positive, and all political and social organizations of the country should support this proposal. [passage omitted]

For his part, Independent Liberal Party leader Juan Manuel Gutierrez said that the proposal is positive, particularly in the aspect related to improving relations between the church and the state. He said that should the U.S. Government accept resuming a dialogue with Nicaragua, this would be the best way of resolving the problems. [passage omitted]

COMPARISON OF DANIEL ORTEGA'S 'CHICAGO PROPOSAL'

Managua International Service in Spanish at 1410 GMT on 5 August broadcasts the "Chicago Proposal" put forth by President Daniel Ortega on 3 August. The Managua International Service version has been compared to the Managua Radio Noticias version published in the Nicaragua section of the 5 August Latin America DAILY REPORT, P 24, revealing the following variations:

First paragraph, line one reads: ...to immediately start with the Vatican a constructive, open ...(adding phrase)

Paragraph four, from line two reads: ...with those who direct and finance the war of aggression against the Nicaraguan nation. Under those conditions, the temporary measure that has been applied to them would be reconsidered.

5. The Nicaraguan Government...(providing indistinct words, rewording)

Paragraph six, from last line reads: ...peace and friendship with Nicaragua, both sides promising to respect the legitimate interests of security of each nation and to make solemn commitments to respect international law, particularly the principles of nonintervention, nonuse of force, and peaceful resolution of controversies.

7. The Nicaraguan Government urges the Central American countries so that, under the auspices of the Contadora and Support Groups, we will turn Central America into a demilitarized zone and a region of peace that is internationally recognized and protected. To the Costa Rican and Honduran Governments, the Nicaraguan Government proposes the establishment of joint border patrols with the participation of the countries of the Contadora and Support Groups and under the auspices of the United Nations.

SERGIO RAMIREZ DISCUSSES U.S. CONTRA AID

PA310257 Panama City LA PRENSA in Spanish 27 Jul 86 p 30 A

[By Argueles Morales]

[Text] Managua (ALASEI) -- Nicaraguan Vice President Sergio Ramirez Mercado has stated that the Sandinist revolution cannot give the contras the possibility of creating political, and thus military and terrorist, room to maneuver within the country. Consequently, in view of the conspiratorial activities of several local ultrarightist leaders, who included certain bishops, the government decided to expel Msgr Pablo Antonio Vega, who engaged in the promotion of a slanderous campaign against the revolution.

Ramirez, a 44-year-old writer and lawyer, as well as former member of the "Group of 12," told ALASEI in an exclusive interview that the Reagan administration "aid" for the contras involves a serious escalation in the White House's policy of aggression against Nicaragua. However, he noted that the logistical support of war materiel will not change the outcome of the war.

Following is a text of the interview.

[Morales] The U.S. House of Representatives recently approved $110 million [as published] to finance the counterrevolutionary groups. What does this U.S. congressional approval mean to Nicaragua?

[Ramirez] First of all it means a serious escalation in the Reagan administration's aggressive policy against Nicaragua. This package of financial and military aid for the counterrevolutionary forces the Reagan administration created and directs means that these mercenaries will receive light weapons first and then heavy weapons after October, including the delivery of rockets and radars in large quantities. This aid will also imply the direct presence of U.S. military advisers in the theater of this war. Therefore, this will put us on the verge of actions that are much more aggressive and include the direct participation of the CIA and the security and defense apparatus of the United States in this war. This means that the Reagan administration has taken one more step in the escalation within the framework of this confrontation with Nicaragua. Of course, we are sure that, militarily speaking, this warlike, logistical support for the counterrevolutionaries will not alter the equilibrium of the war here. We are defeating the mercenary forces. However, that support will strengthen terrorist actions, like the one that occurred last week in which 35 people were massacred by the explosion of a mine. Now, there are more attacks on peasants' land settlements. Now, we will again see the CIA in action. It will attack our ports, our country's vital bridges, and strategic Nicaraguan installations. Thus, the confrontation is becoming more heated and is increasing in intensity.

[Morales] Would the introduction of that sophisticated means to which you are referring provoke a change in the Nicaraguan military tactics?

[Ramirez] Nicaragua has a very well-defined defense strategy. It is the people in arms, the ones who are making the war. The people make the war through the permanent mobilization of the EPS, the peasants' defense capability in their settlements, their cooperatives, and their rural communities. However, for us it means that our internal security capability needs to be strengthened. It means that we will not give the enemy any opportunity to get organized internally throught the support of this kind of terrorist action. Thus, it means we will intensify the national state of emergency and make the people be on their guard, because everybody can take up weapons.

[Morales] Lately, several reserve battalions have been training. Would those reserve battalions be a response to the counterrevolution's increased strength?

[Ramirez] Here, we are prepared for two situations: first, the direct mercenary war, which we are fighting wherever it appears; in the border regions, in the pockets they have deep in the country, and in the mountainous regions of the country. However, faced with the possibility of a direct U.S. military intervention, the reserve capability is also destined to strengthen the defense of the cities, the Pacific coast, and the cities in the interior of the country. We have to prepare ourselves for that, too, and in a more accelerated manner, now that the Reagan administration has decided to intensify this war of agression.

[Morales] What would introducing or handing over surface-to-air missiles to the contras mean for civil aviation in the Central American region?

[Ramirez] We had already warned, after a military transport helicopter was shot down by one of those surface-to-air missiles, that supplying this type of armament to mercenary forces implied a risk to all Central American security. They are sophisticated weapons which the Reagan administration is irresponsibly placing in the hands of killers, drug traffickers, smugglers, and criminals, and no one can guarantee that they will not be used criminally. This is a completely irresponsible act by the Reagan administration and can bring serious consequences to all the Central American region.

[Morales] The handing over of that $110 million means, as you yourself point out, a stepping-up of the quality of weapons being given to the Somozists. In reply, would Nicaragua be willing to rearm itself, and what type of weapons would you get?

[Ramirez] We cannot under any circumstance and under these circumstances of increasing warfare renounce our defense. Our wish is for all able Nicaraguans to have the means to defend themselves, to defend their homes, their neighborhoods, their territories, their communities -- we shall continue to make use of the right we have to arm ourselves -- to defend ourselves while this aggression does not cease and we do not manage an overall climate of peace through integral negotiations like those of the Contadora Group, which the U.S. Government itself has set out to boycott.

[Morales] Speaking of Contadora, how is Contadora after the State Department refused to receive the group's foreign ministers which were going to present the document, especially after the result of the House of Representatives vote?

[Ramirez] The U.S. Government attitude is a permanent mockery of the negotiating action of the Contadora Group. For our part, and just as we expressed in our official communication to the Contadora Group and Support Group member-countries, we continue backing this peace effort, to be willing to participate in this overall negotiation, and to ensure that it reaches concrete results.

However, we see that this U.S. Government attitude tends to weaken and diminish Contadora's work, and we continue to struggle with all our efforts in political and diplomatic fields to prevent these U.S. plans from taking place, and therefore the Contadora Group is to continue working in this negotiating process.

[Morales] Together with the $110-million package for the counterrevolutionaries, $300 million was also approved for Central American governments. What interpretation does Nicaragua give this?

[Ramirez] This is a clear case of blackmail directed at buying the will of Central American governments against Nicaragua, to cause Central American isolation of Nicaragua. We believe that there is still room for those Central American governments that will benefit from this damn money to reflect on this, that they will reject it, and in this way create a climate for peace. However, the acceptance by these governments of this aid package would tie their will to those who are giving them the money and giving the mercenaries money. All this would make the tense situation in the Central American region more critical and actute.

[Morales] Faced with this U.S. desire for isolation, what steps or initiatives will Nicaragua take to prevent itself from becoming isolated?

[Ramirez] We will continue to work within the framework of the Contadora Group, we shall continue to build up our position at the UN Assembly, in the Security Council, in the Nonaligned Movement. We shall continue to make use of all the relations we have managed to build up with different world communities, the socialist countries community of Eastern Europe, Latin America, and in Central America we shall continue to work on the Contadora negotiations, and we will take part in the Central American parliament project.

[Morales] You are one if those responsible for the country's economic planning. Can one conclude that with that amount of money handed to the counterrevolutionaries the project of wiping them out fairly quickly will take a little longer? How is the national economy affected by the war extension?

[Ramirez] Well, the national economy is suffering a tense process of misadjustments and deterioration as a consequence of the aggression that directly affects the country's capacity to produce and perform normal services. The national economy is not only suffering because of the daily destruction the counterrevolutionaries inflict upon cooperative settlements and other farm installations, but also because of the effect of the war itself on the normal working of the economy. We cannot hope to normalize the economic situation with this war situation and with this additional support the counterrevolutionaries are going to receive from the United States. This would not be possible. We hope we will come out ahead by handling this difficult situation, bringing together popular forces that are fundamental to a popular government, and by making use of moral and political resources in the hands of the people themselves and our organizational capacity. Unitl we reach peace we cannot normalize the economy. So what we have to do is to administer a war economy.

[Morales] On 4 July the expulsion of Bishop Pablo Antonio Vega was announced. What is the government's reason for this action?

[Ramirez] We have warned about this. President Ortega said after the U.S. Congress approved this aid to the counterrevolution that it would be necessary to strengthen the emergency law so as to not give the counterrevolution the possibility of creating a political space, and as a consequence a military and terrorist space within the country. A series of ultrarightist Nicaraguan leaders have started to conspire, linked to the Reagan administration interests, including some bishops, against the Nicaraguan Government's desire to maintain a pluralist space, a mixed economy space within the tense circumstances the aggression creates.

We made this warning. It went unheard. Bishop Vega set himself out on a defamation campaign against the revolution, against the country, justifying the U.S. Government's support of mercenary forces, to disregard the ICJ ruling, to justify all the crimes committed by the counterrevolutionaries in Nicaragua by its methods of terror. This situation became intolerable, and we have a serious responsibility to the people of Nicaragua. The revolutionary path has to be based on the confidence of the people of Nicaragua, and Bishop Vega was trying to undermine this confidence. We therefore made the decision to oust him from the country. In Honduras he can join, if he wishes, the counterrevolutionary forces that attack the country from the Honduran border.

[Morales] What international consequences could this have?

[Ramirez] We know that this is going to be the target of a great debate, that our enemies are going to sharpen their weapons to attack the revolution with high tones. We are prepared for this. We know that the revolution has a firm space in the world, that these actions are being taken precisely as a reply against the constant destabilization efforts on the part of the U.S. Government against Nicaragua. We are confident that these steps will be understood in the long run.

ASTORGA COMMENTS ON U.S. VETO AT UN COUNCIL

PA050451 Managua BARRICADA in Spanish 2 Aug 86 p 3

[By Xavier Reyes Alba]

[Text] United Nations -- In evaluating the results of a Security Council session convoked at the request of Nicaragua, Nora Astorga, Nicaraguan ambassador to the United Nations, has said that the United States lost "an excellent opportunity to show that it is on the side of international law."

Nora Astorga said: "The U.S. veto was predictable to a certain degree." However, as President Ortega said at the United Nations, "We cannot give up doing something because we think that the outcome will be "x" or "y."

Excerpts of an interview follow:

Question: What are your conclusions about the Security Council meeting?

Astorga: We could say that it was positive. The United States witnessed the world's concern over its aggressive policy against Nicaragua.

They witnessed their support for the court's ruling. The fact that the draft resolution was presented by five nonaligned countries has great political significance in itself. The fact that the draft received 11 favorable votes, 3 abstentions, and 1 veto from the United States, is equally significant from a political standpoint.

Question: Did Nicaragua expect a different outcome from the voting on Thursday?

Astorga: The U.S. veto was predictable to a certain degree. As President Ortega said during his speech, we cannot give up doing something because we think that the result will be "x" or "y." We must try all possibilities and the Security Council is the appropriate organization to stop what the world considers to be a threat to international peace and security.

Question: Ambassador Walters again used false arguments against Nicaragua. What is your opinion about the arguments used by the Reagan representative?

Astorga: They are the same arguments used before. Since 1981, their policy has been to seek justification for an aggression that has no legal, political, or moral justification. They presented the same arguments during the first phase of the trial at the International Court of Justice. The Court listened to them and ruled against them on various grounds. For example, it ruled that even if Nicragua makes internal decisions deemed inappropriate by the United States, that country has no right to intervene.

They ruled that the United States is violating international law by arming and financing the counterrevolution; that the U.S.' "collective self-defense" argument regarding an alleged Nicaraguan intervention in El Salvador, Costa Rica, and Honduras does not justify the use of force. The court ruled that Nicragua's "intervention" in Salvadoran affairs has not been proven.

Question: At times, Walters apparently seemed to have officially said that the United States would not support the court ruling, but the White House has not yet issued a statement in this regard. What is your opinion of this situation?

Astorga: At certain moments, it appeared that there was a U.S. message, but we must not interpret it in that way. If they had planned to respect the court ruling, they would not have vetoed the resolution. They had a historical opportunity. U.S. words do not matter, actions do. Those actions show that the United States attacks Nicaragua, vetoes the resolution, and in turn, the UN Charter.

Question: From a technical viewpoint, what maneuver possibilities did the United States have besides the veto?

Astorga: In the face of the court ruling, they have no other option than to disregard and reject it as evidence of their warmongering attitude and determination to solve their problems by forceful means.

Question: It is said that this debate provided Contadora with oxygen. Is this true?

Astorga: In general, Contadora was supported by all speakers and Security Council members. This must be interpreted as strength gained by Contadora in working to reach a Latin American solution to the Central American conflict.

Question: You said at the council that Nicaragua will continue to seek peaceful solutions. What is the meaning of that in real terms?

Astorga: On the one hand, it means that we will continue to defend our territorial sovereignty and integrity at the domestic and international levels. It also means that we will make all efforts within our reach to find the necessary conditions to achieve peace in Central America.

Problems in the region are not between Central Americans, but with the United States. We will continue to make all efforts at our struggle for the normalization of relations with the United States by using all appropriate international organizations until the United States puts an end to its aggression against the Nicaraguan people.

GOVERNMENT PROTESTS ALLEGED ATTACK ON DIPLOMAT

PA012241 Managua BARRICADA in Spanish 29 Jul 86 p 5

[Letter from Acting Foreign Minister Jose Leon Talavera to Honduran Foreign Minister Carlos Lopez Contreras; dated 28 July]

[Text] Managua, 28 July

Your Excellency, Mr Carlos Lopez Contreras, minister of Foreign Affairs

Tegucigalpa, Honduras

Mr Minister:

On this occasion I am addressing Your Excellency to refer to a most serious incident, about which I will now inform you.

On 27 July, at 2030, members of the Public Security Force (FUSEP) arrested the third secretary of our diplomatic mission in Honduras, Lorenzo Arias Gutierrez, who was in the Kong Chow Restaurant near the National Stadium in Tegucigalpa.

The third secretary of the Nicaraguan Embassy was arrested in spite of the fact that he insistently claimed that he has diplomatic immunity and exhibited diplomatic documents. He also showed them an identification card issued by the Honduran Foreign Relations Secretariat.

The Nicaraguan official was then forced to go to the Belen police station, where he was severely beaten in the face and insulted. As a result of the physical aggression, the diplomat's face still shows evidence of the abuse. Mr Arias was released at 2300 of the same day without being given any kind of explanation and without being returned some of his belongings. He was not allowed to communicate with our embassy while he was being held.

The Government of Nicaragua hereby formally and strongly protests this unprecedented incident that flagrantly violates the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations, which establishes in its Article 29 the following: "A diplomatic agent is inviolable. He cannot be subjected to any form of detention or arrest. The host state will treat him with due respect and adopt adequate measures to prevent all attacks against him, his liberty, and his dignity."

The incident that has been described also represents a most grave violation of the human rights of Mr Lorenzo Arias because his physical and moral integrity were openly assaulted.

This incident occurred in spite of the insistent charges by the Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry in its notes of 16 and 24 July. In those notes the Honduran Government was alerted about a series of situations that made predictable the carrying out of attacks on diplomatic personnel and installations. In those notes Nicaragua urgently requested protection for our embassy and personnel.

That incident has taken place in spite of these formal requests, and of the positive response given by the Honduran Government in its cablegram of 25 July. The attack was carried out by precisely the Honduran authorities responsible for providing the protection that has been requested.

Based on the reasons stated here, the Nicaraguan Government hereby asks the Honduran Government for a full explanation and calls for new guarantees that the Nicaraguan Embassy will be protected as established in the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations, and that the security measures for the embassy will be strengthened to protect the lives and the physical and moral integrity of the personnel.

Nicaragua hopes that this type of regrettable situation that is in violation of international obligations freely acquired by the Honduran Government will not be repeated.

I take advantage of this opportunity to reiterate to Your Excellency my appreciation and consideration.

Jose Leon Talavera, acting foreign minister.

ARGENTINA'S ALFONSIN CRITICIZES U.S. CONTRA AID

PA010411 Managua Radio Sandino in Spanish 0000 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Mexico City (ANN) -- Argentina totally rejects U.S. aid for the Nicaraguan counterrevolution because this policy is contrary to the goal of seeking the establishment of pluralistic democracies on the Latin American continent, Argentine President Raul Alfonsin has said.

During an interview with the Mexican newspaper EXCELSIOR, the Argentine president, who will make an official visit to Mexico in the first days of August, said that the Argentine position on Nicaragua continues to be based on defense of the principles of respect for international law, self-determination, and nonintervention. Alfonsin, who rejected the idea that a Marxist-Leninist government exists in Nicaragua, as the Reagan administration wants people to believe, said that he believes it is improbably -- although theoretically possible -- that there will be a U.S. intervention in Nicaragua because the aid for the contras is evidence of a new position by the United States.

Regarding the Honduran, Salvadoran, and Costa Rican Governments -- allies of the United States in the area -- Alfonsin said that although those governments are the products of clean elections free of fraud, they have been unable to establish a social democracy to overcome the large social differences and the concentration of economic power in some sectors.

Referring to the foreign meddling in the regional conflict, Alfonsin added that Central America is experiencing a process of Lebanization, which he defined as a situation where the flags of every country but the one in question are hoisted. Regarding the efforts of the Contadora Group in the region, Alfonsin admitted that the group is suffering from stagnation compared to the achievements of a few months ago, which he attributed to the hardening of positions of the Central American countries.

The president of Argentina, a member of the Contadora Support Group, together with Brazil, Peru, Uruguay, insisted on the need to continue the mediation efforts in the Central American crisis. Alfonsin expressed his optimism about the results of the political meeting which several Latin American presidents and foreign ministers will hold on 8 August in Colombia, during the time when the new Colombian president is inaugurated.

BRIEFS

SOYBEAN, FISHMEAL SHIPMENTS -- Nicaragua has planned to invest $9,065 [figure as published] in soybean imports this year, thus beginning a 20,000-ton order for this cycle through credit lines with the PRC and Argentina. According to the most recent bulletin issued by the Ministry of Agricultural, Cattle Development, and Agrarian Reform Communications Department on agricultural information, 7,000 tons of fishmeal from Peru have arrived in the country to resolve the problems of balanced food for the various state-run and private poultry farms. RAUL CASTRO NOTES DEVELOPMENT OF HOLGUIN PROVINCE

FL051329 Havana Television Service in Spanish 0000 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Remarks by Raul Castro, Vice President of the Councils of State and Ministries and FAR Minister, in Holguin on 26 July — recorded]

[Text] Holguin has been given responsibility for the gigantic Moa project which we have talked about recently. It is the country's nickel development site. We have to consider how underdeveloped it was in all areas — we are not going to mention factors that we have analysed on other occasions. We still have fresh in our minds the 26 July ceremony held here which practically coincided with the triumph of the Sandinist revolution. Twenty-six Sandinist Front commanders came here at that time. We can recall the information given comparing the past and present — as is customary in the Moncada anniversary speeches that Fidel delivers, as he did in Sancti Spiritus a few moments ago — noting the progess made in this province. This was 7 years ago.

There are problems here as in the rest of the country, but I do have to say as someone from Holguin, as a simple person from Holguin and a simple leader of our party, that I am proud — I believe Fidel feels the same way — of my Holguin, of all our eastern territory. Remember that when the new political-administrative division was announced Fidel did not say the eastern area had been divided but had multiplied. I have to be proud of the province's leaders at all levels, divisions, and organizations, and especially of my dear Comrade Miguel Cano, who comes from the same province I do.

BRAVO DEPARTS FOR COLOMBIAN INAUGURATION

UN ENVOY SCORES U.S. POLICY ON NICARAGUA

PA032227 Havana International Service in Spanish 2300 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Report by correspondent Rosa Rivero from the United Nations -- recorded]

[Text] Nicaragua has tried to avoid a confrontation with Costa Rica and instead reach a peaceful solution to their disagreements. These efforts, however, have not succeeded, because Costa Rica has failed to take measures to check counterrevolutionaries' activities. This is grounds for the Nicaraguan Government's lawsuit against its southern neighbor, according to the The Hague International Court of Justice. Specific mention has been made of border incidents and armed attacks against Nicaragua, organized by the counterrevolutionaries from Costa Rican territory. These attacks have occurred more frequently and have become harsher since 1982.

Simultaneously, Nicaragua has filed a suit against Honduras. The charges include not only border incidents and armed attacks -- which have also occurred more frequently and become harsher since 1980 -- but they also specifically mention the Honduran Armed Forces' aid to the contras and the fact that the former have directly participated in military attacks against Nicaraguan territory. It has also been argued that the Honduran Government has threatened to resort to the use of force. In both cases, Nicaragua has asked the International Court of Justice to establish the legal responsibility of both Costa Rica and Honduras in violating the most important duties in the United Nations Charter and other multilateral treaties, as well as some duties established by international law. Here is Cuban ambassador Oscar Oramas Oliva speaking to the UN Security Council:

[Begin recording] The Reagan administration's undeclared yet brazen war against N Nicaragua ranges from economic embargo and slander campaigns against the Sandinist directorate to barbarous acts of war such as mining Nicaraguan ports and officially giving $100 million to the contras to murder women, children, and old people and destroy the Nicaraguan people's wealth. This policy can only be termed criminal. President Reagan himself has said it is immoral to impose an embargo on racist South Africa. However, it was Reagan who decreed this unilateral measure against Nicaragua. This president also says that embargoes affect people and not governments. Where is the logic of this argument and the immoral policy applied against Nicaragua and the immoral policy of embargoes that continues to be applied against Cuba? [end recording]

U.S. ROLE IN BOLIVIAN DRUG OPERATION SCORED

["Our America" commentary, read by Norberto Hernandez]

[Text] U.S. President Ronald Reagan, unfortunate demagogue on political matters, recently sent a message to his Bolivian colleague, Victor Paz Estenssoro, in which he described as courageous the La Paz government's decision to permit U.S. troops to destroy coca plantations in that high plateau country.

Reagan sought two objectives with the congratulatory message: to show publicly his decision to end drug trafficking, and to set a dangerous precedent in connection with his propaganda show [preceding word in English].

Most observers agree that if the Yankee government is really so interested in ending the U.S. drug problem, which even affects officials, the first step would be to destroy plantations and illegal trade networks which exist in that country and whose chiefs are well known to authorities.

By contrast, this diversionist maneuver tries to place the problem outside the border, even though last year marijuana became the United States number one crop, the value of its harvest surpassing that of corn by $100,000 [figure as heard].

The truth is that Reagan cares little that 60 percent of U.S. youths take drugs. The lucrative business of narcotics is very broad, and quite a few of the mafioso who benefit from this traffic financially back the government's most warlike plans, among which is the open aggression against Nicaragua.

But now 160 Yankee soldiers and 19 helicopters are operating in the Bolivian jungles, while the imperialist media emphasizes with lots of fanfare Washington's firm posture against drugs. The truth is that the U.S. military destroys crops indiscriminately, coca or not, and the chemical substances used have begun damaging unique vegetable species which have not even been studied yet by scientists.

Bolivian farmers are not to blame for the drug traffic. Choked by a brutal economic crisis, numerous farmers started growing coca as a way of subsisting, stimulated by the broad market these products have in the West, especially in the United States.

The Yankee military presence in Bolivia justifiably disturbs other countries in the area. This prescription could be orchestrated or even imposed by Washington in new geographic areas of the continent, and the consequences of such visits are now well known. With U.S. troops arrival comes child prostitution, pornography, the trampling of human and national dignity, drug addiction, and in recent times AIDS. Honduras, with a nest of U.S. bases, has had this bitter experience in the last few years.

This is why such an experience generates rejection inside and outside Bolivian borders and at the same time shows the hypocritical face of the White House's present occupant.

LEADERS DISCUSS COMMONWEALTH SANCTIONS IN LONDON

FL051553 Bridgetown CANA in English 1523 GMT 5 Aug 86

[By Bertram Niles]

[Text] London, Aug 5, CANA -- Six major Commonwelath nations were justified in imposing wide-ranging economic measures against South Africa, Barbardian Dame Nita Barrow said today.

Barrow was a member of the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group (EPG) which spent six months on a South Africa peace mission that was wrecked by the white-ruled minority government. The EPG said that the absence of effective economic pressure had delayed the dismantling of apartheid in South Africa, adding that concerted action may offer the last chance to avoid a horrendous bloodbath.

Their report released nearly eight weeks ago was discussed over the past two days by seven of the 49 Commonwealth leaders. Six agreed to sweeping sanctions against Pretoria and the seventh -- Britain -- decided to go it alone with lesser measures.

They (the six) were very justified, said Barrow when asked by CANA to comment on the decision.

She said she was pleased by their action and described Britain's stand as negative.

Barrow, sister of Barbados Prime Minister Errol Barrow, said the economic sanctions would send a signal of support to those seeking change in South Africa since they already recoginized the major job would have to be done within the country itself.

In other reaction, Antigua and Barbuda's High Commissioner to London Ron Saunders said the final communique was the best that could be achieved.

The six countries had to proceed in the face of Britain's refusal to go along with them, Saunders said.

What's most important here however is that the Commonwealth has emerged much stronger for it. The Commonwealth is not one country, he said referring to Britain's traditional dominance of the grouping of its former colonies.

The fact that one member is of a different opinion than the other 48 does not mean this will weaken the others.

Britain, he said, would no longer play the central part in the Commonwealth, noting that countries such as Australia, Canada, India and Nigeria were already playing prominent roles.

These views came close to those expressed earlier by Bahamas Prime Minister Sir Lynden Pindling who said Britain had abandoned its leadership of the Commonwealth and new leaders would emerge.

Commonwealth Secretary-General Shridath Ramphal said the decision of the six had been true to the Commonwealth ideals, by choosing credibility over unanimity.

It marks the end of a no-sanctions policy on South Africa, agreed Ramphal, a former foreign minister of Guyana.

Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Ghandi said Britain had lost her role as leader of the Commonwealth by failing to recognize world opinion on the matter of sanctions.

Thatcher, he said, had compromised human dignity by refusing to support her six colleagues.

Zimbabwe Prime Minister Robert Mugabe expressed utter dismay and bitter disappointment at the Thatcher stand saying she had let Africa down. He gave a thinly veiled threat of possible reprisals against London.

Co-chairman of the EPG, former Nigerian head of state Olusegun Obasanjo, said the Commonwealth had been bruised by the experience.

Britain, he added, had given a signal, that it had lost interest in the Commonwealth.

On the domestic front, spokesmen for the opposition Labour Party and Social Democratic/ Liberal Alliance have criticised Thatcher.

Pindling Comments

FL051503 Bridgetown CANA in English 1354 GMT 5 Aug 86

[By Bertram Niles]

[Text] London, Aug 5, CANA -- Bahamas Prime Minister Sir Lynden Pindling predicted today that the United States and Western Europe would join six Commonwealth nations which announced sweeping economic sanctions against South Africa.

Pindling chaired the mini-summit of seven of the 49 Commonwealth nations which ended late last night without unanimous agreement when Britain's Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher refused to agree to hard-hitting measures against Pretoria.

I think the U.S. Congress will affirm the position taken by the (six) Commonwealth (members) to a very large degree (and) the President (Reagan) is going to sign something on the order of sanctions...

Then I think Europe is going to pay some attention to that and Mrs Thatcher, I am afraid, will find that she is out of step with everybody else, Pindling said.

He said that Britain, by its decision not to join the Bahamas, India, Australia, Canada, Zimbabwe and Zambia had sided with South Africa's white minority government and abandoned its leadership role in the Commonwealth.

There was now a question mark over Britain's standing with its 49 former colonies in the grouping.

I don't think it will ever be quite the same again. I think a new leadership is emerging in the Commonwealth.

New spokesmen will carry the Commonwealth ball wherever that ball has to run and that is the way I think it is going to run from here on in, Pindling said.

At a midnight press conference after the mini-summit had ended a day early, the Bahamas prime minister had announced that the six would immediately implement the eight punitive measures listed in the Commonwealth Nassau Accord last October.

These included a ban on air links and on the imports of agricultural products from South Africa.

There were also three additional measures -- a ban on all new bank loans to South Africa and on the import of uranium, ocal, iron and steel and the withdrawal of consular facilities except in certain circumstances.

The communique expressed concern and regret at Britain's stand saying substantial sanctions were a moral and political imperative, to push South Africa toward abandoning its apartheid policies.

But Thatcher, speaking in the early hours of today, said she remained steadfast in her belief that sanctions would not achieve that objective and would be counter-productive.

She had reluctantly agreed to limited sanctions to express commitment to the Commonwealth.

Britain said it would place voluntary bans on new investment and promotion of tourism to South Africa and to accept any European Community action on imports of iron, coal and steel. But British commentators and newspapers dismissed these measures as token, saying they would make little impact on the South African economy.

Britain's agreement for fuller sanctions was vital for Commonwealth action to be effective because of its extensive trading links with South Africa.

For this reason, the communique, said it would immediately embark on intensive consultations with the international community to try to secure concerted international action.

Pindling acknowledged that there was no guarantee that sanctions would work but said they were needed to hit the white South African in his pocket where it hurts most and set him thinking.

Without them, he said, the alternative could be civil war as South Africa had previously turned down logic, reason and persuasion by friends.

Seaga on Congress' Efforts

FL052126 Bridgetown CANA in English 1955 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Kingston, Jamaica, Aug 5, CANA -- Jamaica's Prime Minister Edward Seaga, expressing disappointment at Britain's refusal to join its Commonwealth partners in imposing stiff economic sanctions against South Africa, today said he hoped that the U.S. Congress will now provide the impetus for firm action against Pretoria's white minority government.

The lack of significant sanctions by Britain will undoubtedly be felt in the effort to bring pressure on the South Africa regime, Seaga told CANA today.

We now wait to see what happens in the U.S. Congress to see if that will set a pace and tone for other nations to follow. [passage omitted]

We hope that there will be in the U.S. Congress the sort of proposals and actions that will send the signal (to South Africa) and a direction for other countries, Seaga said.

JAMAICA

SEAGA DENIES RUMORS OF HIS RESIGNATION

FL052230 Bridgetown CANA in English 2215 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Kingston, Jamaica, Aug 5 CANA -- Jamaica's Prime Minister Edward Seaga today described as absolute nonsense that he had offered Cabinet colleagues his resignation in the wake of his party's defeat in municipal elections a week ago.

The opposition Peoples National Party (PNP) had campaigned on the grounds that the elections would be a vote of confidence in the Seaga government.

The PNP, which is pressing for early general elections, received an estimated 57 percent of the popular vote, against 43 percent for the ruling Jamaica Labour Party (JLP) and will control about 11 of the 13 municipal authorities.

In conceding defeat Seaga said the party would have to analyze the results, its policies and leadership and there have been rumours here that he offered his resignation to Cabinet members.

That is absolute nonense, I have not even had a Cabinet meeting as yet, the Prime Minister remarked to CANA just before going into such a session.

Cabinet meetings are usually on Mondays, but yesterday's was postponed because of independence holidays here.

JLP sources said there had been very preliminary analyses of the election, but a thorough assessment would have to wait until final returns were ready and a breakdown of the voting patterns was available.

OFFICIALS, CONGRESSMEN DISCUSS U.S. GRAIN SUBSIDY

PY061623 Buenos Aires NOTICIAS ARGENTINAS in Spanish 1400 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 6 Aug (NA) -- Reliable sources today reported that Economy Minister Juan Sourrouille this morning met with top Radical Civic Union [UCR] and congressional leaders to "review possible courses of action to be adopted" in view of the U.S. decision to subsidize its grain sales to the USSR and the PRC. The sources revealed that President Raul Alfonsin left precise instructions before leaving for Colombia and Mexico to analyze "all courses of action" and to draw up "a definite reaction" that can be implemented after the head of state returns to the country.

According to the sources, the prevailing approach of the government, which will be coordinated with the opposition parties, reportedly will demand a reduction of the interest rate applied to the foreign debt instead of reducing payments in any other way. The sources told NOTICIAS ARGENTINAS that the draft resolution that the UCR bloc will propose this afternoon in the Chamber of Deputies will seek to "summarize" the various political expressions that the U.S. attitude has aroused. The sources stated that the draft resolution will have a "high political content," but that it will avoid "sticking" to a position which could compromise future government actions on this issue.

They reported that the government's mood in light of the U.S. decision "is one of indignation," and that "there is a real belief that the U.S. attitude "seeks to change the world market" for raw materials "for its own benefit."

The sources reported that despite this "we cannot react as children," but "must analyze the most effective ways to counteract" the U.S. decision to subsidize its grain exports. The sources stated that "we will analyze this situation at the Economy Ministry and afterward decide on the attitude to be adopted."

The contents of the bill that the UCR bloc at the Chamber of Deputies could sign today will depend on the outcome of the above-mentioned meeting.

Senate Condemns U.S. Decision

PY070307 Buenos Aires DYN in Spanish 0215 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 6 Aug (DYN) -- The Senate unanimously approved tonight two draft declarations "vigorously condemning" the U.S. decision to subsidize the sale of grains to the Soviet Union, PRC, and Japan, and asking the executive branch "to review" its policy regarding the negotiations and payments on the Argentine foreign debt. The Senate also approved a resolution to convey to the U.S. Senate the two declarations of condemnation that were passed by the Argentine Senate tonight. These moves to condemn the U.S. policy of subsidizing the sale of grains were initiated by the leaders of all the congressional blocs and were later approved unanimously by the Senate.

In condemning the protectionist measures adopted by the United States, the Argentine Senate noted "the insensitivity of the U.S. measures, which deliver a hard blow to the efforts Argentina and the countries of the South are making to readjust their economies in the face of the problems posed by the foreign debt."

The draft declarations approved by the Senate also point out that "the critical situation created by the commercial war the United States is waging upsets the countries of the South, which are making efforts to consolidate their democratic systems through economic growth and social progress."

In the preamble of these declarations, the Argentine congressmen recalled the decision taken by the U.S. Senate on 22 July approving the subsidized sale of grains to the Soviet Union, the PRC, and Japan. It was also pointed out that such a decision "negatively affects the Argentine economy, its growth and investments program, and, consequently, its foreign debt payments."

Senators Faustino Mazzuco (UCR) Alberto Rodriguez Saa (PJ) [Justicialist Party], Ricardo Laferriere (UCR), Libardo Sanchez (PJ), and Ricardo Leconte (Liberal Party of Corrientes) wrote the preamble to these declarations.

Compensation To Be Sought

PY070316 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish 0218 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 6 Aug (TELAM) -- Finance Secretary Mario Brodersohn tonight stated that Argentina will stand by its decision to initiate negotiations this month with the IMF to obtain a new standby loan; and with its creditor banks, to reschedule payments of the principal of its debt that will fall due in 1985 and 1986. Brodersohn said that Argentina will request compensation for the loss of income it will suffer as a result of the U.S. decision to subsidize its sales of cereal grains to the Soviet Union, China, and India.

Brodersohn made this statement at the end of meeting chaired by Economy Minister Juan Sourrouille. Several issues, including the national budget, were discussed at this meeting. This unscheduled meeting, which was held at the Finance Palace, was also attended by Economic Coordination Secretary Adolfo Canitrot, Under Secretary for Economic Policy Jose Luis Machinea, and Central Bank Director Ernesto Feldman.

EDITORIAL DISCUSSES VISIT BY NICARAGUA'S CRUZ

PY021239 Buenos Aires LA PRENSA in Spanish 31 Jul 86 pp 1, 5

[Editorial by J. Iglesias Rouco: "A Visit That Has Been Kept Very Quiet"]

[Text] There is an internal memorandum going around in the Foreign Ministry with details of the activities of Arturo Cruz, Nicaraguan political leader, former adviser of the Sandinist regime, and currently an adviser of the Nicaraguan Opposition Union (UNO). As far as we know, the Alfonsin government is keeping its distance from Cruz, and it was even hesitant to grant him a visa, in contrast to the warm welcome usually given to Guillermo Ungo, one of the political leaders of the Salvadoran guerrilla movement, who was even received by the president.

Cruz's visit to Buenos Aires seems to be related to a project of the Nicaraguan contras to establish some kind of government in exile in 2 Latin American countries. Cruz, a former aide to Eden Pastora (who is also in conflict with the U.S. Government), was a member of the embassy of the Sandinist regime in Washington after the fall of the Somozist dictatorship. He met here until yesterday with political and union leaders of practically all tendencies, including the radicals. Cruz also met with businessman and heads of student organizations.

Obviously what the UNO representative is trying to explain in Argentina is the real situation in his country, a situation that has been disguised by Managua, which blames all Nicaragua's ills on the U.S. economic blockades and Washington's support for the "contras."

According to the Foreign Ministry memorandum, Cruz explains the Nicaraguan situation in the following manner:

1. The Nicaraguan political process is characterized by a permanent confrontation between the majority of the people at all levels and the Sandinist "elite" headed by the nine commanders who control the political power. The power of the Sandinist regime is based on the militarization of society, the complete control over the state security system, and the use of ideological propaganda which is basically aimed at gaining support in the international community.

2. There is a balance on the military front. The anti-Sandinist guerrilla groups are capable of keeping the conquered territory and, in time, of consolidating a parallel government in the country.

3. The aid that the contras are getting from Washington is both legitimate and beneficial. According to Cruz, the concepts of national sovereignty and nonintervention definitely cannot be applied to Nicaragua, owing to the influential presence in Nicaragua of the Soviet Union, Cuba, Bulgaria, and the GDR, which allied with the Sandinist regime, have "internationalized" the conflict. Therefore, those who oppose the regime and try to survive have no other choice than to seek foreign support.

4. The Sandinist regime presents itself before the international community as some kind of David in a struggle against the imperialist Goliath (the United States). This propagandistic scheme has been especially successful among the industrialized countries, where the middle classes view with concern and some guilt the poverty of the Third World. But what is really being waged in Nicaragua is not a war against imperialism, but a civil war: on one side the "elite" pro-Soviet Sandinists who are trying to impose an anachronistic Marxism-Leninism, and on the other side a "Zapata-style army" made up of peasants who are defending their rights in the face of the Soviet military apparatus.

5. During the first 2 and ½ years of the Sandinist government, Nicaragua received hundreds of millions of dollars in U.S. assistance. In less than 30 months, $1.6 billion in U.S. credits allowed Nicaragua to refinance its foreign debt on quite favorable terms, without submitting to IMF demands. These are huge figures in comparison with the Nicaraguan GDP which does not exceed $2 billion.

6. Sandinist Marxism is perhaps the most dogmatic of the Soviet world. Nicaragua has banned authors like Gramsci, Marcusse, Althusser, Trotsky, and even Mao, whose doctrine of "prolonged popular war" served as the ideological basis for one of the main Sandinist factions before the overthrow of Anastasio Somoza.

7. Accoding to Cruz, power in Nicaragua is now in the hands of what might be called "scientific Somozism," meaning a dictatorship identical to that of Somoza, with the added trappings of the ideology and practices of the Soviet-Cuban version of Marxist-Leninism. For some time it has kept all radio and television under control and now with the recent closure of the newspaper LA PRENSA (permanently under censorship before), the regime has eliminated the only relatively independent means of information.

The rationing cards and the so-called Sandinist Defense Committees (CDS), which are organs of espionage and repression overseen by Interior Minister Tomas Borge, installed in towns and cities, block by block, do the rest to ensure submission.

8. Despite the Sandinists' talk, the Soviet Union invests in this "model" billions of dollars more than in the Cuban model or in Vietnam, where it invests ten times less per capita (except in weapons). The Sandinist model rests on the absolute social militarization (which is only partially applied in Cuba), on a closed police mechanism, and, especially, on a primitive economic system of mere subsistence.

9. The main sources of support for the regime lie not in the rural or proletarian masses or in the small and medium rural landowners who resist forced collectivization, but rather in the old land-owning class associated with the Sandinist "elite," the Cuban and Soviet-bloc military "advisers," who number in the thousands, and, especially, in international public opinion headed by the "bourgeois" public of the Western "North," whose ideas remain trapped in "revolutionary" utopias. Also favoring Sandinism is the indifference of the countries that are not close to the "hot zone" of the East-West confrontation. They view the Central American drama as nothing more than a tropical phenomenon.

That indifference, which is quite visible in Argentina, makes it easy for our leftist sectors, including those in the government, to manipulate the Central American war demogogically for domestic electoral purposes in some instances, and in others, for the purpose of serving the strategic global interests of the Soviet Union. Logically, none of these groups which are always ready to welcome the Ungos of Latin America, wants to pay attention to Cruz, and they do not want others to pay attention to him.

These pro-Sandinists perhaps do not realize that their attitude may end up transforming Argentina into a "hot zone" in the context of the East-West confrontation. And signs pointing in that direction can be seen in some material of Soviet origin, which the YPF [Government Oil Deposits] has just moved into some "precarious government warehouses." But this is a story we will examine in another article. It will be sufficient today to point out as a bad omen the welcome given here to some protagonists in the Central American conflict, in contrast to the silence or quasi-silence with which other protagonists in the same conflict are received here.

AMBASSADOR TO ECUADOR 'FIRED,' RETURNS HOME

PY062052 Buenos Aires BUENOS AIRES HERALD in English 6 Aug 86 p 11

[Text] (DYN) -- Former Labour Minister Antonio Mucci has been fired as ambassador to Ecuador and recalled to Buenos Aires, Foreign Ministry sources said yesterday. No reason was given for the dismissal of the ambassador, who was labour minister for the first five months of the Raul Alfonsin administration until a dispute with Labour Secretary Gabriel Matzkin led to his removal.

LABOR MINISTER UNVEILS LEGISLATIVE PACKAGE

[Text] (NA-DYN) -- Labour Minister Hugo Barrionuevo went on television and radio at 9 pm last night to announce a comprehensive package of government labour legislation, four bills of which entered Congress yesterday.

This package breaks down into the restoration of collective wage bargaining, the creation of a labour guarantee fund, employee representation on the administration of state firms, and compulsory information and consultation procedures in all companies whether public or private.

The legislation aims at reducing state intervention in labour relations while obliging firms employing more than 100 persons to inform their trade unions every six months on the economic and employment situation of the firm as well as immediately on any innovation or development affecting jobs. Employee representatives on state companies would be elected secretly and directly for a two-year term.

A "social peace clause" under which the signatory union promises not to strike during the duration of the contract is to be a compulsory part of any collective wage bargaining agreement and the right to strike will be redefined. Under this clause the government will still be able to set limits to the wages which may be agreed and also order a return to work for a maximum period of two months if there is serious damage to the national economy or essential services as a result of strike action. There are also compulsory arbitration provisions, defiance of which can lead to a strike being declared illegal.

Other items include reforming the hiring system in ports, improving working conditions and changing labour inspection procedures.

According to the reforms the right to strike cannot affect other rights of greater or equal importance, Barrionuevo said. The state was obliged to maintain essential public services, he also said. The bill covering the right to strike had still to be finalized, Barrionuevo explained, and a law to govern trade union activity would also be introduced, he said.

There would also be wage guarantee funds based on special labour credits and employer contributions of 0.5 percent of company earnings which would protect the worker from the bankruptcy of his employers and ensure the smooth payment of severance pay and family benefits. Payments out of this fund would not be able to exceed three times the minimum wage.

All the above proposals were open to public debate at all levels, Barrionuevo assured his audience. The minister expressed optimism about the current state of industrial relations. Democracy, modernization and efficiency were the watchwords of his address.

CGT secretary-general Saul Ubaldini yesterday said that the CGT would be preparing its own labour legislation package and presenting it to congressmen next week.

TROCCOLI ON FIRMENICH, SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES

PY032219 Buenos Aires BUENOS AIRES HERALD in English 3 Aug 86 p 15

[Text] (NA) -- Interior Minister Antonio Troccoli denied yesterday that the Revolutionary Peronist faction was carrying out any subversive activities and that former Montonero leader Mario Firmenich was not condemned to isolation. Troccoli said that Firmenich was imprisoned under a constitutional regime that guarantees the freedom of thought, and allows him to communicate with his friends outside the prison. Prosecutor Juan Romero Vitorica earlier claimed that Firmenich is organizing a subversive comeback from his prison cell in Villa Devoto.

CONGRESS SPLIT OVER PRESENCE OF U.S. TROOPS

[Text] La Paz, 5 Aug (AFP) -- It was officially announced today that Bolivian opposition congressmen will question four ministers and the Bolivian ambassador to the United States for admitting U.S. troops into the country without consulting Congress.

The officials who will be questioned are Foreign Minister Guillermo Bedregal Gutierrez, Defense Minister Fernando Valle, Interior Minister Fernando Barthelemy, Planning Minister Gonzalo Sanchez de Lozada, and Ambassador Fernando Illanes.

Oscar Zamora Emdinacelli, former Senate president, said that in his opinion the cogoverning parties, the Nationalist Revolutionary Movement (MNR) and the Nationalist Democratic Action (ADN), are guilty of high treason for admitting the U.S. troops into the country.

Meanwhile, the deputies of the MNR have decided to display on their benches a Bolivian flag with a black band as a sign of mourning for what they have described as an invasion by the United States of the national territory.

Mario Rueda Pena, an MNR leader, has said that the flag will be kept there as long as the Yankee occupation lasts.

Ema de Torres, representing the Board for the Defense of the National Sovereignty, a group comprising dozens of labor unions, organizations, and political parties and hundreds of leading personalities, has called upon Congress to order the withdrawal of the U.S. soldiers, because their presence in the country violates constitutional principles.

On the other hand, ADN and MNR congressmen have reaffirmed their support for President Victor Paz Estenssoro's decision to receive U.S. help in the fight against drug trafficking.

BARTHELEMY DISCUSSES NEED FOR ANTIDRUG CAMPAIGN

PY061725 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0221 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] La Paz, 5 Aug (EFE) -- Interior Minister Fernando Barthelemy has stated that the struggle against drug trafficking and the control of that illegal activity will be run exclusively by Bolivian personnel as soon as the country has the necessary equipment for that task.

He said that the Bolivian Government has already requested, through the U.S. Embassy, the support of the Reagan administration to provide the Bolivian police with sufficient resources to follow up the antidrug operations.

Barthelemy added that in addition to airplanes and boats, it is also necessary to obtain radar equipment, weapons, and vehicles that will facilitate the better deployment of specialized forces. He said that the U.S. President will have to assess the current situation of the police unit in charge of repressing the traffickers.

The requirements, he stated, have probably been taken into account by the U.S. military officers who are currently in Bolivia, and this will certainly facilitate the assessment.

The Bolivian interior minister then expressed his confidence that the U.S. Administration will grant the Bolivian needs. Barthelemy added that when those means are in the hands of the national police, the antidrug operations will be conducted solely by Bolivian forces.

He concluded by saying that should the supply of this equipment be consolidated in the next few weeks, the withdrawal of U.S. troops headquartered in Trinidad, capital of El Beni Department, northeast of La Paz, could be accelerated.

LAB AIRLINE WORKERS END STRIKE 5 AUGUST

[Text] La Paz, 5 Aug (AFP) -- Lloyd Bolivian Airline (LAB) workers today suspended their strike, and all LAB flights will be resumed today, LAB union leader Juan Urrutia announced here today.

After arduous negotiations it was agreed to entrust General Jaime Nino de Guzman with the task of reorganizing the LAB executive board. Gen Guzman also vowed to give the necessary guarantees to the LAB workers.

The strike today was in its 7th day, and more than 100 workers were ready to call a hunger strike to demand the dismissal of LAB executives, whom they regard as incompetent.

CIVIC ASSEMBLY CALLS FOR TRANSITION FORMULA

PY020102 Santiago Radio Chilena in Spanish 1700 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Ricardo Vacarezza, the National Civic Assembly [ANC] coordinator, this morning said that so far the political parties have not been able to make a decisive effort to obtain a unified political formula for transition and return to democracy.

Vacarezza also indicated that he is going to demand from all political parties a plan to get the country out of the current crisis. In a press conference the civic leaders expressed their total support for the statement by Cardinal and Santiago Archbishop Juan Francisco Fresno over the case of the burned youths. They also rejected the declaration by the Supreme Court regarding Cardinal Fresno's statement.

[Begin Vacarezza recording] In the face of this event the ANC expresses its solidarity with the statement made by the cardinal, because it is the genuine expression of the feelings of the great majority of Chileans who do not feel protected by the courts in the face of the abuse of power and the systematic violations of basic human rights. The Chilean church, because of its historic tradition, is the real voice of those who have no voice. The words of the Santiago archbishop on values and conduct under the current circumstances should become a reference for the decision of those who called themselves Catholics. [end recording]

The ANC stated: We believe that the Supreme Court, instead of interpreting the cardinal's statement as an offense, should contemplate his words and take effective and clear measures to resolve the serious crimes which have been committed in the last few years, regarding which the entire country seeks clarification. During the meeting with the press, Ricardo Vacarezza disclosed the assembly's activities during August. One of them is a demand that all political parties prepare a unified program for transition and return to democracy.

[Begin Vacarezza recording] The ANC has decided to begin a very clear policy to demand from the political parties decisive efforts to obtain a unified political formula for transition and return to a democratic regime. This is something that has been pointed out from the very beginning. Just as the ANC demands from the government the fulfillment of proposals made by social sectors, it also demands from political parties an adequate political solution to the crisis affecting the country. In this regard the ANC is also going to start several actions with this aim. [end recording]

The ANC also announced that the boycott campaign on some products will be maintained and that the activities in support if the civic leaders still under arrest will be increased. The assembly is also going to hold an act of solidarity with Carmen Gloria Quintana and will continue expanding the ANC throughout the entire national territory.

'Drive for Democracy' Slated

[Text] Santiago, 1 Aug (EFE) -- ANC Coordinator Ricardo Vacarezza today announced that "a drive for democracy" will be held early in September.

The drive is slated for 4 September, the date on which Chileans used to elect a new president every 6 years. Vacarezza also announced that several activities will be held on 20 August within the framework of "a drive for justice and peace," which will be designed to prepare the 4 September demonstration.

Pinochet Rally Proposed

PY070208 Madrid EFE in Spanish 1410 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, 6 Aug (EFE) -- Manuel Contreras, chairman of the National Autonomous Organizations Front [Frente Nacional de Organizaciones Autonomas -- Frenao] today proposed a public rally of all followers of General Augusto Pinochet's regime. According to Contreras, this rally could be held before 11 September 1986, the day on which followers of the government will celebrate the 13th anniversary of General Pinochet's assumption of power. He said that it is important to demonstrate, through a rally, the support the military government is receiving from the people, especially due to "the great misinformation" existing in the world on what is happening in Chile.

AD LABELS PINOCHET'S REMARKS 'RUDE, VULGAR'

PY021435 Santiago Radio Chilena in Spanish 2300 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] The Democratic Alliance [AD] has strongly rejected comments by General Augusto Pinochet about political parties. The AD pointed out that the comments are rude and vulgar and that they degrade the Army, the Armed Forces, and the nation. The AD released a statement read by Julio Subercasseaux, a leader of the Republican Party:

[Begin recording] The AD has the painful duty to express its categorical rejection to the continuous and repeated rude and vulgar expressions by Gen Pinochet regarding political leaders. This offensive language which has never before been heard from a president of Chile degrades the Army, the Armed Forces, and worst of all the entire nation. No one has the right, especially not someone who uses and abuses the resources of the state, to label as dishonest the politicians who have made austerity a way of life. [end recording]

The AD added that no one has the right to label politicians as ambitious, especially someone who has clung to power for 13 years.

[Begin Subercasseaux recording] No one has the right, especially not someone who cannot leave the country because of his international image, to criticize political leaders for merely accepting invitations from foreign democracies. This is now the style of engaging in politics. We once again call for good sense and prudence. We believe that this language is aimed at provoking us and at deepening the polarization which, unfortunately exists in Chilean society. We will not fall into this provocation. On the contrary, we will continue to stress the need to seek a political solution to the crisis. We appeal to the people and to the moral forces of the country to reject polarization and to try again to find the traditional values of respect and tolerance in our country. [end recording]

The AD is studying mobilization plans including whether to request a permit for a demonstration next September.

MISSING STUDENT LEADER FOUND DEAD 6 AUGUST

PY070347 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0009 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, 6 Aug (EFE) -- The National Intelligence Centre (CNI, political police) informed the Chilean Human Rights Commission today that a student leader who had disappeared 4 days ago has been found dead.

The dead student is Mario Martinez Rodriguez, executive secretary of the Santiago University Students Federation (Feusach), whose whereabouts were unknown since noon on 2 August.

This information was confirmed to EFE by the coordinator of the Chilean Human Rights Commission, Andres Rodriguez, who said that the CNI director, General Humberto Gordon, revealed nothing more than where the body was found: Santo Domingo Beach, 125 km southeast of Santiago on the Pacific coast. General Gordon did not mention the circumstances in which the body of the student leader was found, nor the place where the body was taken, Andres Rodriguez reported.

APPELLATE COURT CONFIRMS PRISON SENTENCES

PY061652 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0317 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, 5 Aug (EFE) -- The Santiago Appellate Court today confirmed the 6-year-and-2-day prison sentence passed down by a first instance judge against three people who were detained during an antigovernment demonstration in November 1985. A sentence of 3 years and 1 day was also confirmed for a fourth detainee.

The first three have been identified as Luis Olea Cifuentes, Luis Mena Salas, and Nelson Arriagada, who were accused of having participated in the demonstration and using incendiary devices, blunt instruments, and tire busters. The fourth, identified as Salvador Vasquez Villagra, was accused of transporting the incendiary devices and other materials.

These four detainees were prosecuted for presumed violation of the State Security Law and indicted by the Santiago Military Superintendancy.

FORMER COMMUNIST SENATOR RECEIVES SENTENCE

PY061614 Santiago TELAM in Spanish 0451 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, 5 Aug (TELAM-EFE) -- Former Communist Party Senator Alejandro Toro was sentenced to 1,082 days in prison by the Supreme Court of Justice, which reversed a previous ruling by the Santiago Appellate Court. The former senator was indicted following a decision by the military government after a Santiago magazine published a paid advertisement entitled "Communist Party Manifesto to the Chilean People" signed by Toro.

Special Judge Marcos Libedinsky acquitted Toro, a ruling that was confirmed by the Appellate Court and has now been reversed by the Supreme Court. The ruling against Toro has been sent to the Parole Board where he must report every day while the punishment is in force.

GEN LEIGH, FACH MEMBERS FORBIDDEN TO LEAVE

PY051622 Madrid EFE in Spanish 1458 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, 5 Aug (EFE) -- A Santiago judge who is investigating the case of 10 missing Communists has issued an order forbidding 32 Air Force [FACh] members from leaving the country. The order affects former FACh commander in chief and former Government Junta member General Gustavo Leigh. According to an exclusive report published today by the Santiago newspaper LA TERCERA DE LA HORA, the order issued by Judge Carlos Cerda affects generals, colonels, commanders, captains, and sergeants.

In the same case, Judge Cerda last year ordered that Commander Roberto Fuentes be arrested and held incommunicado on charges of leading a group called the Joint Anti-subversive Command. According to specialists in human rights violation cases, the group participated in the illegal arrest of the 10 Communist leaders who disappeared in 1976.

Fuentes was later released, and the judge has not yet been able to prove the military men's involvement in the case.

LABOR MINISTER CITES UNEMPLOYMENT DROP

PY062358 Santiago Radio Chilena in Spanish 1700 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Relay from Government House by Eliana Henriquez]

[Excerpt] Labor Minister Alfonso Marquez de la Plata has termed very positive the 11-percent unemployment rate registered during the last quarter. The figure, which was released today by the National Satatistics Institute, is similar to that of the previous quarter.

Marquez de la Plata stated that the stabilization of this rate is very important because the unemployment rate usually rises at this time of year. The minister went on to say that this stabilization allows us to predict that the unemployment rate, which is already below the international unemployment rate, will continue to drop during the summer and spring. He also said that this figure shows that the government's economic and social policy is correct. [passage omitted]

EX-M-19 MEMBERS REQUEST ASYLUM AT SWISS EMBASSY

[Text] Bogota, 5 Aug (EFE) — Gustavo Fajardo Celis and Javier Posso Vargas, former members of the M-19 today requested political asylum at the Swiss Embassy in Bogota to escape from "military persecution."

Fajardo, who accepted official amnesty in 1982, and Posso, pardoned by the Supreme Court of Justice, arrived at the Swiss diplomatic mission in Bogota, where they said they were being persecuted and had received anonymous threats.

"Just to save our lives and not to face the same fate of hundreds of people who have accepted the amnesty and have been killed, we have decided to take refuge to ask for political asylum," Fajardo and Posso said in a communique to EFE.

The former guerrillas, one a lawyer and judicial branch official, asked for the presence of an Attorney General's Office official travel and arrangements to Switzerland. However, it was learned that there were no treaties of this type between Colombia and Switzerland.

The two former guerrillas added that for months they have been subjected to persecution, accused of possession of automatic weapons, their homes have been searched, they have received written and telephone threats, and their families subjected have been interrogated by paramilitary groups. They warned against a "dirty war" and "the Argentinization of the country."

M-19 OCCUPIES NEMOCON, SEEKS BARCO PACT

PA062057 Madrid EFE in Spanish 2025 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Bogota, 6 Aug (EFE) -- This afternoon the M-19 peacefully occupied the town of Nemocon, 70 km north of Bogota, to propose to the Virgilio Barco Vargas government that will be sworn in tomorrow a "pact that will lead to peace."

An anonymous spokesman for the group said that during a telephone call to EFE that the occupation is peaceful and has been carried out by the "Bolivarian Militia" of the M-19 to "insist on the need to create a new pact with the Barco Vargas government."

Meanwhile, police sources reported on the CARACOL radio network that communications with Nemocon have apparently been cut off.

The Cundinamarca police command sent reinforcements to the area.

Group 'Attacks' Nemocon

PA070321 Bogota Television Service in Spanish 0000 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] With an obvious desire to gain publicity, a guerrilla group attacked the town of Nemocon, north of Cundinamarca and barely 1 hour from Bogota.

The audacious attack was aimed at the police post and a bank branch. A policeman was killed and an agent was wounded during the attack; two civilians were also wounded. Bombs which were left in the Telecom [National Enterprise for Telecommunications] building, the municipal offices, and a gas station were deactivated after the attackers escaped. The police have begun a land and air chase of the group, which was traveling in two vehicles.

EPL GUERRILLAS OPPOSE BARCO, KILL 2 SOLDIERS

PA060304 Bogota EL SIGLO in Spanish 31 Jul 86 pp 1, 2

[By Eduardo Carrillo]

[Excerpt] [Passage omitted] A Navy officer and an Army NCO were wounded during an attack by the so-called "Pedro Leon Arboleda" (PLA) Urban Detachment's "24 July Heroes" commando of the Popular Liberation Army (EPL), southwest of Bogota.

Authorized spokesmen for the Defense Ministry and National Police reported that soldiers were waiting for National Navy and Air Force buses on South 33d Street and 74th Avenue in the Kennedy City neighborhood when three men in a Chevette opened fire on them.

During the attack, National Navy Frigate Lieutenant Victor Martinez Vargas and Army 2d Corporal Emmerei Monroy Correa were wounded and taken to the Central Military Hospital.

Doctors from the military hospital reported that Martinez Vargas was wounded in the ankle and right leg. Monroy Correa was hit by three shots in various parts of her body. A medical report states that Martinez Vargas is not in serious condition, while Monroy Correa's condition is delicate.

The gunmen left behind subversive propaganda pertaining to the PLA detachment of the so-called EPL and opposing President-elect Virgilio Barco Vargas.

The reappearance of the PLA detachment caused concern in state security organizations as well as in the National Police and Army. That subversive faction was nearly dismantled in Bogota, the eastern plains, and Valle del Cauca Department after policemen and soldiers were murdered 5 years ago. Most of its members and leaders, including Carlos Avilan Patino, are serving lengthy jail sentences for numerous crimes, including rebellion, murder of peace officers, and theft of weapons exclusively used by the Armed Forces.

As for the attackers of the soldiers in Kennedy City, it was reported that their vehicle had been stolen a few hours previously in Bogota.

ABDON SAGUIER: PEOPLE HAVE 'RIGHT TO REBEL'

PY052145 Asuncion HOY in Spanish 4 Aug 86 p 9

[Text] "From a certain viewpoint, the opinions of engineer Romero Pereira [State Counselor Engineer Carlos Romero Pereira Arza] are objective and consistent because it is obvious that the current regime is a 'let-us-give-thanks' system in the sense that the small and negligible achievements that we Paraguayans have are just gracious concessions by an almighty person who could well be compared to an absolute monarch."

This comment was made by Dr Miguel Abdon Saguier [a leader of the opposition Authentic Radical Liberal Party] when he was asked about remarks by the Colorado leader during a panel discussion at the metropolitan seminary.

Abdon Saguier added that "unlike these gracious autocratic concessions, achievements under a democratic system are the normal result of exercising individual and collective rights in a community that enjoys a state of law."

Saguier also stated that he shares with Romero Fereira the opinion that "the people have a legitimate right to rebel against oppression. No one can deny to a subjugated nation the right to resort, if necessary, to force to overthrow tyrannies."

In conclusion, Saguier stated that he disagrees with Romero Pereira when he speaks of a Colorado majority. "That would have been demonstrated under a free system, but under current conditions, to speak of a Colorado or liberal majority is to prophesy. And a politician must rely on objectivity, not on divination," he said.

SECURITY FORCES PUT DOWN PRISON DISTURBANCE

PY310211 Asuncion Radio Nanduti in Spanish 0135 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] We report the following news: As a result of a prison riot that began this afternoon inside Tacumbu National Prison, an inmate was seriously wounded by gunfire and taken to a hospital. Another prisoner was treated at the prison, and many others were hurt, according to initial reports.

The riot started early this afternoon and it was started by Brazilian prisoners, who broke down the iron doors that enclosed them in an isolated section of the prison where they were being held for disciplinary reasons.

The mutiny attempt was put down by special security forces. Brazilian inmate Juan Alberto Ferreira, 25, suffered gunshot wounds in the head and thorax, and was taken to a hospital.

First aid doctors arrived at the prison to assist the inmates. By evening the situation was under control. Today's disturbance comes after similar, even more serious ones, which were also started by Brazilian inmates a few months ago. Attempts to dig tunnels have also been discovered on several occasions in this prison.

GARCIA TO ATTEND NONALIGNED SUMMIT IN ZIMBABWE

[Text] Lima, 6 Aug (AFP) -- Government sources reported here today that President Alan Garcia will soon travel to Harare, Zimbabwe, where he will attend the nonaligned summit that will start on 27 August.

Although the exact dates of the trip have not been confirmed, official sources have noted that the young president had been expressly invited to participate in the nonaligned meeting that will be attended by numerous heads of state, heads of government, foreign ministers and special missions from the five continents.

Important political-economic issues will be discussed at the summit, particularly the hot issue of the foreign debt [words indistinct] bilateral relations and general measures to promote cooperation.

GENERAL INVOLVED IN PRISON RIOTS TO APPEAR IN COURT

PY060320 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0047 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Excerpt] Lima, 5 Aug (EFE) -- Supreme Court President Hector Beltran has reported that General Jorge Rabanal, the person responsible for the repression of the Lurigancho Prison uprising, which resulted in 124 deaths, must appear before the trial judge on 8 August.

The president of the Supreme Court also said that Judge Hernan Saturno has already asked military authorities to place the general at the disposal of his court.

Notwithstanding, it still has to be decided whether the civilian or military courts will have jurisdiction over the case of Gen Rabanal. This decision has to be made by the Supreme Court.

The prosecutor's office maintains that the uprisings by alleged members of the Shining Path Group on 19 June in Fronton, Lurigancho, and Santa Barbara Prisons were civilian and not military uprisings and, therefore, the cases should come under the jurisdiction of civilian courts.

Army Gen Jorge Rabanal had under his command the members of the Republican Guard who, according to President Alan Garcia himself, executed with a shot in the head more than 100 prisoners, who had surrendered and were harmless. [passage omitted]

MRTA COMMANDOS TAKE OVER 2 RADIOS IN CUSCO

[Text] Lima, 6 Aug (AFP) -- The police reported here today that last night Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA) commandos simultaneously took over two radio stations in Cusco, located at 1,155 km southeast of Lima. They added that after overpowering the personnel, the commandos proceeded to broadcast subversive proclamations.

The insurgent groups, armed with revolvers, broke into the Super Radio and Radio Mundo broadcasting stations, and, after overpowering the personnel, proceeded to broadcast taped messages containing subversive proclamations for 15 minutes.

Gustavo Infante, the manager of one of the radios, said that they were ready to do anything and they threatened to kill us if we did not obey their orders.

The MRTA attempted to break into the Radio Mundo broadcasting station on 4 August, but its plans were frustrated because of the sudden presence of police. The series of radio station seizures started on 2 August when MRTA commandos took over the internal radio station of a market located in the Huanchaco district and proceeded to broadcast proclamations regarding the armed struggle.

BOMB EXPLODES AT LIMA INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT

[Text] Lima, 6 Aug (AFP) -- Officials have reported tonight that a bomb exploded at the international airport without causing any major damage or casualties. The low-powered bomb exploded in a bathroom of the domestic flight section.

It was surprising that the terrorists were able to get to the passengers boarding area in view of the strict security measures implemented in the airport several weeks ago.

Other sources indicated that shots were heard at the air base adjacent to the airport, but these were apparently caused by a nervous guard.

BRIEFS

DEPUTY MINISTERS APPOINTED -- The Official Gazette yesterday published the supreme resolutions appointing the new labor and social development deputy ministers, Victor Salas Merinde and Domingo Freidman Gonzalez, respectively. Salas is a well-known union leader of the General Confederation of Peruvian Workers, which is headed by Julio Cruzado Zavala. This is the first time that a worker will occupy a high-ranking position in public administration, Labor Minister Orester Rodriguez Campos said. The deputy ministers will probably assume their positions today. [Text] [Lima Radio del Pacifico in Spanish 1300 GMT 6 Aug 86 PY]

SANGUINETTI CRITICIZES U.S. EXPORT SUBSIDY

PY061610 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish-0923 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 6 Aug (TELAM) -- President Julio Maria Sanguinetti has criticized the U.S. decision to subsidize its grain exports to the Soviet Union, stating that protectionism among industrialized countries is an attack against the heart of the democratic system of the producing countries.

In a statement to the newspaper LA RAZON, Sanguinetti said that protectionism aggravates the economic problem, increases the influence of the debt on domestic economic problems, and thus becomes a powerful factor in political destabilization.

Sanguinetti said that protectionism also diminishes the possibility of resolving social backwardness and hits workers and small businessmen. In a nutshell, it affects us to the very core of democracy, he states.

Concerning the scarce resources by which the underdeveloped countries can reverse the decision of the Reagan administration, the Uruguayan head of state said that we must resort to moral pressures. An awareness of the negative impact that protectionism can have on democratic stability must be created, Sanguinetti concluded.

POLITICIANS LAUNCH CAMPAIGN TO HELP NICARAGUA

PY062050 Paris AFP in Spanish 1433 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Montevideo, 6 August (AFP) -- Representatives of some of the more important Uruguayan political forces have launched a campaign to provide economic aid for Nicaragua, thus joining the solidarity movement started in Argentina, Mexico, and Peru, and Venezuela.

According to the organizers, the purpose of the campaign is to counter the financial support ($110 million) [as received] that the U.S. Government recently approved for the Nicaraguan contras.

In a communique, the Uruguayan politicians said that this solidarity, this fight for peace and life, must develop into a movement capable of averting war and destruction.

One of the politicians explained that this aid is intended only to help cover the needs of Nicaragua, which is forced to invest large sums in defense.

LUSINCHI ON COLOMBIA TRIP, AIR FORCE CRASH

PA062007 Caracas Television Service in Spanish 1600 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] A few moments ago President Jaime Lusinchi departed for Bogota, where he will attend the inauguration in Colombian President-elect Virgilio Barco Vargas. Lusinchi is accompanied by the defense, foreign affairs, and finance ministers and other special guests.

Members of his cabinet and of the military high command were present at his departure. Minutes before, Lusinchi had sworn in Interior Minister Octavio Lepage as the acting president during his absence. The ministers who will replace the foreign affairs, interior, finance, and defense ministers while they are away from their posts were also sworn in.

President Lusinchi made a statement to journalists regarding his brief visit to Colombia, during which he will reaffirm the friendly ties between the two countries. Lusinchi also referred to yesterday's aviation accident in the country's central region, in which three Mirage planes crashed.

[Begin recording] [Lusinchi] During our visit in Colombia we will have the opportunity to hold informal talks with several heads of state, as well as with several prominent Latin American leaders and personalities from other countries and continents. No formal meeting is scheduled, nor is there any special agenda; so any speculation in this regard is just imagination.

[Reporter] Mr President, what can you tell us about yesterday's accident involving the Mirage aircraft?

[Lusinchi] Well, a thorough investigation is being conducted on this grave accident. Possibly tomorrow we will have additional information. However, we cannot say much yet because we are conducting an exhaustive investigation to take the necessary corrective measures and learn the exact cause of the accident. In any event, I believe that the Armed Forces will be submitting additional information tomorrow. [end recording]

NO CASUALTIES IN 5 AUGUST AIR CRASH

Lack of ground communications and poor weather were important factors in the accident, which was the worst in Venezuelan Air Force history. [passage omitted]

GROUP OF SIX LEADERS BEGIN MEETINGS

De la Madrid Honors Leaders

PA061615 Mexico City Red Nacional 13 Imevision Television in Spanish 0300 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] President De la Madrid is hosting a dinner in honor of the heads of state meeting here. This is the first occasion on which the members of the Group of Six have gathered in Ixtapa-Zihuatanejo.

The leaders arrived at the [name indistinct] guest house, where the Mexican president is staying. Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson was the first to arrive, followed by Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Ghandi. [Argentine President] Raul Alfonsin followed, accompanied by four Argentine officials

Former Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere arrived next, followed a few minutes later by Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou. President de la Madrid welcomed each of the statesmen to the informal meeting. Journalists, photographers, and cameramen were allowed to cover only a few aspects prior to the dinner.

The heads of state convened in a room adjacent to the dining room. After posing for the photographers and talking for a few minutes, they proceded to the dining room. The topics discussed by the government leaders will not be disclosed until Thursday, 7 August, at the end of the Ixtapa summit on peace and disarmament.

Calls for Peace

[By Gregorio Alpizar, special correspondent]

[Excerpts] Ixtapa, 6 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Upon inaugurating the second peace and disarmament meeting this afternoon, Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid called on men of good faith to join the Group of Six in the battle to reclaim peace for humanity.

Speaking to heads of state from Argentina, Tanzania, Greece, India, and Sweden, De la Madrid said: We do not have military strength, and we are not outstanding world powers. Our weapons are reason and the will to live. [passage omitted]

The right to life is stressed at this meeting, said the Mexican president. He clarified that they do not aspire to present original and novel theories. Our aim is to be spokesmen for what all of humanity wishes: to avoid destruction and war and to assure life and the beauty of humanity which has been so creative, said De la Madrid. [passage omitted]

After listening to the dangers presented by the arms race and the consequences of a nuclear holocaust, De la Madrid said the hazards described at the meeting will be treated as the concerns of men, and we will seek to settle them in a universal awareness that calls for peace.

SEPULVEDA ADDRESSES MEETING ON PEACE, DISARMAMENT

FL041430 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 2030 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Excerpt] Mexico City, 2 Aug (NOTIMEX) — Non-nuclear countries do not pretend to impose negotiating terms on the superpowers, but we have assumed the responsibility of defending the right to life and being heard in a process that affects our security and possibilities of our development, Mexican Foreign Secretary Bernardo Sepulveda Amor warned. In his opening remarks at a meeting of diverse international personalities on the initiative of peace and disarmament, being held here in the National Museum of Anthropology and History, the Foreign Secretary said this meeting, like the one the Group of Six will hold in Ixtapa-Zihuatanejo, seeks to strengthen the universal awareness of the dangers inherent in the nuclear age and the viability of disarmament to achieve a genuine and real peace. He said the Group of Six meeting has the same goal. The foreign secretary wished success to the participants in their deliberations during the meeting which, he said, will be followed with great interest by all those who want an international society free of the threat of nuclear war. He announced that the minutes of the meeting will be made available to the leaders of the Group of Six, who will undoubtedly find them an incentive for the development of their initiative. ELECTORAL BOARD TO REVIEW CHIHUAHUA ELECTIONS

PA060142 Mexico City Red Nacional 13 Imevision Television in Spanish 1955 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] The Chihuahua Electoral Board, which is headed by Deputy Ruben Ortega, has committed itself to carry out an in-depth review of the results of the past elections. The following is a report by special envoy Abel Magana:

[Begin recording] The Chihuahua Electoral Board is politically open; therefore, it will accept private evidence provided by the parties even though this will not be considered absolute proof. This evidence will help broaden the vision of the deputies who are reviewing the elections and allow them to rule more fairly and in strict accordance with the law. Deputy Ruben Ortega, head of the Chihuahua Electoral Board, said that the board will do its best. He hopes that the people and political parties will be satisfied with the work being done by the board. Ortega added that the board does not have a great deal of documented evidence. The PAN [National Action Party] has contested the results of the elections. PAN claims that the elections were fraudulent, athough it has presented no specific proof to back this claim. DURAZO TO FACE ACCUSER, SUTHOR OF EXPOSE

WA051500 Mexico City EXCELSIOR in Spanish 17 Jul 86 pp 5-A, 38-A

[Excerpt] The most awaited of all the confrontation of witness proceedings between former Federal District Police Chief Arturo Durazo and his accusers will take place on 20 August, when Durazo faces his former lieutenant, Jose Gonzalez Gonzalez, the individual who has made the greatest number of and most serious charges against the accused party, in his book, "Lo Negro del Negro Durazo" [The Dark Side of Blackie Durazo].

This confrontation of witnesses, which is in effect a showdown, was agreed to yesterday by the 26th penal court judge who is trying the former police official.

COMMUNIQUE DENIES DUVALIER REQUESTED ASYLUM

PA061737 Panama City LA ESTRELLA DE PANAMA in Spanish 6 Aug 86 pp A-1, A-10

[Communique issued by the Foreign Ministry on 5 August]

[Text] The Foreign Relations Ministry hereby reports to all citizens and to the local and international media that the report in the French weekly LE POINT that former Haitian President Jean-Claude Duvalier has requested asylum in Panama or that the asylum has been granted is completely false. The information is groundless and inappropriate. THerefore, such an assumption is rejected by the Panamanian Government. In this regard, His Excellency Gaspar Wittgreen, Panamanian ambassador to France, sent an emphatic protest note to LE POINT pointing out that the article is based on rumors and speculations of an alleged political asylum. In his note, Ambassador Wittgreem also denies that he has had any communication, directly or indirectly, personally or officially, with people close to former President Duvalier to negotiate the possibility of political asylum in the Republic of Panama. Therefore, the Panamanian Foreign Ministry categorically rejects such lies and misinformation.

PRD MARCH IN RESPONSE TO PANAMA'S 'ENEMIES'

PA061632 Panama City MATUTINO in Spanish 6 Aug 86 pp 1-A, 8-A

[By Justa Guerrero de Henriquez]

[Text] The great march on 12 August, organized by the Revolutionary Democratic Party [PRD] with the participation of all members of UNADE [National Democratic Union], will be a people's and military journey in response to Panama's enemies, who have infiltrated inside and outside the U.S. Government to evade the compliance of the Torrijos-Carter Treaties. This remark was made by the PRD President Romulo Escobar Bethancourt to the various representatives of the commissions in charge of the coordination of the event, which will conclude with a meeting at 5th of May Plaza.

The organization committee is headed by Dr Hirisnel Sucre and includes Panama City Mayor Jilma Noriega de Jurado, Gerardo Gonzalez, Ana Villa de Flores, Legislator Rigoberto Paredes, Reinaldo Rivera, and Cesar Rodriguez Maylin, all members of the PRD's national executive committee.

Dr Escobar Bethancourt said the event will begin with a military parade on National Avenue and end on A Avenue. The event coincides with the foundation of Battalion 2000 and with the anniversary of the promotion of General Manuel Antonio Noriega to the commandancy of the Defense Force of Panama. The president of the organization committee, Hirisnel Sucre, said there will be two speakers at this event, yet to be announced, who will talk on subjects related to this great event to reaffirm the will of the Panamanian people who support sovereignty, national jurisdiction, and an end to the mockery of Panama and the slanders and lies against the fatherland.

FOREIGN MINISTER SIGNS CONVENTION ON TORTURE

PA062351 San Jose LA REPUBLICA in Spanish 1 Aug 86 p 6

[Excerpts] Foreign Minister Rodrigo Madrigal Nieto yesterday signed the "Inter-American Convention for the Prevention and Sanction of Torture" at OAS headquarters in Washington. The event was attended by OAS Secretary General Joao Clemente Baena Soares. [passage omitted]

Foreign Minister Rodrigo Madrigal Nieto signed the document approved on 9 December at the conclusion of the 15th OAS Assembly held in Cartagena, Colombia. This document had already been signed by Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Panama, Peru, the Dominican Republic, Uruguay, and Venezuela. However, the convention has not yet been implemented. It was established that the convention would be implemented 30 days after the second document of ratification had been presented. However, this has not been done yet.

Foreign Minister Madrigal Nieto said that yesterday's signing of the convention is subject to approval by the Costa Rican Assembly. Madrigal Nieto arrived in Washington early last week. He has met with U.S. Government officials to discuss bilateral problems and the Central American situation. Madrigal Nieto also spoke before the OAS Permanent Council on Wednesday. [passage omitted]

CONGRESS RECOMMENDS BREAKING TIES WITH SOUTH AFRICA

PA061556 Guatemala City Cadena de Emisoras Unidas in Spanish 0050 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Today, in a plenary meeting, the Congress approved a resolution recommending breaking the diplomatic relations with South Africa. This was proposed by Rodolfo Maldonado, Edmond Mulet, and Enrique De Leon Asturias, members of the Congress' Foreign Relations Commission, who recently returned from a tour of several European countries.

The Foreign Ministry will take the corresponding steps. The suspension of diplomatic or consular relations with the South African segregationist government was approved because of the discrimination policy of the Pieter Botha regime," which limits all civil rights of the black population. Other countries in the world have imposed commercial sanctions on South Africa, and some others are also in the process of doing it at the diplomatic level in the face of the harshness of the apartheid policy, which has resulted in the killing of thousands of blacks seeking a vindication of their violated rights.

CEREZO DENIES NEUTRALITY ENDANGERED BY U.S.

PA070303 Panama City ACAN in Spanish 0112 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Guatemala, 6 Aug (ACAN-EFE) -- President Vinicio Cerezo said today that alleged U.S. pressures on Guatemala to force the country to abandon its "active neutrality" are "rumors." The Guatemalan president said that he asked Ronald Reagan's administration directly if this rumor were true, and the United States "officially denied it."

The U.S. weekly magazine NEWSWEEK reported in its latest edition that Cerezo was " "annoyed by the alleged U.S. efforts to end his country's neutrality regarding the conflict with Nicaragua." Cerezo stressed that in publishing the interview he granted the U.S. weekly, the magazine failed to report that the alleged pressures "were a rumor."

"Alberto Martinez Piedra, the U.S. ambassador to Guatemala, and special envoy Phillip Habib told me that there was no pressure and that they respect Guatemala's position, for which I thanked them," President Cerezo said. The president added: "We are going to maintain the position of neutrality in the Central American conflict, as long as it is advantageous to national interests." According to the president's explanations," the rumor regarding U.S. pressures to make his government openly support the anti-Sandinists in the Central American donflict emerged when he mentioned that "some U.S. military men had insinuated that the neutrality policy could undermine the improvement of U.S. relations with Guatemala." Nevertheless, the president recalled that during the interview for the U.S. magazine he said: "The military respects our position."

According to NEWSWEEK, "Cerezo is upset because 7 months after becoming the first civilian Guatemalan president in decades, he has not been invited to a meeting with President Ronald Reagan." Regarding the alleged relationship that exists between the U.S. ambassador and Guatemalan industrialists who finance the anti-Sandinists, the president said: "It is a rumor that goes beyond concrete facts."

"I know the U.S. ambassador," the president added, "and I know that he respects the Guatemalan Government and our civilian administration." The president said: "In any case, to seek aid for the contras in Guatemala would be illegal, would breach our neutrality, and it would not be allowed."

"They (the contras) can hold meetings, but we cannot speak of aid from Guatemala unless it is provided privately. However, this aid could not be officially accepted," President Cerezo said.

Two weeks ago the top leaders of the Nicaraguan Opposition Unity (UNO), met in the Guatemalan capital. On 25 June the anti-Sandinist group received approval for $100 million in aid from the U.S. Congress.

CEREZO ASKS SANDINISTS TO RESPECT RELIGION

PA070218 Panama City ACAN in Spanish 0142 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Guatemala City, 6 Aug (ACAN-EFE) — President Vinicio Cerezo announced today that he sent a letter to Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega asking him, "to promote pluralism and to respect religious differences and the people's beliefs."

President Cerezo accepted the Guatemalan bishops' request to act as mediator in the conflict between the Sandinist government and the church.

President Cerezo said: "I sent an official letter to President Ortega, expressing to him our concern over the area problems and also letting him know that we consider the promotion of pluralism and respect for the church to be fundamental for peace in the region." The letter was sent yesterday.

President Cerezo said that in the next meeting of Central American vice presidents, slated for 13 August in Guatemala City, "we will let Vice President Sergio Ramirez Mercado know about our concern over these problems."

Guatemala claims to advocate an "active neutrality" regarding the Central American problems. About his intervention in the Nicaraguan problem [as received] and if he will break the active neutrality he advocates, President Cerezo said: "We maintain that neutrality has both political and military aspects."

"In the same letter I told President Ortega that we respect the decisions of the Nicaraguan people regarding their destiny, but that neutrality is not ideological," President Cerezo indicated.

He added that the Guatemalan Government is in favor of democracy and pluralism, "and we have been working to see that it is maintained everywhere in the world."

"We have struggled in Guatemala to make it possible, and we believe we can express our interest in seeing that other countries have democracies," President Cerezo said.

The Guatemalan bishops held a secret meeting with President Cerezo, at Santo Tomas, the presidential estate, 50 km south of Guatemala City, during which they asked him to mediate with the Sandinist regime. This took place after the expulsion from Nicaragua of Msgr Pablo Antonio Vega and Msgr Bismarck Carballo, the assistant to the archbishop of Managua, Msgr Miguel Obando y Bravo. Monsignor Vega is in the Vatican, and Carballo is in the United States.

PRESIDENT AZCONA EXPLAINS TREATY WITH COLOMBIA

PA061310 Tegicigalpa Voz de Honduras Network in Spanish 1735 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] We will listen to President Jose Azcona Hoyo's views regarding the international treaty signed with the Colombian Government. These are President Azcona's remarks at the presidential palace.

[Begin recording] [Azcona] The executive branch has followed this process responsibly.

We have met with the foreign secretary and his advisers. When an accord with Colombia was reached, a document was signed, not by the presidents, but by Foreign Secretary Carlos Lopez Contreras and Colombian Foreign Minister Augusto Ramirez Ocampo. The document clearly sets forth that this treaty must be endorsed by the congress of each of the two countries. No improvisation has occurred, and no law has been violated. At this moment, the foreign secretary is meeting with the National Congress' Foreign Relations Commission and the factions' leaders and their advisers to explain to them the process whereby the treaty was signed. During the afternoon and in a plenary session, the foreign secretary will explain to the Naitonal Congress how and why this treaty was signed.

Many comments have been made about this with very little foundation. I would not have backed an act by the foreign secretary unless this act was fully backed by the foreign secretary's advisors who are very familiar with the situation. Hernandez Alcerro, lawyer Leonardo Balladares, and [name indistinct] are involved in this matter.

[Reporter] Mr President, do you mean that the government has not (?ceded) territory through this treaty?

[Azcona] Nobody has ceded anything. [Passage indistinct]. When two people have similar claims on something, there are two approaches: a lawsuit or a direct settlement. They also said that those were only three small pieces of land, three or four rocks, and these on shoals only. They further said that the Rosalinda shoals belonged to them. As a result of this, the sides gradually got closer to each other. Finally, they reached an agreement, and then a treaty was signed. There are only two ways of settling disagreements, either directly, whereby the two sides that have similar claims over something reach an agreement over specific points and then sign a treaty, or through a suit where a judge determines the rights of each side. In this case, instead of extending this problem and going to the The Hague International Court of Justice, as we did in the case of El Salvador, we reached a direct settlement to resolve these border issues. We claimed all of Serranilla shoals as ours. The Colombians also say that all of the Serranilla shoals belonged to them, and also those of Rosalinda.

You see, everybody claims ownership over something. If an agreement is reached, a treaty is signed. Otherwise, the difference is taken to the The Hague International Court of Justice and laid to rest forever.

[Reporter] Mr President, [words indistinct] will the government order an investigation of the terrorist attack perpetrated against journalist Juan Arevalo, because this attack has also been on the press and liberties in Honduras?

[Azcona] I have spoken to the commander in chief of the Honduran Armed Forces. In fact, I think it would not have been necessary for me to speak with him about this. I understand the public security forces have already undertaken an investigation of this attack. This is something that must be done. Even if I were not the president of the Republic, I would be very much interested in this. I have spoken to the commander in chief. They agreed and took the necessary steps to try to clarify this attack.

[Reporter] Will vigilance be improved considering that the people fear such attacks, two of which have occurred lately, Mr President?

[Azcona] Fortunately, the two attacks have not caused any casualties as has happened in other countries. There have been attacks everywhere. [passage indistinct] [end recording]

TRADE RELATIONS WITH NICARAGUA TO BE RESUMED

PA062346 Tegucigalpa EL HERALDO in Spanish 5 Aug 86 p 4

[Text] In the next few days, commercial relations with Nicaragua will be resumed, Economy and Commerce Minister Reginaldo Panting has said. This is happening after this neighboring country requested some resin from Honduras. Minister Panting said the market will be opened, but first Nicaragua should officially recognize its foreign debt to Honduras.

Panting expressed optimism about Nicaragua's recognition of its overdue debt, and added that the trade to be carried out will be based on exchange rates already established to avoid any further difficulties. He noted that the Nicaraguan debt is $114 million lempiras and the Nicaraguan Government will have to take care of it. Otherwise, it will be useless to sign documents that will have no value in the future.

The Economy Minister said that with the renewal of these negotiations, he expects that the political relations will also grow. He added that the main task of this ministry is to sell what Honduras produces and to increase trade relations with all countries, including Nicaragua.

ARMY SPOKESMAN BLAMES NICARAGUA FOR INCIDENTS

PA061710 Tegucigalpa Cadena Audio Video in Spanish 1130 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] According to the Armed Forces, Nicaragua has plans to destabilize the government. The Armed Forces are deeply concerned over recent incidents in Tegucigalpa, which have disturbed the population's tranquillity.

Official Army spokesman Major Jorge Arguello added that this concern has led to intensive work aimed at clarifying these anomalies and reassuring the citizens who want to live in peace and to maintain the peacefulness we have enjoyed. Maj Arguello said: That harmony will be maintained at any cost, even if we must risk our lives to prevent disorders.

He noted that these incidents are part of a strategy by which the current Nicaraguan regime might try to unleash a series of actions against Honduras aimed at disrupting our peace and discrediting our country before the international community. These actions include supporting and revitalizing subversive groups in neighboring countries and within our country, in an attempt to destabilize the established government, he added.

However, the Armed Forces are ready to stop any attempt to provoke chaos in the nation, Maj Arguello concluded.

REFUGEES REPORT CONTRA PRESENCE IN EL PARAISO

PA060423 Tegucigalpa Voz de Honduras Network in Spanish 1130 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Refugees have charged that 10,000 contras are occupying a large portion of territory in El Paraiso Department, calling it New Nicaragua. Approximately 10,000 Nicaraguan counterrevolutionaries are operating in the eastern Department of El Paraiso. This vast area extends 25 km between Capire and Arenales, and the rebels call it New Nicaragua, persons displaced from the area charged yesterday.

This vast expanse of land, located approximately 220 km from Tegucigalpa, has been mostly uninhabited since the mass raids the EPS carried out in April, when it battled with Honduran and counterrevolutionary forces. Some 5,000 to 6,000 people refuse to return to their homes and townships, having charged approximately 3 weeks ago that there is a pre-war climate in the area because of contras' presence. One hundred and fifty have settled in Danli, the main city in El Paraiso.

Some of the refugees said yesterday in Danli that the situation continues to be critical and that the number of contras in Honduran territory has increased to between 10,000 and 12,000. A few months ago, leaders of the coffee growers in El Paraiso reported that approximately 6,000 heavily armed contras were operating in the area, blaming them and the constant Sandinist raids for harming their production and causing heavy losses.

The refugees charged today that passage through the area continues to be restricted to Hondurans, but in reality, the only ones who can pass through it are the contras, who are duly supplied with weapons of all calibers. According to the sources, the so-called New Nicaragua area includes the communities of Capire, Villanueva de (Yamales), (Yamales), and Arenales, which are located 12-15 km from the Nicaraguan border. A sign reading New Nicaragua appeared in the vicinity of a large contra camp in (Yamales) but in April a deputy mayor, a rural authority, and residents of the area replaced it with a Honduran flag, the sources reported today.

The town of Villanueva de (Yamales), 10 km from Capire and 5 km from (Yamales), has been uninhabited since Easter, when its 400 residents abandoned it.

In their complaints of 3 weeks ago, which were reported by the local press, the refugees said that they are alarmed over the serious developments that may result from the $100 million approved for the Nicaraguan contras. People from Arenales, (Ranguinales), (Taparti), Banco Grande, and El Amparo, located in the same area, have said that war preparations are increasing every day in the contra camps. Our situation is terrible, they added, because our old places of work have been turned into battle areas by foreign forces that have virtually taken over Honduran territory. We are desperate because our lands remain occupied by an army that is growing every day, they said. [passage omitted]

On 15 July, Government House reacted with displeasure to press reports referring to an exodus of the inhabitants of that area. It claimed that the number was not as high as reported but admitted that a pre-war climate exists there. The government denies the possibility that there are displaced persons, presumably from the area bordering on Nicaragua, as a result of the military situation in that area, a Government House communique noted.

PRESIDENT ORTEGA DEDICATES CHINANDEGA HOSPITAL

PA060431 Managua Domestic Service in Spanish 2328 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Speech given by President Daniel Ortega at inauguration ceremony of a health center in Tonvaile, Chinandega Department, on 5 August -- recorded]

[Text] We are holding this beautiful event in one of Nicaragua's hottest areas. At 1250, Companero (?Trinidad) said that nobody was suffering from sunstroke here. Is anybody suffering from sunstroke here? [Crowd shouts: No!] Yet there are some who are suffering from sunstroke at present.

Do you know who is suffering from sunstroke at this moment?

[Crowd shouts: Yes!] The counterrevolutionaries. The counterrevolutionaries are suffering from sunstroke because another hospital and health center has been erected here in Nicaragua. The U.S. Government is suffering from sunstroke because that government does not want health centers and hospitals to be built in Nicaragua. The counterrevolutionaries have destroyed 31 health centers during these years. Thirty-five doctors and nurses have fallen victim to the terrorism of the U.S. Government mercenaries. Thirty-five persons, including doctors and nurses, have been murdered, wounded, or kidnapped.

Thirty-one health centers destroyed. Those who destroy health centers in Nicaragua, those who murder doctors in Nicaragua, as well as nurses and health technicians, are surely suffering from sunstroke today because we have opened a new health center in Nicaragua. [applause] We have just concluded a tour of the United States. We visited the United Nations and later toured several U.S. cities, where we came in direct contact with the U.S. people. We got in touch with U.S. people in New York. We also met with the people in Denver. In Chicago, we again met with the people. Not only did we meet with solidarity groups, but also with U.S. citizens who do not identify with us and who were also on the streets. While walking through the streets of New York, Denver, or Chicago, we met with the U.S. people's sympathy and solidarity.

What does this mean? It means that the American people do not want to be at war with Nicaragua. What does it mean? It means that the American people do not want the mercenaries, the contras, to continue receiving money, arms, and military advice so that they can destroy health centers and schools, so that they can murder children and peasants. This is not what the American people want.

The Americans have demonstrated that they do not want their troops to invade Nicaragua. They have demonstrated that the American people want peace. They want peace, not war. Therefore, they are against the U.S. Government's policies toward Nicaragua. The American people have demonstrated their solidarity in many ways. In the United States, just as I am protesting at this time, the Americans are protesting against the approval of the $100 million, against the approval to send more arms, against the approval to send more military advisers to Central America. This is being discussed and will be discussed in the U.S. Senate. The Americans are protesting on the steps of the U.S. Congress, and they are being arrested for protesting against those unjust policies.

The Americans have also come to Nicaragua to offer their solidarity. When we toured the installations with Mother Maritza, Sister Maritza, she explained that all of the instruments here to help the patients have come as donations from the United States. In other words, the American people are giving this equipment to the Nicaraguan people for a social project, while the U.S. Government is giving the contras money and arms to destroy social projects such as this.

Sister Maritza is also a representative of solidarity and love toward the Nicaraguan people. The majority of the projects carried out to complete this health center for mothers and infants was carried out by nuns, who in a Christian spirit have worked for the peasants, for the humble Nicaraguan people. This center will serve the rural population in (?El Viejo) and the people of [name indistinct]. This is the first center of its type in the country. We acknowledge that this center is the result of the nuns' efforts, as they have (?moved) the community and have joined the community to complete this project. They have also attracted more international cooperation, both material and human. The sister also explained that one Spanish doctor, one Austrian doctor, and one German technician will remain here to work.

Meanwhile, the mercenaries use the money and arms they receive from the U.S. Government to murder international volunteers as in the case of the recently murdered German, Swiss, and French volunteers who helped the peasants construct homes, helped the peasants get water. They were murdered, and even though only a few days have passed, we have three women here from faraway countries who have come to take the places of the murdered volunteers. This demonstrates to the Nicaraguan revolution that the efforts our people have made to achieve peace and work in peace have the support and solidarity of the countries of the world. The fact that this project has been directed, encouraged, and completed by nuns also demonstrates the respect that the Nicaraguan Government, the FSLN, has for religion.

That is why we have come up with the slogan: There is no difference between Christianity and the revolution. There are dozens of clergymen in Nicaraguan hospitals. You can find them in health centers and in hospitals helping the Nicaraguan people. Here we have talked to our Health Minister Dora Maria Tellez, and we have asked her to authorize Sister Maritza to administer this health center.

We are sure that you will take good care of this health center. You have already organized the protection of the health center. We have to take care of it, because unfortunately health centers are targets of the mercenary forces. Therefore, we must protect this health center. We have to protect it from any terrorist acts or sabotage, because we all know that those people are determined to destroy what we build. They want to demoralize the people by destroying schools and health centers, but they do not realize that the people's morale is Sandino's morale. Therefore it is an indestructible morale, because if they destroy 10 health centers, the people will build 20 health centers. If they destroy 50 health centers, the people will build 100 health centers. [applause]

They will never be able to defeat this revolution, because it is a peasants' revolution, a workers' revolution, a Nicaraguan people's revolution; it is a revolution made for justice, a poor people's revolution, a revolution in which Nicaraguan Christians participate in large numbers; it is an authentic revolution, a Latin American revolution, and it is a indestructible revolution. Free fatherland! [Crowd replies: Or death!]

ORTEGA URGES REGION TO OPPOSE U.S. POLICY

PA070407 Paris AFP in Spanish 0252 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Excerpt] Managua, 6 Aug (AFP) -- Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega today called on all the Central American governments to "oppose" the Reagan administration's policy and prevent "a total war in the region."

"The Central American governments must oppose the current U.S. policy, and they must have enough strength and determination to take this step because the only other alternative is war," Ortega said during an interview aired by La Voz de Nicaragua.

Ortega expressed his hopes that the Central American nations will reach a peace agreement within the framework of the efforts of the Contadora Group, formed by Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia, and Panama. For the past 3 years, Contadora has attempted to achieve a negotiated solution to the regional crisis.

"All of us are, in one way or another, subject to U.S. pressures, but we must tell the United States that we cannot follow them along that path because that path only leads to a precipice," the Nicaraguan president added.

Ortega admitted that there have been some difficulties in reaching a regional understanding and added: "There is no worse effort than the one that is not made, and we feel obliged to do our part for Central America to conclude its negotiations within Contadora."

President Ortega said that the $100 million in aid to the anti-Sandinist guerrillas and the reinforcement of the U.S. military presence in the area "have Central America on the verge of a total war."

Ortega reiterated that Nicaragua is willing to sign bilateral agreements with Honduras and Costa Rica to neutralize and demilitarize the border areas, where more than 10,000 FDN guerrillas are currently operating. [passage omitted]

ORTEGA SENDS LETTER TO GROUP OF 6 MEETING

PA070240 Managua Domestic Service in Spanish 2336 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Telephone report by Angela Saballos, Foreign Ministry spokeswoman -- live]

[Text] We now wish to report on a note sent by President Daniel Ortega to the governments and heads of state of Argentina, Greece, India, Mexico, the United Republic of Tanzania, and Sweden.

The note addresses important issues on disarmament and international peace being discussed at a meeting involving those heads of state. President Daniel Ortega sent them greetings in a letter in which he points out that the Nicaraguan Government is convinced that the valuable initiative of the Group of Six will help achieve detente in international relations and establish a just and lasting world peace.

President Ortega added that at a time when humanity is facing increasing risks of [words indistinct] arms race, especially when it comes to nuclear arms and other mass [word indistinct], the efforts to stop those destruction attempts gain (?special) importance.

Among the centers of international tension, tentral America is confronting a situation that requires special and (?prompt) attention. The crises affecting our countries, which have profound economic and social roots, are worsened by the policy of force, threats and intervention advocated by the U.S. Government.

With absolute fidelity to its inclination toward peace and its determination to contribute to achieving a political and negotiated solution to the Central American crisis, the government and people of Nicaragua have found in the diplomatic effort of the Contadora Group and its Support Group an expression of all of Latin America in favor of the use of peaceful means to solve existing conflicts.

In this spirit, Nicaragua has always offered its firm and decisive support to the peace process promoted by Mexico, Panama, Colombia, and Venezuela with the help of the Lima Group.

In its search for this much-desired peaceful solution, Nicaragua has been presenting various peace and dialogue proposals [words indistinct] with Central American countries and the U.S. Government, as well as through the negotiating effort of the Contadora Group.

Draft treaties, declarations, and agreements proposed by Nicaragua within the Contadora Group during October and December 1983, as well as its approval of the Contadora Document on 7 September 1984, and its constructive and mature reply to the views presented by the Contadora and Support Groups during the joint meeting of foreign ministers of 6 June 1986, are examples that illustrate the willingness to hold a dialogue and achieve a conciliation that has always guided the Nicaraguan Government.

In keeping with this inclination toward peace, Nicaragua resorted to the International Court of Justice [ICJ] to sue the U.S. Government for its activities in violation of international law. That historical ruling handed down on 27 June 1986 by that high world tribunal, demanded that the U.S. Government end that policy of force threats, and intervention against Nicaragua.

Despite the court ruling, the U.S. Administration has reinforced its gigantic military presence in the area and is thus opening the doors to a generalized conflict. The recent approval of $100 million for the mercenary forces by the U.S. Government's House of Representatives, which involves authorization for the direct participation of U.S. military advisers in the war against Nicaragua and the supply of all kinds of weapons are leading Latin America to the brink of a full-scale war.

Aware of the main responsibility of the UN Security Council to maintain peace and international security, Nicaragua resorted to that forum to strengthen international legal order and enforce respect for the ICJ and its rulings. Despite the U.S. veto, the resolution submitted for the approval of the Security Council, which made an urgent call to fully abide by the ruling handed down on 27 June 1986 by the ICJ in the case presented by Nicaragua, received the support of a majority of council members. This is clear evidence of the support of the community of nations for the principle of using peaceful solutions in controversies in keeping with international law and the banning of force and threats in international relations.

As a new expression of Nicaragua's determination to find formulas to hold dialogues and reach understanding leading to the establishment of a just and dignified peace in the area, on 2 August 1986 President Ortega met in the United States with the Reverend Jesse Jackson and other members of Operation PUSH [People United to Serve Humanity], a movement of U.S. citizens, and revealed an unconditional peace initiative known as the Chicago Proposal.

Nicaragua hopes that this peace proposal will be well-received by the other Central American countries and the U.S. Government. In addition, [words indistinct] of the Contadora and Support Groups will find in this initiative a new driving force for their negotiating efforts in favor of the urgent peace and (?security) aspirations of the Central American peoples.

EDITORIAL LAUDS 'CHICAGO PROPOSAL' INITIATIVE

[Editorial: "Our Inexhaustible Desire for Peace"]

[Text] The dynamism of Nicaragua's foreign policy as well as its creativity when it comes to initiatives to promote peace negotiations have taught us that just causes must be persued with candor and without subterfuges or limited frameworks. Nicaragua acts in all respects in the opposite direction of imperialism, which seeks confrontation, solutions through force, and strong-willed impositions against the sovereignty of nations.

Through its president, Daniel Ortega, Nicaragua has submitted -- in an eight-point proposal already known as the "Chicago Proposal" -- a summarized version of its peace initiatives enriched with new negotiation elements that more fully meet peace aspirations not regarded as essential in previous offers. For instance, the invitation to Reagan to visit our country or the constructive dialogue with the church are consistent with the resumption of the U.S.-Nicaraguan dialogue and the signing of the peace document according to Contadora's efforts and its latest proposal, which was boycotted by they Yankee government and its Central American allies.

These objectives, which have long been sought by Contadora, blend perfectly with the demand for compliance with the ruling of the International Court of Justice and the resolution of the UN Security Coucil, both of which are specialized UN bodies. This coherence between permanent efforts and new, helpful initiatives as well as steadfastness are the main characteristics of our foreign policy. This coherence and steadfastness combine with the legality, reasonableness, and justice of our cause to further enhance our prestige in the world.

From the prestige of the legal and political support for our positions in view of the powerful and dangerous imperialist opponent comes a narrow margin covered increasingly more successfully by our leaders' visits to the podiums of the world's most well-known international organizations.

In a very short period of time, Nicaragua lavished initiatives on the world and U.S. opinion. It offered its good will for a political negotiation. It put out its hand and invited the main opponent of the revolution to visit Nicaragua, thus proving that its defensive position of national sovereignty is unfaltering, but also flexible. That is what the one who trusts justice and struggles for it under any circumstances, without fear, can do.

What will its opponents' attitude be?

DEMONSTRATIONS FORM OUTSIDE LA PRENSA OFFICE

PA062219 Managua Domestic Service in Spanish 2027 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] [Announcer] It is now 1427, and our people want to know what is actually taking place inside and outside of the newspaper LA PRENSA's offices. How and why are these provocations taking place in Managua? What is happening, Alfonso Amela?

[Begin relay from LA PRENSA offices in Managua] [Amela] With pleasure, Luis. In fact, thousands and thousands of textile workers, employees from companies located on the northern highway, and students from institutes close to this important street in Managua are now in front of the building where LA PRENSA, Inc. is located, to reject once more the provocative attitude that a group of CTN [Nicaraguan Workers' Confederation] activists and the newspaper's workers have been adopting since this morning. The people have protested, as we said, and their labor leaders have stated that a dangerous game is being played by those who are currently inside the LA PRENSA offices behind closed doors. The workers and people are once more demanding the closure or confiscation of this newspaper, which has repeatedly violated the revolutionary government's laws.

We repeat, workers from factories and companies located on the northern highway are now in front of LA PRENSA, demanding that the revolutionary government definitely close this newspaper, whose owners have repeatedly violated revolutionary laws. A group of LA PRENSA workers and CTN activists are inside LA PRENSA, and they have been adopting provocative attitudes against our people and the revolutionary government.

We will continue to discuss this during our program, given the situation on the northern highway. Thousands and thousands of people have been demonstrating against the newspaper's owners and CTN activists.

[Announcer] Alfonso, Alfonso Amela!

[Amela] Yes, Luis?

[Announcer] I want to ask you: How long have the CTN members been there? Likewise, are LA PRENSA's owners there? It is curious that 48 or 72 hours after the comrade president issued the Chicago Proposal -- in which he refers to the newspaper LA PRENSA with an open attitude, an attitude which advocates a dialogue, in an understanding attitude -- this provocation has arisen at the newspaper LA PRENSA. How long has this been going on, Alfonso?

[Amela] Yes, of course, Luis. We have information that some members of the Social Christian Party came at approximately 1000 and tried to hold an event right here, in front of LA PRENSA. We have information that Violeta de Chamorro, co-owner of LA PRENSA, also came. CTN activists and some of the newspaper's workers have been in front of the building since approximately 1000. They later went inside and at approximately 1300, the people's power was evident when, as we have reported, thousands and thousands of workers gathered in front of the LA PRENSA offices. In other words, the provocation has been under way since 1000 or 1100; nevertheless, at approximately at 1300 the reaction of our people -- meaning the workers, textile workers, students, and people in general from the northern highway -- was obvious. They have demanded that our revolutionary government adopt stricter measures against this type of provocation. They have also demanded the definite closure of LA PRENSA. [end relay]

[Announcer] All right, then we will remain attentive to any further information. We are concerned about what will happened because the divine mobs of the revolution have gathered there.

Demonstrator Stabbed

PA062220 Managua Domestic Service in Spanish 2033 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] We learned a few minutes ago that a regrettable and at the same time reprehensible incident has taken place. It was reported a few minutes ago that a person has been wounded as a result of a provocation by activists of the CTN and workers of the newspaper LA PRENSA.

As far as we know, an unidentified person who was inside the premises of the newspaper LA PRENSA took out a knife and stabbed one of the persons demonstrating in front of LA PRENSA to show their repudiation of these acts of provocation. We do not know how serious the wounds received by this person are. However, as we said, this is a very regrettable and reprehensible action.

The wounded person was rapidly taken to a hospital, which apparently is the Manolo Morales Hospital. We repeat: We do not know the actual seriousness of the wounds However, the fact that one of these provocateurs took out a knife and stabbed a representative of our people, who are furious over a further provocation by the CTN and LA PRENSA workers, is a hateful action that further infuriates our people.

COMMANDER CUADRA ON MILITARY ACTIVITIES

PA051336 Managua BARRICADA in Spanish 2 Aug 86 p 5

[Text] Brigadier Commander Joaquin Cuadra Lacayo, deputy defense minister of Nicaragua, has stated that the military improvement the mercenary forces will achieve in tactical terms owing to the arrival of the $100 million will not alter the course of the strategic defeat of the counterrevolution.

During an extensive explanation broadcast on SSTV [Sistema Sandinista de Television] on Friday, the chief of the EPS General Staff said that during the first half of this year major steps have been taken toward that end with the help of relentless actions by the people's troops.

The mercenary forces have been dealt harsh blows and have been kept from moving into large land areas and fulfilling their political and military plans, he said. Cuadra noted that the EPS had succeeded in hitting and pushing the forces of the so-called "Jorge Salazar" commando unit, which had tried to conduct strategic operations in Boaco and Chontales (Region 5), into militarily disadvantageous terrain. At the same time, successful operations were conducted in Military Regions 1, 4, and 7, resulting in the "systematic attrition" of the counterrevolutionaries.

Cuadra reported that from January to July 2,745 contras were killed and 300 captured during clashes. He explained that in addition to this, the contras have lost their ability to replace their men, despite their forced recruitment operations.

In this regard, he said that the contras violently kidnapped 259 people, capturing them even in refugee camps in Honduras, which is a very poor source of men fit for combat, as most people there are women, elderly, and children.

He noted: In addition to this we have the number of people who have been deserting their ranks in recent months. They are "the kidnapped people." In other words, there is still a very large gap between the number of contras killed and contras' ability to recruit people.

"The number of contras is declining. There are fewer and fewer contras, and with time they are losing ground and the possibility of fulfilling their political and military plans," Commander Cuadra stressed.

He recalled that although in 1984 and 1985 the mercenaries had maintained their capacity to replace their forces -- especially through attempts to find new people to swell their ranks in the scattered villages located in Region 5 -- the blows the EPS had inflicted in that region had an impact on the process of defeat "and they will have fewer and fewer places from which to replace their casualities."

Another element contributing to the contra's strategic defeat -- the military chief remarked -- has been that the Somozists have been unable to break the social and economic restructuring which the revolution has been implementing in the war zones. He recalled that when the contras attack a peasant settlement, for example, their objective is not solely to physically destroy its installations, but most importantly "to destroy the political project, so as to drive the people toward other zones and attack them later."

Therefore, the EPS campaign during the summer plan period has been to meet its military objectives through offensive operations, the deputy defense minister said. He added that the plan has allowed greater military control and stability in the war zones while inflicting a high casualty toll on the mercenaries.

He labelled as "major successes" the work achieved to complete the BLI [Unconventional Warfare Battalions] and the Rapid Hunter Battalions, as well as to turn permanent EPS units into brigades, improve the utilization of troops in the regions, and other organizational tasks which have raised the quality of the operations and strengthened the troops.

Commenting on the $100 milion approved by the U.S. Congress, he stressed the political nature of this matter, since apart from the war material and weaponry which the contras may receive because of this decision, the fact is that "the CIA was given a free hand to openly conduct new operations against Nicaragua."

"Not much time will pass without our facing a situation like the one we experienced in 1983 and 1984," Cuadra warned, stressing the danger that the CIA may again resort to direct terrorist actions "in a corrected, augmented, and magnified version of the military attacks perpetrated even without the knowledge of and outside the structures of the counterrevolution."

In this regard, he recalled the attacks with planes and piranha boats against the port of Corinto; the air raid with U.S. aircraft on Santa Clara, Nueva Segovia; the naval attacks against Puerto Cabezas, Bluefields, and San Juan del Sur; and placing mines and blowing up the oil pipeline at Puerto Sandino, "all of which were carried out by CIA elements."

"What looms now is not the direction of the mercenary forces only, but a direct involvement that would obviously be much stronger than in the past," said Commander Cuadra, stressing that the $100 million will not change the contras' strategic situation.

He noted that, undoubtedly, the mercenaries will get tactical benefits from the improvement in their military communications equipment and newer and more sophisticated armament which may result in increased deployment of the Somozists in Honduras and support to the groups on the northern border area, Even the possibility of limited air cover for their forces must not be ruled out.

Cuadra charged that the presence of U.S. advisers alongside the mercenaries presages a direct involvement of U.S. troops in combat even though their actions would be limited border activities.

He noted, however, that these advisers would be "a step away" from military actions to reinforce the contras deep inland. "And this involvement would be leave the Honduran Government and Army a step away from being dragged into combat actions on the border against our country."

From then on, he added, Nicaragua would be faced with an artificial conflict with Honduras, which would create the conditions "for a direct, swift, and growing involvement of U.S. forces in an invasion of our country." Although the time cannot be predicted, this process is developing through closely related events, he noted.

Commander Cuadra said that in view of this situation, in which the United States "has escalated the war with qualitative elements," what must be done is to step up the levels of the operational capacity, efficiency, and effectiveness of the EPS's actions because, he stressed, "the deepening of the strategic defeat of the counterrevolution continues to be a priority task."

"The campaign plan of the EPS during this second half of the year must include important elements to improve our capacity to strike at and annihilate the mercenary groups," he stressed, adding that all military regions must push on with their own plans for defense, mobilization, maintenance, and development of all combat units.

He noted that, in addition, Nicaragua will continue implementing all plans included in the revolution's military doctrine, building up the people's combat capacity and enforcing all measures outlined during the last few months. All levels of organization and cohesiveness of the militias, the reserve, and permanent units must be exceeded in order to "improve our people's mechanisms to confront the aggressive policy of U.S imperialism."

PLI TO PARTICIPATE IN CONSTITUTIONAL DEBATES

PA061649 Managua BARRICADA in Spanish 5 Aug 86 pp 1, 8

[Text] The Independent Liberal Party [PLI] will participate in the debates on the new constitution, which will begin in the National Assembly. In addition, this party will elect new leaders on 10 August. The decision to participate in the debates on the constitution was adopted on Sunday when the commission of delegates [comision delegataria] -- the party's second highest authority with powers in the PLI assembly to make political decisions -- approved the party's participation in the constitutional debates.

The PLI's most conservative wing had been rejecting any participation in the discussion of the new constitution, but this position was changed in the most recent meeting of the commission of delegates, which was convoked by the PLI National Directoratae. One of those who opposed the PLI participation in the debates was Virgilio Godoy, but the majority voted for an active participation in the National Assembly.

A report given to EL NUEVO DIARIO by a departmental delegate disclosed that those who oppose nonparticipation in the debates noted that the PLI had its own constitutional draft, which had to be vigorously defended in the Assembly. They also advocated a move to put aside positions of isolation and ostracism.

Another decision made by the commission of delegates was to hold a special assembly on 10 August to choose the new party leaders "from the presidency on down." At the meeting, candidates to the PLI presidency Orlando Quinonez, Eduardo Coronado Perez, and Juan Manuel Gutierrez stressed their decision to continue as candidates.

BALAGUER ON DEBTS, SUPPORT OF U.S. POLICIES

FL051535 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 2315 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Excerpts] New York, 4 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Joaquin Balaguer, president-elect of the Dominican Republic, today called usurious the interests being paid by debtor countries to the banks and demanded greater facilities for exports.

Balaguer, who next Saturday will be sworn in as president for the fifth term also said the Dominican Republic supports the Contadora Group's peaceful process for Central America but that in many aspects, if not all, it sides with the United States. [passage omitted]

When asked what kind of aid the Dominican Republic can receive from the United States, he said its sugar quota and export facilities could be increased to introduce nontraditional products to the U.S. market, which depends on agriculture. [passage omitted]

Referring to the foreign debt, he said the Latin American countries are paying usurious interest to the banks. In recent years, more than two-thirds of the debt has been liquidated. The Dominican Republic's current foreign debt is $3 billion.

With respect to Central America, he reiterated support for the Contadora Group, but affirmed that his country in many ways sides with U.S. policy, since it is necessary to seek an effective formula which will lead the region toward security. He also noted that functional and effective democracy is necessary in Nicaragua, Central America, and Latin America. [passage omitted]

PINDLING PRAISED FOR ROLE AT COMMONWEALTH SUMMIT

FL062257 Bridgetown CANA in English 1904 6 Aug 86

[By Bertram Niles]

[Text] London, Aug 6, CANA -- The just-ended Commonwealth mini-summit here had at least one beneficiary -- its chairman, Prime Minister Sir Lynden Pindling of the Bahamas.

The meeting provided Pindling with another splendid opportunity to continue to improve his image after a series of drug-related scandals in the chain of islands rules by his Progressive Liberal Party (PLP).

The host country normally chairs Commonwealth meetings, but as the mini-summit was a carry-over from last October's full conference in Nassau, he held the chair. On this occasion he was spared too many awkward questions about drugs in the Bahamas and though coming from a small country with few links to South Africa, emerged with some credit. He conducted the two formal conference briefings with considerable aplomb in keeping with his image of a crafty political veteran. Two prestigious British newspapers, THE OBSERVER and THE GUARDIAN, on consecutive days printed the wrong picture (former Barbados Prime Minister Bernard St John) above his name. But inside Marlborough House where the seven Commonwealth leaders pondered sanctions on South Africa, Pindling performed his limited role very, very well, sources who were at the meeting said.

He felt it was his duty to obtain as much agreement as possible. He kept the meeting flowing and clarified points when necessary, said the sources. One such clarification occurred when there was a clash between Prime Ministers Robert Mugabe of Zimbabwe and Margaret Thatcher of Britain. Mugabe said the Organisation of African Unity was now ready to back the armed struggle in South Africa. Thatcher, apparently thinking that the conference was being asked to back this stand, shot back that she had not expected such things would be discussed. Violence was only permissable in self-defence, she said.

Pindling had intervened to say that Mugabe was not asking for Commonwealth backing. In any case, Mugabe reportedly reminded Thatcher: We have all supported Britain in the use of violence in the past. Despite the harsh pre- and post-summit words, the debate during the meeting was businesslike and lacking in vitriol in the true Commonwealth tradition, according to the sources. In one notable exchange, which must have taken even Thatcher aback as she argued her opposition against sanctions, Australia's Prime Minister Bob Hawke is reported to have told her: If it is a question of the unity of the Commonwealth and its credibility, then we would be more concerned with the latter.

That proved the crunch statement at the summit and guided the decision of the six leaders who agreed to sweeping sanctions to push South Africa toward dismantling apartheid, leaving Thatcher isolated. It was a rare split that eschewed the Commonwealth's known capacity for compromise.

Pindling would have hoped for full agreement as Britain is vital to any economic pressure against South Africa with its extensive commercial interests there. But as Pindling seemed to acknowledge at the end of the summit, he had also presided over a conference that saw the end of an era. In effect the conference unhesitatingly said: No longer was Britain's word the Commonwealths word.

Pindling accused Britain of abandoning its leadership of the Commonwealth and said its standing in the grouping with its 48 ex-colonies would never be the same again.

I think a new leadership is emerging, he said, a point echoed by India's Prime Minister Rajiv Ghandi.

Pindling and five pro-sanctions leaders felt that the Commonwealth had to take the lead on South Africa and had to take a stand now. In the absence of any other role, the Commonwealth has devoted many of its efforts to the fight against apartheid and wanted to take that fight further. Its leaders have formulated voluntary agreements banning sporting links with South Africa and have routinely issued joint declarations on racism and racial prejudice. The Commonwealth summit debate aside, Pindling has returned to the Bahamas to continue his preparations for a general election which he confidently expects will extend his role which began in 1967.

The extensive drug problem in the Bahamas continues to trouble his government though Pindling was last year cleared by a commission of enquiry of allegations that he accepted money from drug dealers. In a report this week, THE TIMES of London estimated that cocaine was contributing at least 10 per cent to the Bahamian gross national product.

But thanks to South Africa (a reference to the summit), his public relations, and an inept opposition, Pindling is restoring his reputation, THE TIMES said.

This conference would undoubtedly have helped him on the way and would rank highly among his list of achievements in a year in which he celebrates 30 years as a member of the country's parliament.

JAMAICA

MANLEY PREDICTS TAX INCREASES FOR ELECTION COSTS

FL070119 Bridgetown CANA in English 0051 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Excerpt] Kingston, Jamaica, Aug 6, CANA -- Leader of Jamaica's main opposition political party, Michael Manley, has predicted new taxes here to pay for heavy spending by the Edward Seaga government in the run up to last week's municipal elections here.
Manley's Peoples National Party (PNP) swept the elections, gaining an estimated 57 per cent of the popular votes and at least 11 of the 13 municipal authorities.

Manley in a statement today, said that in its victory bid the government had embarked on extravagant pre-election expenditure including the utterly vulgar rush to repair roads which came to a full stop on the eve of the (July 29) election.

(The spending) will now have to be paid for by Jamaicans with new taxes which will now be introduced...Manley declared.

Seaga's J5 billion dollar (1 JCA doll; 18 cents U.S.) budget in May was tax free, the government having earlier in the year announced a number of revenue raising measures to close gaps and meet projections for 1986/87.

According to Manley, however, the current budget was a fantasy. He pointed that in the last fiscal year loan inflows were projected at J1.5 billion dollars, but only J500 million dollars came.

In his first major broadside against the government since the poll, Manley said that this year the situation would be worse. The government was quarreling with the International Monetary Fund (IMF), the World Bank, and the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), the country's major benefactors, but whose proposals for continued austerity Prime Minister Seaga rejected.

It is clear that this problem will mean massive adjustments to the budget, including another massive devaluation, a new tax on motor vehicles, and a resumption of the issuing of property tax notices which were shelved during the election campaign, he said. [passage omitted]

OPPOSITION LEADER PRESUMED KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

FL070013 Bridgetown CANA in English 2354 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Kingstown, St Vincent, Aug 6, CANA — Hudson Kemuel Tannis, presumed dead with 12 others on LIAT's ill-fated flight 319, was setting the stage for a major comeback of his opposition St Vincent and the Grenadines Labour Party (SVLP), which lost the government two years ago.

In what was probably his last major press interview, given here nearly two months ago to the CARIBBEAN NEWS AGENCY (CANA), the 58-year-old British-trained lawyer shrugged off the SVLP 1984 election drubbing as nothing more than a temporary setback.

In fact, with an apparent decline in the popularity of the Prime Minister James Mitchell's New Democratic Party (NDP) government, Tannis felt the turn-around in the SVLP's political fortunes had already begun. He said disgruntled Vincentians were looking once again to labour. [passage omitted]

As part of efforts to get the SVLP back on firm footing, he was preparing to chair a major party conference this month to adopt a new constitution, containing guidelines for strengthening the SVLP's organisational base.

With Tannis still unaccounted for, parliamentary opposition leader Vincent Beache, who was deputy political leader, has now effectively taken charge of the labour party pending the election of officers at the forthcoming convention.

Party sources here say they expect Beache to come under a strong challenge for the leadership position when the party meets -- a situation less likely had Tannis been around.

Tannis, his wife Christine, and eight-year-old son were returning home from St Lucia aboard the LIAT flight which disappeared shortly after the pilot had made two abortive attempts to land in a rain storm at Arnos Vale airport, a stones throw from where he lived. [passage ommitted]

TRINIDAD-TOBAGO

NAR CLAIMS UNITY, LOOKS TO FEBRUARY ELECTIONS

FL062314 Bridgetown CANA in English 1833 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Port of Spain, Trinidad, Aug 6, CANA -- Trinidad and Tobago parliamentary opposition leader, Basdeo Panday, has told the government that delaying general elections will not help it win another five-year term.

General elections are constitutionally due by next February. Had the government called an early election, said Panday, it would have caught the then-merging opposition with its pants down.

But the opposition had grown stronger and Prime Minister George Chambers was now making a serious mistake in delaying general elections hoping the National Alliance for Reconstruction (NAR) would disintegrate, Panday told NAR members last weekend. Panday is deputy political leader of the alliance, which comprises four parties.

Chambers and other Peoples' National Movement (PNM) members have repeatedly said the lust for power was all that was holding the alliance leadership together and if the opposition wins the next general election there would be a power struggle.

As far as the leadership is concerned, there is no way in this world the National Alliance for Reconstruction will divide, Panday said.

Panday also commented on Chambers claim that the alliance wanted to wrest political power from a certain section of society.

He was absolutely right except he didn't say which section of the community, he said.

He didn't say that the section of the community was the oligarchic clique in the PNM.

BRUNSWIJK SUSPECTED IN REBEL ACTIVITY, DEATH

PM061153 Rotterdam NRC HANDELSBLAD in Dutch 2 Aug 86 p 1

[Text] Paramaribo, 2 Aug -- A 3-year-old child was killed in a shootout yesterday in the black-populated bush village of Morakondre between the Surinamese army and the group led by dissident former officer Ronnie Brunswijk. Some 20 members of the group were captured; the rest fled into the forest, Surinamese television has reported.

The names of those arrested, who wereheavily armed, have not been made public. It is assumed that Brunswijk is not among them.

The Surinamese Army began a hunt for Brunswijk's group after it attacked two military posts in Stolkertsijver and Albina, on the border with French Guiana. In the attacks, 12 soldiers were taken hostage.

Surinamese Ministry of Popular Mobilization Director Laurens Neede told the television station that the military police interrogation of those arrested could lead to the capture of Brunswijk and his men and the release of the hostages. Articles of clothing belonging to the hostages have been found.

According to well-informed sources in Paramaribo, Juan Brinkmann was arrested last week. He is said to be an Argentine with a Venezuelan passport and, according to Minister [as published] Neede, was the contract man between Brunswijk and the 14 U.S. mercenaries arrested in the United States Monday [28 July]. They were planning to stage a coup against the Bouterse regime and have said they were hired by the Ansus Foundation in Amsterdam. The foundation is headed by George Baker; he has declared that he knows nothing of these plans.

According to Neede, maps and other important information belonging to Brunswijk have been found. The maps indicated targets which Brunswijk had intended to attack in the Marowijne-Commewijne area in eastern Suriname, noted Neede, a former military attache in The Hague. He spoke of a "very sophisticated and well-prepared action" by Brunswijk and the mercenaries. According to Neede their plans were not carried out because Brunswijk failed to take over the barracks in Albina.

Neede also said that Suriname's neighbors -- Guyana, French Guiana, and Brazil -- have made concrete promises that they will prevent their territory from being used as a base for counterrevolutionary activities against the Surinamese Government. Neede said that he also hopes that the promises made by the Netherlands will be seen in its actions. The Foreign Ministry in The Hague stated twice last week that the Netherlands will observe international law and will not allow Netherlands territory to be used in the preparation of actions which have the objective of toppling the government of another state by force. As a result of allegations of Netherlands involvement in such actions, the Netherlands ambassador in Paramaribo had been summoned to meet with the Surinamese foreign minister.

Soldier Dies in Rebel Search

[Text] Paramaribo, 5 Aug (AFP) -- It was reported today in Paramaribo that an operation to pursue the Surinamese rebel group headed by Ronny Brunswijk resulted in the death by drowning of Reginald Koulen 28, a soldier in the forces headed by Commander Desi Bouterse.

On 21 July Brunswijk's followers attacked two military posts in the western part of the country, where they palnned to establish a liberated zone, according to a plan that has been disclosed by the government. They also kidnapped 12 soldiers.

Regular forces of this former Netherlands colony in South America pursued the rebels through the Marowijne district, in western Suriname, an area on the border with French Guiana. The newspaper DE WARE TIJD reported that Koulen drowned last Saturday when he was crossing a river in a canoe that capsized.

About 20 persons have been arrested in Marowijne for their alleged involvement with the gang headed by Brunswijk, Bouterse's former bodyguard.

Churches on Recent Violence

FL062116 Paramaribo International Service in English 1748 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] The Committee of Christian Churches in Suriname has issued a press release in which they said the violent development in eastern Suriname were painful. The release said that the fact that the people ahve chosen for a path of unity made these developments more painful. The release came in the wake of the actions of the Brunswijk group during which 12 [word indistinct] were kidnapped.

Until now, one dead has been reported, that is of a small child who was killed in a shootout between an Army patrol and members of the Brunswijk group.

The clergymen have called on both parties to treat their captives humanly.

CHRISTIAN DEMOCRATS END MEETING IN MONTEVIDEO

PY051921 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish 2102 GMT 3 Aug 86

[Text] Montevideo, 3 Aug (TELAM-ANSA) -- The first congress of the South American Christian Democratic parties at the end of the deliberations in this city expressed the will to act in a more coordinated way to support the democratization of Chile and Paraguay. It also applauded Argentina and Brazil for excluding these dictatorial governments from their integration process. The congress called attention to the dangers that surround the new democracies of the region and strongly criticized terrorism, which destabilizes democratic regimes and strengthens the coupist sectors of society.

Delegates from the Christian Democratic Organization of America (ODCA), whose headquarters is in Venezuela, and delegates from the Christian Democratic parties of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay attended the 3-day meeting held in the Park Hotel of this city. ODCA members have said that the group decided to meet three times a year. The next meeting will be held in September in Santiago.

The congress also denounced the unpayable foreign debt, the recessive policies of the IMF, the intervention of powers from outside the area, senseless terrorism, drug trafficking, and the unequal social structures as dangers threatening the newly recovered democracies. The participants in the congress also expressed their support for the Paraguayan National Accord and the Chilean Accord that are proposing a peaceful transit to democracy in their respective countries.

On the subject of the Central American conflict, the congress supported the Contadora Group and stressed its conviction that Latin American problems should be solved by Latin Americans. Regarding the collective program, it was decided to intensify the common efforts of the Christian Democratic Parties of the Latin American Southern Cone to strengthen the Christian Democratic presence in the region.

Shortly before the end of the meeting, the congress approved a statement on the recent integration agreement signed between Argentina and Brazil which is considered to be a historic event of the greatest importance. The statement added that, referring to Chile and Paraguay, for the first time the process of regional economic cooperation is being expressly conditioned to the existence of democratic governments.

In conclusion, it is said that a large region of almost 12 million sq km has been created for economic cooperation and integration, in which over 160 million people of this continent are participating.

ALFONSIN SCORES U.S. POLICY IN C.A., GRAIN DEAL

PY072352 Buenos Aires DYN in Spanish 2217 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 7 Aug (DYN) -- President Raul Alfonsin has accused the United States of violating "the basic principles of international law" beause of its intervention in Central America and warned that U.S. strategy seeks to radicalize positions to prevent a pluralistic democracy in Nicaragua. Basing his opinion on "military evaluations," the Argentine chief of state believes that "there is going to be a certain type of terrorism in Nicaragua that is going to be the expression of rightist terrorism."

Alfonsin made these statements in Mexico during an interview granted to journalists of Mexican and Spanish television. The transcript was disseminated here tonight by Government House. These statements by the president against Ronald Reagan's administration are the strongest Alfonsin has made against that administration since he became president. They were made less than 1 week after it was learned that the U.S. Government was going to subsidize its sale of grain to the Soviet Union, which up to the present time had been Argentina's main client.

Alfonsin also gave the United States a tongue-lashing because of its "unfair competition" in foreign trade, and he indicated that it is "already a fact" that the payment of interest on Argentina's foreign debt has been limited, "because we are not going to sacrifice the possibilities of growth, nor are we going to pay the debt through the hunger of our people."

When one of the journalists asked whther the difficulties in seeking a peaceful solution in Central America could come from the "radicalization of the Sandinists," Alfonsin answered: "In this case I believe we are making a tremendous mistake. If a pluralistic democracy is what is being sought for Nicaragua, then the activities that are being carried out by the United States are heading in the wrong direction," the chief of state said before maintaining: " I believe that to a certain extent radicalization is being sought," and "it seems that the work that is being carried out is going fully against the proclaimed objective."

When he was asked about the possibility of a U.S. invasion of Nicaragua, the Argentine president said that "as a result of the activities that are currently being carried out this can even be presupposed, and the military evaluation of the situation indicates that there is going to be a type of terrorism in Nicaragua that will be the expression of rightist terrorism." He then said that "this type of action is really surprising."

Alfonsin himself asked: "What is going to happen?" and said: "There will be an advance in what I call the Lebanonization of Latin America; we are going to be increasingly immersed in the East-West conflict, and we are going to become divided for reasons that are not ours.

"I definitely believe," Alfonsin added, "that continental security is going to be undermined, and the same type of task will also be carried out, even against the security of the United States."

Regarding the decision of the U.S. Congress to approve a $100-million loan to Nicaraguan contras, Alfonsin stressed that "the United States is not only violating the basic principles of international law, it has also, for the time being, removed Latin American democracies from the scene, and I would even say from the world scene."

The chief of state proposed that a solution be sought in support of political pluralism in Nicaragua and "considering as our own the economic and social problems" of that country.

Finally, Alfonsin deplored the "unfair competition" of the United States in the trade of agricultural products and demanded a "substantial reduction" on the interest of the foreign debt.

PCA Leader's Condemnation

PY072159 Buenos Aires NOTICIAS ARGENTINAS in Spanish 1411 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 7 Aug (NA) -- Athos Fava, the secretary general of the Argentine Communist Party [PCA], today demanded that the government declare a "moratorium on the foreign debt" in view of the decision of the U.S. Government to subsidize its grain exports and he also demanded that the "Austral Plan imposed by the IMF be abandoned."

In a statement released today, Fava said that "facts like the U.S. subsidy on grain exports and the July inflation rate demonstrate the failure of the Austral Plan. They are the reasons we are demanding a moratorium on the foreign debt."

The communist leader then stated that "the demands of several Radical leaders who say that the U.S. aggression must be answered, even with the suspension of the service payments on the foreign debt, must not be considered mere verbiage.

"The inflation rate indicates the seriousness of the economic crisis, with its costs that are a burden on salaries," he added.

Finally, Fava said that "if the economy is to be reactivated and if the standard of living of the poorer classes is to be improved, then the only path to follow is the suspension of payments on the foreign debt and the abandonment of the Austral Plan that was imposed by the IMF."

Subsidy 'Shameless Maneuver'

PY072033 Buenos Aires Domestic Service in Spanish 1600 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] In the opinion of the Argentine Communist Party, the U.S. subsidy on grain exports is a shameless maneuver. Communist leader Athos Fava said that this decision aims at reducing the Argentine participation in several international markets and is an attempt by the United States and the EEC to corner the world wheat market.

GOVERNMENT SAYS NO TO LEADING NONALIGNED MOVEMENT

PY070140 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0010 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 5 Aug (EFE) -- A high-ranking Argentine Foreign Ministry source today told EFE that Argentina "does not aspire to preside over" the Movement of Non-Nonaligned Countries.

The same source added that this decision "will be reported by President Raul Alfonsin to Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi," whose country now heads the movement. The two leaders will meet during the talks of the "Group of Six" that will take place in Ixtapa (Mexico).

At this meeting, Alfonsin and Gandhi will study the Argentine president's participation in a meeting that will take place in Zimbabwe.

The source added that the Argentine presence at the Zimbabwe meeting "is a decision that President Alfonsin will make personally." Argentine diplomatic circles are speculating that Yugoslavia will assume the presidency of the movement, while the nominations of Indonesia and Nicaragua -- countries that have asked to hold that post, but have pending international conflicts -- have been ruled out.

Alfonsin left for Mexico today to attend a meeting of the "Group of Six," which will formally begin tomorrow and will be attended by Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid, the heads of government of Greece, Andres Papandreou: Sweden, Ingvar Carlsson; and India, Rajiv Ghandi; and former Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere.

JUDGE INDICTS URUGUAYAN ARMY, POLICE OFFICERS

PY070357 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish 2305 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 5 Aug (TELAM) -- The Center for Legal and Social Studies (CELS) today reported here that Judge Nestor Blondi has indicted three Uruguayan Army officers and a Uruguayan police intelligence officer in the case involving the unlawful detention of Uruguayan journalist Enrique Rodriguez Larreta in 1976.

A press communique bearing the signature of CELS President Emilio Mignone names the people involved as Uruguayan Army officers Jose Nino Gavazzo, Manuel Cordero, and Jorge Silveira and Uruguayan Police Intelligence Inspector Hugo Campos Hermida. The communique adds that the Argentine judge also ordered that they testify. Therefore, an arrest warrant must be issued by the Argentine Federal Police, the CELS states.

The communique says that the judge decided to locate the four other high-ranking Uruguayan military men, namely General Amauri Prantl (who has reportedly died), and then Army Majors Ernesto Rama, Ricardo Emdina, and Enrique Martinez and to subpoena them and bring them to trial. To this end, on 31 July 1986 the appropriate court summons were issued to Federal Police Chief Juan Angel Pirker, the communique adds.

These measures were adopted as part of the investigations being conducted into the persons responsible for a clandestine detention center known as Automotores Orletti which, during the past military dictatorship, was located at 3519 Venancio Flores Street in Buenos Aires.

COST OF LIVING INDEX RISES BY 6.8 PERCENT

[Text] (NA-DYN) -- The cost of living rose 6.8 percent last month, the National Institute for Statistics and Censuses (INDEC) announced yesterday, with wholesale prices rising 5.1 percent and the cost of construction increasing 9.6 percent.

Inflation is now running at 33.3 percent so far this year, and 50.9 percent over the last 12 months. The equivalent figures for the wholesale sector are 18.8 percent and 24.4 percent, respectively, while construction has risen 33.3 percent over the last 12 months.

Last month's inflation was the highest in the life of the Austral Plan and thus caused the figure over the last 12 months to rise for the first time in a year since it exceeded the 6.2 percent registered in July, 1985. The June-to-June figure was 50.1 percent.

The unexpectedly high figures caused Economy Ministry officials, including Minister Juan Sourrouille, to meet hurriedly yesterday although Domestic Trade Secretary Ricardo Mazzorin insisted that there would be no new price freeze -- on the contrary, a new list of maximum prices would be announced tomorrow, he said.

Mazzorin blamed last month's inflation on soaring meat prices, without which the figures would have been 5.6 percent, he said. He also blamed excessive demand, a position anticipated by senior economy ministry official Adolfo Canitrot in Rosario earlier in the day.

Canitrot, who said the task of stemming inflation was "very difficult," admitted to journalists that he had been avoiding it for some time because "political factors" made it impossible for him to reveal how the government planned to tackle the latest wave of inflation.

Accentuating price trends in recent weeks have given rise to speculation that the government plans to tighten up both monetary policies and price controls, as well as stepping up chicken and pork imports. A survey by Miguel Angel Nudelman Bass pollsters last week, suggested inflation would reach a monthly 12-15 percent if all controls were lifted.

The July increase was remarkably even across-the-board; only recreation and leisure (13.5 percent), miscellaneous goods and services (8.8 percent) and housing, fuel and power (eight percent) were above average, while food and beverages weighed in at 6.1 percent.

Rents will also go up by 6.8 percent, INDEC announced. It also proceeded to raise all figures back to March, according to recent wage hikes, which are combined with price increases to determine the weighted index governing rent. March rents will thus increase 8.1 percent; April, 8.7 percent; May, 5.4 percent; and June, 3.4 percent.

Public Works Minister Pedro Trucco yesterday denied that any utility hikes were in the offing. Before leaving for Montevideo to analyze the progress of various bilateral agreements signed at Colonia last year. Trucco said the rising trend of utility hikes would begin to dip in the last quarter of the year and reported progress in the denationalization of Austral airline despite "administrative bureaucracy."

The minister also said that he had no objections to a parliamentary appearance to explain his role in last June's month-long strike by Aerolineas Argentinas pilots, as requested by two Peronist deputies on Tuesday.

SENATE CONSIDERS NUCLEAR ENERGY USE BILL

[By NOTICIAS ARGENTINAS special correspondent]

[Text] Ixtapa, Mexico, 6 Aug (NA) -- Senate Defense Committee President Antonio Berhongaray today reported here that he has submitted a bill to the Senate. This bill calls for prison terms of 1 to 6 years and a special disqualification from holding public posts for twice that period for state employees who develop nuclear programs for military use.

Berhongaray, who is a member of the entourage accompanying President Alfonsin on his tour of Colombia and Mexico, has stated that it is Alfonsin's wish that this bill be approved before the beginning of the UN assembly to ratify Argentina's peaceful intentions.

The bill's preamble recalls Argentina's reasons for not ratifying the Tlatelolco Treaty or signing the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty. The bill also provides that any official who reveals confidential information on the Argentine nuclear program, referring fundamentally to the uranium enrichment process mastered by our country in 1983, will be imprisoned for a period of 1 to 6 years.

The bill, drawn up in the light of the second summit meeting of the "Group of Six," stresses that all programs "aimed at the creation of any device that may release uncontrolled nuclear energy," will be considered as militarily-oriented.

The third article of the bill points out that "any state official who, on behalf of Argentina, authorizes the signing of bilateral or multilateral agreements for the transfer of material, equipment, installations, or nuclear technology to foreign governments, companies, or private individuals, will be sentenced to prison terms ranging from 6 months to 2 years and will be disqualified from holding public office for twice that period, if that trnasfer does not take into consideration the safeguards of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), or of any other international safeguards that are in effect."

Finally, the Argentine senator's bill establishes that "any state employee who through indiscretion or negligence, makes known the information mentioned in the previous article, which he or she possesses by virtue of his or her job or position, will be sentenced to prison terms ranging from 1 month to 1 year and disqualified from holding public positions for twice that period."

FEDERAL POLICE TAKE CHARGE OF SANTA FE PROVINCE

PY070025 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish 1316 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Santa Fe, 6 Aug (TELAM) -- The federal border police today took charge of security throughout the Santa Fe Province following the general confinement to barracks of the provincial police, whose members are demanding a salary increase that would raise their basic salaries to between 250 and 300 australes.

The Santa Fe Government has urged the striking personnel to give up what it called their insubordinate position and warned them that it will not consider their demands so long as they continue their pressures and coercive measures.

In a communique released this morning, the Santa Fe Government stated that the strike is having a destabilizing effect because the Santa Fe police are the best paid police in the country; they are even better paid than the federal police.

The text of the communique, which is signed by Provincial Interior Minister Eduardo Cevallo, warns that the courts have been instructed to classify the crime as insubordination. This crime was committed by personnel of the provincial police on 4 August when they gathered at the local headquarters.

Provincial government sources have stated that a few days before the conflict the police had rejected an increase that would have made an agent's take-home salary 215 australes, maintaining their demand for a minimum of between 250 and 300 australes.

ROK DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER ENDS VISIT

PY072228 La Paz EL DIARIO in Spanish 30 Jul 86 p 1

[Excerpts] President Victor Paz Estenssoro was invited to visit South Korea for the purpose of increasing bilateral relations, South Korean Deputy Prime Minister Kim Man-che said.

Yesterday in Government House, the chief of state received the South Korean representative who praised the new Bolivian economic policy and the strengthening of the democratic system. [passage omitted]

"The South Korean people are interested in participating in Bolivian reconstruction," Kim said, adding that his government has proposed some concrete plans that will be analyzed by specific teams. [passage omitted]

Kim said that his country wishes to carry out an exchange between private businessmen of the two countries with the purpose of promoting interest among Korean and Bolivian investors so as to create more job sources and develop other activities that will benefit the two countries. [passage omitted]

The South Korean official and his entourage visited various places and spoke with national government members expressing the desire to find other areas of development between the two countries.

According to his statements, Kim's visit was positive because he was able to learn about Bolivia. He will recommend that his government cooperate further with our country considering it is undergoing a recovery stage.

Today Kim will meet with several members of the legistlative branch, with whom he will exchange impressions about the democratic system and the need to preserve it despite social and political difficulties.

Kim and his delegation will leave the country this evening. Foreign Minister Guillermo Bedregal Gutierrez will accompany the deputy prime minister to El Alto Airport.

PCB WANTS 'DEMILITARIZATION' OF EXECUTIVE BRANCH

PY071448 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0255 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Salvador, 6 Aug (EFE) -- The Brazilian Communist Party (PCB) will demand the "demilitarization" of the executive branch of President Jose Sarney's government, which is made up of six military ministers. The demand is part of the PCB's proposal to participate in the National Constituent Assembly for the creation of a single Defense Ministry that would group all six military ministries.

Haroldo Pinto, PCB leader in the Brazilian Congress who participated in President Sarney's delegation that visited Argentina last week, said that he was "impressed with the demilitarization process carried out in the government of President Raul Alfonsin."

The structure of the Brazilian executive branch is made up of six military ministers: those of the Army, Air Force, Navy, National Intelligence Service, military household of the Presidency, and the Armed Forces joint staff.

On 15 November Brazilians will elect a national constituent assembly to study and approve a new constitution in keeping with the current constitutional process that began on 15 March 1985, after 21 years of military regimes.

NUCLEAR COOPERATION WITH FRG TO CONTINUE

PY072049 Brasilia Radio Nacional da Amazonia Network in Portuguese 1000 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Brazil will continue its cooperation agreement with the FRG for the peaceful use of nuclear energy. This suggestion was made in a report on the Brazilian nuclear program that was drawn up by the National Security Council and the Mines and Energy Ministry.

The document likewise forsees an increase in cooperation between Brazil and Argentina, and the construction of a new nuclear plant before 1989. It also envisages the mastering of the full nuclear fuel cycle and the completion of the works of the Angra I and II nuclear plants.

CUBA TO BUY $10 MILLION IN AGRICULTURE EQUIPMENT

[Text] Brasilia, 7 Aug (EFE) -- It was announced today in Brasilia that Brazil will sell to Cuba agricultural equipment valued at $10 million in the first large scale trade agreement since the two countries renewed diplomatic relations on 25 June. Achilles de Resendo Lobo, trade director of the private bank [Mercantile and Industrial Bank of Parana S.A.] has reported that negotiations were concluded last week and that the form of payment is the only matter still pending.

The announcement was made in Quito, Eucador, where Resendo Lobo met with Ecuadoran businessmen to discuss the visit of Brazilian Foreign Minister Abrew Sodre to Ecuador. Rosendo Lobo and Luiz Carlos Berzoini, area manager for manufactured products of the same group, today traveled to Lima, from where they will travel to Havana to iron out the form of payment. Resendo Lobo also stated that depending on the Cuban proposal regarding the form of payment, Brazil could obtain financing through the international banking system or through the sale of sugar to third countries.

U.S. SOUTHERN ZONE COMMANDER VISITS COUNTRY

PY071223 Santiago Domestic Service in Spanish 2300 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] General John Galvin, commander of the U.S. Southern Command, today started his official activities in Santiago. After meeting with Defense Minister Carvajal, he met with the Chief of State General Pinochet for more than 35 minutes. General Galvin is visiting the country in the company of several high-ranking officers and members of the U.S. Embassy in Santiago.

As he came out of his meeting with the president, General Galvin excused himself from answering questions from reporters, saying he will do so at the time of his departure on 8 August.

[Begin Galvin recording] As I told you before, when I depart from the country on Friday I will hold a news conference. At this time I just want to say that I had a talk with the president and that I told him that I was in Chile to get to know the Armed Forces better, considering the importance of maintaining good relations between the United States and the Republic of Chile. As far as I am concerned, I am interested in military links between the two countries. [end recording]

Gen Galvin then courteously said goodbye to journalists and left La Moneda Palace along with those who accompanied him.

TORCHED GIRL TAKES TURN FOR THE WORSE

PY071200 Paris AFP in Spanish 0359 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Santiago, 6 Aug (AFP) -- According to the doctors who are treating Chilean student Carmen Gloria Quintana, who according to witnesses was torched by a military patrol during a demonstration staged by the opposition, the patient took a turn for the worse tonight.

Carmen Gloria is now fighting for her life, said a relative at the Hospital del Trabajador, where the young girl is being treated for burns that cover 62 percent of her body. According to the doctors, the 19-year-old university student recently developed pneumonia, which prompted an urgent medical council. [passage omitted]

Carmen Gloria Quintana had been improving slightly over the last few days, but her relatives reported tonight her life is in danger.

DEMONSTRATIONS OVER STUDENT'S DEATH; 32 ARRESTED

PY080259 Paris AFP in Spanish 2325 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, 7 Aug (AFP) -- Police sources have reported that at least 32 demonstrators were detained today in Santiago during incidents that broke out after the death of student leader Mario Martinez, whose body was found on 6 August on a lonely beach.

The largest disturbances occurred in the neighborhood of the University of Santiago, when hundreds of youths marched in a column through the streets after attending a mass offered for the student leader, who attended that university.

Uniformed Carabineros intercepted the column of demonstrators. Twenty-five people were arrested for provoking street disturbances, according to the report. Incidents also occured in the neighborhood of the Engineering College, where Carabineros detained seven students.

Mario Martinez, who was a member of the opposition Christian Democratic Party (PDC), was the secretary of the Student Federation of the University of Santiago and treasurer of the Confech (Students Confederation of Chile).

Between 1985 and 1986 he was detained on five occasions, and 2 months ago he submitted an injunction to the courts when he felt that his personal security was being threatened, according to PDC sources. The causes of his strange death have not yet been established, but the authorities have ordered an immediate investigation.

Court Proceedings Begin

[Relay from Cartagena]

[Excerpt] Several court proceedings have begun at the San Antonio courts to clarify the incidents that led to the death of student leader Mario Martinez Rodriguez, whose body was found on a Santo Domingo beach. The youth's parents arrived here last night to identify the body. At the local morgue Martinez's father said that there were some injuries on the neck and head of the body.

Today several student leaders arrived here along with lawyer Andres Aylwin, who has initiated the appropriate court proceedings. [passage omitted]

Dinacos Director's Remarks

PY080047 Santiago Radio Chilena in Spanish 1700 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Report from Government House by Eliana Henriquez]

[Text] Dinacos [Government Social Communications Agency] Director Marcelo Benegas today said that the death of university student leader Mario Martinez Rodrigriguez being investigated by the courts, which are the only entities that can legally evaluate the facts. The Dinacos director said that everything else is pure biased political speculation and an offense to the truth.

Benegas read a communique which refers to the statement made yesterday by Andres Palma, president of the Christian Democratic Youth, who said that he is not certain about the events that led to the disappearance and death of student leader Martinez Rodriguez.

[Begin recording, in progress] ...but later and without giving any details, he says that Martinez Rodriguez was killed. He speculates that it could have been an accidental death, thus contradicting what he has previously said.

Later he says that he is certain that Chilean courts are incapable of offering justice and that today there is no institution that could convince him that Martinez Rodriguez died an accidental death.

This statement, which is incomprehensible to any reasonable person, is only a prejudiced political statement which forms part of a recent anarchic and perverse campaign that is being conducted to undermine the national institution. [end recording]

The government spokesman said that this campaign is being conducted for propaganda purposes, mainly abroad, and to support the opposition's political position. He added that the real situation is quite different and the courts are the only entities that can evaluate the facts in keeping with the laws.

After reading the communique, the Dinacos director declined to answer questions on the issue.

FPMR LEADER CLAIMS ARMY INFILTRATED

PY071622 Madrid EFE in Spanish 1519 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, 7 Aug (EFE) -- A hooded man, claiming to be an 18-year veteran of the military and a leader of Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front [FPMR] units within the Chilean Army, today said that "it would be an honor to have the opportunity to kill Pinochet." The man, who was wearing a military uniform and a hood over his head, made these remarks during a clandestine press conference granted to foreign correspondents to Chile. Two soldiers who had deserted were also introduced to the reporters.

The soldiers reported that they had deserted a few days ago to join FPMR fighting units "because we are tired of being used to repress our people, the Chileans." Moreover, they stated that they were deserting for security reasons and that one of them, Manuel Vladimir Olivares Morales, 21, of Regiment No 1 "BUIN" has been acting for the FPMR within the Army for 1 year.

The other, Miguel Angel Melendez Baez, a recruit who was sent to the San Bernardo Infantry School only 4 months ago, said he deserted because he feared receiving an order to fire during the repression of the demonstrations. "Had I disobeyed those orders, I would have been punished or killed," the soldier stated.

The case of the two youths burned on 2 July by a military patrol, according to eyewitness reports, "confirmed my decision to desert," Miguel Angel Melendez added. The two youths, who were wearing uniforms and carrying Chilean Army weapons, identified themselves to the foreign correspondents with their respective military identification cards. Their weapons were described as a Brazilian SIG rifle and a U.S.-made M-16 rifle.

The hooded man identified himself as chief of the unit that the FPMR has "in almost all Santiago regiments," stating that he had his face covered because he had to return to his barracks and that his "nom de guerre" is Luis Gonzalez. The hooded man said that "there are many of us in the Army," although he did not give figures. He added that "we have reached the conclusion that the solution is for General Augusto Pinochet to leave once and for all, and we hope that one of us will have the honor of freeing Chile from the dictator."

When asked "Do you mean an attack on Pinochet?," the hooded man replied: "That is exactly what I mean. We want to warn him that it would be an honor for one of us in the Army to eliminate him." He added: "We have enough power to tell Pinochet and the High Command that they cannot rest. One of us might finish Pinochet at any time."

The hooded man stated: "The institution they have discredited for all these years is above Pinochet and the High Command. They topped it all by torching the youths. We have no doubt that a patrol was involved."

Nevertheless, he said that the main goal of the FPMR military units he is leading is to work within the Army, encourage desertions, "and supply weapons to the FPMR patriotic forces." The man added: "We, the military men, are men-at-arms, not good with words. We ultimately believe that the solution to the Chilean problems, finishing Pinochet, will involve the military."

"However," Luis Gonzalez said, "we do not want a war. Therefore, the more progress we attain within the Army, the stronger we will become."

"We believe that from the FPMR we can really serve our country and not repress Chileans and make them suffer," he added.

Deserter Manuel Vladimir Olivares Morales said he was a member of an Antisubversive Force [Unidad de Fuerza Antisubversiva] where he said he was trained as a sharpshooter "to shoot important people in demonstrations or to shoot protest leaders, which is the same thing." The young soldier said that despite having been trained for this purpose, he never received orders in his specialty.

Both deserters said that they had participated, with their faces painted, in raids on workers' slums in the last few months. In addition to the two deserters and the hooded officer, there were also two members of the FPMR National Directorate, who were also hooded. They called themselves Commanders Jose Miguel and Daniel. A young guerrilla girl with an Uzi submachinegun was also present.

The FPMR commanders told the foreign correspondents that the FPMR's enemies are not the Army, but Gen Pinochet and his unconditional supporters, and they urged military personnel to stop repressing the people and to join the FPMR.

The deserters added that they had deserted and were holding this press conference in commemoration of the first month since the burning of Rodrigo Rojas and Carmen Gloria Quintana, and to show that we are nearer to the moment "when each man-at-arms will find himself in the conflict to decide whether to continue repressing the people or to join the people's side."

Late last year, the FPMR revealed in a press conference that a young Carabinero, Juan Antonio Rios, had deserted and was helped out of the country by the FPMR.

BISHOP ASKS MILITARY NOT TO OBEY UNJUST ORDERS

PY072116 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0239 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, 7 Aug (EFE) -- Msgr Christian Prech, pastoral vicar general of the Sanriago Archbishopric, has asked the military not to obey unjust orders.

The vicar made this call in the last issue of the bi-weekly bulletin SOLIDARIDAD, which is edited by the Vicariate of Solidarity, a human rights organization of the Chilean Catholic church. Msgr Prech founded this bulletin shortly after the 11 September 1973 military coup, and later assumed other responsibilities within the church.

In the same publication, Prech added that if no urgent measures are taken, the country could fall into a situation similar to that of El Salvador or Guatemala, and added: "I would like to place Chile in a moral quarantine."

Msgr Prech said that "in this country we need a rebellion of conscience" and "we must let our conscience rebel, and the military should not obey unjust orders. The military codes protect them." He added that the rebellion of conscience should also affect the political and church militants so as to change the institutions.

Commenting on the case of Rodrigo Rojas (who died on 6 July 1986) and of Carmen Gloria Quintana, (hospitalized in critical condition), the two youths burned on 2 July by a military patrol, according to eyewitnesses, Msgr Prech said: "I would not like to see any draftees sentenced for having participated in the burning" of the two youths.

"They are being taught to act in this manner somewhere," Msgr Prech stated. "I would like to find out whether they are being taught this in the regiments."

Msgr Prech then added that "the problem is what to do to enable Chile to regain its history, so that the people can have work, bread, and dignity."

He added: "And if the Constitution needs to be changed 10 times to achieve this, it should be changed 10 times. If the people need a change of government today, we must work to achieve that change, and if this change is needed in 1992, then we will work toward that end. The Constitution is not sacred, but life is sacred."

VICARIATE OF SOLIDARITY LAWYER, PHYSICIAN RELEASED

PY080246 Santiago Radio Chilena in Spanish 2300 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Excerpt] In a five-to-one vote, the Supreme Court released on bail lawyer Gustavo Villalobos and physician Ramiro Olivares, both working for the Vicariate of Solidarity and prosecuted by the Military Court. There was only one dissenting vote to the Supreme Court decision, that of Army Judge Advocate General Eduardo Avelo. Lawyer Roberto Garreton said that the decision reversed a previous decision by the Military Court, which had refused to release Villalobos and Olivares. However, the Supreme Court has not dismissed the indictment against these professionals. [passage omitted]

PINOCHET ORDERS AID FOR BOMB VICTIM'S FAMILY

[Excerpts] Santiago, 6 Aug (EFE) — THe Chilean Government will grant economic aid to the family of young John Patricio Malhue, 22, killed on 4 August when the car he was driving blew up near a military barracks in Santiago. This announcement was made today by Fernando Alvarez, mayor of the Conchali District in northern Santiago, who, on orders from General Augusto Pinochet, visited the relatives of the victim. The young man, who worked under a government-sponsored program for unemployed people, lived in a modest house on the outskirts of the city, was married, and had a 3-year-old daughter.

His wife is expecting a second child. [passage omitted] After visiting the relatives of the dead worker, Mayor Alvarez said that, acting on presidential orders, he visited the family to express his condolences and to find out how the family could be helped. Referring to the widow's pregnancy, the mayor said that "the victim of this terrorist act is an innocent creature who has not yet come into this world." He added that the government will assist in covering the expenses related to the delivery and family necessities.

GOVERNMENT APPROVES ELECTORAL REGISTRATION LAW

PY080236 Santiago Radio Chilena in Spanish 2300 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] The Government Junta approved the Electoral Law in a special session held today. This law should be promulgated on 11 September. After the legislative body special session, Admiral Jose Toribio Merino noted the importance of the law that was approved.

[Begin recording] [Merino] As you know, there can be elections, plebiscites, or other such events which require that people casting votes and giving their opinion are well identified. In this way the government can have a basis on which to evaluate the general thinking of the nation.

[Reporter] When will it become fully effective?

[Merino] The text of the law says 5 months, but the Interior Ministry will try to shorten that time. First the law has to go to the executive branch and then to the Constitutional Tribunal, which will verify whether or not it meets all the constitutional requirements. Thereafter, it will be promulgated and implemented.

[Reporter] Is it true that it will be promulgated on 11 September?

[Merino] That is what we would like to do. We hope that the Constitutional Tribunal will not find any flaws and, if such is the case, there will be no reason that its promulgation should be delayed for more than 1 or 2 weeks. [end recording]

Asked why it was decided to adopt the manual and computerized methods, when the latter is a more advanced method, Admiral Merino said: Precisely because the computerized method can lend itself to errors or fraud. It would only take the theft of a code for important documents to be falsified.

[Begin recording] [Reporter] Which system will be used in the elections?

[Merino] The updating of the electoral registry will be done by computer. The Civil Registry of Persons will submit to the Electoral Registry the names of persons who have died or have been born for tabulation by the computers. [end recording]

In turn, Interior Minister Ricardo Garcia said that the approval of the Electoral Law demonstrates the political will of the government to move ahead with the process of full democratization, adding that the purpose of this law is to allow citizens and foreigners entitled to vote to exercise that right, thus expressing the will of the nation. The minister announced that the Director of the Electoral Registry will be appointed by the president of the nation, and that the appointee will likely be the man who held that post before 11 September 1973. The minister finally said that the electoral institutions will serve the citizenry free of charge, and added that the government's will is to have these institutions installed before the 5-month period established by the law.

PRESIDENT BARCO DELIVERS INAUGURAL ADDRESS

[Inaugural address by President Virgilio Barco Vargas at the Elliptical Room of the Capitol Building in Bogota -- live]

[Text] President of the National Congress; President of the Chamber of Representatives; gentlemen Congressmen; Your Excellencies Presidents of Honduras, El Salvador, Uruguay, Venezuela, and Costa Rica; former Colombian Presidents; Your Eminence Msgr Alfonso Lopez Trujillo; Your Excellencies gentlemen Prime Ministers; gentlemen Vice Presidents; Apostolic Nuncio; OAS Secretary General; heads of special missions; President of the Supreme Court of Justice; President of the State Council; President of the Disciplinary Tribunal: Armed Forces General Commanders; ladies and gentlemen:

Since the beginning of recorded history, we have seen that social groups have always surrounded those main events that will determine their future with solemn ceremonies. This is one such occasion. It has become a tradition for the new president to stand in this hall and explain how he plans to rule. It is not an easy task.

Throughout a long campaign, from the big cities to the small villages, walking along all the paths, speaking before men and women, peasants and workers, businessmen and industralists, before the people in general, I stated my party's ideas which I share. The people heard these ideas with serene hope and without vain illusions. These ideas generated strong and total support.

A ruler's first duty is to maintain the integrity of his territory and defend his sovereignty. Colombia has never been an expansionist country. Colombia has always resolved its international differences through understanding. It has never attacked anyone, nor does it have huge arsenals that could awaken doubts or mistrust regarding its authentic peaceful nature. [applause] Colombia's tradition has been one of support for the international organizations, and it abides by the laws that govern nations. We have contributed to the creation, development, and improvement of the OAS and the United Nations. We have always encouraged the desire for regional and subregional integration.

The principles of nonintervention, self-determination, and peaceful solutions to controversies among states have always inspired our international behavior. Devoid of any intentions of unlawful intervention, we have put forth our best offices when the friendly nations, whose autonomy we respect and whose tranquility and democratic development we encourage, have so requested. My government does not seek to change this conduct.

Our foreign policy has been one of maintaining friendly relations with all the countries. This must be based on mutual respect for dignity, independence, and sovereignty. We view nonalignment as an element of balance within the international system and of open dialogue among the industrialized and developing countries. The interests of Colombia are more important than any emotional or circumstantial issue.

Drug trafficking and terrorism, serious crimes against mankind, are the main concern of every nation. For this reason, we will continue to cooperate with the efforts being made by the community of nations to save our civilization from their perverse effects. Strengthening ties of friendship with our neighbors, maintaining our relations with all the Caribbean nations, and encouraging closer ties in the Pacific area are priority issues on our international agenda.

Venezuela and Colombia are natural allies. What unites us is worth more, much more, than what separates us. Lack of understanding not only impoverishes the people who live along the border but our two peoples. I will try to reach a just and feasible agreement to outline our marine and submarine areas. We have achieved this with countries to which we are united by historic ties of friendship, including Ecuador, Panama, the Dominican Republic, Haiti, Costa Rica, and only recently with Honduras.

International economic relations will be in harmony with our goals for progress and welfare. The foreign policy of the government that begins today will be based on our best traditions; on the basis of a great national consensus in an attempt to protect the superior interests of the homeland.

My ceaseless task will be to protect the lives, honor, and property of all the people in the country. This is not an intention, but an obligation that is imposed on all authorities. I must add that it falls to me to preserve liberty, seek peace, promote change, and support equality. I know that these noble concepts constitute ideals which will never be completely fulfilled in a dissatisfied world. However, these ideals must be the goal of the government's permanent work.

I must establish beforehand a complete course of government action because, in an era of uncertainty and instability, the adotpion of dogmatic plans would limit the country to rigid patterns and would inevitably lead it to dissillusionment and disaster. A government should have firmly established goals, but it should be flexible in its manner of achieving them.

In our conflictive political history, in which there have been situations that have contributed to the modeling of our two parties, we have experienced difficult confrontations. We have had declared and undeclared civil wars resulting from the absolute predominance of one party. We went through provisional phases of conciliation until we arrived at an innovative solution: the National Front.

The system that reestablished political parties after a period during which they were practically abolished is the product of pacts that have led to a transitory constitutional solution. Constitutional rigidity disappeared; it was replaced by a law that limits the president's powers in forming a government. Various insistent political sectors, which are the expression of an almost unanimous collective will, demand that this law be abolished so full democracy can be implemented. I share this position. I have expressed this [applause] and the nation knows it. [applause]

During the past 30 years, society has been transformed. Generations have passed and with them our ways of life and the country's very structure. Nothing has escaped change. The country of today is not the country of yesterday. How then, can we expect the continuation of a precept that restricts the full exercise of democracy and that was only justified during one phase of our history?

As president I must abide by the current constitutional law in letter and spirit. That is why the decree in which I designate the cabinet ministers will give adequate and equal participation to the party that came in second to the president's party in votes, despite the statement issued by the Conservative National Directorate. [applause]

Because the Constitution allows it, I intend to organize a government with a national spirit that will execute the Liberal program that served as a platform so that the people could freely and democratically elect me to govern the country during the next quadrennium. [applause] The decision to cooperate or not in the execution of this task, which is also stated in the Constitution, falls to the Conservative Party. [applause]. Democracy offers the possibility, when there is a system of two predominant parties, of one party being the government and the other the opposition, the alternative. This gives a country the option to choose, to correct the path, to make the government responsible for change, because in democracy there are no irreversible situations.

The decision regarding the existence of an opposition party does not fall to me. However, if the Conservative Party or any other political force decides to take the path of opposition, provided they act within constitutional and legal limits, the government will guarantee the exercise of this role, this basic right. [applause, shouts]

Democracy shuns hegemonism, and the ruling party cannot arrogate the power to dominate society's whole life. Discussion, diversity, and conflict are part of its essence. It recognizes and even encourages them sometimes, or denies or thwarts them. Democracy derives its dynamism from them. They are legitimate. What democracy offers is the procedures to handle, in an atmosphere of coexistence, the different aspirations and disagreements.

In a democracy, a party is given the task of governing and guiding the country but the administration is not and cannot be the prize of a single party in a democracy. [applause] Serving the state at this post is a right and an opportunity to which all able-bodied citizens must have access, regardless of party affiliation, opinions, class, race, or religious creed. [applause] This is the framework -- a government with a partisan orientation, an administration devoid of exclusivity and open to all, and one and the other -- the government and the administration -- devoted to strictly and honestly serving the nation. [applause]

The process of perfecting our democracy must go even deeper, and this will be achieved through broader participation by the citizens. My government will promote legislation aimed at regulating the election of mayors as well as the popular consultations at the municipal level. [applause] It will also promote the creation of a national district [circunscription] to allow the minorities to obtain adequate representation in the congress of the republic. [applause]

I also feel that the institution of the state of siege must be reformulated through the introduction of intermediate and gradual constitutional mechanisms to make it possible to address various situations of turmoil. The state of siege, which is an extreme and exceptional remedy, must be reserved for instances of great commotion. [applause]

The government will (?promote) these and other similar reforms whether they stem from the initiative of the legislator or from its own initiative. With its substantial reforms, the constitution has become the body of rules that relies on the compliance of the nation. Rather than being the subject of hasty amendments, it must be the subject of an interpretation adhering to social change by the judges and the government. The country hopes that its needs will be met and the government's work will be made effective on the basis of these fundamental tenets. This is a time for achievements, not for theoretical disputes. [applause]

In the political sphere, it behooves Congress to enact measures leading to general well-being, to correct the pitfalls of our organization, and to provide the resources for a correct administration. I will submit to its decisions and judgment. I will only ask for authority or make strict use of exceptional means to consolidate our institutions, to overcome crises, and to promote change. [applause]

My government will not look for excuses to avoid fulfilling the commitments I undertook as a candidate. I will not reach compromises over and above the wishes of the electors and will not conclude leaders' agreements on the basis of an alleged consensus to avoid complying with people's will. [applause]

My government will promote discourse. It will stimulate debate and will only seek agreements that faithfully adhere to the people's madate. [applause] I have received that mandate as president. The congressmen also have a mandate. In the [congressional] chambers are represented our traditional parties and a new political force -- the Patriotic Union. We salute its presence. [applause]

These events attest to and confirm the validity of our democratic institutions which, through free elections as in March and May, allowed us to express our political disagreements. That sense of democracy has entered the consciences of all Colombians. [applause]

During two elections, that same enthusiastic and unarmed people, after a vigorous and long campaign -- and later, also in a resounding manner during the pastoral visitor of His Holiness Pope John Paul II -- gave ample proof of their civic nature and their deep-seated and express desire to live in peace and to be allowed to live in peace. [long applause]

Let us look at the nation. We are a country of vast areas, fertile lands, diverse climates, varied production, great natural resources, and serious and enterprising people. Nevertheless, we have inherited long-stnading problems and are facing new needs and challenges. The per capita income which had been growing for several decades has fallen below 1982 levels. To make matters worse, unequal distribution of income has increased. Public expenditures have been chiefly earmarked for operational activities and excessive investments have been made in sectors of doubtful social and economic profitablity.

The fiscal deficit has reached alarming proportions for the next budget. The trend of excessive growth in public expenditures has continued, but it has not brought social benefits. The inordinate increase in modes of payments [medios de pago] is threatening to unleash again the inflationary spiral. The government will have to make a deep commitment to adopt the appropriate corrective measures. Despite its efforts to get reorganized, the financial sector is in a slump. The foreign debt is approaching worrisome levels. In the decentralized sector, the lack of liquidity and the indebtedness are also reaching alarming figures.

Like other societies, ours is made up of groups whose standards of living vary. However, in our case we have reached a critical situation because huge sectors of the population are excluded from the most elementary benefits such as nutrition, drinking water, health, work, and leisure. They suffer extreme poverty. These groups are deprived of the advantages of life in a society. [applause]

Such discrepancies mandate a treatment not only based on humanitarian feelings or on appeals of the loftiest spiritual nature, but also based on the state's raison d'etre and the preservation of society. The real wages of Colombian workers have decreased. Working conditions and wages have deteriorated. The scourge of unemployment, which exists in even the most developed nations, is weighing heavily on us. The governments of these nations recognize the failure of all the strategies that have been devised to create new sources of employment. For us, along with the eradication of absolute poverty, this is one of the great challenges we must face. Unemployment has now reached its highest level in the past 50 years and is especially hitting Colombian youths and professionals. [applause]

The adjustment policy, for all its severity, fell almost exclusively on the most vulnerable sectors of the people. Therefore, this strategy cannot continue to be implemented. [applause] Public expenditures will be reoriented toward social areas, the production of food, nutrition, health, housing, drinking water, access roads, and elementary education, chiefly in rural and outlying areas. [applause]

We shall implement an emergency program to increase employment, which will require the support of employers and workers for those in need. Government resources channeled to sectors generating employment and promoting social welfare programs previously mentioned here, will help resolve the situation of those living in absolute poverty. In order to make these programs possible, we need a new tax system, which the government will present to Congress. We will seek to even out the burden and to create the proper conditions for investment and for prosperity. We will also propose new budget and public spending statutes so that our budget policy can be an instrument for the proper use of government resources. Coffee income geared to guarantee profits for growers, should also be used to meet the needs of communities. [applause]

Oil revenues, which result from a great collective effort, will be used for purposes beyond the immediate benefit of that sector. Since housing is a necessity and since the construction sector is a source of employment, we must introduce legislation that will allow public institutions to purchase lands to build housing units with access to public services and transportation. This will be done.

If an urban reform is unavoidable, so is agrarian reform. Not having access to land deprives thousands of peasant families of a proper income and creates situations of violence. We must create speedy and equitable procedures for the expropriation and distribution of land that will allow us to fulfill this old and permanent wish. At the same time, we must implement the most important technological advances to modernize and stimulate the rural sector. It is important to incorporate new lands into our economic activity. We have much fertile land, but much of it remains unexploited. The construction of roads and control of our waters are projects that must be undertaken in order to expand the promising agricultural future of Colombia. [applause]

We must explore, use our imagination, be willing to take chances, but we will also need a great effort on the part of our society. The first demand is the strengthening of civil order. This is the problem of public order.

Despite our problems, our state is a constitutional one. In this state, peoples of all leanings -- those who are strongly attached to the past and those who wish to introduce radical changes -- can live together. The basis for co-existence is respect of the law even when important changes are sought. For this reason, the institutions must be valid, or recover their validity if it has been lost.

If we all work within the law; if we behave in accordance with the Constitution; if we discuss our problems in a political manner; if we resolve our conflicts, complaints, and controversies, by using the judicial institutions; if we commit ourselves to undertake an authentic and vigorous social, political, and economic change; if we work with patriotism, sincerity, and honesty; then we will be able to recover the path of harmony of a civilized society.

When the operation of an institution is hindered, when co-existence among the citizens is broken, the search for that reestablishment and reconciliation must be the first and permanent task of the state. The government must always be willing to examine new viewpoints and proposals. Our desire for reconciliation must continue to be based on clear and institutional guidelines, precisely because we are trying to recover our normalcy and re-establish co-existence in Colombia. [applause] We must draft a plan to allow for the reincorporation of those who chose the path of armed subversion. This plan must allow them to join a full civilian life within a secure framework so they may practice, as citizens, their social, political, economic, and cultural rights -- the same rights possessed by millions upon millions of Colombians who have lived in peace and who prefer to live in peace. [applause]

To turn this viewpoint into a reality, to consolidate what has been achieved, and to move ahead, we will create an organization that will be directly below the president of the republic, to guide and coordinate the political, social, and economic plans that will contribute to the normalization and promote the rehabilitation of the zones and people beset by violence. To achieve this we must spare no effort or expense.

The judges have an important role in this plan. Anyone who violates the law, who breaks the institutional rules must receive the appropriate punishment. Peace and co-existence are based on efficient, impartial, and prompt justice. The state must always give the judges, and more so under these special circumstances when their work becomes more important, the necessary instruments to efficiently and safely perform their duties.

To achieve these goals the government will, first of all, gurantee the independence of the judges. We must surround them with dignity, protect them, and ensure their efficiency. This government will guarantee this with the necessary budget.

Society has placed the responsibility for protecting public order on the president and the Armed Forces. It is an unavoidable task and the very reason for the existence of the state. If the president and the Armed Forces do not fulfill their duties, the people begin to feel that their rights and interests are endangered. When this occurs the people tend to take justice into their own hands and this kind of private justice is unacceptable.

Within this framework, the state and its armed branch must strictly abide by the Constitution, strongly abide by the law, and respect the rights of the people. Apparently, the state, the Armed Forces, and the government are at a disadvantage. Those who choose rebellion and choose the deadly path of terrorism are violating essential rights: the rights to life, property, and safety. The state cannot use this method. If it does, it loses its legitimacy, its moral distinction, and the support of the people who, in peace or war, are the main elements for the permanent and serene practice of authority. [applause]

Within these concepts, the Armed Forces and the president of the Republic -- entrusted with the enforcement of the Constitution to protect public order throughout the country -- will guarantee the implementation of the laws that protect all Colombians.

The mission of the civilian authority, supported when it becomes necessary by the Armed Forces, is to defend the rights of the people and demand that the constitution be respected. The legitimate use of force is accepted by the people. However, the arbitrary use of force is rejected and leads to violence. [applause]

I invite institutions, parties, people, groups, and organizations to help in the task of incorporating everyone into civilian life and institutional normalcy. This is a united effort involving all Colombians. It is not a lonely effort of the government. We must all make a commitment to our historical responsibility.

The main beneficiaries of that government effort will be the most needy and the most backward regions. Today, more so than in the past, society is split by profound divisions. There are many people who lack almost all essential things.

If our society wants to preserve its values and even its own existence, it must focus the state's main action on creating less bitter conditions for Colombians. Those who seek privileges will gain nothing by building walls around themselves, isolating themselves, wanting no part of the fate of their own compatriots, placing obstacles to changes, and obstructing reforms. The authority will not be a guardian of aberrant inequalities and unnecessary established advantages. [applause]

Extreme poverty cannot be accepted as an unavoidable consequence of natural inequalities among men, much less as a characteristic inherent in backward societies besieged by destitution. At the end of the 20th century, Colombia will not insist on formulas proven to be inefficient.

The presence of several heads of state and representatives of friendly governments encourages me to urge Latin Americans, with the solidarity of other countries, to tackle the great battle against poverty. This will be a priority topic in regional, bilateral, and multilateral discussions during my administration.

I am convinced that for those of us who have been given the responsibility to rule in the upcoming years, the great challenge is to overcome the obstacles that poverty has placed before us. I know that neither the country nor I are facing an easy task. There is an unfavorable situation today in the economic and fiscal sectors, and even in institutional organization.

If there is much to be reconstructed, we will reconstruct. There are no models to imitate. We must resort to our own resources and our own imagination. [applause]

The time has come to practice new and bold innovations. The path that we have traveled along as a nation, which has been long and at times painful, stands as an example. We have had defeats, but we have always overcome them. We must maintain our memory and our faith -- memory to remember with pride where we have been and faith to move forward. [applause]

Our reference point cannot be our frustrations. Strengthened and encouraged by what we have done and achieved, we must look to our future with hope. I have asked the people, and I wish to do so again, to actively participate in the country's public life. This is not, as many fear, a call to disorder. Quite the contrary, I have great confidence in my people. That is why I demand that you act orderly in defense of your own interests. [applause]

We must have trust. Peoples and men are only defeated when they accept defeat beforehand. That is not what our history shows; that is not our character. United, the nation will achieve its objectives to bring changes and transformations that cannot wait. It is my duty to promote this strongly; others will have to continue this. If we do this, our generation and the young people who will replace us will enjoy a just and equitable lifestyle that will be accepted by all, not with apathy and resignation, but with optimism and enthusiasm. [applause]

These are my objectives. Like all state officials, the president is also asked to swear that he will fulfill his duties in the name of the benefactor God of us all, and I have done so before the Congress of the republic, which is the legitimate representative of the people. I hope that God and my compatriots will accompany me in this task. [applause]

VISITING PRESIDENTS BACK STRENGTHENED DEMOCRACY

PA071845 Bogota Emisoras CARACOL Network in Spanish 1215 GMT 7 Aug 86

[By Jose Domingo Bernal]

[Text] In Bogota, the presidents of Venezuela, El Salvador, Honduras, Uruguay, Costa Rica and Colombia have called for the strengthening of democracy in Latin America and taking joint action to resolve problems generated by the foreign debt. The presidents, who received the proposal for the institutionalization of the Latin American parliament, agreed there will not be peace without democracy and there will not be economic development without peace.

Venezuelan President Jaime Lusinchi said that Latin American problems will be resolved only when there is true political and economic integration.

Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte said he had come to Colombia to greet peace advocate Belisario Bentancur and the new Colombian president, who will undoubtedly make efforts to strengthen democracy.

Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo insisted that Latin American countries have been victimized in the past few years by unjust trade policies of the developed nations.

Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti praised the administration of President Betancur, which ends today. He was obliged to face difficult times, but rose to the occasion and to the nature of the fatherland's history, Sanguinetti said.

Finally, Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez described Costa Rica as a paradigm of freedom and an oasis of peace in conflict-ridden Central America.

TERAN SIGNS DECLARATION WITH BRAZIL'S SODRE

PA061247 Quito Radio Quito in Spanish 2300 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Excerpts] On 5 August the foreign ministers of Ecuador and Brazil Edgar Teran Teran and Roberto de Abreu Sodre, respectively, signed a joint declaration on cooperation and trade that deals with bilateral issues.

During the ceremony, the Ecuadoran foreign minister stressed the importance of the declaration, because it reflects common views on the principles of international coexistence and Latin American problems. Minister Teran also reiterated the traditional friendship ties that have always joined Ecuador with Brazil. [passage omitted]

Meanwhile, Brazilian Foreign Minister Roberto de Abreu Sodre expressed his satisfaction with signing the declaration and thanked the Ecuadoran people and Government for their favorable reception. He said that the issues which inspired the document reflect the feeling of the two peoples, because it contains important issues of common interest. He also stressed the usefulness and efficiency of periodic joint declarations, saying they give continuity to a dialogue that is always beneficial. [passage omitted]

ESPINOSA ANNOUNCES OIL PRODUCTION DECREASE

PA071537 Quito Voz de los Andes in Spanish 1130 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] The Ecuadoran Government is willing to substantially reduce its oil production to abide by the OPEC resolution, Energy and Mines Minister Javier Espinosa has announced. The minister arrived yesterday in Quito after attending the special OPEC conference that concluded at 1800 on Tuesday in Geneva.

Ecuador will continue to cooperate with all available means so that OPEC will be able to reach a permanent agreement on production quotas and price structure at its next meeting, to be held in 2 months, Espinosa added. The agreement will be in effect as of 1 September for 2 months, but a new ministerial conference will be held on 6 October to evaluate the market and to decide on furture strategy, Espinosa said. He added that OPEC is trying to release its members from having to follow the forces of the market. To achieve this, an effort will also be made so that members selling through the (?lease back) formula give up this system, as it has also had an influence in reducing prices.

COLORADO PARTY EXECUTIVE BOARD SUSPENDS SESSION

[Excerpt] Asuncion, 6 Aug (AFP) -- Carlos Romero [Pereira] Arza, the Colorado Party rebel and visible head of a democratizing movement within the ruling Colorado Party, is running the risk of being disciplined by the party leaders for having accused the present regime in Paraguay of using the party for its personal ends.

The party's Executive Board tonight abruptly suspended its ordinary session at which the Stroessnerist wing had planned to present a petition to discipline Romero for the statements he made in a panel called: Is Democracy Possible in Paraguay?

The Colorado Party rebel called for a new society with the exclusion of corrupt people and political delinquents, at a forum to discuss democracy held on 2 August with the participation of Humberto Rubin, manager of the combative Radio Nanduti, and Fernando Vera, head of the Febrerista Revolutionary Party (PRF) which abstains from national elections.

Romero Pereira Arza, son of former Paraguayan President Tomas Romero Pereira, who in 1954 handed over power to General Alfreso Stroessner, entered the political scene in 1985 questioning the political and administrative corruption reigning in Paraguay. [passage omitted]

REPAYMENT OF DEBT IN KIND UNDER CONSIDERATION

PY071133 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0402 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Lima, 5 Aug (EFE) -- Deputy Economy Minister Gustavo Saberbein today said that Peru might repay 33 percent of the debt it owes to U.S. and European banks and financial agencies in kind. He explained that this formula would thus affect $33 out of each $100 owed to the banks.

The official added that the formula was proposed by the banks and agencies.

Saberbein noted that Peru knows that its debt amounts to $14 billion but cannot repay it. He remarked that Peru will repay it only partially, within its possibilities, and without hampering its development.

Peru has already announced that it will be unable to pay $180 million to the IMF on 15 August and that it will make a symbolic payment even if it is declared ineligible to receive new loans.

Saberbein said that the IMF "is very likely" to declare Peru ineligible. "This does not depend on us, and the greatest danger is that our creditors may fail to understand the situation because they do not take into account what the government has achieved in its first year in power," he added.

Among the achievements of the APRA [American Popular Revolutionary Alliance] social democratic government, Saberbein mentioned the cancellation of short-term bank loans, the inflation rate drop, the substantial fiscal deficit reduction, and the struggle against drug trafficking and terrorism, which are the main issues in the crisis that the country is experiencing.

He added that the GDP have already grown by 6 percent this year and that the annual GDP growth will reach 7.2 percent if the current trend continues.

Saberbein also announced that the financial market has been divided into two areas and that bank operations have returned to normal, adding that under the two-market system each U.S. dollar sells at 17.4 intis, Peru's currency. This exchange rate will be exclusively for tourists. He explained that there is a strong depression in the tourist market and that efforts must be made to prevent abrupt changes. However, the other sectors of the financial market will continue to operate as usual, that is, the market will continue to supply currency for remittances abroad, he added.

Saberbein said the exchange market has operated normally after the government closed it between 27 and 30 July to prevent speculation caused by the rumors circulating before the speech Garcia delivered on 28 July. The rumors said that the president would announce a devaluation, but no devaluation was decreed. In addition, it was announced that the exchange rate will remain unchanged until the end of the year.

However, the government announced several restrictions on remittances abroad, among them a 2-year suspension of profit remittances and other similar measures.

WARNKE ENDS VISITS, GRANTS PRESS CONFERENCE

PY072303 Paris AFP in Spanish 2348 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Lima, 6 Aug (AFP) -- FRG Economic Cooperation Minister Jurgen Warnke stated today, at the end of an official 4-day visit to Peru, that his country understands the Peruvian decision to pay its foreign debt with 10 percent of its exports.

In a news conference granted before leaving for Caracas, Warnke stated that he and President Alan Garcia had ample discussions on Peru's economic difficulties and that the two agreed on the fact that development can be achieved with the cooperation of private enterprises.

In a meeting 2 days ago, Warnke gave Garcia an invitation from FRG Chancellor Helmut Khol to visit the FRG.

Among other considerations, he said that the invitation is to stress the friendship existing between the two nations, now that Peru is consolidating its position against a situation of violence, with terrorism being one of the toughest problems.

Warnke said that his country's police could grant technical assistance to the Peruvian police on matters related to terrorism, drug trafficking, and other activities dealing with repressing crime.

Warnke said that Peruvian debt to the FRG amounts to $273 million: $173 million with private creditors and the balance with the government. The government credits were granted under very soft conditions to give priority attention to cooperation for development.

INTERIOR MINISTER ON POLICE STOPPAGE, SUBVERSION

PY072023 Lima Television Peruana Network in Spanish 0100 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Interview with Interior Minister Abel Salinas by unidentified reporters; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Salinas] Some pamphlets threatening strikes and stoppages and alleging irregularities have been appearing lately. But, as you will have realized, no strike or stoppage have been staged so far. Very much the opposite, we are receiving greater support from within the police institutions in response to our efforts to improve their efficiency. This support comes from all levels. from officers and from the lower ranks. Naturally, irregularities do occur, but as soon as a charge is made, we immediately investigate it.

[Reporter] But if a stoppage occurred, what protection could be offered to the people?

[Salinas] I think that we have no reason to believe that there will be a stoppage. I can clearly and confidently say that there will be no stoppage. The people may rest assured that the police will continue to protect them.

[Reporter] Mr Minister, do you think, based on the performance of the police forces, that the state of emergency might be suspended at any time for the municipal elections?

[Salinas] The state of emergency does not depend solely on the performance of the police forces. It is not exclusively a police problem. It is a problem, which in one way or another, involves all of us in safeguarding order and tranquility under the law and the norms of modern community life. It will be, therefore, a political decision to suspend the state of emergency [words indistinct].

[Reporter] What is your opinion on [words indistinct] by the police forces, has it been successful? What is your opinion on this matter?

[Salinas] I believe that, without losing the national perspective in the problem of subversion, the situation is being well controlled. As you may have observed, the most recent acts were not as savage as they used to be. The number of attacks remains practically the same, while the amount of damage has declined.

[Reporter] Mr Minister, will the government's current antisubversive policy be maintained?

[Salinas] Of course, the antisubversive policy constantly being reviewed and readjusted according to circumstances, and we are now taking the initiative in the antisubversive struggle. As President Garcia announced in Congress, the regionalization, the autonomy, and responsibilities of each of the announced regions will be increased in a great effort to demonstrate to the country, as well to its people, that only with their cooperation can the existing problems be overcome.

SAN JUAN BAUTISTA MAYOR SHOT IN AYACUCHO

PY071757 Paris AFP in Spanish 1741 GMT 7 GMT 7 Jul 86

[Text] Ayacucho, 7 Aug (AFP) -- The police reported today that Shining Path terrorists today killed Braulio Zago Pariona, mayor of San Juan Bautista district of Ayacucho and a leader of the ruling American Popular Revolutionary Alliance [APRA]. This is the most serious attack to take place in this southeastern Peruvian city since President Alan Garcia's administration took over.

Zaga, 52, a dental surgeon and the father of eight, was attacked by two individuals who machinegunned him at point-blank range and fled, according to Zaga's widow Aida Bendezu, who witnessed the attack.

According to authorities the attack took place at approximately 1300 GMT today at a small square 4 blocks from the main plaza of Ayacucho, the foremost stronghold of the Shining Path in Peru.

Civil Guards Killed in Lima

PY072042 Madrid EFE in Spanish 1427 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Lima, 7 Aug (EFE) -- Two Civil Guards were murdered this morning by two individuals in a Lima bus while going to work.

The two guards were shot dead by two presumed terrorists who were riding the same bus.

The crime was committed when the bus was at an intersection in downtown Lima, at 0600.

The bodies of the two guards, whose names have not yet been revealed, were taken to the police hospital where their deaths were confirmed.

GROUP OF SIX ISSUES MEXICO DECLARATION

FL071927 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 1821 GMT 7 Aug 86

[By Eduardo Gonzalez, special correspondent]

[Text] Ixtapa-Zihuatanejo, 7 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- In the Mexico Declaration, Group of Six leaders today urged U.S. and Soviet leaders to reach an agreement and end anti-satellite arms tests and offered to participate with the superpowers in verification mechanisms aimed at ending nuclear tests.

At the end of their second summit meeting, the political leaders of Argentina, Greece, India, Mexico, Sweden, and Tanzania said the improvement of anti-satellite weapons threatens a number of agreements on arms limitatioms and disarmament.

The Mexico Declaration, signed by Presidents Raul Alfonsin and Miguel de la Madrid, Prime Ministers Rajiv Gandhi, Andreas Papandreou, and Ingvar Carlsson, as well as by Tanzania's former President Julius Nyerere notes that existing treaties which safeguard space for peaceful uses as well as the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missiles Limitations Systems Treaty should be fully respected, reinforced, and broadened.

They reiterated the request to avoid the arms race in space inasmuch as, the Mexico Declaration indicates, space belongs to humankind. As beneficiaries of this common heritage, we oppose the improper use of space, they said.

The Mexico summit document also states that for the last 4 decades states with nuclear weapons have had the almost exclusive responsibility of ending the nuclear arms race, while the rest of the world has been excluded.

The leaders of the Group of Six categorically stated that it is still possible to save from war a world that has fallen into the habit of weapons and more and more arsenals, and said the time has come to put an end to it.

The Group of Six offered the superpowers their participation in verification mechanisms to end nuclear tests and said these measures could strengthen the confidence in a U.S. -Soviet moratorium and would be an important step toward implementing a total ban of nuclear tests. The measures could include the establishment of temporary vigilance stations in existing testing sites; arrangements could be made to use the stations in the United States and the Soviet Union to watch their territories away from testing sites, as well as inspecting big chemical explosions. Likewise, they proposed meetings with experts from the Group of Six and the superpowers aimed at examining the way of putting into practice and analysing other possible measures that will facilitate the verification of nuclear testing ban.

At the end of the Declaration, the Group of Six leaders urged the peoples, parliaments, and governments of the entire world to actively support this call, inasmuch as each individual has the right for peace and the duty to make efforts in achieving it.

They said the peoples of the world, together or individually, could not erase from the public's mind the Hiroshima and Nagasaki tragedies, but together we can and should erase from our future the horror that is threatening us.

DELHI ON GANDHI'S VISIT, IXTAPA SUMMIT

BK08C437 Delhi Domestic Service in English 0240 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Addressing the concluding session [of the Group of Six summit at Ixtapa] the prime minister, Mr Rajiv Gandhi, urged the two superpowers to subscribe to a binding obligation on elimination of nuclear weapons and accept the six-nation proposal for verification of a moratorium on nuclear weapon test. Mr Gandhi said that nuclear weapons are a crime against humanity and must be banned. The prime minister said: If nuclear weapons denote the world's death wish, the six nations' movement represents humanity's will to survive. He regretted that the nuclear tests are still continuing. About outer space, he said it is a common heritage of all mankind. We cannot acquiesce to its privatization, certainly not for destroying the earth.

Mr Rajiv Gandhi has since arrived in Mexico City on official visit to the country. At the airport, he was received among others by the Mexican foreign minister, Mr Bernando Sepulveda. Shortly after his arrival, Mr GAndhi called on President Miguel de la Madrid.

Speaking at a banquet hosted by the Mexican president, Mr Rajiv Gandhi expressed the importance of increasing South-South cooperation. We would like to see the setting up of information grids that will enable entrepreneurs from countries of the areas to know one another and share the experience and expertise, he said.

Earlier, addressing a joint press conference in Ixtapa, Mr Rajiv Gandhi made it clear that India had no intention to make nuclear weapons. The Swedish prime minister, Mr Ingvar Carlsson, said the six-nation campaign will be intensified in the coming days to mobilize a strong public opinion in favor of nuclear disarmament.

PEMEX TO INCREASE COOPERATION WITH INDIA

[Excerpts] Mexico City, 6 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Mexico and India will increase bilateral cooperation concerning oil technology as a result of a meeting held between Pemex Director Mario Ramon Beteta and his Indian counterpart, G.B. Ramakrishna. [passage omitted]

Beteta told his guest that Indian personnel could be trained at the Mexican Petroleum Institute and at Pemex installations. Ramakrishna agreed with Beteta and reported that his country imports 30 percent of its oil.

SALVADOR'S DUARTE TRANSITS; NO OFFICIAL WELCOME

PA070414 Panama City Televisora Nacional in Spanish 0000 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte made a service stop here last night. He left today for Colombia to attend the inauguration of President-elect Virgilio Barco. Those present were very surprised that neither his fellow Christian Democrats nor Foreign Minister Jorge Abadia Arias were there to greet him.

President Duarte noted during an exclusive interview that the topic of Central America may be discussed during the event in Colombia.

[Begin Duarte recording] No meeting has been specifically scheduled for this, but some activities have been scheduled, including informal meetings and a dinner the president will give in our honor. We will probably meet and discuss the topics of Latin America, the monetary issue, the foreign debt, Central America's problems, the effects of the problem of communism in the area, and the problem of terrorism. That is to say, there are so many things to talk about each time we presidents get together, it is worthwhile for us to exchange views about them. [end recording]

DELVALLE DISCUSSES BANKING SECRECY ISSUE

PA071815 Panama City MATUTINO in Spanish 7 Aug 86 pp 1-A, 8-A

[Communique issued by the Press and Information Secretariat of the Presidency; no date given]

[Text] In view of the ill-intended rumors circulating which state that agreements might be signed that would affect banking secrecy, the Press and Information Secretariat of the Presidency of the Republic hereby notes, as a definite reply, a statement made on 30 July by President Eric Arturo Delvalle before the Panamanian Banking Association:

"Confidentiality is a right provided by special laws that are recognized by jurisprudence and incorporated in banking practice and business usage; it is protected by penal law. It is a right that protects multinational corporations, local investors, professionals, and small businessmen.

"Confidentiality is part of our juridical institutions. It is not a sudden thing or a brief article in some legal text. Confidentiality is born and grows with the Republic. It is found in all and each of our institutions. As do all rights, confidentiality entails a duty. To make use of confidentiality, one must make good use of it. Otherwise, the right of confidentiality should be restricted by the application of measures which are provided for in our juridical system to conduct investigations of all illegal acts, should there be any."

BELIZE

ESQUIVEL'S VISIT TO ISRAEL CALLED 'ILL-ADVISED'

FL072331 Belize City THE BELIZE TIMES in English 3 Aug 86 p 5

["Bottomline" article]

[Text] The visit to Israel by our prime minister [Manuel Esquivel] was ill-advised and could not have been made at a worse time. Coming before talks with Guatemala begin and before the United Nations General Assembly opens in September could mean trouble for Belize.

The situation at the UN, as regards to Belize, is already strained. Belize finds itself increasingly isolated in the UN when it comes to an issue that is dear to the hearts of all Latin Americans -- the issue of the Falkland Islands or Malvinas. The Latin Americans will be able to carry many Caribbean nations and indeed many Commonwealth African nations with them when the question is voted upon.

So that Latin America is seeing Belize as a sort of odd-man out.

By courting a kind of special relationship with Israel, by cosying up to Israel Belize might pay a price much bigger than any benefit it could get from Israel.

The Arab world monitors all visits of heads of government to the state of Israel. If the Arabs interpret this official visit by the prime minister of Belize as a special bilateral relationship we could find ourselves isolated not only in Latin America but also among the Arab countries.

When it comes to the policy to be adopted one would prefer a neutral or open-handed policy. One sticks by the bed-rock principles of self-determination and territorial integrity.

Belize cannot speak out of the two corners of its mouth. Supporting territorial integrity in the case of Belize but supporting Israel in annexing Arab lands on other occasions is to show confusion.

The real cost of the visit to Israel will not be in the money spent on the airline tickets rather it must be measured in the bad will it will generate in the Arab countries who have supported us with their votes at the United Nations. It was only when Israel saw the handwriting on the wall that it finally came over.

Reiterates Neutrality in Bogota

PA071724 San Jose Radio Reloj in Spanish 0100 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Relay from Bogota by Milagros Espinoza]

[Text] Accompanied by Foreign Minister Rodrigo Madrigal Nieto and (Alan Araya), Costa Rican charge d'affaires in Colombia, President Oscar Arias Sanchez offered a news conference which was attended by several dozen international journalists at the [name indistinct] Convention Center in Bogota, under strict security measures.

Arias Sanchez said he was pleased to be visiting Colombia again, to be able to express Costa Rica's solidarity and identification with Colombia's democratic process. He said: We believe in dialogue and in the people's will expressed in the polls. He recalled that Costa Rica wants to contribute to make peace possible in Latin America, which can only occur through democracy.

The president discussed several topics during the news conference, including the Contadora Group process. He said that this group had filled a large vacuum in Latin America, in view of the OAS' shortcomings, and that therefore, Costa Rica has supported it. I want to be optimistic, and I think that it is still possible to find a peaceful solution to the conflict, President Arias said, adding that Costa Rica will always support the efforts undertaken by the Contadora and Support Groups. He recalled that no country, except for Nicaragua, and abstained from making observations regarding the Contadora Act [sentence as heard]. He added: Our observations were in the political field, on issues concerning the procedures to verify the implementation of truly free democratic and electoral processes in Central America.

In addition, Arias Sanchez said that the Contadora Group efforts would have been more successful had Nicaragua shown more willingness to negotiate. He added: For example, had Nicaragua accepted the recommendations for a broader opening which were made by the Central American presidents during the Esquipulas summit in late May, the current situation could have been prevented.

President Arias was frequently asked by the international media gathered here in Colombia about Costa Rica's neutrality. Regarding this, he said that Costa Rica is not often in the news, and that therefore its neutrality is the only topic that hits the front pages of the international press. He reiterated that his government wants to preserve Costa Rica's neutrality, because it believes in self-determination, and that the country should not get involved in the conflict. Once again, Arias Sanchez said that foreigners who violate Costa Rica's neutrality will not have the government's acquiescence, recalling his announcement that any government official collaborating with the exiles who abuse Costa Rica's hospitality will be dismissed. He added: When we declared our neutrality we did so in all sincerity, with the intention to abide by this declaration, and not just consider it as something for external consumption. No one should believe that the activities of the Nicaraguan contras are tolerated by this government, he stressed. He noted that the ongoing entrance of Nicaraguans through the northern border, some of whom join the struggle against the Nicaraguan Government, is a problem for Costa Rica. In this regard, Arias Sanchez said:

[Begin recording] If Costa Rica decides to increase the number of its civil guardsmen -- not necessarily by acquiring heavy weapons, but by increasing the number of civil guardsmen and giving each one a revovler to enforce our neutrality and be able to increase our vigilance at the Nicaraguan border, which extends more than 300 km -- we are accused of militarizing the country as if [words indistinct]. If on the contrary, we decide not to reinforce our Civil Guard, not to assign any more funds to our Public Security Ministry for our public security...[changes thought] we have a [word indistinct] ministry because we have nothing to defend ourselves from, because we are not being threatened by anyone, because we believe that our only defense is based on law and international organizations, because our country is [word indistinct] with civil-minded teachers, where we do not have armed forces, where the chiefs of our Civil Guard [words indistinct].

As I was saying, if we do not assign any more funds to our Public Security Ministry, we are accused of deliberately ignoring the contras' activities in our territory. In other words, we end up losing anyway. The only thing I can say is that on my part, on the part of my government and aides there is a sincere and honest desire, a firm determination to truly comply and ensure compliance with our neutrality, without spending any more money on public security, because we have other needs. We will do everything possible to prevent any abuse of our hospitality, any abuse [word indistinct] of our political asylum to use Costa Rican territory for military activities against sister nations. We will -- to the extent of our capabilities -- considerably reinforce the border area with civil guardsmen, to prevent the use of our territory by any Costa Rican, Nicaraguan, or American against Daniel Ortega's government. [end recording]

EDITORIAL SCORES NICARAGUA'S SUIT AT ECJ

PA070428 San Jose LA NACION in Spanish 31 Jul 86 p 14-A

[Editorial: "The Degradation of the International Court"]

[Excerpts] Encouraged by the questionable sentence passed against the United States by the International Court of Justice [ICJ] on 27 June, and in accordance with the Leninist strategy of subverting and exploiting international forums in an effort to shield the consolidation of the totalitarian project in Nicaragua, the Sandinist regime has accused Costa Rica before the ICJ at The Hague. According to the insulting message spattered with threats that the Foreign Ministry received from the Nicaraguan Government, the aim of the procedures initiated against Costa Rica is "to end Costa Rica's complicity with the activities carried out by the U.S. Government against Nicaragua," and "to prevent a generalized war caused by the violation of the basic rules of international law."

The charges made at the ICJ by the Nicaraguan dictatorship are a reiteration of the absurd lies the Sandinists and their friends have told against Costa Rica, with the support of a strident leftist international publicity apparatus, which has spread these lies throughout the world. The time chosen by Managua to announce this judicial action -- the eve of Commander Daniel Ortega's appearance before the UN Security Council to fantasize over the U.S. "military occupation" of our country -- is evidence enough of the true purpose of this new chapter of Sandinist outrageousness.

Obviously, what Costa Rica is facing at the ICJ is not a judicial disagreement with Nicaragua, but a political case, within the broader context of the Sandinist regime's aggressiveness and intolerance toward its democratic neighbors, and the case should be handled as such.

With their complaint, the Marxist commanders are not trying to claim legal values, which are inconceivable in their ideology, but to vilify a peaceful, free, and unarmed nation, and with it the United States and the cause of democracy in Central America.

The selection of the forum at The Hague for this poor imitation of justice is not accidental either. Unfortunately, the once prestigious International Court has not been able to avoid the deterioration, politicization, and degradation of the original goals of the United Nations and its huge tangle of organizations. With a majority of judges from countries such as Poland, the PRC, Algeria, and Senegal, whose lack of judicial independence and attachment to correctness speaks for itself, what kind of judicial equity can be expected?

This background and the hardly promising prospects for justice emerging from The Hague, suggest that Costa Rica should not accept the dictates of a forum that is obviously prejudiced, or procedures that can only bring criticism to our country and juicy propagandist dividend to those who today subjugate, silence, and murder the Nicaraguan people. [passage omitted]

Under these circumstances, and in the current context, Costa Rica cannot commit the excess of concentrating its efforts and resources, or of spending itself in a battle that the Sandinists have beforehand designed in their own favor at The Hague. On the contrary, our government should publicly and internationally denounce this maneuver for what it is: a degradation of justice.

If any lesson, which we do not need, can be found in this latest attack by Managua reiterated by Daniel Ortega at the United Nations, it is that totalitarian dynamics do not recognize or accept neutral positions. Therefore, national interest demands that without further delay, Costa Rica must carry out a vigorous foreign policy action in keeping with the country's dignity and the historical moment.

DUARTE ANNOUNCES DATE FOR TALKS WITH REBELS

PA071752 Madrid EFE in Spanish 1725 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Bogota, 7 Aug (EFE) -- President Jose Napoleon Duarte announced today in Bogota that the dialogue between the Salvadoran Government and guerrillas will be resumed on 29 August.

"We are struggling for peace in my country, and at this time I am presenting a new possibility for talks. I have proposed 29 August as the date for a meeting with the rebels," Duarte said.

Duarte, who yesterday had said that he had selected three cities in eastern El Salvador as possible sites for the talks, insisted that this third meeting with the rebels will be "to propose their incorporation in the democratic process" in the country.

The three cities mentioned by Duarte as possible sites for the new talks are San Miguel, Gotera [name as received] and Berlin, all of which are located in El Salvador's eastern region," and close to the areas where there are more frequent clashes between the guerrillas and the Army [quotation marks as received].

The Salvadoran president is in Bogota to attend the inaugural ceremony of Liberal Virgilio Barco Vargas, the new Colombian president who succeeds Conservative Belisario Betancur.

Viera Explains Proposal

PA072321 San Salvador Radio Cadena YSU in Spanish 1800 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Statement by Deputy Culture and Communications Minister Roberto Edmundo Viera, official government spokesman for the third meeting between the Salvadoran Government and representatives of the FMLN-FDR; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] Regarding the third meeting, you already know the mechanisms that were used. The government presented a proposal to Msgr Rivera y Damas, who took it to Perquin where he was given a counterproposal. On 4 August the government presented a new plan.

In summary, the initial proposal included a date: Friday, 29 August. The government proposed the cathedral in the city of San Miguel as the site for the meeting. It proposed the city of Gotera [name as received] as an alternative. In this proposal, the president stated clearly that he would head the government's delegation. This proposal also included guarantees with regard to the arrival and departure of the FMLN people. The proposal also stated that there would be a place where the FMLN-FDR could stay the day before and sleep there. The place is in San Miguel and would have the legal status of an embassy since there has been talks with an ambassador from a European country to establish such a place to afford greater guarantees. The proposal also noted that the International Red Cross would be given facilities so that it may transport the delegates.

Basically, this was the essence of the first proposal. The FMLN-FDR responded to it. Their response was basically a repeat of the position they adopted when the president's invitation to a dialogue was announced. They proposed San Salvador as the site for the meeting. They also proposed the formation of a commission that would have to come here and hold meetings with the news media prior to the date for the meeting. They also proposed an integrated security plan that would provide military protection from the two sides, that is, an integrated security plan that would include both the Armed Forces and the FMLN. They also proposed the demilitarization of the area. Since they speak of San Salvador as the site for the meeting, I suppose they are proposing that the government abandon San Salvador, that it demilitarize the area, that it remove the security corps from San Salvador. They proposed that this commission begin work before 20 September and that the date for the meeting be established as 20 September. This is, summarizing, their response to the proposal. The government views this proposal of theirs as one without the spirit of dialogue, as an effort to turn this affair into a public relations event, as an effort to prolong the matter. Now they are talking about 20 September, and the government believes that there is really no goodwill on their side.

In view of this, on 4 September [corrects himself] on 4 August, rather, the government gave to Msgr Rivera y Damas a new proposal with some changes.

No I am going to read the text of the proposal given to Rivera y Damas on 4 August:

On behalf of the government, as president of the Republic, I hereby reiterate my firm will and political decision to promote a peace process that should favor and permit the securing of full peaceful coexistence among the Salvadorans in the framework of constitutionality to assure liberty and peace in democracy.

Interpreting the national feelings and the desire of the Salvadoran people, I convoked the dialogue in La Palma and Ayagualo.

With the same spirit of seriousness and honesty I made evident then, and taking into consideration the aspirations and needs of the Salvadoran people, I have now invited the FMLN-FDR to another meeting. I proposed to my intermediary, Msgr Arturo Riveray Damas, that this meeting take place in the city of San Miguel on Friday, 29 August of this year, in the San Miguel cathedral. I proposed the city of San Franciso Gotera as an alternative.

In that proposal I reiterated my decision to be present at that meeting in the company of the persons I may find suitable. I also informed the monsignor that I was prepared to offer all the necessary guarantees for a most efficient meeting. I offered facilities so that ambassadors accredited by my government, as well as International Red Cross delegates, may guarantee the presence and participation of FMLN-FDR representatives.

Faced with these serious and specific proposals that make evident our good intentions, the FMLN-FDR has presented a proposal that clearly projects the purpose of using the dialogue as a tactical war tool, thus disappointing once again the hopes and expectations of the Salvadoran people to secure peace through dialogue.

The FMLN-FDR, by presenting an unrealistic proposal, is trying to discredit the legitimacy and the legal institutionality of the government and turn the meeting into a propaganda show in search of support that it currently does not have.

I want to express our firm decision to hold a sincere dialogue. In this regard, I propose:

1. Friday, 29 August, as the date for holding the third meeting.

2. The cathedral of the city of San Miguel, or the city of San Francisco Gotera, or Berlin, as alternatives.

3. I confirm my offer for the same guarantees and facilities, that were offered in previous proposals.

4. For the purpose of holding the meeting, overcoming obstacles, and establishing procedures for the meeting, I propose that advance meetings be held between 19 and 26 August at our embassy in Mexico City.

These meetings would be coordinated by, and take place in the presence of Msgr Arturo Rivera y Damas, archbishop of San Salvador.

San Salvador, 4 August 1986

This is the latest proposal that was given to Msgr Riveray Damas.

FMLN-FDR Announces Communique

PA080242 (Clandestine) Radio Venceremos in Spanish to El Salvador 0000 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Attention please. We want the national and international press to listen. In upcoming broadcasts Radio Venceremos will announce an FMLN-FDR communique regarding Duarte's dialogue proposal. Durate's government wants the dialogue to become part of a propaganda war.

On Thursday, Edmundo Viera, deputy culture and communications minister, made statements to the press in which he lied regarding our proposal for the third round of talks. Mr Viera is trying to make the dialogues become another element in the propaganda war, and he has lied about the contents of our proposal. The FMLN-FDR have proposed that the talks should remain in private until agreements are reached. Msgr Rivera y Damas is the person responsible for announcing any agreement. This mechanism is precisely to prevent any distortion of the talks -- which is what to government is doing. Not only has Viera violated this requirement, but while in Bogota, Colombia, Napoleon Duarte has also been using propaganda measures regarding the third round of talks. The FMLN-FDR has not used the talks for propaganda purposes, because we believe that both sides must be serious and responsible for the talks to be successful. That is why we did not allow journalists to participate in the meeting in which the mediator met with our representatives in Morazan Department. In that regard, Radio Venceremos has not made any comments regarding our proposal. Duarte has not been serious and has not been responsible in this issue. He has used the talks for propaganda purposes, thereby revealing the government's lack of commitment to the talks.

We call on the press and the general public to tune in to our upcoming casts, because FMLN-FDR will announce a communique regarding the government's statements on the third round of talks. We shall also announce in this communique the contents of our proposal to clarify our position.

BORDER TRADE PROBLEM WITH COSTA RICA SOLVED

PA071505 Guatemala City Cadena de Emisoras Unidas in Spanish 0050 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] The almost 1-month-old border problem with the Republic of Costa Rica -- a result of Guatemala's abandoning the clearing house system -- was solved approximately an hour ago. The Costa Rican Government had categorically stated that our country could not take this step and, seeking to exert pressure, closed its borders to Guatemalan products.

President Cerezo announced this morning that a message had been sent to tell Costa Rica that Guatemala would take a similar measure; this produced a conclusion about an hour ago, with Costa Rica stating that its borders have been opened to Guatemalan products.

The economic problem that had existed between Guatemala and Costa Rica has been all but solved, although Costa Rica categorically stated in its answering message that an agreement must be drawn up, and a list must be prepared with the products that will be affected. The problem, which lasted almost a month, was solved thanks to the measures announced by the Guatemalan Government over the weekend and this morning. The Costa Ricans chose to open their borders because otherwise, Guatemalan markets would have been closed to their manufactured goods.

HONDURAN JOURNALISTS PROTEST ATTACK ON COLLEAGUE

PA071731 Tegucigalpa Televisora Hondurena in Spanish 0100 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Organized Honduran journalists marched this afternoon through Tegucigalpa's main streets in a demonstration that ended in front of the Government House.

The march began at the Journalists' House located in El Guanacaste neighborhood, continuing along the Peru Avenue, passing by the Central Park, and ending at the Presidential House.

Here, representatives from various journalists organizations demanded from the president of the Republic as well as from the commander in chief of the Armed Forces, a report on the attack suffered last Monday by journalist Rodrigo Wong Arevalo.

In replying to the journalists' demands, government spokesman Marco Tulio Romero said that the president of the Republic was the first to regret the attack. On behalf of President Jose Azcona Hoyo, Romero promised that a report on the attack will be issued, stressing that the investigations continue to clarify the incident.

ORTEGA'S 'CHICAGO PROPOSAL' PRESENTED TO U.S.

PA071419 Managua Radio Sandino in Spanish 0000 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] An official note, containing the eight-point Chicago Proposal made by President Daniel Ortega Saavedra to U.S. President Ronald Reagan during Ortega's recent trip to that U.S. city, was officially presented to the U.S. State Department by Carlos Tunnerman, Nicaraguan ambassador to Washington. Tunnerman met briefly with William Walker, assistant secretary of state for Inter-American affairs [title as heard]. During his meeting with Walker, Tunnerman reiterated point eight of the Nicaraguan proposal, which extends an open invitation for President Reagan to visit Nicaragua.

U.S. SENATE COMMITTEE APPROVES CONTRA AID

PA061943 Managua Sistema Sandinista Television Network in Spanish 0200 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Today, the Senate's Appropriations Committee approved the $100 million requested by President Reagan to finance the mercenary war. This was the last step before the U.S. Government's request is discussed in the full Senate. The $100 million in aid was approved by the lower house on 25 June. A group of senators have said that they will extend the discussion to prevent the voting before the Senate's recess, scheduled for September.

Today, demonstrations opposing Reagan's policy in Central American continued outside the Capitol. The demonstrators were also protesting the financing of the counterrevolutionary groups. Yesterday, 122 demonstrators were arrested.

Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti has called the $100 million requested by Reagan for his mercenaries an unfortunate action for peace in Central America. Sanguinetti is in Bogota, Colombia, where he will attend the inauguration of the new Colombian president.

RUIZ-LED DELEGATION VISITS SRV, LAOS, CAMBODIA

For reportage on the visit by a Nicaraguan Government delegation led by Henry Ruiz, member of the FSLN national leadership, to the SRV ending on 2 August, their 29-30 July visit to the People's Republic of Kampuchea, and their 31 July-1 August visit to the Lao People's Democratic Republic, see the Vietnam, Cambodia, and Laos sections of the 6 August Asia & Pacific DAILY REPORT.

Delegation Returns

PA070323 Managua Radio Sandino in Spanish 0000 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] The world solidarity that Nicaragua enjoys is the most powerful weapon against Reagan's attempts to destroy the Nicaraguan revolution. This statement was made by Commander of the Revolution Henry Ruiz, foreign cooperation minister, on his return to the country after visiting Vietnam, Kampuchea, and Laos. Commander Henry Ruiz said:

[Begin recording, in progress] ...in a systematic, and I would add, even accelerated manner, the world solidarity, the solidarity of all the progressive humankind. I have many anecdotes. When I traveled I met many people. They asked where I come from and when I say that I come from Nicaragua, immediate expressions of solidarity for Nicaragua were heard. People were amazed and curious. This was quite evident during Commander Ortega's trip to the United Nations, Chicago, and Denver. We are creating a feeling of solidarity that is very important for our country but also very important for the other peoples, including the U.S. people. Through their solidarity they are expressing the right of our people to independence, sovereignty, and self-determination. This is something new because it is universal solidarity -- solidarity of the peoples and citizens of the world, independent of the social and political regimes they (?live under). [end recording]

5-YEAR TRADE PROTOCOL SIGNED WITH ROMANIA

FL071358 Havana Radio Progreso Network in Spanish 1100 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Cuba and the Socialist Republic of Romania will increase trade during the current 5-year period by almost 20 percent compared to the last 5-year period. According to a protocol signed in Havana by Ion Ceausescu, minister state secretary and first deputy chairman of Romania's State Committee, and Jose Lopez Moreno, president of the Central Planning Board, ceonomic cooperation between the two countries will be expanded during the 5-year period.

Cuba will supply Romania sugar, nickel, and new mechanical and electronics goods and will receive from Romania a factory for parts, equipment, and chemical industry supplies, as well as stainless steel for appliances and buses.

The Romanian representative expressed his satisfaction over the development of the talks he conducted with Cuba's Council of State President Commander in Chief Fidel Castro. He said these talks are very important for strengthening relations between the two nations.

BRAZIL TO SUPPLY AGRICULTURAL EQUIPMENT

FL072330 Havana Radio Rebelde Network in Spanish 2300 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Achilles de Resendo Lobo, Bamerindus bank director, said in Brasilia today that his country will sell agricultural equipment to Cuba valued at $10 million. The Brazilian banker also said that he will travel to Havana in the next few weeks to speak with Cuban authorities on the final details of that commercial transaction.

'OUR AMERICA' VIEWS ORTEGA 'CHICAGO PROPOSAL'

["Our America" commentary, read by Norberto Hernandez]

[Text] The willingness to negotiate to achieve a political solution to the crisis that threatens to involve all of Central America in a conflict was again expressed by the Nicaraguan Government through that country's president, Daniel Ortega, who has proposed the signing of a peace treaty with the United States.

This weekend all international press agencies echoed the statements Ortega made in Chicago, a city he visited during his U.S. tour. In front of a large audience at the Operation PUSH [People United To Serve Humanity] organization, Ortega added that he wants to speak with President Ronald Reagan, but Reagan has refused to see him. Despite Reagan's refusal, President Ortega invited his North American counterpart to visit Nicaragua so that he can speak to the Nicaraguan people and authorities. If the U.S. President were to accept such a positive offer, he could evaluate just how much the aggression he has promoted affects a country he knows nothing about.

He could also note that the true freedom fighters are not the members of the mercenary groups, to which he gives increasing amounts of financial and military aid, but the people whose morale increases in response to each terrorist attack, and who do not despair, despite the aggressions.

However, the U.S. President has decided that it is easier and better serves his interests to close his eyes, blindly point to Nicaragua on the map, and then run the same fingler along the entire Central American zone to involve it in a war which in the long run will be just as harmful for U.S. policy as Vietnam was. If this were not the case, the U.S. President would long ago have stopped squeezing the taxpayers' pockets to initiate the new escalation he began when he granted $100 million to the former Somozists, while blackmailing several Central American countries and pressing them to make war against Nicaragua.

In this regard, the Nicaraguan Government a few days ago reported at the International Court of Justice in The Hague on the use of Honduran and Costa Rican territories as U.S. bases of aggression against the Sandinist revolution. This fact alone shows the United States' true intentions, which in no way are based upon talks; on the contrary, they are based on sabotaging any efforts to achieve peace, such as, for example, the efforts of the Contadora Group.

Recently, Brigadier General Joaquin Cuadra Lacayo, Nicaraguan deputy defense minister, said that the millions of dollars the United States has granted the counterrevolution is a political fact that will not improve the mercenaries' situation but could lead to an escalation that would imply direct U.S. participation in the undeclared war against Nicaragua. In this decisive phase, only talks could offer the alternative of peace that Nicaragua deserves so much, but so far the only response to Nicaragua's offers has been silence.

SALVADORAN STAND ON DIALOGUE 'PROPAGANDA SHOW'

PA031810 Havana International Service in Spanish 2300 GMT 2 Aug 86

["Our America" commentary, read by Norberto Hernandez]

[Text] The Salvadoran Army is currently carrying out two big operations that involve displacing civilians under the pretext of depriving the guerrillas of support. As a result of these operations, the Salvadoran Army has already removed all the inhabitants of 20 cantons and villages in the Departments of Cabanas, Cuscatlan, and San Miguel.

This information has been provided by Radio Venceremos, official mouthpiece of the FMLN. Radio Venceremos has reported that four elite battalions and regional forces of the Salvadoran Armed Forces are participating in these operations and that these government forces, in addition to repressing the civilian population, are destroying crops and other property of the peasants. Venceremos has charged that the people removed from these areas are being tortured in Army barracks, where they are kept as prisoners.

This is not the first time that the regime of Jose Napoleon Duarte has carried out removal operations. In the past, and using the same excuse, hundreds of peasants have been expelled from their places of birth. Many of those peasants carried out a march to the capital and have protested the inhuman measures at the Metropolitan Cathedral.

Those government actions form part of the counterinsurgency campaign of the Christian Democratic Party regime that on the one hand speaks of dialogue with the rebels, and on the other ferociously represses the civilian population in open violation of human rights. At the same time that it pursues its antiguerrilla campaign, the Duarte regime continues evading the rebels' insistent proposals to hold the dialogue the regime publicly accepted a few months ago.

Government proposals and counterproposals are delaying the talks, talks that could lead -- if the government were to act honestly -- to the end of the frustration of broad national sectors interested in finding a political solution to the conflict and peace. The FMLN and the FDR recently issued a communique proposing a public debate that should lead to the creation of favorable conditions for holding the third round of talks, because, they affirmed, it is necessary for the people to know beforehand the positions and ideas of the parties in conflict if the negotiations are to be successful.

It is because of this that the guerrillas have opposed the inadmissible government proposal of holding private meetings prior to the dialogue, because this implies discussing the government's premise that the guerrillas put down their weapons and join the electoral process. The rebels said: Private meetings would make sense only after there is a public commitment to guarantee the continuity of the dialogue, to respect agreements, and to analyze proposals from the two parties and other large groups.

Meanwhile, the Salvadoran regime has not yet established a date or place for holding the talks and is maintaining the repression of civilians. To date, the acceptance of the dialogue seems to be just part of a new propaganda campaign.

CHAMBERS TO INVESTIGATE 'DISTURBING MATTERS'

FL052358 Bridgetown CANA in English 2343 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, Aug 5, CANA -- Trinidad and Tobago's Prime Minister George Chambers says he plans consulting some of his ministers to decide what action to take against extremely disturbing allegations made by government supporters in neighbouring Tobago, where the opposition controls Parliament. Chambers did not detail the allegations, but the press here quoted sources at the meeting as saying they related to job victimisation of the ruling party's members, abuses of the school feeding programme, and the Tobago administration's financial affairs. The charges were made Sunday when Chambers met groups representing the two Tobago east and west constituencies. It was Chambers' first visit to the island since his Peoples National Movement (PNM) was defeated 11-1 in the November 1984 Tobago House of Assembly (THA) elections.

According to my notes, said Chambers, who reduced his speech from the usual hour to about five minutes, there is a common thread running through the contributions of the several members this morning which is far more serious than has arisen in any other meeting before. You have raised some extremely disturbing matters which will require consultation between me and some other ministers. He added: You have raised very, very serious matters. You have alleged very, very serious matters about which I have no alternative but to seek consultation with other persons and such action as is required to be taken.

Joint Constituency Chairman George Phillips had earlier called for Tobago PNM members to let political leader Chambers know of their problem. Sources within the meeting said that the problems were to do with alleged victimisation in employment and services being experienced by known PNM supporters, the Trinidad GUARDIAN newspaper said. PNM members had also reported a scandal in the island's school feeding programme with inadequate food being given to children and food items being channelled off elsewhere. Others had, reportedly, accused the opposition controled THA of having a fixed deposit account in a bank whilst complaining of not having funds to pay its workers.

The parliament in Tobago is controlled by National Alliance for Reconstruction (NAR). Its THA member, Hochoy Charles, today denied such charges. Charles told the Trinidad EXPRESS newspaper that the THA does not appoint anyone to jobs -- this being the role of the Public Services Commission in Trinidad. We don't get involved in that kind of foolishness, said Charles. It is because they were like that, the people of Tobago have kicked out the PNM.

ALFONSIN DISCUSSES GROUP OF SIX MEETING

PY110210 Buenos Aires BUENOS AIRES HERALD in English 10 Aug 86 p 15

[Text] (NA) -- President Raul Alfonsin returned early yesterday from his trip to Colombia and Mexico and said chances were Argentina could be more useful now in the struggle for world peace -- a reference to the Declaration of Mexico which proposed means of verifying an end to nuclear arms and nuclear testing. The president immediately reassumed the office he had delegated to Vice-president Victor Martinez.

In a brief exchange with journalists Alfonsin said on the declaration issued by the Group of Six "I don't believe we should overact, but anyway I think conditions are propitious to think of distension and we are trying to help in this."

On the U.S. decision to subsidize sales of grains to the Soviet Union, Alfonsin said "we are going to continue protesting, to complain as befits, as we have been doing, and will see what response we get."

Foreign Minister Dante Caputo told reporters aboard the aircraft bringing Alfonsin and him back from Bogota that the task ahead for the Contadora group in seeking peace in Central America was difficult but the determination was firm to achieve their end. "If the law of the jungle should rule in Latin America our nations would be seriously damaged and however complex it may be, a diplomatic solution is infinitely less expensive than a war," he said.

Caputo, who represented Argentina at the inauguration of the new Colombian President, Virgilio Barco Vargas on Thursday, and met with Contadora representatives said they were all agreed as a mechanism for solving conflicts.

ALFONSIN WOULD ACCEPT UN TROOPS IN FALKLANDS

[Text] London, 10 Aug (EFE) -- Argentine President Raul Alfonsin has told THE OBSERVER that he would accept the temporary presence of UN troops in the Malvinas Islands as a solution to the conflict with Great Britain.

In an interview with the British newspaper THE OBSERVER published today, Alfonsin said that the presence of UN troops for a period of time would not be unthinkable for Argentina. However, he said his government would never permit the presence of foreign troops to guarantee the rights of the inhabitants once the archipelago is returned to Argentina.

Alfonsin told THE OBSERVER the desire of the islanders that the territory remain under British rule directly clashes with Argentina's firm position claiming sovereignty over the islands. "We do not want aggression," he stated. "We want solutions, no matter how diverse. We want solutions that do not place a burden on one's shoulder."

He did not discuss the possibility of granting some type of broad autonomy to the islands, and added that Argentina could allow the inhabitants to move to other places if they so desired. Alfonsin explained that "we would do anything they wanted. We would purchase the land from them at the best prices, and we would grant them whatever they needed to move anywhere in the world."

Alfonsin expressed disappointment over the inflexible position displayed by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher so far. Alfonsin told THE OBSERVER: "I think we should sit at the table and solve the problems. It would be very convenient for the Argentine and British peoples to find solutions" to the conflict.

CENTRAL BANK ANNOUNCES INTEREST RATE HIKES

[Text] (NA-DYN) -- The Central Bank last night announced an interest rate hike of about 25 percent, marking the first of a series of anti-inflationary measures drawn up by economic authorities in the wake of the upsurge of inflation.

The packet, reportedly aimed at "depressing dollar sales and speculation," was due to be reviewed by President Raul Alfonsin late last night or today.

The new rate levels as from Monday are: 4.5 percent for 7 to 14-day deposits (up from 3 percent); 4.7 percent for 15 to 22 days (up from 3.10 percent); 5 percent for 23 to 29 days (up from 3.40 percent) and 5.5 percent for 30 days and over (up from 4.20 percent). Free interest rates rise from 5.7 to 7 percent, while ordinary savings account interest rates increase from 3 to 4.5 percent. The financial measures were announced last night after lengthy deliberations by the Central Bank board of directors.

PAZ DELIVERS STATE OF UNION ADDRESS TO CONGRESS

PY070405 La Paz Domestic Service in Spanish 1954 GMT 6 Aug 86

[State of the nation address by President Victor Paz Estenssoro to opening session of Congress -- live]

[Excerpts] Your Excellency, Vice President of the Republic and President of the honorable National Congress; Messrs Presidents of the honorable Senate of and of the Chamber of Deputies; Messrs representatives of the Supreme Court; Messrs Ministers of state; honorable Congress members, honorable members of the diplomatic corps; civilian, military and church authorities; ladies and gentlemen:

In compliance with the Constitution we are today before congress, the expression of the democratic preference of the people, to account for what we have done during the past year of government and to express the hopes we harbor after having fulfilled our 1st year. This year has been unmistakably characterized by the enormous difficulties we have been able to overcome because of our determination to rescue the country from the tragic situation it was experiencing.

The 171st anniversary of Bolivia's independence finds us at the beginning of a 2d year of a constitutional government. The fact that this government was elected by the will of the people in keeping with the Constitution shows that it is undoubtedly the will of the Bolivian people to live in democracy, which is the most civilized way to safeguard the rights of freedom and the civilian prerogatives that are established by law.

Our praise of democracy is always appropriate for educational and civic purposes, in view of the turbulent past that our country has experienced.

The tradition of irreversible political difficulties, coupled with personal ambitions which overlooked damage to the nation, have permanently marked the pages of our nation's history. This also showed a lack of organization in our political past and an incapacity to restore institutional normalcy as an invulnerable principle.

The evolution of Bolivia's seditious history led to the establishment of the most absurd, adventurous formulas which were bound to lead to backwardness, arbitrary measures, and anarchy. This ill-practiced phenomenon violently interrupted, less than 3 years after independence had been proclaimed, the normal and peaceful progress of the government headed by the marshal of Ayacucho, Antonio Jose de Sucre. [passage omitted]

In the past few years we Bolivians have fortunately learned an important lesson: to live in keeping with democratic rules that allow us to program the future; to eradicate the negative events at the national level; and to consolidate the law instead of having arbitrary and chaotic occurrences.

To uphold at any price the observance of a legal system, with its basic regulations, as a prerequisite to resolve complex national issues has become a challenge for all Bolivians who aspire to lead the nation onto a path of political development that will project itself at the social and economic level.

The pact that has been achieved with the Nationalist Democratic Action [ADN] to cope with the power balance among the various parties represented in congress and to provide democracy with a firm foundation has helped us to achieve a reasonable stability in the restless world of politics for the good of all Bolivians.

This agreement, achieved between the government and the most important opposition party, truly constitutes an unusual event in Bolivian history.

We are witnessing positive results of the normal development of the institutional system through the approval of a package of important measures which are essential for this new path which seeks to resolve the most pressing problems the nation is confronting.

Although it is true that we have not yet fully achieved this ambitious objective, we are treading the right path, the true path that will allow us to resolve present problems.

We have not been helped in this by some severe [word indistinct] crisis which confronted an administration that was determined in overcoming an obviously complex inheritance.

Nevertheless, and despite the systematic opposition of some political and [words indistinct] of radical extraction, the majority of the people gave their support to a package of measures without which the negative effects of the crisis would have deepened even further.

In view of this understanding and the collective sacrifice that it entailed, I hereby express my recognition to the people, and I reassert that an effort of such magnitude will not be in vain because the days of true relief are now nearer than when we undertook the task of saving the country from disaster.

Today we are morally afflicted when we witness poverty and when we have to request the majority of Bolivians to endure yet more difficulties to be able to definitely overcome the crisis that is overwhelming us.

More than anyone would believe, I constantly think about the children, women, and men who suffer because they still lack the goods and services that all human beings deserve.

We in the government have not created the crisis, nor have we deepened it. We have been confronted with the most difficult of tasks: to salvage the nation from bankruptcy and to set it along a better course. This is what we have done with patience and perseverance. Committing ourselves to this unavoidable duty, there will be no difficulty, no matter how great, or opposition, no matter how well-planned, that will discourage us from continuing with this task, which we believe is a service for our people.

The government I preside over believes that to work for this is a serious commitment that has been assumed with responsibility. It will allow us to overcome the problems arising from extreme poverty and give our people the hope that tomorrow will be better than today.

This is not mere demagoguery or circumstantial popularity. The government's actions have sought to correct the real causes of economic and social unrest without any thought other than that of serving the high interests of the nation.

There are indications that the economy, which is still weak and vulnerable, is beginning to experience a recovery. It is not my intention to give the false impression that we have overcome all the difficulties or that we are on the verge of achieving a prompt recovery. I am only referring to certain economic indicators which irrefutably show that the nation is responding to the current economic reorganization process. We should not be astonished by the fact that this policy is yielding favorable results. After a long period in which the nation's economy was adrift, and after having reached the peak of the crisis, any positive change, no matter how modest, shows that we are advancing along the proper path.

However, this path, and I repeat this with a teacher's insistence, has not yet been made accessible to all our hopes, all our needs and the just ambitions to which the people have a right to aspire.

Let us live in peace without surrendering democracy, which is a precious victory we cherish, and which we can proudly show. Let us overcome the threats and (?biased) behavior which do not help to resolve essential problems. Let us be certain that the overwhelming misfortune will be overcome if each and everyone of us, with the patience and greatness that brings encouragement in adversities, starts to march and everyone, in the proper area of influence, acts with determination. Thus we will see how our fatherland will overcome its paralysis.

I hope this invocation is not taken as an autocratic gesture. I do so for the sake of a young democracy that deserves to be able to reach maturity in order to achieve a fruitful objective.

The nation's somber panorama that prevailed in essential social and economic areas when we assumed the government showed us that the task which lay ahead was not an easy or light one; that we had to dedicate all the hours possible to resolve the great problems that had accumulated.

In addition to the effort we had to make to achieve the recovery of Bolivia, we had to confront a series of conflicts which made the task even harder. It is not for our own benefit or because we are an elitist and selfish group that we have taken up this duty of governing a people. I am giving all I can of myself, and sometimes I am attacked for being unable to resolve now the great needs and problems that have been dragging for many years. (?It is not) out of a lack of sensitivity or extreme harshness that we do not grant everything that is requested [words indistinct] throughout the nation. To be truthful, I must say that the government over which I preside cannot grant everything that is demanded of it without unleashing the imminent danger of a galloping inflation about which we already have bitter experience.

To avoid inflation, to consolidate monetary stability, and to reactivate the production apparatus is the basic plan to overcome a situation that has impoverished an entire nation. This is not a chaotic plan, and I honestly state that we do not believe any other plan of action can reverse a situation that has reached exasperating levels. There is no magic formula to instantly transform a situation of obvious bankruptcy in to one of flourishing well-being.

The evil that has undermined the nation with the stagnation of development, the growth of an unproductive bureaucracy, considerable losses in state-run companies, the foreign debt; rampant corruption; and persistent [words indistinct] instead of confronting the hard truth, has resulted in today's afflictions.

The lack of control of the economy had reached such alarming levels that there was no opportunity to enforce isolated or superficial correction measures: measures to repair the damaged economic sector. It was necessary to adopt great economic policy solutions, and this is what was done to resolutely confront the problems at their roots. These were obviously not policies that would initially satisfy all Bolivians or be acclaimed by the people, although if studied coldly and with a view toward the future, they would have benefited all Bolivians.

The radical unions and political sectors whose popularity was in jeopardy tenaciously opposed these measures to block the national economic and financial reorganization. Despite all obstacles and biased opposition, we issued Decree No 21060 which laid the foundation for a rational economic reorganization which is the backbone of the present realistic and unequivocal policy that will save the country from the disaster toward which it was unavoidably heading.

In view of the prevailing economic chaos, we carried out an integral action plan by establishing an exchange parity which objectively reflected the true economic situation (?which for) a long time lacked any export incentives. We did this by eliminating the deficit that the central government was experiencing through a considerable increase of the meager income in the general treasury; by establishing real prices in the sale of hydrocarbons produced by YPFB [Bolivian Government Oil Deposits]; and by simultaneously establishing a drastic decrease in expenses.

Decree No 21060 also encompassed measures to regulate state-run companies, particularly those in the hydrocarbons and mining-metallurgical areas.

Within the framework of the anti-inflation policy, the government established a salary reorganization for the public sector while it established that workers in the private sector were able to negotiate their salaries through agreements between the labor and business sectors.

With the purpose of systematizing the government's financial management, the government submitted to Congress the budget of the public sector. With the amendments that were introduced, this budget was issued through Law [words indistinct]. It is necessary to note the importance of the existence of a budget law to handle public expenses. The significance of this law, which has deep democratic meaning, is evident if we take into account that this is the first time in about 40 years, that Congress has approved a budget law.

Because the national budget was financed through the income produced by the state-run oil company, which can only be an emergency resource, and because the present regime has shown a need for taxes in view of widespread tax evasion, we submitted a tax reform bill to Congress. This bill and some amendments were passed by Congress as Law No 843 on 20 May. The corresponding decrees are beginning to be issued. Once taxes yield the estimated results, the national treasury will not only have a more rational source of income but because of its resources it will also be able to pay better salaries to government workers and to attend to the different national areas better.

Since Bolivia presently lacks the capacity to produce domestic savings and thus lacks the capital needed to reactivate its economy, we have signed a stand-by agreement with the IMF. We have also renegotiated the foreign debt with the Paris Club. These achievements will allow us access to foreign bilateral and multilateral credits that have been frozen for several years.

The results that have been achieved by the economic reorganization measures since their enforcement are eloquently demonstrated in the following figures. In 1985 the accumulated inflation rate reached the unprecedented average of 11.750 percent while at the end of the present fiscal year we have an average inflation rate of 92 percent. The difference is abysmal, and it needs no commentaries. [sentence as heard] The price of dollars in the first 6 months of 1985 increased by 53.8 percent per month while in the last 6 months, the dollar rate has stabilized itself to about 1,905,000 Bolivian pesos per dollar, thus guaranteeing regular prices for imported products and allowing for the normal flow of currency derived from exports.

The Central Bank's net reserves, which in July 1985 totaled only $13.5 million, today total over $169.3 million. The deficit in 1984 was 30.71 percent of the GDP. In the last 6 months it has recorded a virtual balance as a result of the responsible handling of the financial flow in the national treasury, the central administration, and public companies.

To date, the nation has honored all its commitments with multinational credit organizations, and in so doing it has allowed for the contraction of new credits. The amount repaid in the 6 August 1985-July 1986 period totals $219,369,000. Moreover, the credit organizations have granted us $288,273,000 over the same period.

In addition to the old crisis affecting the mining and metallurgical sector, we have experienced in recent years the lack of a comprehensive policy to confront the serious problems that were affecting a key economic sector. This lack is now obvious as the mining sector is being punished by a virtually vertical fall in tin prices and a general decrease in the prices of other minerals.

We must also note other negative factors such as the previous monetary policy, which far from promoting exports, hindered them by enforcing an unreal exchange rate. Also, the enforcement of a system of allotment of foreign currency that did not favor those who generated it. In sum, this was the legacy that the government inherited. It was compelled to design a new policy that sought to amend existing distortions with the objective of eradicating, or at least reducing, the deficit to reasonable levels while at the same time achieving an increase in exports. Unfortunately, the international situation was a negative element in view of the price fall which seriously affected the availability of currency and income for both the national treasury and the [word indistinct] departments.

In view of the collapse of the tin mining sector, to which the solution is not seen in the short term, the government has drafted some general guidelines regarding policies to be enforced for this sector. The mining sector, which was predominantly centered on tin mining, will be reoriented to the export of high-value minerals such as gold, silver, [name indistinct] complexes and other nontraditional minerals both metal and nonmetal. The exploitation of tin will be confined to those high-purity deposits which can be profitable in view of the present international market situation. There is new hope regarding additional tin deposits in Beni and Pando Departments, which can be exported at low cost. [passage omitted]

Important complementary work for the extension of the Concani microwave system with Argentina with a capacity of 960 channels has been concluded. [passage omitted]

The serious economic deterioration and the constant actions by labor union movements gave the state social organizations a busy time seeking solutions to the various disputes, many of which were illegal. A glance at statistics will show that in 1984 the country lost a total of 2,573 work days because of 501 strikes and stoppages in various sectors. From January through July 1985, 1,131 work days were lost in 229 stoppages This situation changed in August 1985. In the year since, we have had 183 strikes and stoppages with a total loss of 695 work days. The country is returning to normal, although slowly and with difficulty. [passage omitted]

The state's power has diminished in the past few years because of systematic actions by social, economic, and regional groups which in some cases through acts of force, were able to impose their interests above the measures taken by the government. As a consequence, the country reached the brink of anarchy. The priority task of the new government was to restore the principle of authority, because its enforcement, in keeping with the laws, is essential in any organized society. We carried out this task without abuses or arbitrariness. We strictly abided by the Constitution, not only because it was the undeniable duty of any government, but also because we believed that in doing so we were preserving the democratic regime.

The measures adopted in the economic field on 29 August were violently rejected by those who saw a threat to the parallel de facto power they exercised. In view of this open rejection and in view of the damage to some state assets, we were forced to take the emergency measures provided for in our laws. We proceeded with great care in implementing these laws, only restricting the individual rights of those who openly ignored the laws and created a state of social commotion. Now that this moment of unrest has been overcome, the entire citizenry, without exception, enjoys all constitutional guarantees.

We have faced the problem of drug trafficking in our country and the rest of the world with courage and calm. Its expansion and threat prompts us to regard it as a universal crime without limits. If we tolerated it we would be guilty of a flagrant crime against mankind. To implement an isolated and nonsystematic campaign with insignificant financial (?resources) and an inadequate structure is unfeasible because of the drug traffickers' great economic power and the network of criminals engaged in the drug production and in trafficking, and the numerous ins and outs of the vast distribution of drugs in the consumer markets.

As Pope John Paul II has stated, it is obvious that drug trafficking and consumption have created a new vice in the world which must be eradicated to prevent it from causing material and moral harm. Therefore, an all-out war must be launched against this dreadful scourge. It would be frankly absurd to resort only to traditional weapons to confront this new crime. This is why the government has carried out a joint operation with the aid of the U.S. specialized mechanisms with the purpose of curbing drug production and trafficking in our country.

The presence of a U.S. Justice Department personnel and a binational antidrug operation stems from a shared point of view in the struggle against drug trafficking, which causes us so much moral damage in the eyes of the rest of the world. It should be pointed out that on 11 August 1983 Bolivia and the United States signed an agreement to participate in joint actions to control and repress drug trafficking and to reduce the production of coca leaves. Within the OAS framework, Resolution No 699 of 14 January 1984 expressly recognized the universal scope of the illegal traffic of drugs and dangerous substances by declaring that, quote, drug trafficking is a crime against mankind and must be punished accordingly, unquote.

The United Nations, the OAS, and other international organizations, such as the Andean Parliament, have consistently pointed out that the international nature of drug trafficking requires repressive action on an international scale. On 11 August 1984 in Quito the presidents of Bolivia, Colombia, Venezuela, and Ecuador signed a declaration stating that the increase of organized crime due to drug trafficking and illegal drug use had surpassed the limits of isolated actions by the countries, and as a consequence, it is necessary to take multilateral actions. They also considered drug trafficking a crime against mankind which should be punishable accordingly. On 28 May the Foreign Ministry sent a note to U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz stating that, quote, on balance, the actions undertaken in Bolivia with the cooperation of the U.S. government within the framework of the struggle against this international crime, is not satisfactory. The police, land and air resources, weapons, effective support for carrying out intelligence operations, etc, are obviously weak compared to the magnitude and power of the resources of this organized crime. Surveillance operations carried out by our police forces with U.S. technical aid represent the major factor of this struggle, unquote.

The note adds that, quote, the quantity of cooperation is absolutely insufficient, the programs are not coordinated within the framework of an overall strategy, despite the fact that it was proposed to the U.S. Government in 1982. Moreover, we believe that in view of a crime of such serious ethical, biological, and social consequences this program not only affects the interests of our country but also those of the people of the entire international community and, in particular, the United States and the European industrialized nations where addiction to this vice has increased, unquote.

But it must be pointed out that a greater U.S. effort to eradicate increasing drug trafficking and addiction within its own territory is necessary for this antidrug campaign to be more effective. We are aware that we are one of the parties involved in this campaign but we expect a more integrated struggle from our partners.

The prospects are worrisome. In the huge problems stemming from drug trafficking, Bolivia only occupies a small part of the map of the world and is only a secondary (?link) in the large chain of billions of narcodollars. We have an unavoidable commitment to our people and to all the people of the world to launch a profound struggle against drug trafficking and we hope that in this difficult task no Bolivian citizen who loves his fatherland will refuse or remain indifferent to this national task which affects our dignity.

The strictly institutional behavior of the Armed Forces and their support to the democratic and constitutional regime is praiseworthy. A new concept of the Armed Forces intrinsic functions has replaced former concerns which in the past have diminished the respect they deserve. The Armed Forces have behaved in a responsible manner when it was necessary to implement emergency measures to safeguard constitutional order threatened by general strikes. Mention should also be made of the regular manner in which military activities have been carried out despite drastic budget cuts. Military functions have developed within the framework of the Constitution and its organic law, without divisions of any sort. It is only fair to point out that the republic should be thankful to its Armed Forces. [passage omitted]

In keeping with its foreign policy, Bolivia has carried out intensive actions in the field of bilateral relations with friendly nations as well as in the multilateral field.

The relative international isolation and the loss of credibility which marked the previous administrations because of an unfavorable foreign front and other obstacles, such as an internal anarchic regime, have been overcome through a policy of contacts and opening. The results of this policy can be appreciated in the current image of security and confidence that Bolivia has abroad.

The government confirms its support of the basic principles that guide the international and regional organizations as well as of the postulates of the Nonaligned Movement. Bolivian foreign policy is aimed at increasing and intensifying diplomatic relations with all the countries of the world by upholding dialogue and by respecting the principles of equality among the states; self-determination; nonintervention and noninterference in domestic affairs; respecting sovereignty and human rights; criticizing and repudiating all forms of racism; rejecting any forms of colonialism or neocolonialism; opposing the use of force with the purpose of usurping or occupying foreign territory; condemning the new criminal practice of international terrorism and all nations that oppose establishing a peaceful world community; supporting total disarmament, particularly to avoid the threat of a thermonuclear war; support a new international economic order, cooperation and development. These are the main aspects of the Bolivian theory for the peace, well-being, and developing of human beings.

At this moment the Bolivian Government's foreign policy is mainly focused on strengthening economic and cooperation relations to increase and intensify the currents of investments and supporting development and cooperation for the implementation of a new economic policy to promote monetary stability and the reactivation of the productive apparatus.

The first international action is related to obtaining an emergency social fund from the United Nations. This measure had the support of outstanding international personalities like Venezuelan President Jaime Lusinchi, Spanish President Felipe Gonzalez, and, especially, UN Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Despite budget restrictions, several international bilateral meetings have been scheduled for the purpose of reactivating the joint cooperation commissions to diversify and execute programs of common interest.

Following trips by the Bolivian foreign minister to Argentina, the PRC, and Spain, as well as visits to Bolivia by the cooperation ministers of The Netherlands and the FRG, the Peruvian foreign minister, and the UN secretary general, and negotiations carried out by our ambassadors, meetings of joint commissions and specialized commissions have been held, after many years of interruption, in Argentina, the PRC, Peru, the FRG, the Soviet Union, and Brazil. The vice premier and the planning and coordination minister of the ROK visited Bolivia seeking cooperation and strengthening of links.

Regarding the century-old problem of our landlocked situation, the recognition of and solidarity with the Bolivian cause has been reiterated by regional organizations and the Nonaligned Movement.

Anyone who carefully observes Latin America's international situation realizes that we are experiencing a new era. One of the main characterstics of this new era is the seeking of a solution through dialogue or arbitration to century-old problems that have prevented a more fraternal coexistence between nations of the same origin and future. Within this context we have taken the initial steps for a rapprochement with Chile with the purpose of creating a climate that will allow a negotiated solution of mutual benefit regarding the main problem as well as agreements on other regional issues.

Relations with the Catholic Church are cordial, based on mutual respect and understanding. Mention should be made of the imminent Christian task being carried out by the Catholic Church as well as by some Evangelical congregations, which carry out active pastoral, social, and cultural assistance activities in favor of the most needy sectors.

It should be pointed out that the benefits obtained by Bolivia from the integration process have not made its foreign trade more dynamic. Within the Andean Group's case, our exports of $48 million in 1980 dropped to $16,230,000 in 1985. Bolivia has participated intensely in the [word indistinct] integration systems based on the following guidelines: the need to turn integration into an effective tool of support for countries facing adversity; the priority treatment that should be granted to the agricultural, agro-industrial sectors and their physical infrastructures; keeping in mind that their development and technical improvement, consolidate, broaden, and diversify the productive systems in activities such which we are certain will be competitive; the preferential treatment of freight; greater commercial opportunities; and favorable conditions granted by the financial institutions to the southern region.

On our independence day, I wish to conclude by calling on all Bolivians, whatever their social or political position to build together the nation our forefather envisaged when Bolivia -- which was named after Bolivar -- emerged as a nation. I envisage a better future for all Bolivians but, to ensure our future, we all must make the necessary effort to make Bolivia a nation with progress and social justice to promote a better life for everyone. In this endeavor, I extend a fraternal invitation to all Bolivians to undertake this great task for which our children will feel a legitimate pride.

BEDREGAL SAYS U.S. ANTIDRUG AID 'UNSATISFACTORY'

PY092234 La Paz La Red Panamericana in Spanish 1130 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Excerpt] According to a report from Bogota Bolivian Foreign Minister Guillermo Bedregal Gutierrez has said that the U.S. conduct in the struggle against drug trafficking in Bolivia is unsatisfactory and that the resumption of relations with Chile has not been discussed.

Bedregal, who has been in Bogota since 6 August representing the government of Victor Paz Estenssoro at the Colombian presidential inauguration, met on several occasions with his Chilean counterpart Jaime del Valle. Bedregal stated that the U.S. effort to reduce coca growing in Bolivia has been minimal in comparison to the high percentage of U.S. drug consumption. The struggle against the demand for the drug within U.S. territory is not enough and should be increased. Bedregal added that a single country cannot be held responsible for drug trafficking and that it is the responsibility of the international community to face this crime.

During a press conference Guillermo Bedregal pointed out that the meetings with Chilean Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle were cordial, but explained that the resumption of diplomatic relations with Chile was not even mentioned. He added that the meetings with Del Valle were relaxed, cordial, and friendly. He said: We discussed international issues and agreed to continue in the conversations during the UN General Assembly in New York in September. [passage omitted]

GOVERNMENT SETS DEBT REPAYMENT CEILING

PY081631 Sao Paulo Radio Bandeirantes in Portuguese 1600 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] According to the JORNAL DO BRASIL news agency, Brazil does not (?intend) to transfer more than $5 billion to meet its foreign debt obligations. The agency has reported that the decision has already been made at the highest government level and that other Latin American countries, with which President Jose Sarney has exchanged views on the subject, will announce that they too have established ceilings for their foreign debt repayments.

The agency said that a continental solidarity has emerged, based on the principle that the countries that are facing difficulties cannot jeopardize their economic growth to serve big creditors. In addition to establishing the $5-billion ceiling, Brazil maintains that creditors must suggest formulas for renegotiating its remaining obligations. The deadline given to the Brazilian Government for renegotiating a large portion of its debt will expire in October, when Brazil will have to reach a new agreement or adopt a unilateral decision.

DAILY REPORTS UNDERGROUND NUCLEAR FACILITIES

[Text] Brasilia, 8 Aug (AFP) -- The newspaper FOLHA DE SAO PAULO today reported that the Brazilian Government is building underground facilities for testing nuclear missiles and to store nuclear waste in southern Para State, which is in northern Brazil.

This information has not yet been officially denied. However, the newspaper quotes a presidential spokesman as saying that President Jose Sarney is not aware of any document on the subject. This afternoon the Brazilian Armed Forces staff will publish an official communique. FOLHA explained that the facilities are being built in a military zone in the Cachimbo range, 1,200 km north of Brasilia.

According to the newspaper, scientists from the Advanced Research Institute (IEAV) and the Space Research Institute (IAE), both part of the Sao Jose dos Campos space center, are participating in the project under Armed Forces staff supervision. Sao Jose dos Campos is located 100 km from Sao Paulo. The newspaper added that technicians from the Navy Research Center and the Sao Paulo Nuclear Research Institute have for several years been working on a nuclear weapon design project.

Plans for Nuclear Tests Denied

[Text] Brasilia, 8 Aug (AFP) -- A communique issued by the Presidency of the Republic today officially denied a report published by the newspaper FOLHA DE SAO PAULO that the Brazilian Government intends to construct in the south of Para State, in northern Brazil, underground installations to test nuclear bombs. The communigue stated that Brazil has no plan to produce nuclear weapons, does not have the necessary know-how to do so, and does not have any test programs in this field.

The text of the communique states that upon signing the Tlatelolco Treaty, the Brazilian Government committed itself to using nuclear energy exclusively for peaceful purposes.

Moreover, the communique states that the Serra do Cachimbo Military Base, which the newspaper mentioned as the site for the construction of a nuclear test base, is currently under the administration of the Aeronautics Ministry, which is carrying out projects to test material and equipment for the development of aerospace know-how, which is of interest to national security.

GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCES NUCLEBRAS REORGANIZATION

PY081555 Brasilia Radio Nacional da Amazonia Network in Portuguese 1000 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Excerpt] Nuclebras will be restructured following the new guidelines of Brazil's nuclear policy. Correspondent George Bamburger filed this report:

[Begin recording] [Bamburger] This information was released by Mines and Energy Minister Aureliano Chaves, who commented on President Jose Sarney's approval of a message that the ministry submitted to the presidency. The message recommends that the construction of the Angra II nuclear plant be completed and that Angra III be built.

[Chaves] We have decided what to do with the nuclear program. We will complete construction of Angra II and we will build Angra III. So this is where we stand now. What are our prospects? Faced with the current situation, we have to restructure Nuclebras, because this company was designed for a more ambitious nuclear program. Thus, it must be restructured, right? Now, we must also promote nuclear research, for which purpose we might have to transfer some employees. [end recording] [passage omitted]

CUT HEAD DISCUSSES BOARD ELECTION RESULTS

PY081200 Sao Paulo FOLHA DE SAO PAULO 5 Aug 86 p 6

[Text] Jair Meneguelli, president of the Sole Central Organization of Workers (CUT), has decided to request the opinion of the Interunion Department of Statistics and Socioeconomic Studies (DIEESE) regarding the results of the elections for the CUT's National Executive Board. He made this decision after a stalemate of 2 hours and 23 minutes due to arguments over the proportionality criteria which were adopted by the commission regarding the votes obtained by each of the three slates of candidates. Meneguelli promised to review the membership of the Executive Board in case it is found that there were mistakes in the application of the proportionality criteria. Meanwhile, the new executive board, of which Meneguelli is president, will now comprise 5 labor leaders with connections to clandestine leftist organizations and 10 labor representatives from the PT [Workers Party] and from the PDT [Democratic Workers Party].

The Second National Congress of the CUT took place in the Maracanazinho stadium in the northern part of the city. It ended at 0140 yesterday, after heated arguments between supporters of the three slates. The ballot was secret, and of the 5,181 delegates eligible to vote, 4,260 actually voted. Slate No. 1 obtained 2,522 votes; No. 2, 1,219; and No. 3, 466 votes. There were 19 invalid votes and 34 blank votes (these belonged to the recently created Workers Revolutionary Party). Therefore, slate No. 1 will have 10 members on the Executive Board and 3 substitutes; No. 2, 4 members and 1 substitute; and No. 3, 1 member and 1 substitute. In a press conference yesterday in the CUT offices in downtown; Rio de Janeiro, Meneguelli said that the CUT intends to bring rural and city workers closer together to jointly draw up a plan to fight violence in the countryside.

The CUT president also said that the organization receives donations in money from foreign organizations through agreements. He added that the government is aware of all donations because all the operations are made through the Central Bank. "I can guarantee that not 1 cruzado received through these agreements was used to organize the second National CUT Congress or to buy weapons," said Meneguelli.

GOODS USED TO PAY FOR SOVIET FREIGHT CHARGES

PY080336 Sao Paulo FOLHA DE SAO PAULO in Portuguese 7 Aug 86 p 33

[Text] Of the 100,000 tons of meat the government is buying from the EEC, 12,000 tons will be transported to Brazil in the holds of the Soviet ships "Kurskiy," "Arvid Perlshe," "Belgorod," and "Akademik Chaloney." The importation of meat has generated an unprecedented deal: Interbras [Petrobras International Trade, Inc], the trading branch of Petrobras, has signed a countertrade contract with the Soviet Union, whereby the freight charges for the Soviet cargo ships will be paid with Brazilian goods.

Interbras Executive Vice President Josemar Nascimento explained that the trading company only promotes trade, since shipments are handled by the Lloyd Brasileiro under existing legislation that makes it mandatory to ship imports in Brazilian-flag ships.

Since the state shipping company does not have enough cold storage ships to transport the meat being imported, Nascimento said, the natural solution is to contract cargo ships. Interbras, Nascimento continues, submitted to Lloyd Brasileiro the shipment price quoted by the Soviet enterprise Sovfracht. Since the Sovfracht price was the best, four of its ships were contracted.

According to Nascimento, the Soviet ships were contracted at an average price of $0.62 per ton. Loading of the Kursky has already begun in the Italian city of Bologne, according to Interbras. This first shipment of 3,000 tons will be unloaded at the port of Recife, Pernambuco state. The points of loading and unloading have not yet been determined for the three other ships.

The Interbras vice president said that the need to import meat made possible this deal with the Soviets, since there is difficulty in identifying Soviet products in which Brazil may have interest. It was decided to exchange services for products, when early this year Interbras learned of the availability of Soviet ships.

Under the contract, Soviet ships can also be hired for other purposes, such as the transport of crude oil. The contract stipulates that 85 percent of the freight cost be deposited in a special account in a Soviet Bank for purchase of Brazilian goods.

Instant coffee and textiles are some items in which the Soviet Union is interested and, according to Nascimento, two contracts have already been signed with two Soviet enterprises to export these products. Interbras, however, expects that these operations will not be concluded for 3 months, because samples and specifications of the merchandise are just now being submitted.

INTERVIEW WITH FOREIGN MINISTER DEL VALLE

PY091256 Santiago QUE PASA in Spanish 31 Jul-6 Aug 86 p 19

[Interview with Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle by unidentified reporter; date and place not given]

[Text] [Reporter] What is your opinion of the current status of Chilean foreign relations?

[Del Valle] International political organizations have orchestrated a political campaign against the Chilean Government. The influence of such organizations, which are very powerful, can be felt not only at the bilateral level, but also in multilateral forums. Some sensitive areas, like human rights, clearly reveal how such groups operate and exert their influence. From a political standpoint, this influence has caused animosity toward the Chilean Government in some countries with which we maintain cordial diplomatic relations. I am talking about South American countries. A foreign minister not long ago said that political problems "hinder" the economic ties with our country.

[Reporter] Were you talking about politics when you said that 90 percent of the countries are enemies of Chile and only 10 percent friends?

[Del Valle] I want to make it clear that this interpretation is an abuse on the part of the mass media in connection with a rhetorical phrase I used in an impromptu speech I delivered at a technical organization. This phrase must be interpreted within the context of the speech. Even though we are the target of international harassment, caused, for example, by human rights problems, and even though our friends do not seem to be so friendly to us, we are making progress on several domestic problems. When I said 90 percent I was giving an example. The figure is lower than the [human rights resolution against Chile] vote in Geneva and higher than the vote at the OAS. I deplore that so much has been said about a speech that received a standing ovation.

[Reporter] Why does the world public criticize Chile so strongly?

[Del Valle] The opposition has clearly said that the government must be destabilized in 1986. Consequently, they are concentrating their efforts this year. Chilean politicians have strongly, almost desperately, pressured their parties, and their action has yielded results, because countries have reacted and have let their voices be heard. But this strong pressure has failed because the political sanctions that they have desperately demanded have not been imposed. The Volio report, which was criticized because of its unfairness, admitted that there are pocitive things in Chile. The United States, for its part, has given up the aggressive policy it adopted early this year.

[Reporter] Yet the public believes exactly the opposite.

[Del Valle] The only exception was that of the painful case of the burned students, with all its consequences, which affected our normal relations with the United States. Since [U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Robert] Gelbard's visit there has been a trend toward normalization in our relations. I will not analyze what he said, but I believe he has been pretty clear. As an example, I can report that the Antaveri Airport [U.S.-sponsored project on Easter Island] will be dedicated in a few weeks.

[Reporter] Do you fear any economic retaliation by the United States?

[Del Valle] No. The U.S. State Department's response does not seem to point toward this. Everyone knows well that an economic sanction would not really affect the government, but it would affect the people. It would be absurd to apply such sanctions when it is widely recognized that Chilean economic policy is coherent and positive.

[Reporter] Aren't you afraid of the highly publicized U.S. motion against Chile in the United Nations regarding human rights?

[Del Valle] We must wait until the UN observer gets our reply, analyzes it, and becomes aware of the measures we will apply between now and October.

[Reporter] Which is not a long time...

[Del Valle] But there is the possibility of political legislation, according to the announcements by the Interior Ministry. New political issues may be raised.

[Reporter] In their recent meeting, the Chilean ambassadors said that the main cause of our political difficulties abroad are: the problem of exile Chileans, the stalled transition, and the government's lack of clarity regarding 1989.

[Del Valle] We have always experienced pressure regarding the exiled people. Our ambassadors have always requested that we study this subject. The government continues with these studies; there is full awareness of the influence of the exiled persons issue. Therefore, we always try to calm our ambassadors. (However, for the moment, there is nothing concrete on the subject.) Regarding the transition, a timetable has been established and the ambassadors must emphasize to the other countries that it will be followed.

[Reporter] The ambassadors say that no one believes them.

[Del Valle] They must show the timetable and stress that it will be complied with thoroughly. Before the end of the year the government will prove it keeps its promises. And regarding 1989, the president's clear and categorical speech to the mayors clarifies the outlook.

[Reporter] It is said that the existence of a military regime is not understood abroad, and that this fact will always hinder our relations.

[Del Valle] There are two great pressures on Chile: that of the USSR and its satellite countries, which will never forgive our "sin;" and that of democracy. Some countries are really more concerned with labels than with facts. These countries exert pressure, but they are forgetting that Chile sincerely wants democracy and that the 1980 Constitution, approved by a referendum, will lead us to full democracy.

[Reporter] With what country does Chile have good political relations?

[Del Valle] I will not answer that.

[Reporter] One of the arguments that demonstrates Chile's isolation is that the president makes few visits abroad and very few foreign dignitaries visit us.

[Del Valle] This can be answered by what I said before about Chile's international reality. Besides, we maintain good relations with Asia, Korea, Singapore, Pakistan, Egypt, Morrocco, Israel....

[Reporter] The Foreign Ministry's discrimination based on ideology is criticized. It almost seems like a crusade, like when Reagan and Gorbachev meet.

[Del Valle] That is an unjustified charge. The Soviet-orbit countries are the ones that are undertaking a crusade against us. We have expressed our wish to maintain with all the countries of the world so long as they respect our self-determination and the principle of nonintervention. The best example of this is our good relations with the PRC and Romania. This clearly shows that ideology is no obstacle to Chile's maintaining good relations with different countries.

INTERIOR MINISTER ON CHURCH RELATIONS, TORCHINGS

PY082047 Santiago EL MERCURIO in Spanish 1 Aug 86 p C3

[Excerpt] Chilean Interior Minister Ricardo Garcia Rodriguez yesterday said that he has never thought that relations between the government and the church has deteriorated. He added that he thinks that the two institutions have a profound respect for each other.

The interior minister discussed several matters of national interest in an informal talk with the press after having attended a ceremony at the Carabineros School.

Concerning General Fernando Matthei's statements in Punta Arenas on several political questions, Minister Garcia said that the words of the members of the Government Junta should not be commented upon by other government officials or by the executive branch.

He also refused to comment on the statements by Cardinal Fresno and the Supreme Court on the case of the torched youths. "We members of the government fully respect the autonomy of the judicial branch, and never comment on a situation which is pending. The decisions of the judicial branch are subject to what is established by the law and, consequently, I do not wish to comment on Cardinal Fresno's statements, or on the answers given him by the Supreme Court. It is a question that does not concern us as government officials, or as members of the executive branch. Therefore, it is not up to me to make any additional comment," he said.

Regarding the presence in Chile of U.S. lawyers, Garcia said that he believes that they have come to Chile in order to get to know how Chilean justice actually functions. He pointed out that in law there is a subject called Comparative Jurisprudence, which deals with foreign laws.

He added that the foreign lawyers will have the opportunity to learn several important things, because the Chilean legislation and its judicial organization follow extraordinarily important principles, which have even been learned and copied by other nations of the world. [passage omitted]

VIEWS DIFFER ON EXISTENCE OF TORCHING VIDEOTAPE

PY081435 Santiago LA TERCERA DE LA HORA in Spanish 2 Aug 86

[Text] Argentine television journalists have made contradictory statements to LA TERCERA DE LA HORA regarding the existence of a videotape of the burning of Rodrigo Rojas and Carmen Gloria Guintana.

Hugo Paredes of Channel 9 based in Rio Gallegos did not hesitate in the least to say: "The images we saw showed youths engulfed in flames."

[Reporter] Are you sure?

[Paredes] I am absolutely sure. The clips are real and were taken from a distance by a French television crew.

He then added that the videotape was shown about 10 days ago in the program Buenas Noches, Argentina, which is aired over a national network headed by Channel 13 in Buenos Aires.

[Reporter] Aren't they scenes reproduced by actors to dramatize the case?

[Paredes] I can assure you that they are not. What we saw were two youths on fire. The moment the fire starts is not seen, only two bodies in flames.

Considering the importance of this information, LA TERCERA DE LA HORA got in touch with Channel 13 in Buenos Aires in order to confirm the existence of that videotape. We explained to Channel 13 News Director Sergio Villaruel that the Bishopric of Magallanes had reported the existence of that videotape, which was seen by some people in Rio Gallegos. We read to him the papagraph that says that the videotape was seen "on a news program of the ATC television network which was carried by Channel 9 in Rio Gallegos."

A that point, the Argentine journalist interrupted the reading to say that "that statement entails confusion, because the ATC television network has nothing to do with Channel 9 in Rio Gallegos. This is the same thing as though in Santiago Channel 7 were confused with Channel 13, which are two totally different stations."

Villaruel then added that the program Buenos Noches, Argentina, which is transmitted throughout the country, has never carried a documentary showing two youths engulfed in flames. He vehemently affirmed: "Can you imagine if we had done something like that... it would be reported every day for a week on the front page of all the world's newspapers. We only showed some testimonies that were gathered by the SIN network, showing the place where the two youths were burned. We carried this as we would any other journalistic piece of information."

Villaruel also asserted that any such videotape would have nothing to do with French Television, because it did not send crews to Chile to report on these events.

Upon our insistence that a journalist at Channel 9 in Rio Gallegos had assured us that he saw the videotape in the program Buenos Noches, Argentina, Villaruel insisted that "this is false."

In a peevish mood he said goodby, adding that he was going to call Rio Gallegos to clear up this matter, "because this cannot remain as it is."

Rio Gallegos [subhead]

Puerto Natales, Rio Gallegos (by Alfredo Fernandez) -- The Rio Gallegos television station does not have nor has it transmitted any videotape on the case of the burned youths that took place in Santiago on 2 July.

In this city, LA TERCERA DE LA HORA contacted the Press Department of Channel 9 and talked with Carlos Fernandez, a journalist of the program Actualidad 9 of that television station.

Carlos Fernandez told us that all the information the station had received about that case came from Buenos Aires on the program Buenos Noches, Argentina on the national television network, adding that "neither officially nor clandestinely, has such a videotape been available here."

Bishop Gonzales

Punta Arenas (by Jose Calisto G.) -- All that the bishop of Punta Arenas, Monsignor Tomas Gonzalez, had to say about the case of the burned youths was said in communiques. Now, he only wants to see the case resolved, because, as Cardinal Juan Francisco Fresno said, the decision by Judge Echevarria was clearly insufficient to assuage the concern the case raised in the country. This comment was conveyed by Mauro Barrientos of the Bishopric Communications Department, who thus confirmed the Bishop of Magallanes' decision not to talk again about the videotape.

In a public statement released yesterday, Monsignor Gonzalez confirmed that he had seen in Santiago a videotape of the events leading to the death of Rodrigo Rojas Denegri and the serious burning of Carmen Gloria Quintana -- a videotape that is different from the one that has been shown in Concepcion.

AUTOPSY PERFORMED ON STUDENT LEADER MARTINEZ

[Excerpts] Santiago, 8 Aug (EFE) Radio Cooperativa tonight reported that the autopsy on student leader Mario Martinez Rodriguez does not rule out the possibility of suicide or homicide. According to a Cooperativa relay from the forensic institute, the autopsy revealed that the exact cause of his death was "drowning." The report adds that the possibility of "suicide or homicide has not been ruled out" and that toxicity examinations have been ordered to determine whether there were drugs in his body and what sort of food he had eaten before his death.

The autopsy -- which was carried out before a special judge appointed to hear the case and a doctor, who is a family friend -- has also determined that Mario died 4 days ago, according to the radio station. [passage omitted]

According to the autopsy, Mario died on 2 August [date as received], the day he disappeared. [passage omitted]

GEN LEIGH LAUDS INVESTIGATION OF MISSING

PY081514 Santiago EL MERCURIO in Spanish 6 Aug 86 p C7

[Excerpt] Retired General Gustavo Leigh, former Air Force commander and former member of the Chilean Government Junta, yesterday stated that he is "satisfied that a case of missing persons is being investigated." He made this statement through his lawyer Jorge Ovalle, when asked about a prohibition against his leaving the country issued by Judge Carlos Cerda.

The judge is investigating the case of 10 persons missing since December 1976. Nine of the 10 belong to the proscribed Communist Party. Cerda was consulted yesterday about his ruling, but he neither denied nor confirmed it.

Ovalle said that there are 21 persons banned from leaving the country, and not 32 as reported initially, and that "they include members of various military branches and civilians."

He added that Gen Leigh will not contract the services of a lawyer to defend him because he is "satisfied that the case of missing persons is being investigated."

Ovalle stated that Gen Leigh had told him that the prohibition from leaving the country "does not affect him personally because he does not intend to leave Chile."

Leigh added that he considers the prohibition "a contribution to the truth, and that he hopes that this case will be resolved completely."

Ovalle concluded by saying that the former Air Force commander has testified twice in the past 30 days before Judge Carlos Cerda. [passage omitted]

AD REJECTS CRITICISMS BY PRESIDENT PINOCHET

PY081916 Santiago LA TERCERA DE LA HORA 2 Aug 86 p 6

[Text] The Democratic Alliance (AD) met yesterday in a special session and released a document rejecting the comments by President Augusto Pinochet against the "Chilean political leaders." The document says that "no one has the right, least of all one who uses and abuses the property of the state, to describe as dishonest politicians who have made austerity a way of life."

The document adds that "the example of men like Anibal Pinto, Arturo Alessandri, or Juan Antonio Rios, who left the highest office in the nation with nothing but their honesty, is guiding the Chilean political leaders."

The declaration stresses that "no one has the right to term ambitious the politicians who only want the Chilean people to choose their own leaders, and they want those leaders to respect, without limitations, the people's sovereign will."

It adds: "No one has the right to disqualify a political leader for the sole act of accepting invitations from foreign democracies, under circumstances that are nowadays part of normal political activities."

The AD "calls, once again, for good sense and prudence."

AD LEADERS MEET WITH L.A. AMBASSADORS

PY030138 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0227 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, 1 Aug (EFE) -- Former Foreign Minister Gabriel Valdes, the president of the Christian Democratic Party [PDC], has stated that the meeting of the members of the opposition coalition Democratic Action [AD] with the Latin American ambassadors accredited in Santiago was a social "and not a work meeting." The leaders of the alliance indicated that the meeting was a luncheon held yesterday in the Argentine Embassy and that the Paraguayan ambassador was the only one who did not attend.

The Chilean politicians who attended the meeting were Enrique Silva Cimma, president of the Radical Party; Rene Abeliuk, president of Social Democracy; and Socialist leader Ricardo Lagos.

The members of the alliance pointed out that during the luncheon, given by Argentine Ambassador Jose Maria Alvarez de Toledo, the participants held "lengthy" conversations about the recent integration agreement signed by Argentine President Raul Alfonsin and Brazilian President Jose Sarney in Argentina.

PRESIDENT BARCO TALKS WITH SECRETARY SHULTZ

PA090118 Bogota Emisoras CARACOL Network in Spanish 1215 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] President Virgilio Barco agrees with the U.S. Government on the need for continued efforts to confront terrorism and drug trafficking and to fortify standards of democracy in Central America.

U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz held talks with the newly inaugurated President Virgilio Barco for nearly an hour. They reviewed market problems [word indistinct] such as the region's foreign debt. President Barco revealed that Colombia expressed its concern over the U.S. noncompliance with the Torrijos-Carter Treaties for the sovereign operation of the Panama Canal. Last night President Reagan promised the United States would comply with the accords.

BARCO EXPLAINS CONSERVATIVE PARTY APPOINTMENTS

PA082224 Bogota Emisoras CARACOL Network in Spanish 1215 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] President Barco warned he would name Conservatives to the ministries, despite the party's desire not to participate in the new government, as he considers this desire does not relieve him of the specific constitutional obligation to allow the runner-up party in the election to participate in the government.

In a message addressed to the Conservative Party directorate, moments after reporting on his first Cabinet, President Barco noted the administration of the state is open to all citizens, male and female, without discrimination by party affiliation.

In his message to the Conservative directorate, President Barco said he named Conservative ministers in compliance with paragraph 120 of the National Constitution, which establishes that the president of the Republic will directly name certain officials, in this case cabinet ministers. He said: This paragraph has been interpreted in various ways, and I have preferred to follow the most strict definition, or if you prefer the most specific.

The new president recalled the Conservative statement to seek common objectives for Colombians. Barco Vargas added that he asked that this letter be interpreted in the best spirit. He said: Reading your declaration has left me with the conviction that the Conservative Party and all Colombians will proceed through this stage with the most noble and serene decision to contribute to coexistence, which is what the country needs and desires. He concluded by requesting that he be informed officially of the Conservative criteria for these high government posts.

3 Conservatives Decline Posts

[Text] Three Conservative ministers who were appointed to the Cabinet have declined their posts. They are Development Minister Mario Calderon Rivera, who is currently manager of the Central Mortgage Bank; Communications Minister William Fadul, who is currently director of Facecolda [not further identified] and Health Minister Ignacio Velez Escobar, a physician from Antioquia.

A decree announcing the names of the three Liberal ministers who will replace the three Conservatives who did not accept their appointments is expected in the next few hours. However, sources close to President Barco categorically denied that replacements for the Conservative ministers have already been chosen. They also denied reports in which names such as Eduardo Maestre, Gustavo Vasco, and (David Berch) have been mentioned as the people who will be named to occupy the vacant posts.

Liberals Fill Empty Posts

PA110212 Paris AFP in Spanish 0013 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Bogota, 10 Aug (AFP) -- Three Liberal ministers were appointed today to replace the Conservatives who refused to cooperate with the government of Liberal President Virgilio Barco.

The press office of the Presidency reported that Barco appointed Miguel Merino as minister of economic development, Dr Cesar Esmeral as public health minister, and Lawyer Edmundo Lopez as communications minister.

All of the civilian ministers of the Barco government are Liberals. The Conservative Party announced that it will oppose all actions by the president who took office on 7 August.

BARCO MEETS WITH CONTADORA REPRESENTATIVES

PA082023 Bogota Television Service in Spanish 1730 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Regarding foreign policy, President Virgilio Barco has announced that a just and feasible solution to the dispute with Venezuela over marine and submarine areas will be sought. He also expressed support for the continuation of the work of the Contadora Group. This morning he met with representatives of the Contadora and Support Groups.

Representatives of Uruguay, Venezuela, Panama, Argentina, Brazil, and Mexico agreed that the only path for a negotiated solution in Central America is the continuation of the Contadora Group efforts. After analyzing all aspects related to the crisis of the neighboring region, they decided to promptly initiate a meeting of the foreign ministers of the Contadora Group and its Support Group so that they can outline the essential strategy permitting Contadora to continue as a feasible alternative in the diplomatic efforts to resolve the Central American crisis.

The representatives of the Contadora Group and the support countries thanked President Virgilio Barco for his efforts to continue the negotiating group's actions. A communique was issued after a working breakfast in Narino Palace.

NEW GOVERNMENT REJECTS TALKS WITH M-19

[Text] Bogota, 9 Aug (AFP) -- President Barco today rejected the possibility of talks with guerrilla movement M-19 because of the subversive group's thirst for blood.

Special Presidential Adviser Carlos Ossa Escobar made the announcement Saturday on Radio CARACOL Network. In rejecting the possibility of talks with the M-19, Ossa said that it appears as if that group had a lust for blood.

Ossa Escobar stated that an honest and open dialogue will continue with the FARC's top command. The FARC accepted the amnesty which former President Belisario Betancur granted. He also told CARACOL: "The FARC is still prepared for dialogue. It seems to me that the M-19 will have to understand that the path it is following leads nowhere." "It is very sad to see how the M-19 is causing a bloodbath in the country. It believes that it is going to achieve lofty or idealistic objectives, but it is becoming isolated. I believe that sooner than later it will have to realize that that is not the way," he added.

DEFENSE MINISTER BACKS STANCE ON GUERRILLAS

PA090124 Bogota Emisoras CARACOL Network in Spanish 1215 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Defense Minister General Rafael Samudio Molina has said that the Armed Forces respect and back any decision made by President Virgilio Barco Vargas with regard to new talks with the guerrillas. Negotiations outside the peace process, despite the fact that the Army and the police have been targets of subversion, will also be supported. He stressed that talks should be held within the existing institutions, that the peace process has a good foundation, and that all that is needed execution of the measures for peace.

Gen Samudio Molina said that the peace process should be adjusted and revised and noted that President Barco has drawn up a policy for a new peace process, especially for its continuity.

The new defense minister, previously head of the Armed Forces, said he is completely informed on all public order matters and that the Armed Forces will support any new negotiations with the guerrillas that may be proposed by President Barco.

250 AMERICA BATTALION REBELS DESTROY BARRACKS

[Report by Raul Benoit]

[Text] The police barracks in Belalcazar, Paez municipality, were destroyed after an attack carried out by the National Guerrilla Coordinating Board. The attack lasted approximately 18 hours and was led by Carlos Pizarro Leon Gomez and Francisco of the Peruvian guerrilla group Tupac Amaru. The 18 soldiers in the barracks repelled the attack for more than 16 hours. There were 250 guerrillas from the M-19 and other Latin American groups from Peru, Ecuador, and Argentina. The America Battalion stole 5 million pesos from the Agrarian Bank, destroyed the police barracks and looted some stores. The guerrillas asked the soldiers to surrender, which they did after their ammunition was depleted.

[Begin recording] [First soldier] They took four rifles, only one of which was working properly.

[Second soldier] At 1800 we stopped firing and went to hide. They were searching for us. They could not find our weapons either.

Troops from the 3d and 10th Brigades are currently chasing the America Battalion guerrillas in Huila and Cauca Departments. Up to now, seven guerrillas and eight soldiers have been killed. [end recording]

MORE ON REBELS, EXPLOSION NEAR U.S. EMBASSY

[Text] Despite the relative calm that prevailed during the [inauguration] day, there were reports of problems of public order.

Early today, an armed column occupied the town of Belalcazar in Cauca Department, along the border with Huila Department. The Army General Command reported that the attack was carried out by members of the National Guerrilla Coordinating Board, as part of actions to be carried out during the transition of power. The guerrillas cut off communications and occupied the police station. There are not reports on casualties. Meanwhile, the 9th and 10th Army Brigades launched a counteroffensive from La Plata, in Huila Department. During the past week these brigades clashed in the mountains with M-19 and Guintin Lame movement forces.

This is the fourth such attack in less than 24 hours. The first attack was made on Nemocon, in Cundinamarca, by the National Guerrilla Coordinating Board led by the M-19, and four members of the Armed Forces were killed. Although special military forces were deployed in Bogota to guarantee public order, especially on this day, a low impact explosion occurred in front of the U.S. Embassy. The people who live in the neighborhood were frightened by the explosion.

SWISS DENY ASYLUM TO FORMER GUERRILLAS

PA090220 Buenos Aires REUTER in Spanish 0145 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] Bogota, 8 Aug (REUTER) -- Two former Colombian guerrilla members of the M-19 who sought asylum at the Swiss Embassy in Bogota 3 days ago abandoned the diplomatic mission today, but they continue to request political asylum, said an embassy official.

She said that the two men, who were pardoned in 1982, were turned over to the Justice Ministry officials who will keep them at a secret location for a maximum of 10 days, while they wait for a reply to their request.

The embassy official said that the two men -- Gustavo Fajardo Celis, a teacher, and Javier Posso Vargas, a lawyer -- will not get political asylum in Switzerland. However, encouraging contacts have been established with the UNHCR [UN High Commissioner for Refugees] which has its headquarters in Geneva.

On Tuesday the two men came to the embassy, which is located on an eighth floor, and said that they were being persecuted by the Army and paramilitary groups.

COMMUNIST PARTY'S MAIDANA ON ROLE OF OPPOSITION

PA072021 San Jose LIBERTAD in Spanish 1-7 Aug 86 p 8

[Interview with Ananias Maidana, second secretary of the Paraguayan Communist Party, by Arturo Fournier; date and place not given]

[Excerpts] [Fournier] How has the Paraguayan situation developed in the last few months?

[Maidana] A large sector of our population is changing the degree and manner of the struggle. [passage omitted]

[Fournier] How do the various political parties stand?

[Maidana] The country is experiencing a profound political crisis. As was shown by the 1 May and other demonstrations, a revolutionary crisis is underway. The masses demand Stroessner's resignation and the formation of transitional government characterized by a popular democracy. In view of that situation, four bourgeois opposition parties formed the National Accord. This group basically consists of the pro-U.S. landowners, who cry out for reconciliation with the dictator, in this way seeking a superficial change in Stroessner's public image. In that way they are also preventing the continuation of the mass struggle. Some of them have even said that they do not want another Nicaragua, much less a popular democratic government.

The U.S. ambassador to our country is playing an important role in that regard. He is trying to obtain an agreement that will change some figures closely identified with the regime, update Paraguay's dependent status, and grant a limited democracy, (which means a democracy controlled and directed by Washington). That limited democracy will be achieved through the creation of a civilian government, although the real power will be always kept by the fascist military clique.

[Fournier] What is the alternative to that dangerous, Philippine-style maneuver?

[Maidana] The peoples' and students' organizations are increasingly more united in their demands for the people themselves to take the lead in the change. From this unity, a new political organization called Democratic Paraguay was formed. Absolutely all political parties, labor movements, the Organization of Relatives of Missing Persons, solidarity organizations, etc., are part of this group, which has a very specific agenda in the struggle.

[Fournier] Are the government and the ruling class as united as the press says?

[Maidana] No, of course not! There are serious conflicts within the government, between the governement and the Armed Forces, and in all the fronts of the ruling party. This conflict has even resulted in shoot-outs among the various groups. [passage omitted]

[Fournier] And the Communist Party?

[Maidana] Despite the great difficulties, the horrendous repression, the disappearance and murder of many leaders, our party is present in the struggle promoting the popular democratic solution and opposing the U.S. maneuvers to take victory away from the people. We are convinced of our success and of the capacity of our protest to overthrow the dictatorship and install democracy in our homeland, in order to walk along paths of peace and prosperity.

ALVA CASTRO ANNOUNCES REDUCED PAYMENT TO IMF

[Excerpt] Lima, 9 Aug (AFP) -- Prime Minister Luis Alva Castro announced last night that Peru will pay only $35 million of the $180 million it should pay to the IMF before 15 August.

Alva stated publicly that the Peruvian Government will pay, according to its ability, the debt left by the former regime, but it will not take a single step backward in attending to the needs of the Peruvian people, particularly the most needy sectors.

In April Peru paid $35 million service on a total debt to the IMF of $800 million. At the same time Peru was given the deadline of 15 August to repay pending debts of $180 million.

The Peruvian prime minister stated: We will courageously maintain our position of paying 10 percent of our export revenues, whatever attitude the IMF takes.

He then stated that according to our nationalist policy a total of only $320 million will be paid per year. There is an enormous difference between this amount and the amounts handed over during the preceding years, which totaled $2 billion.

Alva remarked: The IMF has said enough. We are capable of standing up and making the country work. [passage omitted]

GOVERNMENT FORBIDS SENDING MONEY ABROAD

PY091330 Lima Television Peruana in Spanish 0100 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] An official measure forbidding sending foreign or Peruvian currency abroad for 24 months was announced today. This measure affects individuals and corporations working in Peru. This special, temporary measure will allow available foreign currency to be used for priority productive activities in Peru.

This measure includes depreciation, dividends, profits, royalties, and other remittances. The remittance of mony for payment of specificed technical services is not included. The sale of shares of stock, reduction of capital, dissolution of companies, and other operations for which there is an export of capital invested in the country has also been prohibited.

200 ARRESTED IN JOINT ARMY, POLICE OPERATION

[Text] Lima, 9 Aug (AFP) -- The Peruvian Civil Guard tonight reported that the Army and police have arrested 200 persons during the past 24 hours in Lima. These people are believed to be either criminals or subversives. They are being held in police precincts while the investigations regarding their legal status are concluded.

Joint Army and police forces have started an operation that is being carried out in the poorer neighborhoods and the areas where there is a high crime rate, both in the capital and the port of El Callao. According to a police source, there are more than 20 women among the detainees. They were arrested because they did not have any identification.

This operation was started after Interior Minister Abel Salinas spoke on 8 August over Peruvian television asking for the people's help in eradicating subversion.

In the name of the government, Salinas said that the frontal fight against subversion will continue to be carried out energetically.

During the past 48 hours subversives murdered Colonel Cesar del Castillo in Lima. Del Castillo was a high-ranking police officer in charge of the Civil Guard in Ayacucho, an area where the Shining Path group operates.

Two policemen were also murdered in broad daylight in Lima and an attack was carried out against a police bus.

Police sources have indicated that this operation will continue during the next few days with the purpose of breaking up terrorist cells of both the Shining Path group and the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA) and also to break up criminal gangs, especially gangs of kidnappers.

Interior Minister Addresses Nation

PY091652 Lima Latinoamericana Television in Spanish 0430 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Address to the nation by Interior Minister Abel Salinas from Government House; date not given -- live or recorded]

[Text] Several attacks and murders have shocked the public in the last few days. I wish to reiterate that these actions were committed in retaliation for investigations and repressive actions which the government has been vigorously carrying out lately, These actions have affected many terrorist cells.

However, the small groups that still exist are committing increasingly brutal crimes to try to gain attention.

Two Civil Guards were shot in the back yesterday. A grenade was hurled at a Civil Guard bus today. I am addressing the nation to request the people's calmness. The government will continue to fight firmly, and the police forces, which deserve the people's respect and support for their sacrifices, will continue to act decisively.

Hundreds of guards have died at the hands of terrorists. The police are the ones who must face criminal activity most directly. If they make mistakes, these mistakes will be corrected by the government, but their actions must be acknowledged by the country.

I am addressing you to remind you of the need to support the antisubversive struggle, and of your duty to remain calm and not to feel demoralized. Peru, the state, and the government are stronger than isolated attacks, and despite the current difficulties, we will eradicate subversion.

Announces New Police Regions

[Excerpts] Interior Minister Abel Salinas today announced the creation of 12 police regions in the country in order to improve the efficiency of the police and their capacity to protect the citizens. The announcement was made during the ceremony celebrating the 67th anniversary of the Peruvian Republican Guard, held at the institution's headquarters in Lima. [passage omitted]

[Begin Salinas recording] [passage omitted] I can now announce that 12 police regions have been created. Each region will be under the responsibility of a general officer of the Peruvian police forces. This is a clear effort to improve our efficiency and our capacity to protect the citizens. MRTA ENDS 1-YEAR TRUCE, HOLDS NEWS CONFERENCE

[Text] Lima, 8 Aug (AFP) -- The Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement [MRTA] has ended the 1-year truce it granted President Alan Garcia's government, accusing it of not complying with its promises to carry out change. The MRTA has contacted the local press to call on the people to form a front in favor of democracy, peace, and justice.

An MRTA leader yesterday said in a press conference that all the promises made on 28 July 1985 by the new government have turned into measures that do not represent the people's interest. These measures served only to manage the crisis provoking a growing situation of demagoguery, frustration, and treason regarding the country's needs and aspirations.

During the interview, which took place on an unidentified piece of freed land, the MRTA leaders -- about 15 of them dressed in olive green, hooded and armed -- asserted that it is necessary to resort to armed struggle to end the militarization carried out by the American Popular Revolutionary Alliance [APRA] government.

Threatens Colombians in Peru

[Text] Lima, 8 Aug (AFP) -- Colombian concerns and their personnel in Peru will become military objectives of the MRTA if the Colombian Government does not turn over three MRTA members, allegedly arrested near Cali.

This threat was published here today by this Peruvian subversive group. The communique states that MRTA members Marco Burga Zelada, Cistero Garcia Torres, and Espinoza were arrested as they traveled, unarmed, to Cali. It adds that these three men had been members of the American Batallion formed by Colombian M-19, Peruvian MRTA and Ecuadoran Alfaro Lives guerrillas.

We call on the people to demand that the Colombian Government and Army identify and show our colleages to the Red Cross, and international human rights organizations, states the MRTA communique, which is dated yesterday.

During a clandestine press conference here an MRTA leader said that one of this organization's squads is fighting in the America Batallion in the Colombian mountains as evidence of our regionalistic spirit.

1ST PHASE OF 'UNITAS 27' OPERATION COMPLETE

PA091912 Caracas Television Service in Spanish 0000 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Report by Juan Zara]

[Text] The first phase of the joint "Unitas 27" operation carried out by Venezuela, Colombia, and the United States took place today in the Caribbean Sea. This military exercise was totally successful, because all planned objectives were fulfilled.

According to the commanders of the three participating fleets, who based their comments on an evaluation made shortly before arriving at La Guaira port, this phase of the operation was a complete success. The fleets are in that port for resupply.

This afternoon the Venezuelan and U.S. commanders, Rear Admirals Miguel Padilla Hurtado and David Chandler, respectively, told the press that this first phase had been a complete success because all jointly planned objectives had been fulfilled, especially those that sought the application of a joint military doctrine at the time of an armed struggle.

Various strategies were used during the exercises in regard to air, land, and submarine attacks. The two commanders said that the question of which fleet was better was never raised. On the contrary, joint work yielded more productive results, such as the establishment of better combat strategies.

Over [figure indistinct] men participated in the "Unitas 27" operation. In that same second [as heard] phase, Venezuela participated with 1,500 men, who proved their combat efficiency.

The United States is participating in these operations with six war ships, including a nuclear submarine. Venezuela has the largest squadron, with 12 ships, including 2 submarines. Colombia has two destroyers.

These operations, which will be held on an ongoing basis until the participation of all the Southern Hemisphere countries that are friends of the United States is attained, will permit the testing of tactics in a structured environment and their modification, if necessary, in order to successfully apply them in a real situation.

On 9 August the three participating fleets will sail toward the Colombian port of Cartagena, where Venezuela will end its participation in this military operations.

RESULTS OF GROUP OF SIX SUMMIT OUTLINED

FL081516 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 0222 GMT 8 Aug 86

[By Rossana Fuentey Berain]

[Text] Ixtapa, 7 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Annihilation by mistake is as definite as intentional annihilation; thus, the only sure way to survive is to eradicate nuclear weapons, said Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi during his closing speech at the second meeting of the Group of Six.

Ghandi, as well as his five colleagues, noted that nuclear weapons does not discriminate between the agressor and the peaceful citizen. Weapons do not have eyes, hearts, or minds, he said. He added that it is our duty as states without nuclear weapons to constantly pressure the superpowers that do have them to achieve disarmament.

During a news conference, Gandhi also assured that his government will not build a nuclear bomb, although it has the material and technology to do so.

Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou said in his speech that when the Group of Six began its peace efforts, negotiations between the Soviet Union and the United States were interrupted.

The Greek leader indicated that at the 25 November 1985 meeting between President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev no concrete results were achieved.

Papandreou noted that for this reason the Mexico Declaration urged both superpowers to end nuclear tests hoping that the rest of the countries with nuclear weapons will do the same.

Asked about the cost of implementing the verification system they propose, Papandreou replied categorically that financing the system is within the capabilities of each of the participants. No cost or effort is too great when we are talking about achieving peace, he indicated.

Dr Julius Nyerere, former Tanzanian president, ratified the right of all the countries of the world to be heard. We exist as nations and as people and even when our countries are deprived of other rights, at lease we have the right to continue existing, he noted.

As a leader of his country's independence, Nyerere said that the fact that the superpowers have not listened to the concerns of all the people of the world regarding the future of humankind in the event of a nuclear disaster, constitutes the worst form of imperialism.

The African leader also expressed his belief that many countries that do not have nuclear arms would be willing to join the Group of Six to perhaps, under UN sponsorship, oversee a treaty on a complete ban of nuclear test.

Referring to the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, Nyerere indicated that any attempt to use outer space for military purposes would bring a space arms race.

During the press conference, he underscored that one of the main aims of the group is to make world public opinion -- especially U.S. public opinion -- aware of the nuclear threat.

The White House cannot ignore its own public, thus, it is necessary to try to use the U.S. democratic system to work for peace, he said.

Finally, Nyrere indicated that in no way can we avoid the options we have: to coexist -- despite our differences and disputes -- or die together in a nuclear holocaust.

Views on Disarmament

PA081632 Mexico City XEW Television Network in Spanish 1340 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Report by Ana Cristina Pelaez -- passages within quotation marks recorded]

[Excerpt] Let the world hear us, let the world become aware of the dangers of the nuclear arms buildup, the members of the Group of Six stated during a more than 1-hour long news conference after the meeting on peace and disarmament in Ixtapa-Zihuatanejo. They also agreed that arms expenditures pressure and distort the world economy, interest rates, and trade. President Miguel de la Madrid said that arms expenditures affect government budgets and that poor countries subsidize the arms buildup of the powerful.

[De la Madrid] "I think that if the arms expenditures of the superpowers can be reduced, the primary benefit would be to their own people. This would also lay the groundwork for increased international trade, which would benefit the developing countries. This would also improve the financing conditions for those countries. I think this is an argument that we have been bringing up. In addition to its political value in preventing war and guaranteeing peace, disarmament can also be an important factor in improving the general conditions of the international economy and benefiting the developing countries."

The president said that the Group of Six does not oppose the use of nuclear power for peaceful ends, but that one must be vigilant so it will not suddenly be turned into an instrument of war.

Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi said that his country will not abuse the use of nuclear power.

[Gandhi -- in English with superimposed Spanish translation] "India has demonstrated very clearly for the past 12 years that although we have the capacity to make and manufacture nuclear weapons, we do not intend to do so. We do not have arsenals, nor do we plan to produce nuclear weapons."

Nevertheless, the record shows that India has carried out two atomic tests this year.

Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou confirmed that the Group of Six does not plan to finance the verification system that it proposed in the Ixtapa meeting.

[Papandreou -- in English with superimposed Spanish translation] "As I said, I think that what we [words indistinct] evidently within our capacity to do so. Evidently at some moment in the future, the Soviet Union and the United States would have to actively participate, themselves. [Words indistinct] your question that we have an economic or financial problem regarding the proposals that we made about vigilance."

Julius Nyerere, former president of Tanzania, admitted that it is more difficult to influence public opinion in countries which have a high illiteracy rate. He insisted that the heads of state of each country have the responsibility of making their own people aware of the problem of peace.

Argentine President Raul Alfonsin insisted that it is not necessary for his country to sign the Tlatelolco treaty on the nonproliferation of nuclear arms:

[Alfonsin] "We are totally in agreement on the need to prevent proliferation, but we think that the treaty is discriminatory. There would be a club of favored ones with the rest of us just watching the acceleration of an arms buildup that could lead us all to a nuclear holocaust."

Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson said that the danger that terrorist groups might seize nuclear weapons is one of the biggest fears of the human race. [passage omitted]

Mexico Policy to Remain Unchanged

FL080230 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 0052 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Ixtapa-Zihuatanejo, 7 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid has said that Mexico will maintain its traditional foreign policy promoting disarmament and peace at the world level as well as in regional conflicts.

During a news conference, he said Mexico has persistently sustained a position favorable to efforts to end the arms race because we consider this indispensable to avoid a total and destructive war.

Accompanied by the Group of Six leaders, De la Madrid said this group does not follow the footsteps of a coordinator. All its members analyze the developing circumstances and we agree by consensus on what attitudes and actions should be taken. [passage omitted]

De la Madrid recognized that many repercussions in the international community will create problems, but, he said, the Group of Six has agreed to focus exclusively on the topic of nuclear disarmament to promote awareness and so the task can be more efficient.

Alfonsin on Arms Race

FL080200 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 0056 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Ixtapa-Zihatanejo, 7 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Argentine President Raul Alfonsin said today that there are few countries that have the complicated scientific and technical knowledge to promote the nuclear arms race but there are many who share a common feeling and sense to check this activity.

During his speech at the closing session of the second Group of Six meeting on peace and disarmament in Ixtapa-Zihuatanejo, the Argentine president said that voices should be raised universally to defend life on our planet and we should struggle for peace and disarmament. [passage omitted]

During an interview with the Group of Six leaders, Alfonsin was asked about Argentina's requirements for signing the Nonproliferation of Nuclear Weapons Treaty and the Tlatelolco Treaty. The president said he has not signed the agreement, not because Argentina is against it, but because it would suffice if the superpowers would cease producing nuclear weapons.

Argentina interprets the problem of proliferation as a horizontal as well as vertical problem, said Alfonsin. He also noted that Argentina is absolutely open to dialogue without having to sign any type of safeguard. [passage omitted]

Carlsson on Nuclear Testing

[By Eduardo Gonzales Silva, special correspondent]

[Excerpts] Ixtapa-Zihuatanejo, 7 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson has said the Group of Six is making a call to the United States and the Soviet Union to end nuclear tests and indicated: We are prepared with our own experts and technical resources to be part of the verification process for a banning of nuclear tests.

During the closing ceremony of the second summit meeting of the Group of Six for peace and disarmament, Carlsson said we have to assume the responsibility of allowing children to fulfill their dreams and stop their future from being destroyed.

He underscored that at the Geneva Conference, the Swedish Government presented proposals aimed at establishing an international system for the verification of banning of nuclear weapons and it is convinced that this problem can be solved. [passage omitted]

After his closing speech, Carlsoon granted a news conference. The European Prime Minister told the domestic and international press that the leaders of the Soviet Union and the United States have answered the letters sent by the Group of Six and have expressed their willingness to stop the arms race.

However, Carlsson said this is not enough, they have to put their wishes into practice.

He talked about the needed mobilization of the world public opinion to pressure political leaders and influence the superpower leaders to halt arms race. Finally, he stressed that the struggle of the Group of Six is not an easy task, but the second summit meeting has taken place at a time, when the superpowers have accepted, in principle, sitting down at the negotiating table.

Carlsson on Summit Results

PA101249 Mexico City Red Nacional 13 Imevision Television in Spanish 0130 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] Participants in the talks on disarmament held in Ixtapa-Zahuatanejo hope that Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev will heed the appeal made. However, it is not just a question of changing the views of these two leaders, but rather, the views of the entire world, Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson said shortly before returning to his country. He said that efforts must continue to assure the two superpowers reach an understanding, a goal of all people, because everyone wants to live in peace and without pressures. In addition, the Swedish prime minister said: We must make them understand that they must not only be concerned with the future of their own people, but with the entire world.

In conclusion, Carlsson said that the meeting of the Group of Six was a complete success and is the first phase of a worldwide program to strive for the survival of mankind.

GANDHI, DE LA MADRID HOLD BILATERAL TALKS

FL081836 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 0607 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Mexico City, 7 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Yesterday President de la Madrid asserted that hegemonic confrontations devote the best effort of humankind work to its own destruction, condemn the nations to hunger and disease while the wealth and technological research work is destined to endless arsenals.

The president and his counterparts and colleagues from Argentina, Greece, Sweden, and Tanzania have been searching for possibilities to provide greater well-being to all the peoples of the world by utilizing enormous resources used in the absurd arms race.

During a dinner he and his wife, Mrs Paloma Cordero de de la Madrid, hosted in honor of Indian Prime Minister and Mrs Rajiv Gandhi, De la Madrid indicated that South-South cooperation and dialogue, with a defined agenda, will allow the identification of the most relevant topics for the countries to take action and focus on the aspects that will, involve more greatly in the future and independence of the countries of the world. [passage omitted] The president said it is essential to offer new options to Central American negotiations and achieve a more reasonable dialogue with the only limitation being that all countries comply with the principles and norms of international law. [passage omitted]

De la Madrid said the restructuring of its foreign commitments was done in line with the real capabilities to pay them by increasing the availability of financial resources and maintaining the total economy's growth, favoring the various sectors of the country. [passage omitted]

Indian Prime Minister Gandhi said his country shares with Mexico the concerns over the effects the recent events taking place in Central America -- which currently is in turmoil because of deep political, social, and economic changes -- could have in the international peace.

He indicated that opposing change through foreign intervention is a mistake that interrupts political evolution and violates international law. [passage omitted]

He said India supports the Contadora Group efforts to obtain peace in Central America but assured that he agrees with Central America's change to get out of the fog of colonialism.

Gandhi noted that the world economy should be at the service of the community of nations but it has narrowed and it is limited by stingy nationalistic views which disregard the possibilities of complementing each other. This brings fragmentation and eliminates the willingness for cooperation. He said the North needs to change its views and encourage South-South cooperation programs. The key for joint efforts is the collective confidence of nations. He stated that the lack of knowledge among poor and developed countries limits cooperation possiblilites. The Indian prime minister said information channels should be established so experts in economic matters can explore the possibilities of sharing experiences and bringing progress to the economic development of countries. Delhi on Gandhi News Conference

BK090628 Delhi Domestic Service in English 0240 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] India and Mexico have decided to work on a time-bound schedule to strengthen economic cooperation. This was stated by the prime minister at a news conference in Mexico City yesterday. Mr. Rajiv Gandhi said the two countries will cooperate in the petroleum sector and will also have link deals in trade. Our special correspondent, Manohar Takroo, reports on the bilateral talks:

[Begin Takroo recording] The main thrust of these talks was that while India and Mexico have had close relations, their economic content has remained rather weak. There are several agreements between the two countries, but they have remained dormant. As a direct outcome of the prime minister's visit, these will be activated and a time-bound program drawn up for strengthening economic relations. A number of areas have also been identified for the cooperation. [end recording]

Answering a question about Afghanistan, Mr. Gandhi said he is optimistic because in his talks with Mr Reagan and Mr Gorbachev he had found a desire in both of them to reduce tension in that country. He noted that the Soviet Union has recently announced that it will withdraw part of its troops from Afghanistan.

About the Ixtapa summit, he said it has taken a major initiative toward nuclear disarmament. He pointed out that it is the only disarmament initiative at heads-of-government level which is active. Some of the responses to the initiative indicate a change in the thinking of nuclear-weapon countries. This is a step forward. The prime minister denounced intervention by big countries in the internal affairs of others. He said this cannot be tolerated regardless of the areas where the intervention occurs. It might be one country today and another tomorrow.

Replying to a question about Punjab, he said the government has made significant progress during the past few weeks in its drive against terrorists.

The prime minister was earlier presented with the key to Mexico City after the mayor declared him a distinguished guest. At a function in the city hall, Mr Gandhi was also presented a diploma and a medal. Thanking the citizens for the honor, Mr Gandhi said India and Mexico are both deeply committed to democratic values and the institutions of popular rule. Referring to the Ixtapa summit, he said the survival of mankind in this nuclear age cannot be guaranteed a balance of power. Any breakdown of that balance by error or by design will spell doom, from which there will be no retreat. Describing apartheid as an abomination, Mr Gandhi said: A tiny minority of racists in Pretoria is squeezing the soul of South Africa.

Earlier, the prime minister placed wreaths at the monument of Mahatma Gandhi and to the young heroes of Mexico.

CUBAN AMBASSADOR PRAISES DE LA MADRID

FL090152 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 2314 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] Mexico, 8 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Mexico is not confronting a dead-end road; the actions of Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid have raised the hope that the country will not interrupt its development, said Cuban ambassador to Mexico Enrique Olivares Santana. He also stressed the chief executive's efforts to prevent all sectors from becoming discouraged and from following paths that would deactivate the national economy.

Olivares Santana said that proof of the present administration's great effort to overcome the crisis is the Mexican people's swiftness and prudence to resist contemporary adversities.

Before returning to Havana, he said that Mexico is aware it is immersed in difficulties due to the disorder of the international economy.

Because of this, the social tranquility predominant in the country is due to De la Madrid's clear and serene policies.

Finally, Olivares Santana stressed that sufficient elements do not exist to cause an institutional crisis.

SEPULVEDA AMOR ON SOUTH AFRICA POLICY

FL082332 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 2241 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Excerpt] Mexico will not reestablish diplomatic, trade or economic relations with South Africa so long as it continues its policy of racial discrimination, said Mexican Foreign Secretary Bernardo Sepulveda Amor.

Sepulveda Amor reaffirmed this during a news conference with national media held after the second round of talks with Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid.

Sepulveda Amor said that all relations with South Africa are based on the principle of human dignity and in accordance with the resolutions adopted by the United Nations which has rejected South Africa's discriminatory policy. [passage omitted]

Issue Joint Communique

FL052038 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 1920 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Mexico City, 5 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- The presidents of Mexico and Greece today agreed that it is urgent to unite the efforts of countries committed to peace, independent development, international cooperation based on equality, and the peoples' sovereign right to self-determination. In a joint communique issued by Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid and Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou following their second round of talks, they stressed the urgent need for solutions to the foreign debt problem based on shared responsibility between debtors and creditors.

They said countries with large economies should recognize their responsibility at the world level and draft policies that will ensure harmonic growth and stability while taking into consideration the effects on developing countries. The leaders expressed their firm goal to strengthen the United Nations system as well as relations between the EEC and Latin America for the promotion of economic growth in developing countries.

De la Madrid and Papandreou expressed their support of projects that promote nuclear-free zones, security and cooperation, and diminish tension in international relations. After expressing their firm goal of continuing their common efforts to completely eradicate the world threat, the leaders affirmed that the arms race is a great danger to all humanity.

In reference to the UN Law of the Sea convention, De la Madrid and Papandreou said it is an important instrument of international law which safeguards peaceful cooperation between countries. They also expressed their concern over the prolonged crises in Central America and Cyprus and reiterated their support and confidence in peaceful mechanisms to solve the controversies and respect international justice and the right to self-determination.

The two presidents maintain their support for the Contadora Group in its efforts to reconcile the different interests in the Central American area, and they said the solution to the conflict in Cyprus depends on the withdrawal of foreign forces and respect for its independence, sovereignty, and unity. The leaders also agreed to establish the necessary mechanisms to increase bilateral relations and trade which would offer greater development possibilities as well as strengthen cultural relations as stated in the agreement signed in 1982.

It was also agreed to promote higher education on Latin American and Greek topics in the two countries and Neo-Hellenic studies in Mexico. De la Madrid and Papandreou agreed to study cooperation possibilities in the areas of construction, maritime transportation, agriculture, and industry. They also stressed establishing cooperation mechanisms in Greek and Mexican economic and trade organizations and in the public and private sectors to develop economic bilateral relations.

At the conclusion of the Greek prime minister's official visit with the Mexican president, the two heads of state stressed the importance of this first bilateral meeting to strengthen the ties between the two countries to promote cooperation and understanding in all areas.

HOUSE AMENDMENT ON CANAL BUDGET CALLED 'MOCKERY'

PA082004 Panama City CRITICA in Spanish 8 Aug 86 p 34

[By Euclides M. Corro R.]

[Excerpt] A retroactive amendment on the Panama Canal Commission budget has been approved by the U.S. House of Representatives Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee. This will deprive our country of $6 million when the annual $10-million surplus is collected.

This adjustment states that the Panama Canal Commission will have to pay the U.S. Government $5-$6 million from its budget for the 1986 fiscal year, although the amendment was approved on 24 July of this year. It also obliges the commission to pay interest retroactively, based on the investment made by the United States in the terminated canal company before the Torrijos-Carter Treaties.

For further information, CRITICA contacted former Foreign Minister Oyden Ortega Duran, who is currently one of the directors of the Panama Canal Commission.

Ortega Duran said the information is true and added: "This amendment approved by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee should be removed because the Panamanian members strongly protested these actions at the Canal Board of Directors meeting in July."

Likewise, he added, the Canal administration was warned not to make unbudgeted expenditures.

Asked what measures the government should take, Ortega Duran noted: "This deserves a note from the Panamanian Foreign Ministry so the U.S. Government will receive a formal protest from our country. It constitutes a mockery of the rights of Panama according to the Torrijos-Carter Treaties." [passage omitted]

WEAKENING OF BANK CONFIDENTIALITY DENIED

PA081825 Panama City CRITICA in Spanish 8 Aug 86 pp 1, 34

[Text] At an impromptu news conference held yesterday, Mario de Diego, executive director of the National Banking Commission, said the Panamanian Government does not intend to negotiate any agreement that may harm the confidentiality of banks.

With this statement, De Diego categorically rejected press rumors that Panama is negotiating relinquishment of the confidentiality that has been the backbone of the country's commercial and banking systems.

Asked about the bill on drug tafficking and money laundering, De Diego said: "Panama is the first country to draft a bill of this kind." After acknowledging that the bill is an initiative of Attorney General Carlos Villalaz, De Diego said the bill establishes harsh sanctions for criminals involved in drug trafficking.

He also explained that the bill lists the financial crimes that could be committed in Panama's international banking industry and considers effective international cooperation mechanisms to investigate and combat money laundering.

De Diego recalled the promise made by President Eric A. Delvalle on the occasion of the 16th anniversary of the Banking Commission on 30 July. Delvalle said then that the government will not take any action injurious to bank confidentiality.

Rumors on Banks Ill-Intentioned

PA090309 Panama City Televisora Nacional in Spanish 0000 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Station commentary: "Let's Respect Banking Secrecy"]

[Text] It is time now for all Panamanians to stop all activities against the country. We stress that protests should not be long in coming because the nation is being attacked, and it belongs to all of us.

Without doubt, the latest attack has been the one that has sowed fear regarding the operation of banks in Panama. This kind of ill-intentioned rumor regarding banking secrecy laws will make our international banking center reel. Not only the current government, but the entire country will be harmed by this.

This does not mean that we must put up with illegal activities, but banking activity is very sensitive and banking news should be handled with caution for the good of Panama.

We must be very objective when handling economic and banking news in order to contribute to the strengthening of the banking center. Thank you very much.

ARIAS DISCUSSES SHULTZ MEETING IN BOGOTA

PA081726 San Jose Radio Reloj in Spanish 0100 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] President Oscar Arias Sanchez, who attended the inauguration of Colombian President Virgilio Barco Vargas in Bogota," met this afternoon with U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz. President Arias said the following about the meeting:

[Begin recording] The meeting with Shultz was friendly and very cordial. The Guatemalan president and foreign minister and I took advantage of the occasion to inform Shultz of the basic problems affecting the Central American countries. We told him that the basic problems are economic development, [words indistinct], the generation of jobs, and the improvement of our people's standard of living. Of course to achieve this it is essential that we attain peace, and I believe we all agree that peace will not be achieved so long as there is no democracy in Central America. Therefore, Nicaragua was discussed.

We pointed out to Secretary Shultz the need for greater aid from financial organizations and the need to refinance the foreign debt, because if we do not refinance our debts it will be very difficult to [word indistinct] Central America's economy. Finally we spoke of the need for greater solidarity and aid from [words indistinct] democracies. [end recording]

President Arias also reiterated his belief that the Nicaraguan Government will have the last word in the solution of the Central American conflict.

[Begin recording] I believe the Sandinist government will have the last word. We have dedicated a great deal of time in the past to seeking a peaceful solution, but as the Costa Rican Foreign Ministry pointed out in its observations on the Contadora Document, the situation depends to a great extent on the attitude the Nicaraguan Government may adopt in the future. For our part, of course, as we have often said, we would have preferred and still prefer a peaceful solution," because the consequences of the war in Nicaragua directly affect Costa Ricans.

We have approximately 250,000 foreigners in Costa Rica. They constitute 10 percent of the population. Today I told Secretary of State Shultz that to have such a large number of foreigners in the country is dangerous, because we could lose our identity. We could lose our values, culture, and ways of thinking. A very large percentage of Costa Ricans have traditions, customs, and a culture different from that of the Nicaraguans. Therefore, we are most interested in solving the regional problem through negotiations, not war. As we all know, Costa Rica's northern zone, which is a commercial center for our country, has a bright future, but it will be very difficult to develop it because of the uncertainty created by the permanent immigration of so many Nicaraguans. [end recording]

Returns From Colombia

PA101635 San Jose Radio Reloj in Spanish 1330 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] President Oscar Arias arrived in the country aboard a private jet at 1425 yesterday after attending the inauguration of Colombian President Virgilio Barco Vargas. The official delegation included President Arias; the first lady, Margarita de Arias; and Foreign Minister Rodrigo Madrigal Nieto and his wife, Miriam de Madrigal.

President Oscar Arias said in the diplomatic room of the Juan Santamaria Airport that the visit to Colombia permitted progress in the consolidation of Latin America's democratic process. He said that his talks with leaders of various Latin American countries dealt with the foreign debt, development possibilities in the region, and Central American peace.

Costa Rica made the commitment in Colombia to continue the struggle in the hemisphere so that those countries that do not have a democratic system can achieve a pluralistic system. He also said that all Latin Americans have great hope for preserving peace in the American hemisphere.

FDR-FMLN COMMUNIQUE ON PREDIALOGUE MEETING

PA081414 (Clandestine) Radio Venceremos in Spanish to El Salvador 1311 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Communique issued by the FDR Executive Committee-FMLN General Command on 7 August in El Salvador]

[Text] To the national and international audience:

1. The FDR-FMLN has insisted that the procedural aspects for the third round of dialogue should be discussed in private with the mediator and should be announced once an agreement is reached. The FDR-FMLN maintains this position and confirms it as its standard behavior, aimed at giving utmost seriousness to the third round of dialogue.

2. In view of the fact that the Duarte government has publicly manipulated preparatory aspects of the third round of dialogue, the FDR-FMLN is compelled to make the following proposals and clarifications:

A. Duarte's proposal on the need to hold a round of preparatory meetings in order to agree on the preparatory aspects of the third round of dialogue coincides with the proposal made by our fronts in Perquin on 2 August. Therefore, we feel the preparatory meetings have already been agreed on, and we agree to hold them in Mexican territory, after both parties have consulted with the government of that friendly country. As a specific reply to the national interest regarding this dialogue, we propose initiating the preparatory meetings on Wednesday, 20 August.

B. When we met with the mediatory, Msgr Rivera y Damas, on 2 August in Perquin, we sent the government a message voicing our objections to the places proposed for the meeting. These objections and our proposed venue are based on the need to guarantee the security of the delegations who will attend the dialogue, bearing in mind the well-known violations by some military leaders of the commitments made by the government, such as the Christmas truce, the exchange of prisoners, the departure of the wounded, and more recently, during Msgr Rivera's visit to Morazan.

C. Concerning the date for the third round of dialogue, we have proposed that this date be set during the preparatory meetings, based on the agreements reached on procedure and security.

3. In conclusion, with a view to holding the third round of dialogue, we invite all national sectors to voice their contributions toward achieving a just peace. For our part, we abstain at this time from engaging in propaganda polemics with the government spokesman.

El Salvador, 7 August 1986

Viera: FMLN Proposal 'Valid'

PA092014 San Salvador Radio Cadena YSKL in Spanish 1800 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Report by Rene Hurtado]

[Text] Roberto Edmundo Viera, deputy culture and communications minister, has told YSKL that the FMLN-FDR counterproposal on holding preliminary talks in Mexico is valid. He said that the FMLN-FDR proposal to hold such talks on 20 August is valid because they fall within the government proposal for holding them between 19 and 26 August. In this regard, Roberto Edmundo Viera, the official spokesman on the dialogue, said:

[Begin recording] [Viera] The proposed talks are within the period we specified.

[Hurtado] Right, [words indistinct]?

[Viera] Yes, we think this is positive. [end recording]

Viera also said that this is a positive step that gives the impression that the dialogue will be held. This is different from positions that were expressed some days ago by the FDR-FMLN and the government. With this, Viera said, I think we can see that the talks are feasible, at least as far as establishing the date of 20 August is concerned. The official spokesman on the dialogue also noted that the FMLN-FDR had said that he had lied with regard to the government's counterproposal. Viera said that he had not lied, that what he had done was to explain the proposal, because it was felt that the FMLN was not willing to hold this dialogue and that the public should be aware of this. This has brought about positive results with the counterproposal of the FMLN-FDR.

In light of the remarks by Viera, it is understood that the preliminary talks will be held in the embassy in Mexico, as the government had proposed, within the period of 19 to 26 August. They will be held in the Salvadoran Embassy with the presence of mediator Msgr Arturo Rivera y Damas. Viera also announced that President Jose Napoleon Duarte will arrive tomorrow and will hold talks with Msgr Rivera y Damas. In this regard, he said:

[Begin recording] The official proposal will be considered tomorrow when the president is here, and he will talk about it with Msgr Rivera y Damas. [end recording]

In this way, one understands that the government accepts the date of 20 August for the holding of preliminary talks in the Salvadoran Embassy in Mexico with the presence of mediator Msgr Rivera y Damas.

VARGAS SAYS REBELS LACK MILITARY CAPABILITY

PA090416 San Salvador EL DIARIO DE HOY in Spanish 8 Aug 86 pp 3, 20

[Text] FMLN terrorists have no military capability, they are capable only of terrorism; they cannot distinguish between a combatant and a noncombatant, said Col Mauricio Ernesto Vargas, commander of the 4th Military Detachment, headquartered in Morazan Department.

During a news conference, Col Vargas categorically denied that the Salvadoran subversives have any military capability.

In reply to a question about the FMLN proposal to create an army comprised of the Salvadoran Armed Forces and the terrorists, the military officer said that this is practically impossible given the terrorists' lack of military professionalism, and -- above all -- because the Armed Forces' behavior is guided by the Constitution, and the FMLN disavows this document.

In addition, when asked about bombings by the Armed Forces in zones where a guerrilla presence has been reported, he denied that the military carries out "indiscriminate bombings," as the FMLN's propaganda constantly reports. He explained that these bombings are attacks on the terrorists who are trying to destroy El Salvador.

He said: "Each bombing has a specific military target and is authorized by the commander in chief of the Armed Forces, the defense minister, and the chief of staff."

Discussing communist infiltration at the National University, Vargas did not discard the possibility of military intervention there if it becomes a danger to national security.

FPL CENTRAL COMMITTEE MEMBER DIES IN CLASH

PA100415 (Clandestine) Radio Venceremos in Spanish to El Salvador 1200 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Communique signed by Commander Leonel Gonzalez, secretary general of the People's Liberation Forces, FPL, Central Committee and member of the FMLN General Command; dated August 1986]

[Text] Communique to the Salvadoran people and international community.

We report that in the enforcement of the strategic, political, and military guidelines of the FMLN in Chalatenango, the plans of the military High Command and Duarte are being dealt overwhelming blows and are being defeated. From January to date we have inflicted 990 casualties on the enemy. These casualties increase every time medium-scale operations are carried out. The Ramon Belloso, Bracamonte, and Atlacatl Battalions were soundly thrashed in May and July. The same applies to the 4th Infantry Brigade and 1st Military Detachment battalions. These forces have clearly proven that they are demoralized, and desertions are regularly reported among their ranks.

Our guerrilla forces maintain control throughout three-fourths of Chalatenango Department, while the enemy controls only the outskirts of their two main garrisons. Furthermore, the population in Chalatenango is permanently strangled by strict economic measures affecting the marketing of their products. Both Colonel Oscar Rubio, chief of the 4th Brigade, and Colonel Natividad de Jesus Caceres Cabrera have set up roadblocks at points like El Limon and Colima, where they steal the products that the people bring from San Salvador.

The people are withstanding a policy of psychological war, terror, bombings, and strafings against their houses and property. Consequently, the people in Chalatenango no longer believe in the lies and cynical campaigns which are allegedly carried out for civic action. As a result, the Christian Democratic government has been compelled to implement its programs directly under USAID cover. The people of Chalatenango have proven their courage and defeated the High Command's worn-out policy to relocate the population. They have earned the right to live in their places of origin, and this right is recognized by international organizations.

Within the framework of our people's struggle and victories, we report the death of Comrade Susana, who was a member of the zonal directorate in Chalatenango. She had held this post since 1982. Comrade Virginia Pena Mendoza, alias Susana, was born on 8 August 1952 and was the sister of Comrade Commander Felipe Pena Mendoza. She emerged in 1968 as a capable leader of the student movement and fully joined the popular struggle of workers and teachers which began during those years. In 1974 she became a full member of FPL and part of the revolutionary process, in which she worked tirelessly in the organization and creation of cadres and contributed to the theoretical training of FPL and FMLN members. Susana was characterized by her strategic plans, optimism about our victory, and love for children, poor people, art, and life. She happily dedicated herself to the poor people's cause.

Comrade Susana died on 12 July in Canton Cuevitas, La Laguna jurisdicition, Chalatenango Department, during a clash with an enemy patrol. Our comrade was wounded, captured, and later shot, along with her [word indistinct] in the backyard of a house in that village. This proves how Col Caceres Cabrera treats the fighters who are wounded in combat. There is no respect for the Geneva agreements. Comrade Susana was a member of our Revolutionary Council and Central Committee of the FPL at the time of her death. The heroic example of our comrade, her contribution to the noble cause of the struggle for our people's liberation, represents the path which must be followed by the children of FMLN. Susana represents a source of strength for our cadres, leaders, workers, peasants, and students who are currently joining our ranks en masse and picking up weapons against the puppet Army, Durate's regime, and U.S. interventionists.

Consequently, the FMLN -- particularly the FPL -- is paying enthusiastic tribute to our comrade and telling her: Comrade Susana, until the victory, always! You will be present in the daily struggle against the ominous forces of oppression and exploitation. You will live among our people until we achieve our definite victory.

Revolution or death! We will win! Comrade Susana, your life and example will always be remembered! Revolution or death! The armed people will win!

[Signed] Commander Leonel Gonzalez, Chalatenango, August 1986

GUATEMALA

CEREZO ON HELICOPTER ACQUISITION, NEUTRALITY

PA090113 Guatemala City Radio-Television Guatemala in Spanish 0400 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Report on interview with President Vinicio Cerezo by a "group of reporters" on 7 August at the headquarters of the Guatemalan Telecommunications Enterprise in Guatemala City -- passages within quotations marks recorded]

[Excerpt] [passage omitted] [Reporter] Regarding other issues, the president announced that the government will buy two helicopters with a loan from the French regime.

[Cerezo] "We requested only spare parts for French helicopters that we already have in Guatemala, and we discussed the possibility of buying two more helicopters. However, those helicopters would be used by the government of the Republic, not by the Army. They would be helicopters at the service of the ministries; that is, for civilian use. They are four-seat, external cargo aircraft that will not be equipped with artillery to be used by the military. We are buying spare parts to upgrade Guatemalan Army helicopters. We estimate that the purchase of spare parts will allow us to have 15 operational helicopters to carry out internal work by the end of the year.

"However, we do not wish to participate in the arms race. Our objective is to invest the money in satisfying the needs of Guatemalans. That is why we have insisted on the need to stop the arms race and bring peace to Central America."

[Reporter] As for international policy, the ruler said that the Guatemalan position of active neutrality in the central American conflict could be modified if circumstances call for a change. That was his reply to a question regarding a letter he sent to Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega in which he established such a position.

[Cerezo] "Look, we will reiterate our statement: Neutrality means favoring neither side. As a concept, we reject a military intervention in any country and support popular sovereignty. However, as democrats we maintain that conditions must be present to allow the enforcement of that sovereignty. We are now maintaining our neutrality and would break it only if we were directly attacked."

ORPA FRONT REPORTS ACTIONS IN SUCHITEPEQUEZ

PA080226 Guatemala City PRENSA LIBRE in Spanish 8 Aug 86 p 14

[Text] In a bulletin, the "Commander Javier Tambriz" Front of the ORPA [Revolutionary Organization of the People in Arms] has reported on actions carried out in Suchitepequez.

The communique states that the group occupied several farms and stretches of highways, ejected and disarmed farm owners and managers, distributed propaganda, and held meetings in various parts of the region.

It adds that during the political occupations, the group held discussions with the people about the maneuvers of the country's civilian government, the causes of the high cost of living, insurgent actions, and the five points presented by the URNG to President Vinicio Cerezo Arevalo to guarantee the democratic process.

HONDURAS

ARMED FORCES STEP UP ANTITERRORIST VIGILANCE

PA090432 Tegucigalpa EL HERALDO in Spanish 8 Aug 86 p 48

[Government bulletin; date not given]

[Text] Upon orders from General Humberto Regalado Hernandez, the Armed Forces General Command has proceeded to carry out an operation throughout the nation to control and prevent any act of terrorism which affects the citizenry.

This operation is being carried out jointly by members of the Public Security Forces [FUSEP] and soldiers of various Armed Forces units, who are being deployed to various areas night and day and are asking the citizens to show their identification papers.

The police and military authorities want to improve their methods of fighting crime and antisocial actions which worry the people and always make headlines.

An evaluation of these operations will be carried out in due time to compare results and find other methods to continue fighting the actions which worry the people.

Military authorities hereby urge the citizens, particularly those who have to travel at night due to their studies or work, to carry their identification papers and thus avoid any problems concerning their identity.

NICARAGUAN ARTILLERY, RIFLE FIRE HITS CIFUENTES

PA091237 Tegucigalpa EL HERALDO in Spanish 8 Aug 86 p 56

[By Luis Ernesto Moncada]

[Text] Danli, El Paraiso -- On the night of 6 August Sandinists opened artillery and rifle fire on Cifuentes, a Honduran town on the eastern border. Reports provided by Danli's seventh alderman, Norman Ponce, reveal that the mortar rounds fired at our territory caused on casualties among the population.

The attack began at 2200 and concluded 6 hours later. According to the alderman, the Armed Forces troops posed in Cifuentes were forced to quell the indiscriminate firing. The areas affected by the rifle and artillery fire were Murupuchi Hill and the local cemetery. Ponce said he was told that a Banadesa [National Agricultural Development Bank] -- vehicle was hit by eight bullets, fired from Nicaraguan territory.

POLICE ATTACK OPPOSTIION DEPUTY'S HOME BY MISTAKE

[Excerpts] Tegucigalpa, 8 Aug (ACAN-EFE) -- Early this morning Honduran policeman from an antiguerrilla squad attacked the house of an opposition deputy in this capital.

The police said the action was a mistake, based on groundless reports that there were some armed people in the legislator's house. Units of the special "Cobra" Battalion fired with .12 gauge shotguns and M-16 automatic rifles for some 30 minutes at the house of Rodolfo Zelaya in the eastern part of Tegucigalpa. [passage omitted] Zelaya, his wife, daughter, and mother-in-law were inside the house.

The police action began last night at 2300, but the shooting began at 0500, today. At the end of the operation, at 0800, the police had captured only Juan Angel Solorzano, 23, a watchman in the Tres Caminos district, where Zelaya's house is

"We were captured, but Wilfredo Sanchez, commander general of the Public Security Forces, released us when he confirmed who we were," Zelaya said. "We were told that this was a regrettable error, that there had been reports that there were armed people in my house and possibly an arsenal," he added. Very angry, Zelaya said that he told the police chief: "You should investigate before you attack and fire on any residence or any citizen." Solorzano said he had not received any answers or apologies. [passage omitted]

GOVERNMENT DEFENDS AGREEMENT WITH COLOMBIA

[By German Reyes]

[Text] Tegucigalpa, 9 Aug (ACAN-EFE) -- Today the Honduran Government described as tendentious criticism by several sectors of the country of the sovereignty that Honduras granted to Colombia over Serranilla Cay, in the Atlantic Ocean. A communique issued by the Press Secretariat points out that after the signing of a maritime delimitation treaty with Colombia, which grants it sovereignty over Serranilla, a campaign "aimed at harming the government's image" began. The communique adds: "We vigorously reject those who, using very marked demagogy, assert that we have given up part of our territorial sovereignty merely to solve a maritime problem with Colombia."

The Honduran Government reiterates that with the signing of that treaty with Colombia, the country's Constitution was not violated, "as permanent enemies of the country have said, tendentiously and maliciously, through the media." The press communique does not explain how Article 10 of the Honduran Constitution, which includes Serranilla Cay as part of Honduras, should be interpreted.

In an interview granted to a Tegucigalpa radio station, the Honduran president contradicted the text of the Constitution when he asserted that soveieignty over Serranilla is "a Honduran claim which is part of the Constitution." [sentence as received]

The approval or rejection of the treaty will have to be discussed in the National Congress, although President Azcona said that the document will have the approval of the legislative branch. Deputies of the four political parties -- Liberal, National, Christian Democratic, and Innovation and Unity -- have expressed their rejection of the document, which was signed on the Colombian island of San Andres on 2 August. The news media have also provided time for people to air views and criticisms on the Serranilla Cay issue.

The president has been reminded that Article 19 of the Constitution states: "No authority can make or ratify agreements or grant concessions detrimental to the territorial integrity, sovereignty, and independence of the Republic."

"Whoever does so will be judged for the crime of treason to the fatherland. Liability in this case cannot be mitigated," the Constitution states.

NICARAGUA

ORTEGA LETTER TO EPISCOPATES ON BISHOP VEGA

PA091338 Managua BARRICADA in Spanish 8 Aug 86 p 6

[Letter from President Daniel Ortega to "the Nicaraguan Episcopal Conference and the espicopates of the world," dated 18 July]

[Text] This is to clarify our posture about the case of Bishop Pablo Antonio Vega.

After the revolution eliminated the violent and oppressive social system which existed in our country, the Nicaraguan people and Government had to tackle the urgent task of constructing a new society in accordance with our history, culture, and traditions.

We are inspired by democracy, justice, equality, independence, national sovereignty, and peaceful coexistence with states and peoples. We are committed to the construction of a more fair domestic order and a newer, more humane and sensitive society.

Regrettably, the U.S. Government has refused to admit the Nicaraguan people's right to determine their own destiny. As an expression of this policy, the U.S. Government has imposed a war of aggression on us. This war of aggression has forced us to establish a state of emergency to cope with these acts which are contrary to Nicaragua's sovereignty.

The most recent expressions of this aggressive policy have been the approval of the $100 million, the use of all kinds of armament, and the military advice for the Somozist mercenaries. This situation forces us to strengthen Nicaragua's legal measures aimed at guaranteeing and safeguarding our people's genuine rights.

Despite this illegal and immoral war policy, Nicaragua has maintained a willingness for peace at all times. The Nicaraguan Government recently reacted positively and constructively to the Contadora proposals presented at the 7 June meeting. As a demonstration of this willingness for dialogue and understanding, Nicaragua proposed a series of specific steps that included an arms inventory, the drafting of a table of values for such arms, firm support for Contadora's efforts in Latin America, and a regional accord.

The Nicaraguan Government is dedicated to sparing our people the suffering that this unfair war entails. In an effort to obtain a peaceful and civilized solution, we presented our demands to the International Court of Justice [ICJ]. Recently the court's decision confirmed the justice of our cause.

In spite of this, our desire for peace and coexistence has been hampered by the U.S. Government's aggressive policy. This government has assumed positions that do not contribute to the construction of a new, more fair and humane order.

The Nicaraguan Government feels it is correct for all Nicaraguans, including religious authorities, to participate in the country's political life within the context of the pluralism advocated by the revolution. What is more, the Sandinist popular revolution has fostered such participation. Nevertheless, we do not regard as legal those political actions that are detrimental to the independence, sovereignty, self-determination, and peace of the Nicaraguan people and that therefore disrupt the institutional political climate.

Moreover, we have seen that some religious authorities have moved out of the religious sphere -- to which the Nicaraguan people are linked -- toward international political spheres that foster destabilizing actions against the Nicaraguan state. As we understand it, it is in this area that the case of Bishop Vega belongs. We refer to him directly in this message. The position of his eminence, Cardinal Msgr Miguel Obando y Bravo, would also fall within this description of destabilizing actions.

Bishop Vega clearly violated laws, contrary to the Nicaraguan people's genuine rights. He traveled twice to the United States -- trips financed by the CIA -- to back President Reagan's policy of war. He went so far as to meet with and make remarks while in the company of well-known counterrevolutionary leaders Adolfo Calero and Enrique Bermudez.

The description of Nicaragua's domestic situation as presented by Msgr Vega was determinant in the U.S. Congress' vote to back President Reagan's proposal. Reagan used the bishop's remarks as the principal argument in a speech.

In view of this posture by Msgr Vega, we hereby publicly warn of the political and legal responsibility that such a posture entails. We were deeply surprised at the fact that a few days later, on 2 July, Msgr Vega justified the war of aggression and expressed approval for the delivery of $100 million arms, and military advisers for the mercenaries, terming these criminal actions "a human right."

It is worth mentioning that Bishop Vega has underestimated the efforts for peace made by Contadora and the amnesty that we have been extending for the past 4 years, which benefits all those who have taken up arms and wish to lay them down, and overlooked the atrocities committed by the mercenary forces of the counterrevolution.

In the same statement, Bishop Vega disregarded the ruling of the ICJ, describing it as biased. He also justified an eventual direct U.S. aggression based on alleged "right" of that nation to "defend" itself from Nicaragua. He also explicitly approved of President Reagan's quoting him when defending his war policy against Nicaragua.

Our government could do no less than react and act in accordance with the law in face of a person who uses the moral authority he received through his position and pastoral status to support the aid to the armed counterrevolution and justify the crimes committed against our people.

With his words and actions Msgr Vega committed an act of provocation, placing himself outside the law and siding with the enemy. In view of this conduct, which has strongly affected the interests of the Nicaraguan nation, the Nicaraguan Government was forced to adopt the pertinent legal measures within the framework of the national state of emergency.

In this sense, respect for the domestic laws of Nicaragua becomes an obligation for everyone -- Nicaraguan and foreigner -- who may reside in the country, without any exception.

As we mentioned earlier, when Msgr Vega turned from the religious sphere to an illegal political sphere that greatly and seriously affects the interests of the country, he brought on himself the enforcement of the current measure.

In every country's history there have been times when complicity with an attacking foreigner has been a pubishable act, and if religious personalities are involved in this type of action, it is the prestige of the church and its mission to spread the gospel that are at stake. This is what we verify today in Nicaragua.

The pastoral letter released by the Nicaraguan Episcopate on 17 November 1979 encouraged us to search for a path of better understanding with the church. On our part, since the foundation of the FSLN, we have recognized and deeply valued the active and permanent participation of Christians in the revolution, and since 19 July 1979 we have guaranteed full religious freedom.

Much to our sorrow, we began to observe the sprouting of a series of difficulties. The path of understanding has not been an easy one; however, we believe that dialogue must not only be possible, but that we must take the first steps to achieve it.

In this sense, I have considered it convenient to address you, and through you your country's Episcopal Conference, in the hopes that your high authority will contribute to achieving this climate of dialogue and trust that the Nicaraguan Government wishes, thereby allowing for an understanding between the Church and the state.

BOGOTA TV NOTES RAMIREZ NEWS CONFERENCE

[Text] Nicaraguan Vice President Sergio Ramirez, who is in Colombia attending the presidential inauguration, said this morning that the Contadora Group must continue to mediate in order to overcome the Central American problems. Prior to meeting with President Virgilio Barco, Ramirez held a news conference.

Ramirez praised the current Colombian Government's decision to continue to support the Central American peace process within the Contadora framework and not through another organization such as the OAS, because in that way the United States could become a judge and an interested party in the conflict affecting the region. This is how we understand this, and we are pleased, Ramirez said, adding that the situation remains difficult because of the U.S. support for the counterrevolutionaries and its refusal to accept the ruling of the International Court of Justice. This implies, Ramirez said, the law of the jungle.

The Nicaraguan vice president also referred to the signing of the maritime delimitation treaty by Colombia and Honduras. According to some observers, this treaty has repercussions on the Nicaraguan claim over San Andres.

[Begin Ramirez recording] Nicaragua is not interested in promoting territorial conflicts or participating in discussions about territorial conflicts. Those are not our priorities. Our first priority is peace in Central America and Nicaragua. We are suffering the effects of a devastating war for the country, and we are the first to want peace.

We believe that Latin America has urgent problems to resolve, such as those of the foreign debt, economic injustice in international relations, and other problems that involve the consolidation of democracy in Latin America. We believe those are the problems on Nicaragua's agenda for Latin America relations rather than territorial conflicts. I categorically refuse to discuss territorial conflicts. [end recording]

Denies Rebel Training

PA082201 Madrid EFE in Spanish 2120 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Bogota, 8 Aug (EFE) -- The only thing the United States has not accused us of is white slavery, Vice President Sergio Ramirez Mercado said today in Bogota.

That is how the Sandinist leader responded when asked if his country is training South American guerrillas and about his government's ties to the drug trafficking mafia.

"That is another accusation by the U.S. Department of State. Of course, my answer to those accusations is no. The only thing the United States has not accused us of is white slavery," Ramirez replied.

During a news conference held at a Bogota Hotel, the Nicaraguan vice president said that his country would be prepared to sign the Contadora Document on 15 September, "independence day for the Central American countries," so long as the parties involved in this conflict "sign the Bogota Declaration."

To that effect, Ramirez noted that "all those involved must make a commitment" to that document and urged the presidents and foreign ministers who are in Bogota attending the inauguration of new Colombian President Virgilio Barco Vargas to revitalize the Contadora efforts.

TIRADO MEETS REGION 4 COOPERATIVE LEADERS

PA090435 Managua BARRICADA in Spanish 8 Aug 86 p 5

[Text] U.S. aggression against Nicaragua is a fact which is seen not only in the murders and kidnappings of civilians, but also in the impact these criminal actions have on the country's economy.

Commander Victor Tirado made that statement yesterday during a brief meeting with almost 40 presidents of Region 4 agricultural cooperatives to explain the impact which the war and the recent disbursement of $100 million to the mercenaries is having on the cooperative movement in Nicaragua.

He recalled that since 1980 the aggression has claimed 31,290 victims -- civilian and military -- and to date the Somozist forces have killed or kidnapped 12,828 men and 1,537 women engaged in production activities in various parts of the country.

"This is affecting the economy, because these people were a human labor force with many years of experience, and they are hard to replace. For that reason, they constituted the most precious element of the revolution," Tirado said.

He stressed that this human labor, the product of the people's long learning process, is matched "by the human labor of fighters defending the revolution" and that although its impact on economic growth will not be seen yet, it is the base on which to consolidate the revolutionary process.

"The role of the cooperative movement has been shaped by U.S. aggression and the producers' experiences cannot remain isolated," the leader stated, urging the peasants of the region to share and exchange their experiences with cooperative members all over the country.

In the Los Pueblos zone, which covers southern Masaya and southwestern Granada, as well as Diriomo, Diria, and San Juan de Oriente municipalities, land ownership is divided as follows: 3,010 manzanas for cooperatives, 5,878 manzanas for small production, 1,540 manzanas for big production, and 2,927 manzanas for wage laborers.

Of the region's 49,000 residents -- 20,000 of them are living in rural areas -- there are 941 small farmers, 630 cooperatives members, 564 artisans, 777 merchants, and 5,855 wage laborers who are underemployed.

In Los Pueblos, the products farmed in an area covering 122 sq km include: 11,845 manzanas of corn, yielding an average of 386 quintals per manzana; 2,334 manzanas of beans, yielding 12 qunitals per manzana; and 2,000 manzanas of rice, yielding 15 quintals per manzana.

BRIEFS

SPANISH HEALTH AID -- The Spanish Embassy in Nicaragua has reported that Spain will provide $564,286 in health aid to Nicaragua this year. This aid will include the training of 15 Nicaraguan doctors in Spanish hospitals, the shipping of medicine to be unloaded at Corinto, books, and other things. BRAVO ON L.A. PARLIAMENT, COLOMBIA VISIT

[Telephone interview with Flavio Bravo, president of the NAtional Assembly of the People's Government, in Bogota, by unidentified reporter; date not given — live or recorded]

[Text] [Reporter] President, how do you assess the special executive meeting of the Latin American parliament?

[Bravo] In that meeting a letter of intent was signed which documents agreement to work for the strengthening and the institutionalization of the Latin American Parliament. Almost everyone spoke; we can say that the tone of the talks was very positive. Participants spoke in favor of Latin America, and expressed the need for Latin American unity, economic integration, a struggle against the debt, the right to independence and self-determination, and the paeceful solution to area problems. That was the general tone of the talks.

[Reporter] What personal contacts did you have with presidents or with other leaders in Bogota?

[Bravo] We had the opportunity to exchange views with Presidents Lusinchi from Venezuela and Sanguinetti from Uruguay. We also talked to outgoing President Belisario Betancur and with many other figures from Colombia and Latin America. In all those conversations, we talked about the problems that are of most interest to all the countries: the problem of preventing a U.S. invasion in Nicaragua, and the problem of the foreign debt, which came up in all contacts.

[Reporter] What can you tell us about the welcome given to the Cuban delegation?

[Bravo] Cuba has extraordinary prestige. An attempt was made to impose silence about the presence of our country here. An attempt was even made to state that we are here illegally. It is true that we do not have official relations with this country, but Cuba is here. Everyone expressed their admiration and affection for our country, which enjoys great sympathy among the Colombian people.

[Reporter] Thank you very much, Flavio, for your kindness in granting us this interview.

COMMENTARY ASSESSES COLOMBIA'S BARCO VARGAS

PA081608 Havana International Service in Spanish 2300 GMT 7 Aug 86

["Our America" commentary, read by Norberto Hernandez]

[Text] As of today, 7 August 1986, Virgilio Barco Vargas, a 65-year-old Liberal Party member, is the new president of Colombia. He inherits a country with serious social and economic problems, a $15-billion foreign debt, increasing unemployment, and other problems whose solutions will test Barco Vargas' capacity to rule.

The good intentions always present in the record of any presidential candidate are not missing in the case of Virgilio Barco Vargas, who said that he will work to try to solve the problems of those sectors that need more help.

The new president, who once held the public works and agriculture portfolios and who is an expert on nutrition, inherits from his predecessor the Plan for Adjustment with Self-Discipline and Development [Plan de Ajuste con Autodisciplina y Desarrollo] approved by both the IMF and World Bank. Like other countries which are implementing similar plans, Colombia is experiencing unprecedented unemployment as a result of the collapse of small and medium-sized businesses. To this we must add the IMF pressures for the country to increase its imports. The cost of public services is constantly increasing, while wages are frozen and the currency devalued last year by 50 percent.

The outlook for the new president is not very promising. However, he has said he will do his best in the domestic field where the eradication of violence and the national pacification policy play an important role.

In regard to foreign policy, some observers say that Colombia and its new president will revise the nation's position as a member of the Contadora Group. Barco Vargas has announced the universalization of international relations within the concept of ideological pluralism, the improvement of the OAS, and Cuba's return to that organization.

We must not forget that during Betancur's administration, Colombia joined the Nonaligned Movement as a full member and played a leading role in the peace efforts of the Contadora Group.

The people of Latin America, and Central America particularly, expect from the new president of Colombia the determination of his predecessor for peace and the negotiated solution of conflicts. The Contadora Group is tirelessly struggling for these principles.

'OUR AMERICA' CRITICIZES U.S. PLANS FOR HAITI

["Our America" commentary, read by Norberto Hernandez]

[Text] Consistent with previous announcements, a U.S. Defense Department delegation is in Haiti to evaluate the needs of the Haitian Armed Forces for the purpose of providing arms and equipment to that nation.

This news, in addition to confirming the growing rapprochement with the U.S. Administration that General Henri Namphy is propitiating, represents a strong reason for concern among all national sectors, because it is evident that military reinforcements will serve to strengthen the government's openly repressive and antipopular policies.

At the end of July, (Chris Lemcham), director of Washington's office for Haitian affairs, charged that the White House is trying to turn the Haitian Army into a professional institution. To this end it is strengthening its links with forces connected to the Duvalierist dynasty at a moment when the people's demands that the government be cleansed of all the elements who where allies of the dictatorship have increased.

Washington's Office for Haitian Affairs, responsible for observing the human rights situation in the Caribbean nation, has said that the elections scheduled for next year will be supervised by an Army that has not been purged of Duvalierists, and that the elections process will be a farce similar to the one that put Francois Duvalier in power in 1957.

According to this office, the reason why the current Haitian Government Council is anxious to hold elections is clear: to ratify its control of the government.

On day before the arrival of the Pentagon delegation in Haiti, THE NEW YORK TIMES quoted sources from the U.S. Embassy in Port-au-Prince as saying that the United States will give arms, military equipment, and helicopters to the Henri Namphy regime. It is known that practically from the very beginning of the new administration, the people have been demanding that criminals linked to the past regime be put on trial. They also demand the effective dismantling of the hated repressive corps known as the Tontons Macoute and the cleansing of the public administration, which until now has been under the control of the Duvalierists. For this reason, the concern of the groups in the United States and Haiti that defend human rights is valid. They are concerned with the Pentagon's plans to rearm the Haitian Army and police.

During the months that have passed since Gen Namphy gained power, the U.S. Government has exerted strong pressure to seize complete control of the Haitian situation; it is evidently accomplishing this because political power is still in the hands of the Duvalierists.

GRANMA ON U.S. ANTIDRUG OPERATION IN BOLIVIA

PA081911 Havana International Service in Spanish 2300 GMT 7 Aug 86

["Cuban Press Review"]

[Text] A recent issue of the Cuban newspaper GRANMA, organ of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Cuba, includes an article on the U.S. presence in Bolivia to undertake spectacular actions against drug trafficking.

The GRANMA article, "Falsehood of an Antidrug Operation," states that the background of that maneuver is sufficiently apparent to raise suspicions. Although Bolivia has proclaimed that the problem of corruption, drug trafficking, and illegal drug consumption is a crime against humanity that demands urgent action from all affected countries, the United States had refused to give Bolivia aid for that objective and also implemented a real financial blockade that brought difficulties to Bolivia.

For example, the U.S. Associated Press [AP] news agency reported that of the $29.3 million allocated to Bolivia by the Agency for International Development, only $9.5 million was disbursed. The rest, which was essential for the country's survival, was conditioned on the controlling of drug trafficking by Bolivia, in other words, that it accept the military contingent currently operating in the country.

GRANMA states that 160 soldiers of a special rapid deployment force, equipped for irregular warfare, are participating in the U.S.-sponsored operation. According to various reports and charges, the campaign is directed at the destruction [of coca] through the introduction of dangerous defoliants and the use of a centipede plague capable of destroying 1,500 hectares of plants in a single night [as heard].

The results have been nonexistent: 2 weeks after the campaign began, not a single gram of cocaine has been seized.

The U.S. campaign is not limited to the elimination of the surplus of coca which might be used to produce cocaine, but to the total elimination of that plant which is widely used in Bolivia legally and from which thousands of peasant families obtain their livelihood. Those peasant families are not being given an alternative and the essential means to cultivate other crops.

GRANMA adds that as usual the United States has managed to avoid acting against the main cause of the problem, which is its own huge market for consumption and the scandalous tolerance towards drug trafficking and usage. The most important U.S. publications confirm that reality. For example, TIME magazine categorically stated in its latest issue: The only path to control the drugs infection in the United States is to discourage domestic demand, not by nibbling at Latin American suppliers.

GRANMA quotes other U.S. publications that criticize the drug trade in the United States. AP stated in a dispatch just a few days ago that the marijuana grown in California and Hawaii has displaced the cannabis of the Sierra Nevada [as heard]. THE NEW YORK TIMES disclosed that the United States currently has record productions of marijuana and cocaine.

It is known, GRANMA comments, that the goal of the international drug mafia which operates with more than $200 billion in capital is precisely the United States. As we can see, the Washington government's antidrug campaigns are not aimed in that direction. The obstinate refusal to cooperate with plans to replace the crops in Bolivia shows that not even outside U.S. territory are its campaigns aimed at the elimination of the objective causes of the problem or the prevention of its consequences. The current operation in Bolivia seeks the gradual establishment of Yankee bases in South America and warlike exercises related with the aggression against Nicaragua to test possible Latin American reactions. GRANMA concludes that in this case, as in many others, the United States sees the mote in another's eye and not the beam in its own.

Seen as Intervention Pretext

[By Maruja Garcia]

[Text] Everything seems to indicate that the United States has decided to flaunt the banner of the antidrug struggle in front of the world public opinion to make its interventionist actions easier. Evidence of this is that its much publicized antidrug efforts are being undertaken outside of the United States, where these are in fact most needed. Using this pretext, the U.S. Government is advancing a ranting propaganda campaign against Mexico, and trampling on Bolivian Sovereignty by sending U.S. troops there.

Now it appears that, according to these elaborate U.S. plans, it is Costa Rica's turn. Costa Rican Civil Police Director Manuel Rivera [title as heard] has said that the Costa Rican authorities are willing to admit U.S. troops into the country to fight drug trafficking. The plan will arouse suspicion. The Costa Rican Government has shifted from its earlier and much hailed policy of neutrality to a position dangerously aligned with the U.S. policy in Central America.

The activities of the counterrevolutionary bands that attack Nicaragua from Costa Rica have intensified, while President Oscar Arias feigns ignorance of Nicaragua's recent proposals to create a demilitarized zone between the two countries. Nicaragua, Costa Rica, El Salvador, and Honduras are members of the so-called Tegucigalpa Group, created at the urging of the United States. Until now, the group's only accomplishment has been to delay and obstruct the peace efforts of the Contadora Group. Costa Rica's possible admittance of U.S. troops into its territory will make easier the U.S. plans, which include its latent intention of directly attacking Nicaragua.

Since U.S. troops disembarked in Bolivia, the most diverse sectors of Latin American public opinion have said that this may be a way of testing the hemisphere's reaction to an eventual U.S. invasion of Nicaragua. The U.S. pretext of fighting drug trafficking in Costa Rica can cause large-scale actions, the effects of which are unpredictable.

BARBADOS

PRIME MINISTER BARROW ASKS PEOPLE FOR MORE TIME

FL081811 Bridgetown CANA in English 1752 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Bridgetown, Barbados, Aug 8, CANA -- Prime Minister Errol Barrow last night appealed to the Barbadian public to give his nine-week-old government a little more time to carry through its programme. Speaking at an induction ceremony for 600 new members of the ruling Democratic Labour Party (DLP), he said there was perception that because the DLP had a massive 24-3 majority in Parliament, the administration could perform overnight miracles. There is a feeling in Barbados that because you have 24, then you can do things a lot more quickly and a lot more ruthlessly than if you only have 14, Barrow said. All I can ask you is to give us a little time and you will see the changes which will come about in this society.

After 10 years in opposition, the DLP was swept back to power in general elections on May 28, drubbing the Barbados Labour Party (BLP) which had been in office from 1976.

HAITI

1 KILLED, 2 ARRESTED IN PORT-AU-PRINCE INCIDENT

PA092318 Paris AFP in Spanish 0003 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] Port-au-Prince, 8 Aug (AFP) -- A young man died today of bullet wounds inflicted by civilians in an incident in Port-au-Prince, medical sources said. Meanwhile, two photographers, one of them from AFP, were arrested, according to the police.

According to witnesses, the incident took place when AFP photographer Lys Pierre-Louis was taking pictures of an armed civilian trying to arrest an unidentified individual on a street in downtown Port-au-Prince. A crowd began beating up the armed civilian, accusing him of being a "Tonton Macoute" (a militiaman of the overthrown government of Duvalier) until a military patrol arrived, disarmed the civilian, and dispersed the crowd. Subsequently, the police said the armed civilian was a detective from the criminal investigations service who was trying to arrest a thief. There was some shoving between the armed civilian and the AFP photographer and later on, other armed civilians shot and injured the young man, Bobby Narcisse, who was taken in an ambulance to a Port-au-Prince hospital where he died, according to medical reports. According to numerous reports, the victim was also a member of the criminal investigations service and he may have been a victim of shots fired by his own colleagues.

The AFP photographer was arrested by the police who told the AFP office in Port-au-Prince that he would be turned over to the authorities. Clifford Larose, photographer of the Haitian weekly, HAITI PROGRESS, published in the United States, was also arrested for reasons that were not explained.

According to a police official, Lys Pierre-Louis will be accused of attacking the detective and allowing the crowd to lynch him.

This version is different from that of several witnesses, among them an AFP technician, who said that it was the detective who slapped and spit on the photographer's face because he disliked being photographed.

[Text] In Trinidad and Tobago, the senate last night approved a bill passed earlier by the House of Representatives effectively postponing local government elections in the light of preparation for general elections. Local government elections were due this month. In laying the bill in the upper house, leader of government business Kamaluddin Mohammed and local government minister Senator Neville Connell said the Elections and Boundaries commission did not have everything it needs to conduct a (?poll). General elections in Trinidad and Tobago are constitutionally due in February.

BOUTERSE CRITICIZES NETHERLANDS OFFICIALS

FL091211 Bonaire Trans World Radio in English 1130 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] Suriname's prime minister has criticized Dutch officials and news media yesterday suggesting that a former Suriname minister in Holland is behind a plot to overthrow the government of Suriname. The remarks were made during an interview with a Dutch radio facility.

Armed men reportedly led by Ronny Brunswijk, a former bodyguard to Desi Bouterse, staged attacks against the military barracks in the rivertown of Albina and a border post near French Guiana last month.

HERRENBERG ON RELATIONS WITH VENEZUELA, COLOMBIA

PA101818 Paris AFP in Spanish 2341 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] Caracas, 9 Aug (AFP) -- Surinamese Foreign Minister Henk Herrenberg has met with Colombian and Venezuelan Presidents Virilio Barco and Jaime Lusinchi, respectively, in an effort to promote the development of relations between the three countries. Herrenberg, who made a technical 6-hour stopover in Caracas on his return from Bogota, where he attended Barco's inauguration, said he had the opportunity to discuss the integration with South America of Suriname, a former Netherlands colony, with the presidents present at the inauguration ceremonies.

Suriname, a republic of only 350,000 inhabitants located in northern South America, is experiencing a critical situation due to the economic blockade imposed by the Netherlands Government to provoke political changes in the current Surinamese Government, headed by Commander Desi Bouterse. Herrenberg added that both Barco and Lusinchi "understand the situation that Suriname is experiencing and its difficulties in integrating itself in the region."

Regarding his talks with Lusinchi, Herrenberg said the Venezuelan president "has a very clear idea of the role that Venezuela should play in the Caribbean and South America." Herrenberg said: "The position of the Venezuelan Government toward Aruba, Curacao, and the Netherlands Antilles, is a desire to find a place within the continent." [sentence as received] Suriname and Venezuela have trade agreements on the purchase of bauxite and on fishing.

ARMY UNITS ARREST BELGIANS VISITING BRUNSWIJK

FAO'S SAOUMA PROPOSES 'NEW APPROACHES' TO CRISIS

FL112203 Bridgetown CANA in English 2100 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Bridgetown, Barbados, Aug 11, CANA -- Director General of the United Nations' Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) Edouard Saouma declared today that the general economic crisis has dealt a heavy blow to agriculture in the Caribbean and Latin America and proposed "new approaches" including strengthened regional arrangements and a possible common market.

In his keynote statement to the 29th regional conference for Latin America and the Caribbean, Saouma said: "This conference opens in a particularly difficult economic and financial state.

"After 40 years of progress in the region, per capita gross income started to decline in 1981. Since then there has been a general downturn in economic activity. The general economic crisis has dealt a heavy blow to agriculture."

He listed foreign debt as one major problem overshadowing everything else. The region's debt, he said, stood at 400 billion dollars (U.S.), with servicing absorbing nearly 50 percent of export revenues and countries in the region having to agree to tough conditions often dictated by their creditors.

"I am appalled at the thought that every child in the region is in debt from the moment he is born, and will remain in debt until the day he dies", Saouma declared.

FOREIGN MINISTER DISCUSSES CENTRAL AMERICAN CRISIS

PY112204 Buenos Aires NOTICIAS ARGENTINAS in Spanish 1931 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 9 Aug (NA) — Foreign Minister Dante Caputo today said that "if the law of the jungle were to prevail in Latin America, all of our countries would be profoundly harmed," and pointed out that "no matter how complex the diplomatic solution to the Central American crisis is, it is infinitely less costly than a solution through war."

Caputo stated that "it will cost us a great deal, and will be difficult, but, fortunately, the Contadora Group and its supporting countries have a defined political will to contribute to the pacification of the region."

The foreign minister made these statements on board the airplane which carried President Alfonsin and the Argentine delegation back to Argentina. The president and the delegation attended the meeting of the Group of Six in Mexico, and the inauguration of the new president in Colombia.

Caputo, who attended the swearing in of new Colombian President Virgilio Barco Vargas, met with the representatives of the Contadora Group and of the Contadora Support Group in Bogota and said that there was total unanimity about "the idea that force should not be used as a mechanism for solving conflicts."

"We are experiencing a very difficult moment, and confidence in a diplomatic solution might decline," he said, adding that "the meetings in Colombia showed, however, that eight Latin American countries are willing to continue with the efforts of the Contadora Group."

He said: "None of us has any illusion about the difficulty this represents, particularly when certain countries, unfortunately, choose the wrong way of approaching the Central American conflict."

He confirmed the Argentine official position of opposing the U.S. Government policy "to solve this question through the counterrevolutionary forces in Nicaragua."

Caputo deemed as "positive the meetings held in Colombia with the eight countries" which make up both the Contadora Group and the Support Group, and said that during these meetings "it was decided to continue with the peace-seeking efforts in Central America."

He said that the matter is not "legal" but "political," and that the eight Latin American countries also agreed in principle to hold another meeting next September. He concluded by saying that "a war will harm us all," and "we are, therefore, seeking a solution to settle this conflict."

FOREIGN MINISTRY BEGINS CONTACTS ON FALKLANDS

PY120110 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish 2259 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 11 Aug (TELAM) -- The Argentine Foreign Ministry today began to analyze its strategy aimed at the recovery of the Malvinas Islands, in the light of the upcoming UN General Assembly, which will take place in New York during the second half of September.

To this end, Argentine Under Secretary for Special Affairs Juan Carlos Beltramino began a round of talks with the ambassadors of India and Yugoslavia, two of the leading countries of the Nonaligned Movement. This round of talks will continue for several days.

The objective of Argentina's strategy is to get from the international community support for Argentina's position that favors negotiations on [words indistinct] with the United Kingdom.

POLICE CONFISCATE $10 MILLION WORTH OF COCAINE

PY071348 Buenos Aires DYN in Spanish 2221 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 2 Aug (DYN) -- According to what has been reported by police narcotics department sources, 20 kg of cocaine hydrochloride ready for sale and worth $20 million was confiscated in the predawn hours today during an operation carried out at five hotels on Avenida de Mayo.

The cocaine was ready to be exported from the country to Europe and the United States by six Bolivian and Argentine drug traffickers whose names have not yet been disclosed. It was found in suitcases with false bottoms and wrapped in plastic bags inside small "envelopes."

Police sources have reported that the head of this important drug-trafficking ring is at large, but that they hope to be able to arrest him at any time and thus follow the trail that connects this group to an international drug trafficking ring.

The same sources noted that the gigantic operation recently staged in Bolivia against drugs detoured from the usual drug route -- the north route via Colombia to Miami and Europe -- to the south starting from Buenos Aires, where it branches out to world distribution centers.

Local government officials have recently noted that there has not been an increase in drug consumption in Argentina, but that the transit of drugs and alkaloids has increased.

GEN LOPEZ LEYTON TERMS GOVERNMENT WORK POSITIVE

PY081446 La Paz La Red Panamericana in Spanish 1130 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] The Bolivian Armed Forces consider positive the work being conducted by the MNR [Nationalist Revolutionary Movement] government headed by President Victor Paz Estenssoro.

General Raul Lopez Leyton, commander in chief of the Bolivian Armed Forces, made this statement, adding that the people should have more faith in the national authorities.

Regarding the role of the Bolivian Armed Forces, Lopez Leyton said that the most important factor is the unity that is being achieved in the Armed Forces.

Regarding rumors of possible uneasiness caused by the presence of foreign troops in the country, he said that they are not true, that they are mere speculation stemming from sectors that claim the existence of a reported penetration by neighboring countries into Bolivia. The units in charge of safeguarding the borders are conducting their tasks efficiently throughout the nation, he said.

MINISTER DISCUSSES RENEGOTIATION OF FOREIGN DEBT

PY120144 Paris AFP in Spanish 1451 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] La Paz, 10 Aug (AFP) — Planning and Coordination Minister Gonzalo Sanchez de Lozada today reported in La Paz that Bolivia will renegotiate its private foreign debt -- more than $1 billion -- with the foreign banks in Washington as of 18 August. The minister said that the negotiation will be difficult because the interests and amortizations cannot be paid unless the banks are willing to grant a greater flow to the current debt, thus activating the national economy.

Sanchez added that 75 percent of this debt is already in arrears with some 129 banks in various countries, and that Bolivia cannot make the payments if it does not have the income.

In conclusion, he said that Bolivia is a country that has been hit hard and is facing a profound recession. The only thing to do, according to Sanchez, is to work in order to reactivate the economy.

Bolivia's foreign debt totals $5 billion.

URUGUAYAN PRESIDENT ARRIVES IN BRASILIA

PY111646 Madrid EFE in Spanish 1458 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Brasilia, 11 Aug (EFE) -- Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti today travelled to the Brazilian capital to start an official 5-day visit to this country. Sanguinetti arrived at the Brasilia Military Base from Salvador, capital of Bahia State, where he spent the weekend, at 1105.

The Uruguayan chief of state and his entourage were met by Brazilian President Jose Sarney, government officials, and members of the military. After the military honors, which included a salvo of cannon fire, Sanguinetti and his entourage left for the Jaburu Palace, where they will stay.

The two presidents will hold their first private meeting this afternoon at Planalto Palace, the seat of the Brazilian Government.

FURTHER REPORTAGE OF ALLEGED NUCLEAR TEST SITE

Details of Testing Area

PY111602 Sao Paulo FOLHA DE SAO PAULO in Portuguese 8 Aug 86 p 6

[Text] The Brazilian Government is building underground installations in the Cachimbo Serra, south of Para State bordering Mato Grosso, for military purposes. The installations consist of wells and domes that will make them suitable for various types of nuclear tests and storage of atomic waste.

Geological and hydrological surveys have been conducted in the area since 1981. Last month, the construction of a 1-meter diameter, 320-meter deep well was completed. The area for testing will be completed by 1991. When FOHLA DE SAO PAULO announced that it would publish the news in today's issue, President Jose Sarney reacted. According to his press secretary, Fernando Cesar Mesquita, the president said "no document of that type has ever come to my desk." Military Cabinet Chief General Ruben Bayma Denys said, again according to Presidential Press Secretary Mesquita, that the information "is absolutely untrue." Brigadier Hugo de Oliveira Piva, director of the Airspace Technical Center of San Jose dos Campos (Sao Paulo State), was called early last night to come to Brasilia urgently.

The region where the wells and domes are being constructed was by decree staked out as a military area during the Geisel government (1974-1979). It is bisected by the Cuiba-Santarem Highway (Brazil 163) and is 720 km from Belem (Para State), 1,200 km from Brasilia, and 720 km from Manaus (Amazonas State). The three closest forest areas are: the Mundurucania forest reservation at 180 km, the Bau-Mencranotire Indian Reservation at 60 km, and the Xingu Nacional Park at 300 km.

The testing area project was prepared by the Armed Forces Joint Staff (EMFA) with the cooperation of scientists from organizations that fall under the Space Technical Center (CTA) of the Aeronautics Ministry, 97 km to the northeast of Sao Paulo; namely, the Space Activities Institute (IAE) and the Advanced Studies Institute (IEAV). The area's military security is the responsibility of the Brazilian Air Force, which has a 3,200-meter landing strip in the area.

The Cachimbo Serra was chosen because of its geological characteristics. It comprises a group of plateaus with a maximum height of 640 meters above sea level. It is covered with sandstone and a thick layer of impermeable igneous rocks that protect the phreatic (water-bearing) layers. The Cachimbo Serra Military Region is located in the municipality of Itatituba and occupies 700 sq km -- the largest in Brazil. The geological survey revealed that the area contains no exploitable mineral resources. Its underground characteristics permit the necessary excavations for the construction of atomic waste dumps and domes for nuclear testings. The military reservation of the Cachimbo Serra is already being used by the Armed Forces for testing of war materiel such as fragmentation bombs and conventional (nonnuclear) rockets and missiles.

The first well to be constructed was finished last month. It is 1 meter in diameter and 320 meters deep. The Mineral Resources Prospecting Company of the Mines and Energy Ministry (CPRM) began geological and hydrological surveys of the region in 1981 at the request of the Airspace Technical Center (CTA) of the Aeronautics Ministry. The first geologists who went to that work for the Superintendency of the Mineral Resources Prospecting Company (CPRM) of Minas Gerais. The project was surrounded by security measures from the start, and the personnel working on it knew that it was "secret."

The well that was finished in July took a year to be dug and overlaid because the CPRM did not have the technology to dig a well of that size and the Aerospace Technical Center (CTA) had to import a drilling column from the United States. This well is 17 km from the Cuiaba-Santarem Highway. At times 40 people worked on the construction of this well. Only the CPMR director had access to information on the work, which was internally known as "Indian Stone Project." Since being commissioned by the CTA for this work, the CPRM has had three presidents: Jose Raimundo de Andrade Ramos, General Salvador Mandin, and Jose Carlos Boa Nova, who is the current president.

Excerpts from the IAE, IEAV, and the Navy continue to survey the land to locate the sites where future wells and domes will be built. This survey is scheduled to be completed by the end of this year. The wells will have the same dimensions as the one that was completed in July. This well has been overlaid with concrete, but the domes will be overlaid with concrete, lead, and asbestos. The wells where the atomic waste will be stored will be 100 to 150 meters deep and will be overlaid with concrete alone. The explanation is that their depth minimizes the risk of leakage.

By the end of 1991, Brazil might be the first country south of the equator to possess areas reserved for underground atomic tests and atomic waste storage. The main objective of the EMFA project is to guarantee the mastery of advanced technology (advanced studies or pure physics) to which only developed nations have access and which will not be transferred. Since November 1985, the EMFA has had the cooperation of experts from two organs that fall under the CTA, the IAE and the IEAV. The IAE and the IEAV, jointly with the Navy Research Center and the cooperation of the Nuclear Research Institute of Sao Paulo University, have been working for several years to gain technological expertise over the raw materials essential to the manufacture of nuclear devices: plutonium and enriched uranium.

Two reasons have led the EMFA to continue this project: Soon the Angra nuclear plants will be operating fully and the country must find a way to store atomic waste (uranium burned by the reactors, radioactive materials and unburned uranium that has captured neutrons become plutonium) without posing risks for the population; and second, to manufacture atomic missiles.

The second phase of this project -- the manufacture of atomic warheads -- which is considered the most important, is also under way. An agreement was signed last year between the Governments of Brazil and the PRC for the exchange of technology leading to the development of solid fuel missiles with atomic warheads similar to those developed by the United States in the 1960's.

Physicists: Plutonium Tests Possible

PY111857 Sao Paulo FOLHA DE SAO PAULO in Portuguese 8 Aug 86 p 6

[Text] After being informed by FOLHA DE SAO PAULO about the construction of underground facilities in the Cachimbo Serra region, possibly for atomic experiments, nuclear physicist Rogerio Cerequeira Leite said that the facilities being built there "may mean that the government has decided to carry out small chain reactions or preliminary nuclear reactions, which do not produce much energy, but will serve to formulate a process for the production of plutonium." Cerqueira Leite is a professor at the University of Campinas (Unicamp) and is a member of the FOLHA Editorial Council.

Contacted by phone in New Jersey (on the Eastern seaboard of the United States), Cerqueira Leite discarded the possibility that those installations will be used for "nuclear waste" storage. He then added: "I do not believe that Brazil should be so prematurely concerned with atomic waste storage, because the material removed from a nuclear reactor can only be manipulated and transported to a definitive storage site after its has been "cooled" for 5 or 6 years. Furthermore, the question of atomic waste is only a recent source of concern in the world, even in the United States."

Physicist Jose Zatz agrees with Cerqueira Leite: "This information is consistent with the execution of minor tests with highly radioactive material, but the possibility of tests with highly toxic or explosive material cannot be dismissed." For Cerqueira Leite, the concern of the experts involved in the project to locate areas that are impermeable to the phreatic layers in the subsoil "indicates that contaminating substances are being manipulated there, substances that, should they leak and contaminate phreatic layers, and consequently rivers, will have tragic consequences."

Rogerio Cerqueira Leite said that the information gathered by FOLHA DE SAO PAULO is consistent with the construction of a "furnace" for the production of plutonium. He added that "experiments like this are normally conducted in underground tunnels and the concern for security is warranted because 1 billionth of a gram in the lungs is fatal for a human being."

Uranium is produced by the bombardment of Uranium 238 with neutrons released by Uranium 235. Experiments like those in the hypothesis raised by Professor Cerqueira Leite are aimed at working out stages in the process of producing plutonium. Cerqueira Leite concluded: With these experiments, some of them conducted at low temperatures, it is possible to identify moderator agents necessary in the process, as well as to make observations that will be useful in the future. These experiments might be thought of as the pilot project for a large-scale undertaking."

Military Use Possibility Admitted

PY111848 Sao Paulo FOLHA DE SAO PAULO in Portuguese 9 Aug 86 p 9

[Text] A secret 32-page document issued by the National Nuclear Energy Commission (CNEN), which is linked with the Mines and Energy Ministry, includes a copy of a decree signed by former President Ernesto Geisel on 7 March 1979. The decree reserved the "Cachimbo." "Caruaes," and "Gorotire" areas in Para State for "Armed Forces testing grounds." The document, which FOLHA obtained from Government House in Brasilia, states that "some technologies and know-how that are developed for peaceful purposes can be useful for military development."

The first pages of the document were obtained by FOLHA earlier and its last pages yesterday. The document was prepared in response to a "request for information" to the government by Deputy Eduardo Suplicy, Workers' Party (PT) candidate for the governorship of Sao Paulo, who wanted to learn about the government's nuclear activities. The document also contains copies of the agreements that Brazil has signed with the PRC and Argentina. Deputy Suplicy yesterday said: "I requested information on the activities that the government is carrying out in the nuclear field, and the copy of the decree came among the other papers."

The document confirms that the government is conducting research in reprocessing plutonium, which is used for manufacturing atomic bombs or feeding fast reactors in combination with enriched uranium. The CNEN says that "depending on the strategy adopted for reactors, the plutonium obtained from industrial reprocessing, combined with uranium, could be utilized in pressurized water reactors (PWR), obviating the use of enriched uranium." The Angra 1 reactor is a PWR type reactor.

EMFA Admits Construction

PY111833 Sao Paulo FOLHA DE SAO PAULO in Portuguese 9 Aug 86 p 8

[Text] The Armed Forces Joint Staff (EMFA) yesterday admitted in an official note that a project is being carried out in the Cachimbo Serra area in the southern region of Para State bordering Mato Grosso State for "the testing of material and equipment." The note, however, affirms that Brazil does not have "any testing program" leading to the manufacture of nuclear weapons. The government refused to grant permission for a journalist from FOLHA DE SAO PAULO to visit the Cachimbo Serra site. The EMFA released the note in the wake of a report published exclusively by FOLHA yesterday regarding underground facilities that are being built at the military base in that region. The note confirms part of the information published by FOLHA, and does not deny any part of it. The government's reaction was terse but denoted concern. The Planalto Palace's apprehension is motivated primarily by four reasons [as published]. First, fear that the news may encourage ultraconservative military officers in Brazil and Argentina who are interested in frustrating negotiations between the two countries to reach a bilateral nuclear agreement. The Sarney government considers it important to improve relations with Argentina, and the nuclear question has historically been a sensitive subject between the two countries. The Planalto Palace fear is that the diplomatic effort for a rapprochement with Argentina might be undermined by old mistrusts in the nuclear sector.

Relations with Argentina are the main concern at Planalto Palace following the report published by FOLHA. But the Sarney government is also afraid that the news may create difficulties in the delicate relations with the FRG and the United States in the area of advanced high technology. There is the added fear that the international community might become suspicious about Brazil's professed intention of using nuclear energy only for peaceful ends. Finally, it is believed that type of information could delay the country's progress in the nuclear area. The refusal by the Aeronautics Ministry to allow FOLHA reporters access to the military base at Cachimbo Serra demonstrates that the government does not intend to facilitate the publication of information on that sector, despite the fact that the official EMFA note indicates that the information published by FOLHA is true and was correctly reported. The sophisticated security scheme around Cachimbo Serra will remain just as tight. No government official will formally reveal the whole nature of "the testing of material and equipment for the development of airspace capability." However, someone in the government was willing yesterday to admit "off the record" the possibility that atomic waste might be stored and nuclear experiments for either peaceful or military purposes might be conducted at Cachimbo Serra.

Military Testing Ground Decree

INFORMATICS DELEGATION LEAVES FOR PARIS TALKS

PY111720 Rio de Janeiro O GLOBO in Portuguese 9 Aug 86 p 19

[Text] Sao Paulo -- The Brazilian Government will examine all foreign cooperation projects in the field of informatics, and it will allow assiciations and direct investments if the projects are of great technical complexity and unattainable by national industry at its present stage of development. This will be one of the main explanations that the Brazilian delegation will give the U.S. representatives at the second round of negotiations over the Informatics Market Reserve Law, that are to be held in Paris on 11- 12 August.

This information was released yesterday by the secretary general of the Science and Technology Ministry, Luciano Coutinho, who recalled that the Special Secretariat of Informatics (SEI) receives many informatics projects from foreign companies and that Article 22 of the Reserve Law allows their approval if the technological development conditions are met.

In Brasilia, the Brazilian delegation headed by Itamaraty Secretary General Paulo Tarso Flecha de Lima is leaving today for Paris to participate in the second meeting on the Reserve Law with representatives of the U.S. Government. This time the talks will deal with a document that the U.S. delegation will present that lists 26 reservations pertaining to the Informatics Law,

HUGE ARMS CACHE FOUND; USSR IMPLICATED

[Report by Mobile Unit No 5]

[Text] National Intelligence Center [CNI] personnel have seized a large shipment of weapons sent to Chilean terrorists. The huge arsenal, which was found in the 3d Region, includes hundreds of automatic arms, thousands of cartridges, grenades, and sophisticated communications equipment. The shipment was brought to this remote spot on the Chilean coast near Vallenar by Soviet fishing boats. Three individuals reportedly have been arrested in the area.

In view of the implications of the action, the entire arsenal was brought to Santiago, where it was inspected by President Augusto Pinochet, who wanted to learn the details of the operation. The president was accompanied by CNI Director General Humberto Gordon, the interior minister, and the minster secretary general of government.

It was reported that the arsenal was found in a small bay 90 km from Vallenar, where the terrorists had built a complete infrastructure camp, with a clinic, storage facilities, and an airstrip. Vehicles were also found in the camp, which was disguised as a fishing industry installation.

After learning about the discovery of the arsenal, the largest ever found in our country, President Pinochet told reporters that the entire capital could be blown up with the weapons. He added that this proves that terrorism does exist and that it is not a government fabrication.

Fighting With Guerrilla Group

PY111847 Paris AFP in Spanish 1808 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Excerpt] Santiago, 11 Aug (AFP) -- Reliable sources today reported in Santiago that the Chilean military forces confronted a guerrilla group in the northern region of the country and that they have seized a fairly large arsenal.

The confrontation, in which apparently there were casualties, took place early on the morning of 7 August in the area of Carrizal Bajo, in the neighborhood of the port of Huasco, 770 km north of this capital, where the military discovered the largest cache of contraband weapons since General Augusto Pinochet's government assumed power. 6 Terrorists Arrested

[Excerpts] The government has reported that a plan calling for extremely violent actions and scheduled by terrorists for September was spoiled when a large arms cache was discovered on the beach near El Ballenar. This demonstrates how leftist terrorists planned to unleash a wave of violent actions next month.

The gigantic cache, the largest found since 1973, was found in the 3D Region, on an inaccesible beach where Soviet fishing ships approached the Chilean coast, violating territorial waters, and unloaded tons of weapons which were received by Chilean terrorists.

The following weapons were found: 210,000 cartridges, 348 rockets, [preceding word in English] more than 600 missiles, hundreds of grenades, and sophisticated communication equipment. [passage omitted]

A field hospital, communication equipment capable of satellite links, and underwater exploration equipment were also found, among other things. The cache was found in Corral Bay, near El Carrizal Bajo, 90 km northeast of El Ballenar in the 3d Region. From there the Soviet fishing ships unloaded the weapons which were later distributed among Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front [FPMR] terrorists.

In order to cover up their operations, the communist leaders who planned it created a legal company as a cover. The front was a fishing and seaweed processing company. In this manner, they bought seaweed from local fishermen for a good price and transported their weapons in trucks, covering their cargo with the seaweed, making it look like a normal transaction.

It is known that the Soviet ships unloaded their weapons in motorized inflatable dinghies. Scuba divers then hid the weapons in specially-built underground areas. The weapons were later distributed through the country, frequently by air, since the terrorists built a small airstrip nearby.

The CNI reported that together with this large cache, six members of the FPMR were also arrested. One of them was identified as Alfredo Bruno (Maldridge) Baldra. He was the link between the FPMR national logistics chief and the terrorists who received the weapons from abroad. (Maldridge) Baltra was the highest-ranking terrorist of the group, since he was the one who selected this inlet for this purpose.

Another of the arrested terrorists was identified as Rafael Pascual Arias, who for 13 years lived in Cuba, where he received guerrilla training. The other terrorists are: Italo Marcelo Abelardo Moyas Canilla, who has a long police record of bakery and supermarket robberies, and who received guerrilla instruction in Cuba last year and this year; Juan de Dios Marquez Miranda, whose record is similar to the other terrorists, receiving subversive training in Cuba; Pablo Esteban Flores Castillo, who participated in some violent attacks south of Santiago, after which he was sent to this operation in Carrizal Bajo; and Jorge Enrique Concha Gonzalez, who was in charge of maintaining the vehicles the group used in the region.

According to the official report, the following materiel was found in the CNI operations: 338 U.S. M-16 rifles, used in the Vietnam war, 37 Soviet-made hand grenades still packed in their original boxes, 315 Katiuska rocket launchers, 10,140 detonators, which are Soviet-manufactured, 600 meters of fuse, 1,872 kg of American and Soviet explosives, 210,000 rounds automatic rifle ammunition, 857 M-16 cartridges, 4,700 detonators, and 124 kg of plastic explosives. The long list includes other combat equipment.

Given this discovery and many facts that are part of this huge subversive plan, the Government Social Communications Agency [Dinacos], has made a statement. Dinacos Director Marcelo Venegas said that this CNI operation is the largest blow ever dealt to subversion.

[Begin Venegas recording] This action by the intelligence and security forces has been the most severe blow to the terrorists' clandestine supply of foreign-made weapons and equipment in the past 10 years. According to the information we have in hand, the quantity and quality of the weapons reveal that they were intended to strengthen the military infrastructure for a plan of violent actions scheduled to begin in September. The details of the plan, which are being studied, will be released to the public in due time.

The objective of promoting violence and chaos and instilling a strong feeling of fear in the people is part of the strategy of violence and terrorism that the Communist Party and its armed branches have conceived with Soviet Marxist help. [end recording]

He concluded by saying that it is important to emphasize the work done by the CNI and the valuable cooperation from the Armed Forces and Carabineros, who helped neutralize this violent threat. The CNI showed the huge arsenal to the president, the interior minister, and the minister secretary general of government, who also saw a film of the weapons and the area where the arsenal was seized. The film showed the weapons and the airstrip that could be used to send the weapons to other places in our country. After inspecting the arsenal, the journalists asked the president his opinion of the seizure.

[Begin recording] [Pinochet] This proves that I am telling the truth. These weapons are enough for a 600-man army, which for the guerrillas is equivalent to a (?20,000-man) division.

[Reporter] Is this the war to which you have referred on so many occasions...?

[Pinochet interrupting] I have said this on so many occasions! We are waging a war. There might not be a fire, but the war is there. And politicians continue to talk...

[Reporter] Mr President, the use of this arsenal would have certainly claimed many innocent lives...

[Pinochet interrupting] Many, many [words indistinct] Here is a ton of [changes thought] ...the equipment is complete.

[Reporter] One thousand three hundred kg [words indistinct]?

[Unidentified speaker] One thousand three hundred kg.

[Pinochet] One thousand three hundred kg of TNT. This is enough to blow up 50 percent of Santiago.

[Unidentified speaker] This will be used for the peaceful protests [words indistinct]

[Pinochet] Of course, it is for the peaceful protests [words indistinct]. This is just the tip of the iceberg. There must be much more. When a network is discovered, one sees only the tip of the iceberg. There are other things beneath it.

[Reporter] Mr President, who is financing all this?

[Pinochet] You should draw your own conclusions. Russia, the countries behind the Iron Curtain, and the useful idiots who are on the side with which you are familiar. [end recording]

In conclusion, the president talked over the discovery with CNI Director General Humberto Gordon. Upon leaving, the president said that this fact shows the objectives of terrorism.

Ministry Issues Communique

PY120329 Santiago Radio Chilena in Spanish 2300 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Communique issued by the Ministry of the Secretary General of the Government; date not given]

[Text] Regarding the investigations that led to the discovery of an extraordinary cache of war materiel and explosives imported from abroad by international sponsors of communist violence and intended for terrorist groups here, the government declares:

First: This discovery once again demonstrates the existence of terrorist organizations which in this case have gathered a large amount of advanced and high quality materiel with the evident purpose of carrying out fights, murders, and hindering national activities.

Second: The objectives of all this materiel were meant to be applied against the whole Chilean community, its coexistence, and its destiny of progress and democracy. The will for death, disorder, and guerrilla confrontation, can only be understood within this context, since they would undoubtedly have affected all sectors of a society, which cherishes order, justice, and freedom.

Third: This intention to create an atmosphere of fear and intimidation should be categorically rejected by all Chileans, regardless of differences of opinion, for a future of national development, since terror and violence are foreign factors inconsistent with nationalistic feelings.

Fourth: The task undertaken by the CNI with help of the Armed Forces and forces of order deserves our recognition, because through their investigations they have prevented this deadly materiel from being used for its express purposes.

Fifth: Nothing will deter the government from its clear and resolute will to lead the country in peace toward a future of total development planned in keeping with the Constitution and the law. The government is likewise sure that the public will always understand the preventive meaning of the security measures it must adopt to dismantle attempts of aggression such as those mentioned. Therefore, the government will remain alert to preserve by all means the safety of institutional order, citizens, and private property.

MINISTRY ON REPORTS OF 'COVERT' U.S. OPERATION

PY112248 Paris AFP in Spanish 2220 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, 11 Aug (AFP) -- The Foreign Minstry reported in Santiago today that General Augusto Pinochet's government today conveyed to the United States its displeasure over reports of a covert U.S. intelligence service operation in Chilean territory.

These reports surfaced 1 week ago when the U.S. news media revealed an official U.S. investigation into a plan launched in Chile to intercept Chilean Armed Forces communications. The official communique of the Chilean Government explained that the Chilean Government conveyed its displeasure through the acting foreign minister, General Sergio Covarrubias, to the U.S. ambassador in Santiago, Harry Barnes.

ARMY ISSUES COMMUNIQUE ON DESERTER DRAFTEES

[Text] In an official communique, the Chilean Army has set things right by clarifying events involving recruits who deserted. These events reported by news agencies abroad beginning in the early morning hours of 7 August. Regarding various reports about the desertion of two Army soldiers disseminated by various news agencies, the Army Public Relations Department has issued the following public statement. Here is the text:

Concerning cable reports released yesterday that [words indistinct], the Army Public Relations and Information Department reports the following:

1) Conscript soldiers Manuel Vladimir Olivares Morales and Miguel Angel Melendez Baez, who were performing their military service at the Buin Regiment and at the Infantry School, took leave on 31 July and 1 August, respectively. They have not returned to their barracks. Thus, they have missed roll calls.

2) In keeping with the previous point, these facts have been reported to the military courts so they can take the appropriate legal actions for the crime of desertion.

3) Concerning the arms presumably possessed by them, as reported by the UPI news agency on 7 August, they do not belong to the above-mentioned military units.

MIR'S ANDRES PASCAL ALLENDE RETURNS SECRETLY

[Text] Santiago, 8 Aug (AFP) -- Andres Pascal Allende, leader of the outlawed Movement of the Revolutionary Left (MIR), has entered the country clandestinely and granted a press conference in downtown Santiago, calling for a popular uprising against the government of General Augusto Pinochet.

Andres Pascal Allende, nephew of the late socialist President Salvador Allende and one of the most wanted men by the security services of the military regime, accused the United States of encouraging the restoration of democracy in Chile, just to protect its own interests.

The U.S. Government of President Ronald Reagan is advocating an agreement for the orderly transition to a regime that will faithfully respond to imperialist interests, the MIR Secretary General affirmed.

Andres Pascal Allende thus evaluated the declarations made by the U.S. Department of State in support of a peaceful transition to democracy in Chile, to avoid the risk of greater social polarization under the incumbent regime. This was recently said by State Department spokesmen in Washington.

The MIR leader, who left Chile 3 years after the military coup against Salvador Allende in 1973, said that the development of the people's military capability is fundamental to putting an end to the dictatorship. Acting on this premise, he added, the MIR will accept the formation of an emergency government to take over the country, but will reject the idea of a social pact to ensure the stability of the future democracy, because that would be like extending a blank check to the dominant classes.

In mid-1979, Andres Pascal Allende returned to Chile from exile in Cuba, dodging the security services, which almost captured him in August of that year during a confrontation in the mountainous area of Arrayan, in the outskirts of Santiago.

His statement to the press was made known today, but it was made Tuesday, 5 August in a building located in downtown Santiago, where he was in the company of Hernan Aguilo, a workers leader and MIR's Number 2 man, who has been underground for the past 13 years.

I have been coming in and going out of the country, said Andres Pascal Allende, 42, who is one of the few surviving founders of MIR, which was created in 1965 by University of Concepcion students, prompted by the then new winds blowing through Latin America after the Cuban revolution, and under the influence of the legendary personality of Che Guevara. Other MIR founders, such as Miguel Enriquez, Edgardo Enriquez, Bautista Von Schouwen, and Augusto Carmona, were killed in confrontations with government agents or disappeared.

The MIR secretary general admitted that his movement maintains contact with the FPMR [Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front], which for the past 3 years has claimed responsibility for many acts of sabotage and dynamite attacks, as part of its strategy of insurrection against the Pinochet government.

In statements made in Havana exactly one year ago, the MIR leader announced that the holy war of the people against the dictatorship had begun. In an interview published in EL MERCURIO on 9 August 1985 Andres Pascal Allende said that we would like freedom to be recovered at the smallest possible cost and sacrifice.

GOVERNMENT TAKES MEASURES AGAINST PERUVIAN SHIPPING

PY081814 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0043 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Santiago, 7 Aug (EFE) -- The Official Gazette reported today that the Chilean Government today ordered that Peruvian ships be given no freight to carry between Chilean and U.S. ports. Sergio Nunez, manager of the National Shipowners Association of Chile, said that this measure is a reaction to a similar measure by Peru on 20 February, which affects Chilean ships carrying freight to and from the United States.

"We hope that with this Chilean measure, the Peruvian authorities will react favorably and reach an agreement that will be advantageous to our two merchant marines," he stated.

Nunez added that Chile favors free access to international freight, but added that the Chilean law on this matter also invokes the principle of reciprocity. According to that principle, he concluded, "Chile will take restrictive measures against ships of those countries that adopt measures against ours."

COMPANY LOCATES BODY OF U.S. EXECUTIVE

PA111938 Madrid EFE in Spanish 1836 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Bogota, 11 Aug (EFE) -- U.S. Engineer Edward Sohl, who, together with another U.S. executive was kidnapped 7 months ago in the Colombian Department of Norte de Santander, was found dead in a mountainous area in the country's northeastern region, it was reported today.

Bogota's daily EL ESPECTADOR reported that Sohl, 63, an executive of the "Bechtel Overseas" firm died from a heart attack on 16 May. [date as received] His body was found in the past few hours after kidnappers revealed where he was buried.

Edward Sohl and John Grieddes, both of whom worked for "Bechtel" were kidnapped in December of last year by guerrillas of the Maoist Popular Liberation Army, EPL, while they were at an oil field in Oru (Norte de Santander), 400 km northeast of Bogota.

The report added that Sohl died due to the high temperatures in that oil sector. Grieddes was freed by the guerrillas, although the EPL continued demanding money from the company as a ransom.

Grieddes' arrival at the "Bechtel" headquarters, which is currently conducting works at the Cano Limon (Arauca) oil sector, near the Venezuelan border, stunned the company directors, who had been lead by the EPL to believe that the two executives were "alive and in good health."

Sohl was an expert in hydroelectrical and mechanical installations. The recovery of his corpse was possible through contacts between the Bechtel company and the guerrillas. It is said that his body was preserved for several days [as received] inside a special plastic bag. The Bechtel company has not officially confirmed the report or the possible forwarding of Sohl's remains to his relatives in the United States.

GUERRILLAS ATTACK IN FOUR DEPARTMENTS

PA090116 Bogota EL SIGLO in Spanish 5 Aug 86 pp 1, 2

[Excerpts] Six guerrillas, four citizens, including a lawyer, and a soldier died yesterday as a result of new clashes between subversive columns and members of the Army and of the National Police in Antioquia, Huila, Cundinamarca, and Norte de Santander.

Authorized spokesmen of the Defense Ministry and of the National Army command reported that the wave of violence began at the Police Station in San Pedro de Caparrapi, located in the municipality of Caparrapi, Cundinamarca.

Caparrapi's Mayor Guillermo Leon Ordonez said that a rebel column, apparently from the FARC, tried to occupy the Police Station, but the attack was repelled by the townspeople. [passage omitted]

The same spokesmen reported that in Antioquia Department, rebel columns, apparently from the National Guerrilla Coordinating Board (CNG) ambushed Army and Police patrols in the municipalities of Argelia and Anori. [passage omitted]

The official spokesmen added that with this wave of violence, there were clashes between a column supposedly made up of FARC guerrillas and a patrol of the 9th Brigade. Two unidentified rebels died in this incident. [passage omitted]

Meanwhile, military and police sources reported that in Cucuta, Norte de Santander, lawyer Luis Francisco Carbonell Secerra was killed by presumed members of the Diego Escobar Uribe regional front of the Castroite National Liberation Army (ELN) for unknown reasons. [passage omitted]

M-19 Planned Action in Cali

PA102142 Bogota Cadena Radial Super in Spanish 1730 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] A few hours ago, intelligence groups seized weapons, ammunition, M-19 propaganda, and maps of the city of Cali and police precincts in a chic sector in the capital city of El Valle del Cauca Department.

A military spokesman confirmed to "Supernews" that the (?cache) was located following the arrest of five M-19 members. Members of that group had apparently abandoned it days ago in the wake of the theft of 85 cases of dynamite. The Army later recovered the dynamite.

Studies of the maps indicated that on the occasion of the 450th founding of the city of Cali, the guerrillas were seeking to perpetrate a number of actions and attacks against police precincts. Meanwhile, operations are continuing in various sectors to locate other centers of operations of the subversive movement which has recently (?perpetrated) actions in this city.

Guerrillas Occupy Village

PA101932 Bogota Cadena Radial Super in Spanish 1730 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Excerpt] Medellin -- For more than an hour today a large column of the National Guerrilla Coordinating Board occupied the village of San Pedro de los Milagros, north of the city of Medellin, and clashed with police units after cutting electrical and telephone services.

According to preliminary reports, at about 1000 a group bearing firearms and dressed in Colombian military uniforms stormed into San Pedro, where group members immediately cut telephone and power lines.

Members of this subversive movement attacked the police station; it is not known whether there were any dead or injured.

Troops belonging to the Army's 4th Infantry Brigade were flown to San Pedro to reinforce the police. [passage omitted]

OFFICIAL RULES OUT RISE IN OIL PRICES

PA080410 Quito Radio Quito in Spanish 2300 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Energy and Mines Minister Javier Espinosa Teran explained the results of the latest OPEC meeting during a news conference. The minister said the recent agreement reached by the OPEC representatives, although temporary, opens the door to final discussions on the distribution of quotas by OPEC members. He said that by October the price per barrel could be set at approximately $17. However, he said the recent price recovery does not reflect the true situation in the market because there is still an oversupply. It is worth noting that during his news conference, Minister Espinosa Teran ruled out the possibility of increasing oil prices.

[Begin recording] [Espinosa] (?OPEC) has still not worked out all matters. Each country will send a delegate, rather an expert, to Vienna for 60 days. The purpose is for them to decide or analyze the information coming from each country. The countries are to submit weekly reports to OPEC, first about their exports and then about their levels of domestic consumption. This information will be analyzed and compared with reports from organizations that do this sort of work all over the world, [words indistinct]. It is worth noting that OPEC will be particularly careful to properly follow up on this.

[Reporter] [Question indistinct]

[Espinosa] Well, as happens with any commodity market, it is basically speculative. For that reason, the price rose drastically by $5 in the first 2 days, but this does not reflect the market situation. We still have an oversupply. Based on an unofficial agreement by the countries, the supply [words indistinct] will not rise above the current levels. [end recording]

STATION CLOSED FOR 'SLANDER' AGAINST PRESIDENT

PA101843 Quito Voz de los Andes in Spanish 1230 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] It has been reported from Guayaquil that on the orders of the National Secretariat for Public Information, Guayaquil's Radio Atalaya was temporarily closed at 1200 yesterday and legal proceedings initiated against journalist Hugo Fernandez Calle, under the charge of grave slander against the head of state. The charge is due to the dissemination of false reports that go against national security and that threaten public order, as a result of the broadcast of the entire statement sent from Panama by Abdala Bucaram Ortiz, director of the Ecuadoran Roldocist Party. In his statement, Bucaram Ortiz harshly criticized the government, particularly the head of state.

Accroding to the reports, policemen entered the Radio Atalaya studios Friday night but were unable to find Fernandez Calle. They are conducting a vast operation to find and arrest him so he may be tried and sentenced to prison.

["Voz del Coloradismo" commentary]

[Text] One of the evils of cheap politicking is the self-serving interpretation of facts. This is an expedient that the opposition, particularly the illegal opposition, uses to discredit the Colorado government of President Alfredo Stroessner and to distort the national and international image of our leader. One case is sufficient to prove this assertion.

The recent visit of Mr Robert Gelbard, deputy assistant secretary of state for South America, was seized on by the anti-Colorados and anti-Stroessnerists, of course, as a chance to use words, statements and meetings with Mr Gelbard to their advantage. Unfortunately for these enemies of the fatherland, the results of Mr Gelbard's visit were, objectively, quite positive and clarified some questions that were being manipulated for subversive purposes. No one, no matter how fanatic he is, can deny these results because Mr Gelbard emphasized the good will of his government toward the policies of our government. He also made it clear at all times that his mission to our country was well-meaning, guided by a principle of respect for the rules of democratic life in our country under the government of President Stroessner. Moreover, he talked as a friend of this government, which for 31 years has adhered to a firm anticommunist position, like that of the U.S. Government and people.

Mr Gelbard said: If I say something that some people take as criticism, it is only because the United States is a friend and an ally of Paraguay. He also said the United States would like to see Paraguay remain free of the violence that characterizes other countries in the region. He added that the rights of nondemocratic groups that try to undermine democracy with unreasonable demands cannot be considered. These are categorical statements that implicitly recognize the validity and legitimacy of democracy in our country. As can be seen, these were not statements of protocol. On the contrary, these statements reflect the impression that the social, economic, and political reality of Paraguay made on an objective observer. Criticism can be made and differences may exist because situations are not the same, considering that the needs and potential of any two countries are not the same. Nevertheless, an important agreement exists on the principle of friendship. Mr Gelbard said that above anything else, Paraguay and the United States are friends and allies, more so because their governments and peoples are enemies of the violence implicit in communism, a doctrine that is opposed by both Paraguayans and Americans.

Gelbard himself said that everything depends on the country's nature and system and that communist parties prefer to act in darkness. He also affirmed complete agreement on the struggle for a society free from extremism, as well as support against the attacks of political opportunists. There are 100 years of history in the alliance and ties between Paraguay and the United States, Mr Gelbard pointed out. This means that, no matter how badly it sits with some people, once more it has been demonstrated that we are on the right path and that the reality of peace, progress, democracy, and stability that characterizes our fatherland is internationally recognized.

The minions of communism were frustrated because Mr. Gelbard's visit which they thought would help their disloyal purposes, turned out to be completely unfavorable to them. The high-ranking U.S. official endorsed the policies of President Stroessner's government with only some minor, understandable objections, considering, as we said before, that situations are different in different countries. In light of these considerations, we have strengthened our intransigent stand against communism and our determination to struggle tirelessly against the agents of discord and subversion, who are covertly trying to destroy the wonderful life that this government has given to our country. This government, which respects democracy and the law, has received the unquestionable support of the ballot boxes, which have placed the name of Alfredo Stroessner in the history of free nations of the continent.

MONTANARO EXPECTS 'CHANGE' BEFORE LAINO RETURNS

[Interview with Interior Minister Sabino Augusto Montanaro by reporter Miguel Angel Rodriguez following 8 August Cabinet meeting -- recorded]

[Text] [Rodriques] In the last few days, it has been said the government might adopt a different attitude on the return of Domingo Laino.

[Montanaro] Well, the government expects Laino to be the one to change his attitude. We expect Mr Laino ot stop lying, threatening, and talking in his usual fashion, like any other subversive -- which is what he is -- so his return to the country may be considered. We expect him to change his position and attitude regarding our country.

AIR FORCE BOMBS DRUG TRAFFICKERS' INSTALLATIONS

PY111350 Lima America Television in Spanish 0400 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] Operation "Condor III" has started in the jungle area. This is another phase in the government's effort to eradicate drug trafficking. Interior Minister Abel Salinas has said that the main objectives of the operation are the Carapana I and II landing strips. This is the first time that combat planes are being used in operations of this nature.

[Begin recording] [Abel Salinas] The following is a communique issued by the Interior Ministry:

1. The government has today, 9 August, undertaken operation "Condor III." The objective of this operation is to destroy 12 landing strips, 4 of which are concrete, and to decommission cocaine processing factories.

2. Twelve Alfa 37 combat plane squadrons of the Peruvian Air Force carried out operations between 1200 and 1228 today. They used rockets, bombs, and machine-guns fire to destroy the installations and landing strips found in Carapana I and Carapana II.

The operation carried out by the Peruvian Air Force is continuing at present and it will continue for the next few hours against other objectives.

3. At the same time, airborne Civil Guard troops have occupied and confiscated installations in Tierra Amarilla.

4. The government hereby informs the people that the installations destroyed in this operation were occupied by the police in September 1985, but that in the last few months these installations were rebuilt and armed by drug traffickers who mainly come from neighboring countries.

5. Through "Condor III," the government reasserts the struggle that it has undertaken against drug trafficking, and it also confirms that it is continuing this struggle to eradicate drug consumption and to arrest and punish drug traffickers, thus terminating their corruptive influence on society and achieving the complete eradication of the illegal production of drugs and narcotics in Peru.

I must point out that this is the first time in history that combat planes have been used in the all-out war against drug trafficking.

[Reporter] Sir, could this government operation against drug trafficking be interpreted as a response to any U.S. Government plans to carry out operations with foreign troops in Peru, as happened in Bolivia?

[Abel Salinas] We are not responding to any government. But we do want to make perfectly clear that on this occasion, Peru is using its own means to combat drug trafficking, and that we will definitely not permit the involvement of foreign forces in the struggle against this scourge. MARCHESANO SAYS EXTRADITIONS NOT CERTAIN

[Text] Montevideo, 6 Aug (AFP) -- Uruguayan Interior Minister Antonio Marchesano said today that the extradition of four Uruguayan Army and Police officers, whose arrest was ordered this week by the Argentine courts, is not possible under Uruguayan laws.

The indictment of the officers, Jose Gavazzo, Manuel Cordero and Jorge Silveira (Army), and Hugo Campos Hermida (Police), was brought by Judge Nestor Blondi, who accused them of kidnapping and torturing Uruguayan journalist Enrique Rodriguez Larreta in Buenos Aires in 1976. When talking about the decision of the Argentine judge, Marchesano said he suspects that if the extraditiion is requested, the persons involved will use the Penal Code provisions which state that extradition shall not be granted in cases of political or related crimes. The minister said he does not know what evidence the Argentine courts might have and added that Blondi is acting under guidelines different from our own.

In his decision, the Argentine judge also ordered the arrest, as accomplices, of four other Uruguayan Army officers: General Amauri Prantl (deceased) and former Majors Ernesto Rama, Ricardo Medina, and Enrique Martinez.

LUSINICHI DISCUSSES ACTIVITIES, MEETINGS IN BOGOTA

PA090303 Caracas Television Service in Spanish 1600 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] President Jaime Lusinichi will return tonight from Colombia, where he attended the inauguration of the new president. Before leaving Bogota, the president will attend several events. At this moment he is attending a luncheon given by Colombian President Virgilio Barco Vargas in honor of the heads of state and special guests who attended the inauguration.

Meanwhile, President Lusinchi has reiterated our country's wishes to achieve a solution to the problems faced by the Latin American countries by putting aside all individual interests and searching for real political and economic integration. President Lusinchi, together with the other heads of state of the continent, attended a special event held by the Latin American Parliament. At the event, President Lusinchi said that the institutionalization treaty presented to the heads of state and foreign ministers has the support of the Venezuelan Congress.

The President met with U.S. Vice President George Shultz [title as heard]. During the meeting they discussed usual matters. In statements to the press, Lusinchi denied that he had suggested a Latin American summit, because such a meeting must be very well organized.

[Begin Lusinchi recording] The presidents cannot meet to talk and make superfical decisions. A summit is a meeting of an important group of presidents -- like those of us who have come to Colombia to honor its democracy, President Barco, President Betancur, and the Colombian people. Metaphorically speaking, we could call this a summit, but not a real one, because preliminary talks were not held. [end recording]

President Lusinchi's agenda also included a meeting with Alfredo del Mazzo, Mexican mines, energy, and parastate industry secretary, who reiterated the ties of friendship between our country and Mexico. Del Mazzo said that during his meeting with Lusinchi they analyzed common problems, and he praised President Lusinchi for his excellent work in the search for a solution to the problems in Latin America. They also discussed matters related to the recent OPEC meeting and its consequences for Mexico and Venezuela.

[Begin Del Mazzo recording] President Lusinchi expressed his wishes to strengthen the dialogue and cooperation. We are certain that specific results can be achieved. As you already know, Mexico cooperates with OPEC through Venezuela. Our agreement with Venezuela has made Mexico's cooperation within OPEC much easier. There is much trust between Mexico and Venzuela, and interesting and specific results have come from this agreement. Even though it is a partial and temporary agreement, we have found that it has been useful for both Mexico and Venezuela, and I feel that the two countries are serious about fulfilling their commitments and are trying to suggest solid positions before the international community.

We have suggested serious positions aimed at an orderly management of oil matters. From Mexico's point of view, these are positions are favorable for both producer and consumer. [end recording]

SURINAME'S HERRENBERG ON LUSINCHI MEETING

PA111344 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0155 GMT 11 Aug 86

[By Marcel Roo]

[Text] Caracas, 10 Aug (EFE) -- Surinamese Foreign Minister Hendrik Herrenberg said in Caracas that Venezuela will play a very important role in the Latin American integration process.

Herrenberg stopped in Caracas on his way home from Bogota, where he attended the inauguration of Colombian President Virgilio Barco. He discussed his brief stay in Caracas with EFE, as well as his trip to Bogota, which he viewed as a further demonstration of Suriname's interest in political integration in the Latin American Continent.

Herrenberg said that many activities toward political integration have been carried out, but the problem is that Latin America does not understand Suriname's isolation. He stressed that his country wants to integrate fully with Latin America and cooperate with the region's development. He pointed to Surinamese revolutionary leader Commander Desi Bouterese's trips to Brazil and Colombia as part of this effort.

Herrenberg said that in Bogota he met with Venezuelan President Jaime Lusinchi and Foreign Minister Simon Alberto Consalvi. He said Lusinchi's philosophy is similar to that of the Surinamese revolutionary leaders and predicted that "Caracas will play a very important role in the integration process."

Herrenberg also expressed admiration for Lusinchi's knowledge of the development processes in Suriname, Aruba, Curacao, and the Netherlands Antilles and of these countries' efforts to secure a place on the continent.

Regarding bilateral relations, Herrenberg said he agrees with Lusinchi that these relations should be very serious so that "we can learn from each other." He said that during his talks with Lusinchi he invited Foreign Minister Consalvi to visit Suriname within the next few months. The invitation was also extended to Francois Moanack, Venezuelan ambassador to the Caribbean, and, "of course, to President Lusinchi."

Referring to internal politics, Herrenberg said that after 6 and 1/2 years of revolution, the military has, "for the first time in history," initiated a period of transition with the support of the most important social sectors (trade unions, labor unions, businessmen, traditional politicians). He stressed that these sectors are forming a single political body (cabinet), which is responsible for preparing a constitution for a new democratic model, "according to our particular characteristics."

U.S. SHIP DETAINED FOR FISHING VIOLATION

[Text] Mexico City, 8 Aug (NOTIMEX) — The Mexican Navy has detained in domestic waters the U.S. vessel Hercules for capturing marine species in territorial waters without a permit, thus violating the country's fishing laws.

The Navy Secretariat reported that A-17 tugboat Otomi discovered the U.S. vessel in the exclusive economic zone with its nets in the water. An inspection of the vessel's hold revealed 350 kg of shrimp.

It was also reported that the five crewmembers, captain Francisco Hernandez Zonda among them, were taken to the port city of Tampico, Tamaulipas, and surrendered to the authorities.

The secretariat reported another operation conducted in Puerto Penasco, Sonora, where naval authorities seized 30 kg of shrimp and fishing gear and detained three people. They were released to the pertinent authorities.

AGREEMENTS WITH INDIA ON ENERGY, CREDIT

FL111630 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 0040 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Mexico City, 9 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Mexico and India have agreed to develop mechanisms to cooperate in energy matters and to establish lines of credit for increasing trade and cultural and educational exchanges.

The Foreign Secretariat noted that during talks held by India's Prime Minister Rajiv Ghandi and President Miguel de la Madrid, important agreements for the development of bilateral relations had been reached.

Gandhi and De la Madrid discussed specific areas in which ties could be strengthened, because of the special attention being given to them as well as the two governments' determined political will.

They agreed the energy sector offers the most favorable opportunity to increase cooperation in the medium term, based on the technology developed by the Mexican Petroleum Institute and India's Petroleum and Natural Gas Commission. [passage omitted]

During the talks reciprocal lines of credit were established between the Mexican Bank of Foreign Commerce and India's Eximbank amounting to $20 million each to support trade, once trading commodities are identified. There is a possibility the amounts will be increased to the degree the resources are used. [passage omitted]

WORLD BANK GRANTS LOANS WORTH $650 MILLION

PA091833 Mexico City XEW Television Network in Spanish 1300 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] The World Bank has granted Mexico two loans totalling $650 million. The first of the two credits is for $500 million; the document was signed in Washington by Alfredo Phillips Olmedo, director of the National Foreign Trade Bank. The $500 million will finance imports which the country may need, particularly products that are used to produce Mexican exports. This long-term loan is not tied to a specific project or the purchase of any previously agreed upon products; it is a general loan and available for quick disbursement.

The second loan covers the remaining $150 million. The document was signed by Dr Ernesto Marcos Yacaman, director of the National Finance Bank, Inc. Dr Marcos said that this is to be used to improve quality and to broaden the access to financial services of medium and large industries through the industrial supply fund, in addition to being used to support industries with financing difficulties.

OIL ACCORD DECLARATION SIGNED WITH VENEZUELA

PA101914 Mexico City EL DIA in Spanish 4 Aug 86 p 8

["Joint Declaration issued by the presidents of Mexico and Venezuela on the Renewal of the Program for Energy Cooperation With Central American and Caribbean countries;" date not given]

[Text] Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado and Jaime Lusinchi, the presidents of Mexico and Venezuela, respectively, bearing in mind the joint declaration issued in San Jose, Costa Rica, on 3 August 1980, and the subsequent annual declarations which renewed the program for energy cooperation with Central American and Caribbean countries, pointing out that the program's validity proves the excellent relations between the two countries, and the coordination that exists in matters related to energy, a coordination that was strengthened during the meeting of the two presidents in Cancun in January of the current year; considering that the international oil market is still characterized by instability and uncertainty, and that the drop in hydrocarbon prices harms the two countries' economic and financial situations;

Ratifying the two countries' political will to support cooperation measures to contribute to the region's economic and social development, such as the guarantee of the oil supply, and the granting of loans to finance regional trade;

Recognizing again the program's importance, as well as the need to harmonize its implementation with the needs of the beneficiaries and the legitimate interest of the grantors;

Ratifying the content of the joint declaration issued on 3 August 1985, Mexico and Venezuela declare that they will maintain in operation the program for energy cooperation for the 7th year, as of 3 August 1986, based on the following normative criteria:

1. The accord guarantees the supply of 130,000 barrels of oil per day, distributed in equal parts for each of the signatory countries, according to the net requirements of the beneficiary countries.

2. The equivalent of 20 percent of individual oil bills will finance the trade exchange of products and/or short-and long-term projects for economic development, depending on the characteristics of each operation.

3. Short-term loans will be granted for up to 5 years, at an eight percent annual interest rate, and long-term loans, for up to 12 years, at a six percent interest rate, preferably to finance goods and services coming from Mexico or Venezuela, as well as local expenses.

4. The supply will be subject to the fulfillment of the stipulations established by the grantor countries.

The presidents of Mexico and Venezuela issue this joint declaration simultaneously in Mexico City and Caracas on 3 August, 1986.

MARINES SEIZE PLANE, 233 KG OF COCAINE

PA091401 Mexico City EL NACIONAL in Spanish 6 Aug 86 p 6

[Text] On the morning of 5 August, Marines from the 14th Zone, headquartered in Manzanillo, Colima State, seized a light plane carrying 233 1-kg packages containing pure cocaine.

The amount is worth approximately 250 million pesos on the "black market."

The cocaine was aboard a Turbo Commander 690, license KBL-AP, which apparently came from the United States.

The light plane landed at the front end of one of the airport runways. This aroused the suspicion of surveillance personnel, who jumped into two jeeps and went to inspect it. Upon noticing the patrol, the plane's crew escaped in a nearby vehicle, which presumably belonged to accomplices of the drug traffickers.

This year Navy personnel have found and confiscated 14,838 kg of marijuana in the country's coastal area and maritime zone.

The report was made by the office of the chief of naval operations of the Mexican Navy. It was noted that Mexico's topographical characteristics make it easy to engage in activities connected with the smuggling of drugs, which explains why the islands, islets, cays, and reefs are heavily patrolled. Two search operations, named "Tapir" and "Tromba," are currently underway, Four bags of marijuana, which were apparently abandoned, have been found during these operations in the islands off the coast of Yucatan. Three of the bags contained 50 kg of marijuana each. They were found on the Blanca and Pajaros Islands. One was found on Desterrada Island. The drug was turned over to the pertinent authorities.

PARTY CLASHES SURROUND ELECTION RESULTS

PSUM Demands Annulment

PA082139 Mexico City UNOMASUNO in Spanish 4 Aug 86 p 4

[Excerpt] In its 17th plenum, the Central Committee of the PSUM [Unified Socialist Party of Mexico] agreed to demand the annulment of the elections held in Chihuahua and Durango on 6 July because it feels they were fraudulent.

The PSUM Central Committee felt that its representatives were prevented from reading the electoral lists, observing the process, and having access to the voting documents. Consequently, the PSUM leadership stressed that it will gather evidence to support these claims.

The Central Committee decided that the PSUM political leadership will issue a resolution stating that the recent elections showed that the right is progressing within the ruling party and also as an opposition force. In addition, this resolution will state that democracy took a step backward in view of the progress made by those who offer no alternatives to the country. [passage omitted]

PRI: PAN Plans Destabilization

PA102146 Mexico City XEW Television Network in Spanish 1600 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] The PRI has revealed in a news conference that members of the National Action Party [PAN] are trying to destabilize the current Mexican Government with foreign interventions. Dr Humberto Hernandez Haddad, PRI secretary of international relations and senator for Tabasco, has revealed that a group of neo-PAN members are in Washington establishing contacts and issuing statements so an external audit is made of Mexico's internal affairs.

Dr Hernandez Haddad said that the actions being carried out by the PAN in the United States are an unpleasant chapter of interventionism the Mexican people will properly identify and reject. He added that the PRI must now assume its role against this electoral opponent, which has taken the wrong road. He said that PAN has taken national sovereignty matters to an international level. Senator Hernandez Haddad added that the neo-PAN members' demands for a foreign intervention in Mexican politics are aimed at sabotaging the upcoming meeting between President Miguel de la Madrid and Ronald Reagan, which will be held in Washington next week.

7 Dead in PRI-PAN Clash

[Excerpt] Mexico City, 10 Aug (EFE) -- The dissatisfaction generated from the elections held in July in the Mexican states of Chihuahua and Durango has resulted in 7 dead and 38 slightly injured during a confrontation last night between members of the PRI and the PAN.

The Mexico City paper LA JORNADA reported today that 17-year old Leonel Carrillo Ruteaga died in Durango City after having been shot in the chest.

According to press reports, the clash between PRI and PAN members took place late Saturday, when members of the electoral college prevented PAN members from entering a locale where a public meeting was being held.

Durango police reported this morning that the city is now calm and that investigations are underway to find those responsible for the violent actions. [passage omitted]

PAN Protests Violations

PA081816 Mexico City THE NEWS in English 6 Aug 86 p 4

[By Peter Kultenbrouwer]

[Excerpt] The National Action Party (PAN) announced Tuesday it is withdrawing from government-initiated public forums on electoral reform in protest of what it said were gross violations of electoral law in last month's elections in Chihuahua and Durango.

In a letter dated Tuesday to Secretary of the Interior Manuel Bartlett Diaz, PAN National President Pablo Emilio Madero wrote, "We consider it improper to continue participating in a government process supposedly seeking an ideal system of political representation, when in all areas where there were elections (the government) operated in the opposite sense."

A panel including Bartlett Diaz heard from the Mexican Unified Socialist Party (PSUM) during hearings on electoral reform in Mexico City Tuesday night. The hearings are scheduled to continue until at least Aug. 22.

Thursday panel members will hear testimony on electoral reform in the Federal District. The hearings move to Monterrey Saturday.

The PAN also announced it would not attend President Miguel de la Madrid's State of the Nation address on Sept. 1. PAN Dep. Jesus Gonzalez Schmall said the party would boycott the speech because "the president does not have time to receive us, which shows that he is not interested in listening to other participants in the political process and only pays attention to what PRI members tell him."

In addition, the PAN produced documents Tuesday to support its claims that ballot boxes were stuffed and electoral rules were violated in order to guarantee victory for the PRI in all elections in Chihuahua.

The PAN produced copies of the poll registration form for station 86-B in the center of Ciudad Juarez, which indicated 3,115 ballots for municipal, congressional, and gubernatorial elections were delivered to the station before the voting began. But the party produced a copy of the official tally form for the station, which shows the PRI receiving 6,985 votes and puts the total of all votes, including invalidated ballots, at 11,691.

The PAN says the document proves the ballot box was stuffed. The PAN also offered a computerized list of alleged violations in three Chihuahua electoral districts: three, eight and 11.

According to the tally, there were a total of 19,749 violations of electoral regulations. The document, which provides a party description of the regulations, specifices which rules were violated in each district. According to the list, in the state chamber of deputy elections in district eight, officers refused to provide PAN members with an official tally form in 23 polling stations, although providing the forms is required by article 556 of the electoral code.

In elections for governor in district 11, according to the printout, nine polling stations had more ballots in the boxes than the number of voters, "showing evidence of ballots stuffing," according to a PAN statement. [passage omitted]

PRI Claims Victory in Oaxaca

PA081729 Mexico City THE NEWS in English 4 Aug 86 p 4

[Excerpt] The ruling PRI proclaimed itself the overwhelming victor Sunday night in the elections held in the state of Oaxaca.

While official results are not expected for a week, general delegate to the PRI National Executive Committee, Federal Deputy Ernesto Luque Feregrino, said his party had "swept" the elections. No major incidents of violence were reported but officials from the leftist Confederation of Workers Peasants and Students of the Isthmus (COCEI) cited isolated incidents of fraud.

COCEI local deputy, Desiderio de Gives, said supporters of the coalition in several cities faced long delays in receiving their voting credentials. Voters went to the polls Sunday to elect a governor and over 450 mayors. The PRI has never lost a gubernatorial election in its 57-year history.

Oaxaca is the only one of Mexico's 31 states where the PSUM has the strength to rival the PRI. The PSUM won several mayorships in 1981 thanks to a united front with the COCEI. This year, the Mexican Workers Party and the Revolutionary Workers Party are also backing Eloi Vasquez, the leftist coalition's gubernatorial candidate. [passage omitted]

PAN Disrupts Dailies

PA091623 Mexico City EL NACIONAL in Spanish 6 Aug 86 p 2

[Excerpt] Durango, Durango, 5 August -- A group of approximately 60 PAN members prevented the circulation of the morning newspaper EL SOL DE DURANGO.

This blockade is in addition to those carried out in the offices of the Finance and Public Credit Secretariat and the State Tax Revenue Office, as well as in the district offices of the Agriculture and water Resources Secretariat in Santiago Papasquiaro, Durango.

The PAN members prevented the publication of today's issue and prevented the workers from leaving the EL SOL DE DURANGO offices.

It was not until noon that the employees were released after publisher Antonio Diaz Pina held talks with PAN leaders. It must also be mentioned that this action prevented the circulation of NORTE, another newspaper printed there. PAN members, urged by their leaders, decided to halt the circulation of the daily because it was going to report the gubernatorial victory of PRI candidate Jose Ramirez Gamero.

The PAN denied all this information to EL NACIONAL, and every reporter who tried to approach a party representative was subjected to a long interrogation.

The PRI state leaders vigorously condemned this vandalism.

Augustin Ruiz Soto, president of the party's CFE [not further identified], deplored the fact that a small group could disrupt the social order and peace for which Durango is known. [passage omitted]

[Note from President Eric Arturo Delvalle to President of Taiwan Chiang Ching-kuo, issued in Panama City: date not given]

[Text] Your Excellency Chiang Ching-kuo

President of the Republic of China

Taipei, Taiwan

Mr President:

I hereby wish to express my most heartfelt greetings and wish to reiterate that the excellent relations of friendship and cooperation existing between the Republic of Panama and the Republic of China remain unalterable and continue to be strengthened even more with the sincere efforts of our two brother peoples.

I take this opportunity to assure you that any other expression or statement contrary to the aforementioned here represents the personal opinion of those who have issued it; they do not represent the opinion of the government I am proud to lead.

I am pleased to renew my best wishes for our friendship and for the happiness and prosperity of the great Chinese people and the success of your government,

Eric Arturo Delvalle

President of the Republic of Panama

GOVERNMENT TO SELL NONPROFITABLE BUSINESSES

PA092146 Panama City LA REPUBLICA in Spanish 8 Aug 86 p 4

[Editorial: "The Sale of State Properties"]

[Text] The commitments that the government made to the international banks in the refinancing of the debt included the sale of state enterprises that were causing great losses to the treasury because they were not self-financing and thus, were a burden on the national budget because the state had to subsidize them.

At a cabinet session held on Thursday, the executive branch decided to get rid of some of them so that the state would stop losing the millions it has been losing every year.

The sales approved so far are the following; the Las Cabras Sugar Mill for $3.1 million, the Contadora Island Hotel and its facilities for $6.5 million, Aeroperlas, incorporated for $1.6 million, and the extra tanks [tanques] of La Victoria Sugar Mill that were to be used by Las Cabras Sugar Mill for $120,000.

It was reported that the sale of Aeroperlas also included the building, the ramp, and the parking lot for $400,000, and farm machinery of Endema [National Farm Machinery Enterprise] for $1.3 million to Efvemaq, Incorporated. [sentence as published]

The sale of these enterprises will result in savings for the treasury because, in addition to receiving the proceeds from their sale, the large losses they incurred will be eliminated.

It is also estimated that these operations will serve to meet the government's bank obligations.

In addition, the National Bank will sell the Panama Hotel through a public auction.

These are the first sales of enterprises ordered by President Delvalle after a detailed study on their liquidity, the losses incurred so far, and the possibility for an economic recovery.

PDC LEADER CRITICIZES GOVERNMENT-SPONSORED RALLY

PA120309 Panama City ACAN in Spanish 2249 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Panama City, 11 Aug (ACAN-EFE) -- The opposition Christian Democratic Party [PDC] today criticized the march to be held by government sectors tomorrow because, "using an alleged Nationalist reassertion as a pretext," public employees will be forced to rally "under threat of dismissal."

PDC President Ricardo Arias Calderon said that the ruling coalition National Democratic Union will participate because "it is subordinated to the interests of the military high command, which ordered the event to be held." [passage omitted]

In a communique released today, the PDC added that "the intention is to celebrate the third anniversary of General Noriega's inauguration as commander in chief [of Panama's Defense Forces] using an alleged nationalist reassertion as a pretext." [passage omitted]

"The intention is to confuse the fate of our nation, its independence, sovereignty with the ambition for power of a single man," Arias Calderon added.

LIMA TV INTERVIEWS NORIEGA ON PIA VESTA CARGO

PY100204 Lima Latinoamericana Television in Spanish 0230 GMT 9 Aug 86

[From the "Frente a Frente" program presented by journalist Alfonso Baella Tuesta with quotes from an interview with Gen Manuel Antonio Noriega, Panamanian Defense Forces commander; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Excerpts] [Baella Tuesta] "Frente a Frente" went to Panama to look for the Pia Vesta. No one knew or wanted to tell us where this ghost ship was. "We flew over Panama in a helicopter looking for our objective. [passage omitted] Suddenly our pilot pointed, the Pia Vesta was there. It was being watched by a Panamanian ship and hidden from the public, silent and without any movement.

We found the Pia Vesta and then looked for General Noriega, commander of the Panamanian Defense Forces, who captured the Pia Vesta and ordered the confiscation of the weapons and vehicles it was transporting. What can he tell us about this case?

[Noriega] Right. The Pia Vesta passed, what we call in transit through the Panama Canal. This means a ship does not stop over. It goes through fast, without on-loading or off-loading any cargo here. Then it traveled toward Peru.

Once near the Peruvian coast, government intelligence or communications services reported to us of the presence of a ship which had remained for many hours without coming alongside and which was turning around and returning, presumably to Panama, which was its transit route.

We proceeded to board it on the high seas, and at that time found the large Soviet-made weapons cargo it was transporting. There were rocket launchers, assault rifles and troop transport trucks.

The bill of ladings...[rephrases] they had a different sort of bills of lading which meant that we were dealing with a weapons smuggling case. We reported our findings to various Peruvian military organizations and to the Peruvian Investigative Police [PIP]. We have also given a report and detailed identification of the weapons to other countries to try to find out together the real destination of these weapons and to identify the purchasers. [end recording] [passage omitted]

[Baella Tuesta] This is the Pia Vesta, a small but fast ship. As can be seen, it is very well maintained. Its powerful motors can almost make the ship fly, and when the ship wants to, it can be as silent as a ghost. It remains docked here, watched day and night to prevent any attack. The crew remains, detained on board.

This ship is equipped with a sophisticated communications system, able at any moment to contact the most distant points on earth or any airplane or submarine. This ship is not armed with cannons. It is being held incommunicado. The Panamanian military authorities have isolated it.

The vehicles were sent to a fort 3 hours from here, and the weapons were sent somewhere else, somewhere not accessible to anyone.

With Gen Noriega's generous permission, "Frente a Frente" is able to film for the first time these views for Peruvian television of the arsenal transported on board this suspicious ship with an unclear mission in our seas.

Here are the 32 trucks it brought. They are made in the GDR. They can transport 32 seated persons. Their motors do not need water. In addition to all the usual spare parts and implements of any military vehicle, these trucks have sophisticated communication system. They are also equipped with ramps to land troops and equipment on shallow beaches, as well as high speed tires and equipment for deserts.

There are several spare motors. Six of the vehicles are for medical use and are well-equipped for emergency surgery. These trucks are ready to move. They have always been ready, as if they were going into action soon.

With false documents, the Pia Vesta transported 1,440 RPG-18 rocket launchers and 1,500 automatic rifles.

The rocket launchers are loaded with their destructive charge and ready to be fired at any moment by just pressing a button. They are disposable rocket launchers. That is, they can be used and the tube can be thrown away. They do not require any additional equipment. Each rocket launcher weighs 3 kg. It can break through a 30-cm armored plate from a distance of 300 meters. They can be shot land to land or land to air by a single man. The date of each rocket launcher shows that they were manufactured a few months ago, and although they have a Soviet patent, they were manufactured in GDR. According to the Panamanians they are the most modern rocket launchers in the world.

The AKS-74 automatic rifles are the most modern rifles the Soviet Army has. They are very light, easy to handle, and very durable. With a fixed bayonet they can be used for hand-to-hand combat. The bayonet turns into powerful pliers capable of cutting through steel mesh.

The equipment and vehicles transported on the Pia Vesta could easily arm 1,500 men, giving them a devastating offensive capability. [passage omitted]

The Foreign Ministry sent the Congressional Permament Committee a detailed report with the government's points of view. According to this version, the Pia Vesta has loaded in the port of Rostock in the GDR, 204,300 kg of cargo. Only trucks and spare parts are mentioned. One of the bills of lading mentions as a recipient the Salvadoran Armed Forces, and as a shipping agent in Panama the (Terminal de Chiriqui) company which belongs to Emilio Ortiz de Zeballos, a Peruvian. However, another bill of lading is also mentioned. According to this document the recipient was (SINATO) port of disembarkation El Callao, with Pasalagua of Peru as the customs agent.

On 10 June, Emilio Ortiz de Zeballos was contracted by an American named David Duncan to ship the Pia Vesta cargo. [passage omitted]

On 12 June the Peruvian Navy authorities started looking for the Pia Vesta, and the mysterious ship could no longer be found. The Peruvian Government had already warned the Panamanian authorities about the ship's cargo. On 14 June the ship arrived in Balboa where it was captured by Panamanian forces. [passage omitted]

COSTA RICA

FOREIGN MINISTER PROPOSES MULTINATIONAL ARMY

FL111553 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 2309 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] Bogota, 9 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- Foreign Minister Rodrigo Madrigal Nieto today proposed here the creation of a multinational army to defend and safeguard his country's neutrality from Nicaragua's territorial and verbal aggressions. Rodrigo Madrigal, who accompanied President Oscar Arias to the inauguration of Colombian President Virgilio Barco Vargas, accused Managua's government of provoking a military escalation in the region, and taking advantage of its immense military superiority to conduct raids in Costa Rican territory.

The minister said the creation of an international force stationed in his country was proposed in discussions recently held by the Contadora Group, however the proposal was rejected because of its high operational cost. Foreign Minister Madrigal termed false the announcement by Nicaragua's Vice President Sergio Ramirez Macado that Nicaragua is ready to sign the Contadora Document, inasmuch as there can be no peace talks while the arms race continues in the region.

NOTIMEX INTERVIEWS ZAMORA ON GOVERNMENT TALKS

FL120132 Mexico City NOTIMEX in Spanish 2312 GMT 11 Aug 86

[By Epigmenio Ibarra]

[Excerpts] Managua, 11 Aug (NOTIMEX) -- A third round of talks between the Salvadoran Government and insurgents will depend on the results of the preparatory meetings that the conflicting parties will hold in Mexico City on 20 August. This was stated in an exclusive NOTIMEX interview with Ruben Zamora, vice president of the FDR.

Zamora was optimistic about the real possibility of holding soon in El Salvador a high-level meeting between government and insurgent alliance. We are close to a third round of talks, Zamora asserted and noted that after 2 years of interrupted communication, obviously we really need to prepare for it and reach agreements regarding key procedural and security aspects.

This is what the meeting in Mexico will have to achieve. We have accepted the government's proposal to go to Mexico with a preparatory commission, he said, but added that they have rejected the idea of holding such meetings at the Salvadoran Embassy in Mexico City.

According to the rebel leader, the official proposals as well as those of the insurgency need to be considered for discussion. We have proposed El Salvador as the place for the third meeting, and we have other reasons to refuse to meet where the government of Napoleon Duarte has suggested -- in an eastern city of El Salvador.

The insurgents claim that the main problem is that in the eastern part of the country, specifically in the city of San Miguel, there are no safety conditions that can guarantee holding the meeting without incidents that will endanger the lives of the FDR-FMLN delegates.

For example, Zamora indicated that the government assumed responsibility for the Christmas and New Year's truce, and eastern military commanders disregarded the government's orders and violated it. When Arturo Rivera y Damas spoke with the FMLN command, he assured that the Army would not be mobilized, however an entire battalion was sent.

Those things need to be taken into consideration, said Zamora after noting that they are willing to comply with an agreement reached by the joint commission regarding the place where the meeting will be held. He added that it is of great significance. [passage omitted]

Zamora said that all the sectors that have expressed an interest in participating in the peace process can and should take part in the search for political solutions. [passage omitted]

It is important for the insurgency not to be fooled regarding the purposes of the regime for calling a third round of talks, Zamora said, because within the framework of the U.S. counterinsurgency strategy, dialogue is a tactical instrument to show the Reagan administration that it is not alone in its war and to obtain military aid. Domestically, the call for talks is also a way to keep the government afloat. Regarding this, Zamora added that because of the economic crisis it is facing, the Duarte government is trying to figure out what it can do in the next 3 years of power.

Referring to the comments that the aim of the talks is to make the insurgents abandon their arms, Zamora said this was absurd and unacceptable, because this would be the same as our asking the government Army to surrender its arms. El Salvador is at war, and the talks or negotiations are precisely an instrument to figure out how we are going to overcome that state of war. It would also be absurd to request that, without an agreement, military activities be suspended or limited. That would be to cross the bridge before getting to it.

Zamora said: I would like to state clearly that if we consider the FMLN-FDR and the government as the only factors in finding a negotiated political solution to the conflict it will not happen, because the United States is very much against it. But if all of Salvadoran society's sectors unite in finding a negotiated solution, we can achieve it despite the Americans. It is very hard, but we Salvadorans who want peace have no choice, the commander concluded.

GDR DELEGATION ARRIVES IN MANAGUA 10 AUGUST

LD110855 East Berlin ADN International Service in German 0219 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Managua, 11 Aug (ADN) — A GDR delegation headed by Professor Dr Manfred Gerlach, deputy chairman of the Council of State, arrived in Nicaragua on Sunday. The guests were cordially welcomed at Managua airport by Dr Sergio Ramirez, vice president of the Republic of Nicaragua. As part of a visit to several Latin American countries, the GDR deputation earlier visited Panama. Dr Gerlach and Dr Roderic Esquivel, vice president of the Republic of Panama, discussed the preservation of peace, especially in Central America, The two statesmen emphasized the significance of the Contadora Group's efforts for a peaceful solution to the conflicts in this region. The talk was also attended by Dr Jorge Abadias Arias, the Panamanian foreign minister.

U.S. ARMY OFFICER REQUESTS POLITICAL ASYLUM

FL111159 Havana Radio Progreso Network in Spanish 1100 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Hugo Romeu Almeida, a U.S. Army officer with the rank of captain, has asked the Cuban Government to grant him political asylum. Officer Romeu Almeida was stationed at the U.S. army base in Stuttgart. Romeu Almeida is of Cuban origin.

He expressed his desire to abandon the U.S. Army because of his disagreement with its policy toward Central America, an area to which he was going to be assigned due to his Latin origin. He said his decision was also influenced by the Vietnam war and the poverty he had observed in the Dominican Republic during a 2-year stay there. Hugo Romeu Almeida is now in Cuban territory, where he arrived a few hours ago.

TOURISM TO BECOME NATION'S SECOND INDUSTRY

FL111218 Bridgetown CANA in English 1712 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Havana, Aug 10, CANA -- Cuba has announced a 500 million dollar (U.S.) plan to re-develop its once thriving tourist industry, with the eventual aim of making it the island's second most important source of hard currency after sugar.

Details of the plans were published in the semi-official magazine CUBA INTERNATIONAL, which carried news of the development programme in a recent edition.

The report said Cuba had launched a major drive to promote tourism, listed it as a priority aspect of the country's five-year development plan to 1990, and added that there were features of the programme that stretched to the year 2000.

...There are even hopes to make it the second most important source of hard currency in the country over the next few years, CUBA INTERNATIONAL reported.

The magazine report spoke of an ambitious investment programme worth more than 500 million dollars...during the next five years to develop tourism here.

Centrepiece of the development plan is the construction or expansion of hotels to double the number of beds available to tourists from the present 30,000.

Tourism authorities regard the present number as inadequate, CUBA INTERNATIONAL stated.

The magazine described the development aspects of the 1980s as a more mature case and announced that in the five-year period to 1990, eight new hotels will be built in the famed Varadero Beach area in collaboration with Argentina.

Other usually reliable industry sources also reported that the tourism development plans in Cuba include improvements and expansion of the airport at Varadero and construction of an airport at Santiago de Cuba in the south of the country. [passage omitted]

CUBA INTERNATIONAL reported that tourism here expanded 11 per cent in 1985, compared with 1984, whilehard currency income jumped 16 per cent in the period.

The magazine gave no specific figures for actual earnings, but said that visitor arrivals were up from 127,000 in 1981 to 206,000 in 1984, and reached 240,000 last year.

Planners expect that by the end of 1990 between 350,000 and 400,000 tourists should be visiting Cuba each year.

Visitor arrivals this year are expected to be above the 250,000 level, with the vast majority coming from Canada, Mexico, and Western Europe -- some 170,000. The remainder are expected from socialist countries, CUBA INTERNATIONAL stated. [passage omitted]

BARBADOS

KING IMPLIES DRUG TRAFFICKING BY BLP MINISTER

FL111051 Bridgetown CANA in English 2110 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] Bridgetown, Barbados, Aug 10, CANA -- Barbados new Attorney General Maurice King was today quoted by the SUNDAY SUN newspaper as saying packages containing marijuana were earmarked for the minister of health in January and July. But former Attorney General David Simmons asserted ex-Health Minister O'Brien Trotman was not involved in any illegal drugs business.

According to the paper, King told the annual general meeting of the Prison Officers Association on Friday: Before I became attorney general, I had been aware that illegal drugs were coming through the Grantley Adams International Airport addressed to some ministries and government departments by name. For instance, on January 4, seven packages came addressed to the minister of health. These packages came from various destinations in the Caribbean.

Commenting on the incident, Simmons said a customs officer reported the package originated in Barbados, was sent to St Vincent, and came back. He said Trotman knew nothing about the package, adding the former health minister informed Cabinet about the matter shortly afterwards. Simmons also recalled briefing head of the government's task force on drugs, Fitzgerald Parris, about the incident.

King, whose Democratic Labour Party (DLP), won general elections May 28, said: On July 14, 1986, a package arrived by air at the Grantley Adams International Airport. It was a card box containing four packages of vegetable matter -- it was marijuana addressed to the minister of health. The present minister of health knew absolutely nothing about it, and it was eventually destroyed by customs.

Simmons said: the opposition deprecates the statement by Attorney General Mr King in so far as it seeks to refer to former Minister of Health Mr Trotman without giving all the facts concerning the incident of January 4. Simmons added: It can only contribute to slur and reckless rumour that started prior to the general elections and that pervaded the general elections campaign -- rumours that suggested that members of the former government were involved in drug trafficking. Simmons suggested that the attorney general either call an enquiry or prosecute the alleged offenders if he had information suggesting that former government members were involved in hard drugs. If he had no information, said Simmons, then he should not seek to slur the names of former minister in the BLP (Barbados Labour Party) government. Because the crucial thing in all of this is the element of knowledge.

GRENADA

COMMUNICATIONS AGREEMENT SIGNED WITH CANADA

FL111449 Bridgetown CANA in English 1612 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Excerpts] St Georges, Grenada, Aug 10, CANA -- Grenada and Canada have signed a 7.5 million Canadian dollar agreement to help improve the services offered by the state-owned telephone company here. The agreement was signed last week by top officials of the two governments.

Grenada's Communications Minister Dr Keith Mitchell told CANA that the grant funds would be used to install a digital system at the telephone company by the end of 1988. He said the bulk of the money would be used to purchase equipment from Northern Telecom while one million dollars would go towards employing local labour in order to help ease the unemployment situation on the island. The grant would be supplemented by a 7.5 million dollar loan which the island is expected to get shortly from the Canadian export development corporation, he added. [passage omitted due to garbling]

Grenada and Canada signed agreements covering one million dollars in technical support and equipment for the central garage, and 1.5 million dollars for a water sewerage project. Canada has provided financial assistance to Grenada in recent years to construct the Point Saline International Airport, and rehabilitate the vital cocoa industry.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

PRD WILL NOT PARTICIPATE IN GOVERNMENT

PA111934 Madrid EFE in Spanish 1426 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Santo Domingo, 11 Aug (EFE) -- Jose Francisco Pena Gomez, vice president of the Socialist International, announced today that the Dominican Revolutionary Party (PRD) will not participate in the government of President-elect Joaquin Balaguer, of the Social Christian Party. Pena Gomez, who is also PRD president, noted, however, that the opposition will cooperate with the "national unity" government that Balaguer is proposing. Balaguer will be sworn-in 16 August.

Pena Gomez did not say whether or not any PRD member who accepted a post from Balaguer would be penalized. In announcing that the PRD would help Balaguer with suggestions and positive measures, Pena Gomez explained that the country could not stand a strict PRD opposition to the Balaguer government.

1986 BUDGET SLASHED BY NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

FL112138 Paramaribo International Service in English 1730 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Last Friday, the National Assembly gave the Government of Suriname further instructions to cut the 1986 budget by at least 65 million guilders. The National Assembly said that 300 million guilders, which were needed to balance the budget, must be slashed without affecting the poor, prices, and availability of primary goods and national production. It also called on the government to draw up a plan of action as soon as possible. During the meeting, the 31 members of the assembly unanimously decided that the ministries should produce monthly reports and, at the same time, echoed a call for the government to encourage national production through incentives. The members also called on the government to take the necessary measures to put the brakes on the exportation of foreign exchange from the country, which is being deposited by Suriname in foreign banks.

Central Bank To Supervise

FL112143 Paramaribo International Service in English 1730 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] On Friday last, the National Assembly passed a resolution which called for all financial institutions to be put under the supervision of the Central Bank. Those institutions -- which from now on will be supervised by the Central Bank -- are among others, insurance companies, mortgage banks, and pension funds.

GOVERNMENT MAY OBTAIN AWACS FROM SAUDI ARABIA

PY121925 Buenos Aires NOTICIAS ARGENTINAS in Spanish 1803 GMT 12 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 12 Aug (NA) -- Argentina could become the first Latin American country to have a U.S.-made AWACS aircraft if it concludes a bilateral agreement with Saudi Arabia. The preliminary bases for this agreement were discussed during President Raul Alfonsin's recent visit to Jiddah.

According to reliable government sources, the operation would include the sale by Argentina to Saudi Arabia of two Mekko-42 type Navy frigates. The value of these frigates is estimated at $400 million, although their real price on the market would be slightly lower. If the negotiations, which are still in their early stages, are concluded successfully, Saudi Arabia will deliver to Argentina an AWACS aircraft and a yet undetermined amount in dollars as payment for the two frigates.

The purchase of an AWACS aircraft would be highly significant for Argentina, both politically and strategically, because this aircraft is equipped with very sophisticated equipment manufactured in the West only by the United States, which sells them only to its most reliable allies. When the U.S. Government sold AWACS aircraft to Saudi Arabia, the Israeli Government, which also has AWACS aircraft, (?protested) vehemently because these aircraft were giving a strategic capability to the Arab countries.

The first steps toward this possible exchange agreement were made by President Alfonsin and King Fahd during the talks they held last month on the occasion of Alfonsin's visit to Jiddah. At that time, it was officially announced at the end of their talks that progress had been made in the area of possible military and technological exhanges, but without giving further details. It was also denied that it was after those talks that Argentina was given the opportunity to enter into the world weapons market. Reliable sources admitted on that occasion the topic "was mentioned" in the dialogue, and government sources now admit that "there is something" to this.

"There is something, but the topic is very new still," was the answer given by the source consulted about the possible sale and transfer of the two frigates to Saudi Arabia as partial payment for the modern AWACS radar aircraft.

The sources also stated that within the next few months a mixed government and business mission of the Saudi Government is expected in Buenos Aires, presumably to discuss the topic more thoroughly with their Argentine colleagues. Before that mission arrives in Buenos Aires, it is quite certain that the Saudi defense minister will arrive. He was officially invited by Alfonsin to visit Argentina during the Jiddah talks. On that occasion Alfonsin's entourage knew of the importance of the invitation that had been extended to the Saudi defense minister, the only defense minister who received [words indistinct] the presidential tour of six countries.

ARMY CHIEF OF STAFF RIOS ERENU RETURNS FROM PRC

PY121502 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish 1316 GMT 12 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 12 Aug (TELAM) -- Army Chief of Staff Major General Hector Luis Erenu returned to the country today following an official visit to the PRC. Rios Erenu arrived at Ezeiza Airport in the company of his wife, and he left the airport without speaking to the press.

During his stay in the PRC, Rios Erenu met with high-ranking Army officers and Defense Ministry officials.

ESPECHE GIL, PRESS MEET WITH USSR'S SUSLOV

PY121546 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish 2119 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 11 Aug (TELAM) -- Soviet Ambassador at Large [title as received] Vladimir Suslov and Soviet Ambassador to Buenos Aires Oleg Kvasov have met at the Argentine Foreign Ministry with Miguel Espeche Gil, who is the director of the Eastern Europe Department, and with officials of the Department for International Organizations. In reply to newsmen, Ambassador Kvasov said that this was an annual political meeting that is held alternately in Buenos Aires and Moscow to consider topics for the agenda of the UN General Assembly to be held in New York in September.

Asked about his country's position on the declaration recently issued in Mexico by the Group of Six, Kvasov said that the Soviet Union views with great pleasure the efforts being made by the six heads of state and government who are promoting disarmament and trying to monitor nuclear arms through on-site inspections.

Kvasov also categorically confirmed that President R Alfonsin will visit the Soviet Union as scheduled. He declined to comment on the U.S. cereal grains dumping but admitted that issues related to Argentine-Soviet bilateral relations were also discussed at the meeting.

SPANISH FISHING BOAT VIOLATES TERRITORIAL WATERS

PY121542 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish 1210 GMT 12 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 12 Jul (TELAM) -- The Press Office of the Argentine Naval Prefecture this morning reported that a Spanish flag vessel fishing in Argentine territorial waters was captured 200 miles southeast of the Punta Delgada Lighthouse, off the coast of the Chubut Province. The captured vessel was taken to Puerto Deseado. The fishing boat was found to have 30 tons of hake in its holds. The Coast Guard vessel CG27 Prefecto Fique was the vessel that made the capture.

It has also been reported that the Naval Prefecture vessel surprised the fishing vessel at latitude 45 degrees, (?4) minutes, 5 seconds [no cardinal point given], and longitude 60 degrees, 30 minutes, 9 seconds west, approximately 198 miles southeast of the Punta Delgada Lighthouse (Chubut Province). The official report adds that the Spanish vessel has a length of 48.37 meters, a beam of 8.52 meters, a height of 4.10 meters, and a net tonnage of 497.22. The hull is painted grey and the superstructure white.

The fishing vessel, which has a crew of nine under Captain Jaime Otero, is based in Vigo, Spain.

Once the violation was confirmed, the Spanish vessel was taken to Puerto Deseado, where the appropriate procedures are being carried out. The report concludes by saying that in previous similar cases the cargo of fish was confiscated and fines levied.

AIR FORCE CHIEF'S SPEECH EVOKES REACTIONS

PY122108 Buenos Aires NOTICIAS ARGENTINAS in Spanish 1925 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 11 Aug (NA) -- Referring to criticism contained in the speech delivered by the Air Force Chief of Staff Brigadier Horacio Crespo, former Justicialist presidential candidate Italo Luder today deemed it "unprecedented during the current constitutional government" for a high-ranking officer of the Armed Forces "to speak publicly on questions unrelated to military matters." On the other hand, Radical Deputy Cesar Jaroslavskiy deemed the speech "a clear statement in defense of democratic order."

Mariano Lorences, president of the National Committee of the Intransigent Party, today requested "punishment" for the military chief for giving such a speech during the Air Force Day ceremonies, "because it is inadmissible for him to criticize an entire society." These were the reactions of political leaders to the speech delivered on 10 August by the military chief who said, among other things: "I believe that all social sectors of our nation deserve to be admonished."

Luder told NOTICIAS ARGENTINAS that the Air Force chief of staff "has not made partisan criticism," but has "merely placed responsibility for social behavior." He said: "I do not believe that Crespo has overstepped the line of his duties." However, Luder emphasized: "I do not share his concepts about the arrogance and egocentrism of the social sectors that exert pressures because of their incomes," because "there is a large sector of Argentine people who make 150 australes a month, which is a dramatically low sum," and "those responsible for the economic policy should be criticized."

On the other hand, Jaroslavskiy said he "agrees" with Crespo's words and added the statements are "a clear position in the defense of the democratic order and institutions."

Meanwhile, Defense Minister Horacio Jaunarena's spokesman simply said that the minister "will not make any comment on the subject."

Brigadier Crespo said in his message delivered yesterday: "I believe that all social sectors of our nation deserve to be admonished." He referred to the "military men who let themselves be carried away by simplistic ideas of being saviors, invading sectors and taking responsibilities that did not belong to them." Crespo added that "there are also people who participate in party politics and manage the parties as if the fate of the nation itself depended on them."

In this regard, Lorences said that "it is inadmissible for this military chief to want to criticize an entire society, when he and others in the Armed Forces have silently tolerated genocide in Argentina and justified this complicity by saying that they were obeying orders." Lorences added that "the Armed Forces must realize that they are part of a state organization subordinate to the executive branch and other constitutional mechanisms." He deemed the expressions of the Air Force chief of staff "totally unfitting" for a man in his position and said that they "can even harm the president of the Republic, who is contitutionally the Armed Forces commander in chief."

CRESPO SAYS AIR FORCE TO GET PRIVATE INVESTMENT

PY122147 Buenos Aires DYN in Spanish 1943 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] Buenos Aires, 10 Aug (DYN) -- Air Force Chief of Staff Brigadier General Ernesto Crespo has announced that the war materiel area in Cordoba, which is under Air Force jurisdiction, will become a corporation with the state's participation, but "with substantial private participation."

During the first part of his speech on Air Force day, Crespo referred to all the tasks being performed by the Air Force concerning civilian and military services and gave an account of the Air Force's projects in the airplane manufacturing sector. Concerning the privatization of the airplane manufacturing sector, Crespo stated that "we are working on this, seeking to attract the interest of enterprises and financial entities and, at the same time, making the necessary legal arrangements." Crespo mentioned the financial problems that hinder aeronautic development and said that efforts are currently being made in the fields of marketing, exporting, securing financial support, and setting up joint ventures with other countries.

Crespo then gave an account of the projects in progress, including:

-- supplementing the manufacture of IA 58 "Pucara" airplanes.

-- launching the 4th stage of series production of the IA 63 "Pampa" military training airplanes, and strengthening marketing efforts. Sales to foreign countries have already been made.

-- implementing the cooperation and joint venture agreements signed with Brazil and formalized through Protocol No 12 of the cooperation and economic integration agreement.

-- implementing the agreement memorandum signed on 19 June with the McDouglas [name as received] company to manufacture, under license, A4 airplanes, airplane and helicopter spare parts, and aeronautics equipment.

-- proceeding with negotiations on agreements with Israeli industries to market "Pampa" and "Pucara" airplanes, finance the airplane manufacturing sector of the war materiel area in Cordoba, jointly manufacture fighter planes, and build an airplane maintenance center.

BARTHELEMY DENIES REPORTED MURDER ATTEMPTS

[Text] Interior Minister Fernando Barthelemy has stated that his remarks to an ULTIMA HORA reporter have not been interpreted correctly by the correspondent. He explained that he said only that there have been some indications about a frustrated attempt against him. However, the report was exaggerated, the minister stated.

[Begin recording] [Barthelemy] I explained clearly to the reporter that there was information in some intelligence circles that [words indistinct] to recruit people to organize attacks against the interior minister, and that we could not confirm this. The investigations continue, and unless we confirm the report we cannot release the report as true to anyone. This is briefly what I told your colleague Mr (Ted Laura), and obviously he published a report that is not in keeping with what I said.

[Reporter] Is the life of the president of the Republic also in danger from the type of attacks you mentioned, or was the attack intended solely against you?

[Barthelemy] No. Look, the drug-trafficking problem is international. We have seen it in other countries. We know how they have acted in Peru, and especially in Colombia. You know this better than I do. When drug trafficking was strongly repressed in Colombia, the Mafia attacked ministers, murdering Minister Lara Bonilla. It conducted other joint actions with the M-19 guerrilla group, such as the attack on buildings housing a judge's office. Thus, we do not discard the possibility that they might try to do something. But, I think it will be more difficult for them in our country. [end recording]

The interior minister then added that there are not detainees in the Interior Ministry. In this manner he categorically denied the report published by the afternoon newspaper ULTIMA HORA, which attributed to the interior minister the information that two individuals had been arrested for the attempted murder of the minister.

[Begin Barthelemy recording] I want to explain this because I do not know where ULTIMA HORA got the information. I have not given any information to ULTIMA HORA, much less the information that was published. I suppose ULTIMA HORA must have its own source for this article. There are absolutely no such people under arrest. Obviously, the newspaper misinterpreted this information as it has often misinterpreted other information on the political and drug trafficking problems. Of course, we are doing everything possible to verify this but we can categorically state that we have not taken this seriously as was reported by ULTIMA HORA. [end recording]

BEDREGAL TO MEET WITH DEL VALLE IN NEW YORK

[Text] La Paz, 11 Aug (AFP) -- Foreign Minister Guillermo Bedregal Gutierrez announced here today that he and his Chilean counterpart will meet in New York in September to discuss bilateral issues.

This announcement is included in a report that the minister submitted to President Victor Paz Estenssoro on his visit to Colombia, where Bedregal attended the inauguration of President Virgilio Barco Vargas.

Bedregal said that he and Chilean Foreign Minister Jaime del Valle held a circumspect meeting in Colombia, where they discussed strictly technical matters. He added, the meeting in New York will be more important because the agenda will include bilateral issues.

DEBT RENEGOTIATIONS DEPEND ON NEW CREDITS

[By Erick Torrico -- all figures as received]

[Text] La Paz, 11 Aug (EFE) -- Bolivia will renegotiate its foreign debt with private international banks only if the ocuntry is granted new credits, unofficial sources have told EFE. The new credits, just like the present ones obtained from multilateral organizations and through intergovernmental agreements, will be used to reactivate industry, improve the balance of payments, and increase the current level of foreign reserves (some $200 million).
